SLC to give formal report on sanctions

Floyd Kezele: Hope that the SLC becomes a "body of action" regulations it will impose on itself.

The petition was circulated as an "alternate resolution" to the sanctions.

In other business the Steering Committee discussed changes within the by-laws of the SLC. "Changes are necessary since we have added three members from St. Mary's and some mechanical points have to be cleared up," Kathy explained.

"Previously," Kezele commented, "there has been one problem with the SLC. It doesn't have a driving force behind it, and simply has been sitting around. Now we have organized to put force behind the SLC decisions hoping it will become a body of action, not reaction."

The Steering Committee which is chaired by Kezele, is an administrative arm of the SLC which schedules meetings, announces the agenda and sets time limits for debate of each topic, and decides which committee for referral of certain matters.
President Nixon recently concluded in a speech: "Neither power at this time could, if it wanted to, gain that superiority which would enable it to, frankly, blackmail the other one."

But, privately, some senior officials spoke less optimistically. Declared one official: "We have consistently underestimated the Numerical goals of the Soviet missile programs for 10 years. We have also consistently assumed, incorrectly I'm afraid, that they bought our strategic concept of deterrence. "They obviously don't want a nuclear war any more than we. But they're building a sufficient edge in nuclear strength, and in conventional forces as well, so they may have reason to expect us to back down in future confrontations, as we made them do in the Cuban missile crisis of 1962. Beyond that, they're building the kinds and numbers of weapons, so that if deterrence fails, they may feel they can effectively wage nuclear war."

The American strategic philosophy is based on having a nuclear force that can ride out a surprise attack and retaliate primarily against the attacker's cities rather than his remaining nuclear weapons. By maintaining such an "assured destruction" capability, the strategy seeks to deter nuclear war.

U.S. officials have consistently avoided building large warheads of sufficient accuracy to threaten to destroy Soviet nuclear forces, either in a first strike or in retaliation. Earlier this week, the Senate overwhelmingly defeated an attempt led by Sen. James L. Buckley (Con.-N.Y.) to add $42 million to the defense budget to substantially improve the accuracy of Minuteman and Poseidon missiles. The amendment, which would enable it to, frankly, blackmail the other one."

A minority view holds that the new silos are designed to provide greater hardness against attack for current missiles.

A third type of new silo, about four feet wider than the largest ever seen, has now been spotted, with one each at several different missile complexes.

Analysts believe the holes are more likely designed for a special purpose missile that is being dispersed to achieve greater protection against concentrated attack.

If one purpose of the official news leaks that Byrd's name is at the top of Nixon's list of court candidates was to ensure public reaction, it had this striking effect today. The most and significant unexpected result was McGovern's praise of Byrd, who has been the Democratic whip, or assistant majority leader, for the last nine months.

Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma, like McGovern and announced candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination next year, said that he would vote against Byrd's nomination because he lacked both "the depth of judgment and legal experience that you would associate with a justice of the nation's highest court," and "the exemplary record in civil rights and civil liberties that I would like to see."

Easy Senate confirmation expected

Sen. Byrd may join Supreme Court

(c) 1971 New York Times

Washington, Oct. 10 - Evidence submitted today that President Nixon's first choice for nomination to the Supreme Court in Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia, and that if his name is submitted to the Senate for confirmation it will pass easily.

The good confirmation prospects of the conservative West Virginia Democrat were indicated by the implied endorsement of Byrd by George McGovern of South Dakota, a leading Senate Liberal, and by predictions by other Senators.

Sources in West Virginia familiar with none of the details of the President's conversation with Byrd last week said that the prospect that Nixon will pick Byrd as "excellent." Rep. Harley O. Staggers, a W. Va., Dem., at whose invitation the President flew on Friday to the Mountain State Forest Festival at Elkton, W. Va. - with Byrd as a passenger in the White House plane - was quoted today as having said Byrd's nomination "looks very good." Byrd's senior colleague in the Senate, Sen. Jennings Randolph, a Dem., was also said to be "optimistic" about a Byrd nomination.

Byrd himself was making no comment on the increased pace of speculation on his nomination, and White House officials added nothing to Saturday's confirmation that Byrd's name was one of several before the President.

One element said to be included in the Republican political calculations about a Byrd nomination was that Byrd should resign his Senate seat, if Byrd would be filled with the 1972 election by an appointee of Gov. Arch A. Moore, Jr., a Republican. A Republican appointee would reduce the 55-45 Democratic majority in the Senate to 48-46.

Furthermore, Moore is known to be extremely eager to run for a seat in the Senate next year, a course that West Virginia Republicans concede would be effectively barred to him unless Byrd or Randolph, both well-entrenched, were to resign or retire.

Nixon was reported to have rejected brusquely a suggestion by at least one of his advisers that the choice of Byrd, a former member of the Ku Klux Klan with a long record of opposition to civil rights measures, would be a major Senate fight against his nomination.

Byrd, like the late Justice Hugo L. Black, has repudiated his association with a justice of the nation's highest court," and "the exemplary record in civil rights and civil liberties that I would like to see."

But McGovern's assessment of Byrd as "a man of enormous industry and personal pride... who would "bind every effort to become a great justice" over-shadowed Harris' criticism. It may also have demonstrated one of Byrd's great advantages if he is nominated - the "club-bigness" of the Senate and the power wielded by the Senate majority leader, Sen. Byrd, who has already said he is unlikely to be concerned about reprisals for his opposition.

Is this the school that Made Knute Rockne Famous?

The populace that journeys regularly to the Wailing Wall in Jerusalem would have been put to shame today with the Notre Dame student body's garish display of emotion accompanying the announcement that a another grand old Notre Dame tradition had bitten the dust.

The formal Homecoming dance is no more, according to Social Commissioner Don Mooney. A declining interest, coupled with a large loss on last year's dance affixed the seal of doom to the event.

Instead the student body will have the chance to go to a beer bash at the armory - hardly a fitting substitute for one of Notre Dame's most illustrious events.

Can this be the same University that once prayed, en masse, at the Grotto for victory? Can this be the same University that held it sacred, that no immature undergraduate foot could trod the holysteps of the dome? Can this be the same University that saw timeless, ageless, even graceless couples waltz and schmaltz their way across homecoming tiles of the past?

The answer to this question is a sad yes. The name's the same, but the game's different. Beer cans have replaced rosy beads, and the drunken belches have replaced the old war cries, "Hail Mary, full of grace," to "to hell with Michigan State," and "Glory, Hallelujah!" No drunken belches have replaced the old war cries, "Hail Mary, full of grace," to "to hell with Michigan State," and "Glory, Hallelujah!" No wonder the Trustees want sanctions!

Where shall we go from here? What other absurdities will follow? Will the stadium be used as the exhibition pen of the next In Animor - hardly a fitting substitute for one of Notre Dame's most illustrious events.

The passing of homecoming has crystallized the issue - the gauntlet has been thrown down, the battle lines and the barricades have been erected.

The object of these afterthoughts is to make the Ulster Catholics feel that they have some stake in the system. A few years or even a few months ago such initiatives might have made a difference. It is almost impossible to believe that they can now.

The opposites in Northern Ireland are becoming more irreconcilable. The traditional parties are clinging to their old principles of du Lach. The political result has been predictable: the further alienation of Ulster's 300,000 Catholics, or 40 per cent of the population, from the whole political system.

What then? The few remaining moderates in Belfast say there are no miracles in sight. A few years or even a few months ago such initiatives might have made a difference.

The truth is that the system of separate provincial government in Northern Ireland is morally wounded. Only a miracle can save it now, and there are no miracles in sight.

What then? The few remaining moderates in Belfast say there will have to be direct rule - government of Northern Ireland from London. The Catholics would feel safer than under a Protestant Ulster government, it is argued. But what about the politics of the situation, he was asked - the British genius for politics did not matter.

The British genius for politics did not matter; if they could get the Irish Republican Army to stop their bombing and sniping? No. They thought they were there to protect people regardless of religion.

The absurdity of that notion is ever clearer in Ireland than in any other part of the United Kingdom, that most peaceful of countries. It would still be an exaggeration to speak of civil war in Northern Ireland, but the strain on economic life and on individual psychology is approaching the unbearable.

The rest of the world probably does not fully understand what is happening to a part of the United Kingdom, that most peaceful of countries. It would still be an exaggeration to speak of civil war in Northern Ireland, but the strain on economic life and on individual psychology is approaching the unbearable.

Thousands of its citizens have left mixed Catholic-Protestants areas and gone into their own ghettos in a migration of fear.

Belatedly, Prime Minister Heath and his government have recognized the political dimensions of the problems. They have talked about providing Catholics with an assured place in Northern Ireland's political structure, dominated by the Protestant Ulster Unionist party since partition 50 years ago. Heath has brought the Ulster provincial prime minister, Brian Faulkner, together with the prime minister of the Irish Republic, John Lynch.

The object of these afterthoughts is to make the Ulster Catholics feel that they have some stake in the system. A few years or even a few months ago such initiatives might have made a difference. It is almost impossible to believe that they can now.

Dining Hall Gripes

Editor:

This letter is to bitch a little about my University's free food service. My complaint is not with the quality of the food, but with the quantity and the extended delay. I have been trying to get more help, but I realize that every recipe that the chef employs includes basic ingredients, a combination of flour, water and ready-mix, and various methods of forming an impermeable plug in some cases. (I know, thank God for acute naturalness of our stomachs, which after 3 hours of very hard work, finally destroys the plug, but pray that when this occurs you do not lock me in your Hall's outhouse. This however is to be expected of the food from the cafeteria.

I'm gripe is that when you want the stuff you can't get it. Last night I was up until 2:00 studying for a departmental that I had tomorrow. At 6:00 this morning I got up and went to the cafeteria. The lady who was there had not started serving breakfast at 7:00, as I had thought she would. The distance of thirty feet back into the kitchen but the stuff was right there.

Every piece of information I have received about the cafeteria shows that, while the continental breakfast ends at 10:30, but the people at the south dining hall seemingly set their own time. Why can't the dining hall move their closing time of the Continental Breakfast to 10:30? Students who have classes through 10:30 will have a chance to eat. What is the food service's (or the dining staff's) organization in the world that they do not know? Also I am afraid of the fact, that they might feed some random person. Nixon vs Bookstore

Editor:

It came to our attention that since the opening of the school year, the price of the composition notebook has been raised by 50¢ to $1.50. Superficially, this increase in price may not merit comment, but if we are concerned enough to make it known to the Notre Dame community as a consumer; we have grown accustomed to the inflationary prices of the past years. However, it is disheartening to see that bookstores continue to increase prices while ignoring President Nixon's Wage and Price Freeze initiated on August 15, 1971. It may be that the bookstore is in need of revenue at this time, but whether they are fixed on making money or recent action has cost us the respect.

Atrocities at Attica: Contradicting reports

The following was prepared by Joseph Lelyveld, Francis X. Clines, Michael T. Kaufman, and JM, members of the New York Times Reporting Staff. This is the last of a five-part series.

(c) 1971 New York Times

The inmates were stripped naked—of even rings, watches and religious medals—then run through a gauntlet of club-wielding troopers in a yard where shouts and whistles were heard.

After that they were forced to crawl on their elbows and knees into the cellblock with their faces in the dirt.

"Keep your nigger nose down!" troopers shouted. "Don't you know state troopers don't like niggers?"

According to one inmate who was listening from a cell near the entrance to the cellblock, the troopers started repeating the castration story to one another shortly after noon and the beatings intensified.

Deputy Commissioner Dunbar led a tour of legislators through the yard in mid-afternoon and pointed to a large black man who he said was guilty of mutilation, which he described in lurid detail. He then described the slashing of throats of the slain hostages.

He said was guilty of mutilation, which he described in lurid detail. He then described the slashing of throats of the slain hostages.

These stories—which were falsely repeated the next day by autopsy reports—reflected the expectations of savagery that had been building all through the weekend. Inmates had threatened throat slashings; they had lined up hostages with knives at their throats; two of three who survived the slashings; and, finally, the bodies of the three inmates killed the day before were discovered in D block.

But the fact is that no doctor had examined the wounds of the dead at this time. In some cases, the blindfolds the hostages wore had slipped down to their necks and became drenched from bullet wounds. On such evidence, the prison officials found what they had expected to find all along.

Two days later, at a news conference in New York, Rockatansky described his feeling of relief as he heard that the first 21 hostages had been brought safely out of D yard.

"I want to tell you I just was absolutely overwhelmed," he said. "I just didn't see how it was possible. With 1,200 men in there armed, with electrified barricades, with trenches, with a pledge which they said that they would all go right down fighting for the last man, how it was going to be possible."

He then was asked: "What does this tell you about the prisoners, Governor, the fact that so many men did emerge unharmed?"

"I think," he replied, "what it tells is that the use of this gas in a fantastic instrument in a..."
Hurricanes fall to Irish defense
Etter hurt; soph Brown directs Irish past Miami
by Jim Donaldson
Sports Editor
Notre Dame's stalwart defense, led by ex-captain Wall Patulski and linebacker Jim 'Muley', turned in another great performance Saturday night as the Fighting Irish ran past the Miami Hurricanes, 17-0, before 64,357 fans in the Orange Bowl. The victory, Notre Dame's fourth straight, all this was a costly one, however. Senior quarterback Bill Etter, who had emerged as the number one signal caller for the Irish last weekend in the Michigan State game, suffered torn ligaments in his left knee in the second quarter of the contest and will likely be out for the remainder of the season.

Sophomore Cliff Brown filled in most capably for Etter, directing touchdown drives of 66 and 68 yards. He also accounted for the next play but Bob Minnick picked up the first down by inches at the 38. Brown and Cieszkowski ran the ball to the 'Cane 26 but the march stalled there. After those running plays, had gained only five yards, Bob Thomas came to in an attempt to a 2-yard gain but he was forced to punt. Neither club threatened in the final minutes of the half and the Irish took their 3-0 advantage into the dressing room.

Notre Dame wasted no time in seizing on the lead once the second half got underway. After Bill Gallagher returned the kickoff to the Irish 34, Brown took the club down the field to score in 1:17. On the Irish staff on the ground throughout the 66-yard drive, which was capped by a great 47-yard field goal run by Andy Huff. Huff rumbled through a gaping hole and left three would-be tacklers en route to the goal. Thomas kicked the Irish extra point to make it 10-0, Notre Dame, and that pretty much put the game out of Miami's reach. Miami wasn't able to move the football and three and a half down for a punt.

Notre Dame's final touchdown came in the fourth quarter. Etter broke loose for 33 yards on the first play of the series. Brown and Minnix carried for a first down at the 26 but Cieszkowski added another two plays later. After an offline penalty against the Canes, Thomas was rained out Sunday and was rescheduled for 7:30 p.m. Monday night as the top yardage figure. However, before he vetoed the Orioles' suggestion—which was made by Jerry Holberger, the owner of the team—Kuhn polled the players, the presidents of the National and the American Leagues and the National Baseball Players Association. The Pirate's feelings, though, proved decisive.

Hurricanes move the ball back to the 17. Brown ran for five yards and, on the play, the Hurricanes' Daryl Feen was penalized for a personal foul and ejected from the game. That put the ball on the Miami six and, after the angry crowd had twice forced the Irish to back off the line of scrimmage because they couldn't hear the signals, Darrell Dewan carried around left end on a power sweep and rumbled into the end zone unchallenged. Thomas converted to make it 17-0 with 1:00 remaining. Miami threatened to spoil Notre Dame's shutout bid in the final minutes, driving to the Irish 21 before giving up the ball on downs, but that was as close as they came to scoring and the Irish defense recorded their first shut-out of the season.

‘Lake Havasu City Bridge Is Falling Down, Falling Down’?

(c) 1971 New York Times News Service

“It’s a supergimmick,” commented a British newspaperman. “It’s all quite mad - it could only happen in America. Only an American would think of investing that much in something as crazy as this.”

“It’s very strange,” another Britisher said, “one associates the London Bridge with trying to catch a train, carrying your rolled umbrella and running like hell.”

Thus were some of the comments voiced yesterday when Sir Peter M. Studd, the Lord Mayor of London, and Gov. Jack Williams of Arizona, pulled on a red silk ribbon, set off thousands of multicolored balloons, hurried white pigeons, skyrockets, a hot-air balloon dragging a huge, papier-mache dove behind it, and opened the London Bridge at Lava Flow City in the heart of the Arizona desert. The ceremony capped a weekend of festivities that included a lavish banquet last night seating 200 guests and costing more than an estimated $600,000. The menus featured lobster and roast beef, the same fare served to King William IV when he inaugurated the bridge in London in 1831.

Buying the bridge, and moving it to Arizona, was the brainstorm of Robert P. McCulloch, the board chairman of McCulloch Oil and the man who conceived the novel idea of building a new town in a barren, sandy spot that averages more than 110 degrees in the summer.

McCulloch candidly admits that the bridge was bought for one reason - to bring tourists, and their money, to a town that badly needs both. His total investment is $10 million and he scoffs at those who call the project "McCulloch’s folly." He figures that tourists will spend $80 million a year to see the bridge made famous by the children’s nursery rhyme.

The whole event, as one observer noted, “looked like a Fellini movie,” a strange clashing of customs and cultures, with the jagged peaks of the Chemeheuvi mountains providing a stark and unreal backdrop.

There was the Lord Mayor, in his black ceremonial robes and gold ornaments, and his sword-bearer, a red-faced, bewhiskered gentleman who wore an enormous Russian sable headpiece.

Most of the invited guests who flew in this weekend from Los Angeles, Phoenix, and Las Vegas were friends, clients and employees of McCulloch, whose business interests range from oil to land development to chain saws.

McClucchini, the only person who refused to dress formally for the dinner, showed up in a button-down white shirt, narrow tie and white sports jacket. Asked how he felt on the big day, he hoisted a glass and admitted, “I’ll feel a lot better after drinking this.”
