Chou reveals China's cautious U.N. policy

By Richard Halloran (c) 1971 New York Times

TOKYO, NOV. 8 - Premier Chou En-Lai of Communist China has told a Japanese editor that the Chinese delegation to the United Nations will take a "very cautious" approach.

Chou, in an interview in Peking with Moto Goto, Managing Editor of the Asahi Shimbun, a leading daily here, said: "There is an old Chinese saying, which goes, 'Be careful when facing a problem.' We do not have too much knowledge about the United Nations and are not too consistent with the new situation which has arisen in the United Nations."

"We have to be very cautious," Chou was reported to have said. "This does not mean, however, that we do not have self-confidence; it means that caution is required and that we must not be inconsistent and haphazard."

Chou's remarks, published in an English transcript here today, appeared to confirm earlier speculation in New York that Communist China planned to move carefully during its first days as a member of the United Nations.

Chou received Goto on Oct. 28, three days after the United Nations voted to replace Taiwan with Communist China. In an earlier article, Goto said the record of the interview was checked by the Chinese Foreign Ministry for one week and therefore constituted an "official record."

Goto also said that there was an agreement that the content of the interview would be released at an "appropriate time."

Its publication today coincided with the arrival of the advance party of the Communist Chinese Delegation in New York. Chou, who met with Goto for two hours in the United States delegation, People also indicated that the Chinese Delegation would align itself with the less-developed nations of Asia, Africa, and Latin America.

"We have appealed to the 'major powers,' to power politics, and to domination," Chou said. "We will not become a major power under any circumstances."

"All countries must be uniformly equal," Chou was reported to have said. "We must particularly and without fail respect the opinions of the small and medium-sized nations."

"If the statements of the small and medium-sized countries are ignored and if things are decided only on the basis of statements by the major powers," Chou continued, "this violates the premise that small, medium and major nations are uniformly equal."

Chou told Goto that the Chinese government was undertaking a careful analysis of the United Nations vote but indicated that the way a nation voted on the Chinese representation issue would have only a marginal effect on China's attitudes.

Among the 76 nations that voted for Communist China, Chou said, "there are some countries that cannot have official governmental relations with China."

"He singled out Israel, which he asserted had started an aggressive war in the Middle East."

Although he had friendly words for the United States, Chou said: "There must be no ambiguity in outlining one's position and drawing the line."

"A country must be firm," he noted. "Portugal has colonies in Africa but China supports the national liberation movement of the peoples in Angola, Mozambique, and Guinea. Because of this, Portugal may be thinking as follows: We have supported China, so China should not attack us on the colonial question in the U.N. Security Council."

"This, however, is something we cannot agree to," Chou said.

He said that China and Japan "must go forward in the direction of a diplomatic relationship." But the statement appeared to be a generality and he gave no details.

Chicano recruitment

How hard does ND really try?

by Jerry Lutkus

Observer News Editor

(This is the first part of a four part series covering university recruitment of minority groups. Today's installment covers the recruitment of Chicanos by Notre Dame.)

Armando Alonso, campus leader of MECCHA, spoke quickly but thoughtfully as his meal rapidly grew cold beneath him: "Recruitment of Chicanos by this University is really ineffective."

The Mexican-American leader from Edinburgh, Texas confided that what this University really needs is a Spanish-speaking member of the admissions office. It needs this man to recruit Chicanos.

According to Alonso, in meetings last year with Rev. James Burtchaell, the Provost, he could see no reason for such a hiring. But Alonso said that it was necessary because "the recruiters don't know who we are."

"If they don't know us, they cannot do an effective job," he commented.

As it stands, the members of the Admissions Department generally go where to alumni requests send the recruiters to middle and upper class schools.

"California and Texas combined have 5 million Chicanos, yet where do the recruiters go—suburbs?" Alonso complained.

He continued: "I'm not saying that the recruiters shouldn't go there, but we too want to become part of this school, this society. We want to share in its opportunities..."

Alonso noted further that the university presently draws all of its Chicano members from the Southwest. Out of the entire university Mexican-American population, only three members come from the Midwest. Yet Chicago and New York have some of the nation's highest percentage Chicano populations, he said.

MECHA's leader said that "we have to make a better effort to get Chicanos from the Midwest and East; Chicago-Gary, Detroit, New York, Cleveland."

MECHA made an effort to do precisely that over the weekend as they brought approximately 48 Mexican-American high school students from the Chicago area to the campus. The effort was co-ordinated with the Mexican-American Council on Education (MACE). MACE is a group of parents and young adults who are concerned with Mexican-American education. They brought the organization's president, vice-president, and 3 of the organization's counselors, who aid the group, to Notre Dame along with the students.

It was a co-ed group who came to get acquainted with the university in general, but more specifically with its programs on scholarships and financial aid. Alonso said that the Chicanos can meet university academic requirements, but that they need financial help. Financial aid is imperative to a Chicano's attendance, according to Alonso. As of now, the University gives aid out of the Cotton Bowl funds and from the interest on an endowment given the university by the Knights of Columbus. Dining Hall crackdown started

by Ann-Therese Darin

Lines of students waiting for meals yesterday ran out of the front doors of the Dining Hall and curled around the South Dining Hall tables, as a result of the food-service clampdown on forged tickets. Director of food services Edmund T. Price confirmed the clampdown, diagnosing, "It's pretty bad. I wouldn't be doing it if I didn't have to."

Although Price could not give exact dates and end figure for the losses due to the illegality, he termed it "a significant amount." Six, inferred the number of tickets forged is under 100. For each forged meal ticket, Price said, the service loses $300.00.

Price maintained that it was difficult to determine the amount lost because there are several degrees of forgery ranging from inked numbers to completely forged cards.

Food service is now checking meal-card numbers against master sheets as students enter the dining hall, and randomly confiscating cards for a day in order to investigate their make. As of four o'clock yesterday afternoon, Price related that his workers had confiscated five or "six" illegal meal cards.

"I am not a disciplinarian," he claimed. "This is not our function, our function is simply to serve food."

interest return at $40,000 a year.

Last year, 11 undergraduate Mexican Americans were given aid. This year the number has climbed to 19. "The Provost says this is progress," claims Alonzo. "We question his estimation of progress."

"We have the highest birth rate in the U.S. and we're the poorest," said Alonzo. "What's so paradoxical," he continued, "is that Fr. Hesburgh knows all this. He knows our problems. He says we're (Notre Dame is) committed to total equality."

Alonzo also made note of the commitment." Alonzo said. "That, to us, is not progress," said MEFCHA hopes to see 25 Mexican Americans on campus next year. "If we keep going on this 10-15, 15-20 rate, we're never going to catch up," says Alonzo.

Alonzo revealed that the Mexican Americans have been working with student Government and the Office of Admissions, and that they intend to continue. "It's all part of a program, an action that has to be done by all of us."

"We question this situation "not very normal."

"We'd like to see girls here," he said.

Alonzo also attacked the argument that admission of more Chicanos would lower a university's standards. Alonzo called this belief "totally unfounded."

"You can cite tests, stats, anything, often we score higher," he said.

Most of us are bilingual, bicultural," he continued, "and this is something that test scores don't indicate."

Alonzo revealed that the Mexican Americans have been working with student Government and the Office of Admissions, and that they intend to continue. "It's all part of a program, an action that has to be done by all of us."

MEFCHA needs people to help them, Alonzo said. They need people to gather information and to write alumni concerning funds to aid them. Alonzo says that they even need people to help work with the Chicanos in South Bend.

But he emphasized that people be Mexican Americans have been working with student Government and the Office of Admissions, and that they intend to continue. "It's all part of a program, an action that has to be done by all of us."

United Nations, N.Y.--A six man advance party for the new Chinese delegation arrived Monday to begin making arrangements for security, housing and office space for the full delegation. They were met at Kennedy Airport by members of the Albanian and Humenian delegations and then given a police escort to their hotel.

Washington-President Nixon rejected a Pentagon proposal that would have withdrawn the only American division from South Korea and reduced the army to 11 divisions. According to administration sources, the proposal, which was made in the course of hammering out a new defense budget, was turned down after it had been opposed by the State Department and White House officials.

London-Amnesty International, a respected private organization that acts in behalf of political prisoners throughout the world, published charges that imprisoned men in Northern Ireland had been maltreated.

Interhall Loop set for playoffs

by Stan Uransk 72

An exciting final week of Interhall Pool 1972 saw last year's finalists, Dillon and Keanen, face off for the championship. Pangborn Fisher and Morinney round out this year's pool, completing the four.

Keanen 11 Flanner 6

The Keanen teammates did enough to appear the champion pool on the outcome of this contest. As the clubs left each other's court to return to class, Flanner fumbled at his own 35 which Keanen returned 54 yards for a touchdown.

Keanen 74

The Keanen offense, led by their star quarterback, was powerful as usual. The defense, however, was forced to turn back three Flanner drives in the game's final moments.

Maurtough 24

The Maurtough team was led by their star running back, who carried the ball 20 times for 100 yards. The defense held Keanen to only one touchdown, a 29-yard pass play.

Maurtough 33

The Maurtough team controlled the game from the start, holding Keanen to only 13 points. The defense was led by a strong performance from the linebacker, who registered three tackles.

The Graduate View

Waiting in the weeds

So now John Shumate is out too. Now the longest rebounder, potentially the highest scorer, the rock upon which to build the Phelps dynasty, will not play this year due to an injury. This is a tough blow for Phelps, who have provided a much needed steady influence as well as a few points and rebounds.

But this winter, I'll be leaving the basketball reporting and analyzing to the rest of the staff, but the Shumate tragedy has prompted a few recollections of "firsts," and probably traumatic years. Phelps will field a young, inexperienced team, made younger and less experienced by the injuries and the policies of last season. Take Jim Rodgers and Dan Silinski. Both showed flashes of excellence last year, especially Silinski who always seemed to excel in the "garbage" portion of the games he got into. Rodgers is a wealth of height and raw talent.

But if that was all too limited action last year. Faced with his unusually tough schedule, former coach Johnny Dee had very few chances toclear his bench and give Regelean, in particular, the game experience he needed.

Phelps must bank heavily on sophomores, a prospect no coach particularly welcomes, with the same enthusiasm he would have provided a much needed steady influence as well as a few points and rebounds.

Walt's better

Recent medical reports show that Walt Patulski, Notre Dame's all-current defensive end who was injured against Pittsburgh last Saturday, may be able to play next week against Tulane.

Irish coach Ara Parseghian said yesterday that, "X rays at St. Joseph's Hospital showed that the knee cap was either bruised or pulled a little. There was some fluid, but we accepted that he'll improve each day and be ready for Tulane."

Open B-ball practice slated

The Irish basketball team will hold an open practice Tuesday, December 19, for interested persons are invited to practice, which will be held in the Atlantic City gymnasium. The game. Dillon was not out, however Slasky worked the same play to Hoy for 50 yards to the Walsh seven. With a third and goal for a touchdown, Slasky rolled out and fired for Hoy in the end zone, but was intercepted by Walsh, with the ball at the 20, tried to move to a score, but comeback Jay Long intercepted at the 20 with only 35 seconds remaining. With the clock running out on Dillon's title hopes and only one play left, Slasky fumbled a ball to Hoy in the middle of the end zone for, possibly, their biggest win of the season.

Pangborn-Fisher 15-Off Campus 6

P-R rolled to a League One tie-challenging triumph. Chuck Voelker capped a 65 yard opening period drive with a quarterback sneak for a 6-6 lead. With their defense holding O-C to only one first down for the game, P-R played central ball till the final period, when Phil Dann tallied on a yard run, and Voelker kicked with All Campus receiver Pete Farbuck on a 35 yard touchdown pass. P-R and Dillon now square off next week for a place in the finals.

Browne beats Alumni

A scheduling misunderstanding led to this forfeit victory for Sorin, as both clubs tried to move into a score, but were stopped. Pangborn-Fisher out Co-Op 12, Pangborn-Fisher 7-Valleymere.

Student Body President John Barkett last night evaluated his first seven months in office as "a pretty good year so far."

SBP Barkett spoke in the Keenan Hall chapel at the invitation of the Hall's Academic Commission, mentioning what he termed "several successes" he had experienced so far but predicting that "chances look pretty poor" for co-ed dorms by next year.

The SBP contended that conditions is bound to come to the Notre Dame campus, arguing that the merger was "too far advanced" to be put off for very long or to be reversed. He said that for "political reasons," co-ed dorms would probably not come from any source of the Board, he said, "too many minds would have to be changed," he opined.

The SBP said that current plans call for two Notre Dame dorms to become women's dorms next fall, although the University has not determined which dorms they will be, since, he said, "on one side we want to leave where they are right now."

Barkett listed as his successes the recent Student Life Fund, scheduled to be distributed to the halls through the Student Senate, instigated Student Life Committee, the promise received from the Board of Trustees for financial support, the right halls that he had been able to visit, and "certain improvements in academics."

Barkett said that the establishment of a grade committee, a new Freshman Year Dean, and a proposed mid-first semester break for next year all constituted progress in that area.

He was also "happy for the success of the Day Care Center" and the Charity Basketball Game to take the week of Thanksgiving.

Other successes he contended, was trying to tell them."

In response to a question about the effects of the Trustees rejection of the SLC's parietal recommendation on the SLC, Barkett said, "In talking to the members, I've found that none of them feel slighted."

However, he contended that the concept of an SLC may have been damaged somewhat.

"I couldn't help feeling," he said, "that they (the Trustees) didn't understand what the SLC was trying to tell them."

First is what he called the "historical framework in which they look at things, including the situation of the past few years and the sudden move from no parietals to de facto 24-hour parietals last year."

"Second," he said, "there's a bad taste in people's mouth about co-ed dorms by next year."

current hall leadership is good, current parietals last year, new student body vice president, Missy Underman reported that he was "pleased" with what she termed the "acceptance of parietal proposal by the Student Affairs Council." The Student Affairs Council has deferred voting on the bill, which would give each hall the power to determine its own parietal regulations.

The Committee sent the proposed extension of the St. Mary's Coffee shop's hours back to the Student Union for further investigation. The committee charged the Union to pay particular attention to hiring a new guard, a move deemed "too far term in its own parietal voting on the bill, which would give each hall the power to determine its own parietal regulations.
