Toohy wants “amnesty” for draft resisters

by D. Patrick Rock

Director of Campus Ministry Fr. William Toohey released last night a letter he sent to President Nixon yesterday, urging Nixon to grant amnesty to the men who have been imprisoned or have left the country because of “sincere opposition” to the draft.

Cites bishops’ plea

Toohey cited a resolution recently passed by the Catholic Bishops of America urging the U.S. Government to “grant amnesty...because of sincere opposition” in support of his proposal. Toohey said that the move was a “startling” one on the part of Bishops, and they used, according to Toohey, “very strong language” in their statement.

“We must acknowledge the agonizing truth that American intervention in Vietnam was a tragic mistake—both internationally and domestically,” Toohey said in a press release yesterday. “There is a therapeutic measure that can be taken to the government and that is to grant amnesty to the thousands of our young people who perceived the complexity and hopelessness of the Vietnam fiasco and therefore refused to participate in it.”

Political issues

Toohey expressed apprehension over the political implications of such a move. “The granting of amnesty to resisters and defectors must not be allowed to become merely another more calculated political issue designed to capture the votes of the eighteen-year-olds,” he said in his letter to the government and that is to grant amnesty to the thousands of our young people who perceived the complexity and hopelessness of the Vietnam fiasco and therefore refused to participate in it.”

If our weatherman is right we’ll be getting rain tomorrow. Temps won’t be bad today. In the fifties, I would say. For these reports I don’t care. As long as the snow isn’t there. And I’d finish this crazy line. But my thoughts are fixed on Turkey time.
Library cramped: 2 building plans

Law school additions: no verdict

by Maria Gallagher

Notre Dame law students have been lobbying for about four years for more modern facilities to replace the cramped and antiquated law building which is more than 100 years old, but their case seems to have received scant attention from the administration so far.

Observer Insight

According to Tim Hartzer, a third-year law student and president of N.D.'s Student Bar Association, tentative plans for a new Law Center complex have been in existence since he came to Notre Dame and a number of ideas have been expressed, but so far no concrete action has been taken to either add to the present building, or to initiate construction of the proposed complex.

Hartzer said he personally feels that the present building is "grossly inadequate," noting in particular the library seating space and the volume capacity of the library, which is about half of what it should be, for the nearly 500 students who use it. He also called the proposed complex plans "unrealistic," but added that promises were made and people were led to believe that its construction would begin in the not too distant future. The 1970 Dome, in its Law School section, features a picture of a scale model of "Notre Dame's new Law Center (which) will be ready to accommodate them (the students) by 1973." The Dome went on to the to the predicted fact that the Law School planned to double its enrollment within five years. If that be the case, the present inadequacies of the existing building will be increased fivefold.

Dean Thomas Shaffer of the Law School fully agreed with the students' contention that more space is necessary, but conceded that financing is a formidable obstacle.

"Within two years a decision will have to be made one way or another to expand the present building, or to build a new one altogether," Shaffer said. Other possibilities previously suggested were to move to an already-existing building on campus, or, as Fr. Burtchaell hinted last year, to create a graduate social science complex at St. Mary's upon completion of the merger. However, the financing problem remains. "The Law Center drive has already raised enough money for addition, but not enough for a new building," Shaffer said.

"Some concrete proposals are presently under review, and although there is limited space for expansion, there is some room for it toward the east by the engineering building. A remodeling would approximately double the size of the place," he speculated.

Hartzer, however, said that a new building might prove a better investment in the long run, since the Law School will probably continue to expand.

"If no further financing is in sight by June 1, the two million dollars already available will have to be spent toward an addition. The "cosmetic changes" made over the summer have made the building more liveable, but as far back as Dean O'Meara the building was being labeled inadequate, and conditions will probably continue to be so until a new one is erected.

Everybody says the Law Building is inadequate but nobody is doing anything about it.

Hesburgh expresses disappointment

Rights commission calls Nixon's enforcement slack

Washington. Nov. 16—The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights today accused the Nixon administration of failing to enforce civil rights laws and regulations. For the third time in a year, the investigation body, which had been particularly strong in its criticism of the administration's enforcement effort, found the White House itself to be less than adequate. Not one of the 29 agencies received a rating of adequate. The Office of Management and Budget, which is under the White House, got the highest rating, just below the adequate level.

The White House itself fared better than any other agency included in the commission's investigation, but the best the White House could get was a "less than adequate" performance rating on a chart in which the agencies were rated either poor, marginal, adequate and good.

Not one of the 29 agencies received a rating of adequate. The Office of Management and Budget, which is under the White House, got the highest rating, just below the adequate level. A White House spokesman said there would be no comment on the report since the President only received it on Monday.

The commission reported that it would find some progress within certain agencies, mainly the establishment of machinery to begin enforcement. "Actual performance in the resolution of problems, not progress in the development of mechanisms alone, is the realistic yardstick by which the government's civil rights effort should be measured," the report said.

It's no consolation to the black farmer who continues to receive assistance from the extension service on a racial and unequal basis that the Department of Agriculture is making progress. It is no source of satisfaction to the Mexican-American of Puerto Rican job seeker turned down by a government contractor that the Office of Federal Contract Compliance is gradually improving.

At a news conference this afternoon, Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, Chairman of the commission, added: "No one can get excited about progress that is made after he is dead."

The report released today follows two previous studies of federal enforcement by the commission. In October, 1970, the commission charged that there had been a "major break-down" in enforcement because the federal government had virtually abdicated its responsibility. And in a report seven months later, last May, the commission noted some progress, but also found substantial regression in civil rights activity in some agencies.

Commission officials denied that there was a split in the position of the commissioners and the staff. Father Hesburgh's statement was more moderate than the language of the report.

"There was a split in the position of the commissioners and the staff. Father Hesburgh's statement was more moderate than the language of the report. Asked about this, he said the commission would stick to the statement. However, John Buggs, acting staff director, said the commission fully endorsed the report, 'otherwise, they would not have released it.'"

In rating the performance of agencies for today's report, the commission based its conclusions on the progress made on its recommendations of last year. Thus, in overall effectiveness, categories, there was marked improvement in only three areas, the first three in specific

Washington-The Senate voted to extend the foreign aid program until Dec 1, but the program, which expired at midnight on Monday, was still halted because the house refused to accept the Senate extension. The House, which last week voted a longer extension, ordered a conference with the Senate to settle the matter.

United Nations-Mainland China's first U.N. vote was cast for a resolution that warned the United States that chromosome imports from Bhosphia would be a violation of American treaty obligations. The resolution, which was approved 107 to 2, was a protest against Congressional actions permitting chrome imports.

Moscow-Informed sources said that Col. Rudolf Abel, who headed an espionage organization in the United States for nine years, died at the age of 60. Abel was arrested in New York in 1960 and convicted of espionage. He was exchanged in 1962 for Francis Gary Powers, whose U-2 Spy plane had been shot down over the Soviet Union.

Washington-For the third time in a year, the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights accused the federal government of failing to adequately enforce civil rights laws and regulations. Of the 29 agencies rated by the commission, only the White House was able to anything near an adequate rating.

Washington-Railway signalmen and the nation's railroads reached a contract settlement that called for a 46 cent wage increase over 42 months, roughly matching the settlements for the rest of the industry. The contract was immediately submitted to the pay board which must approve it before the signalmen receive the increase.

It took about two months for the comprehensive St. Mary’s hall autonomy bill to work its way from the drafting board to the Student Affairs Council. It took all of ten minutes for Acting SMC President Sister Alma Peter to kill the bill with a slash of her pen.

The soulful liberal who serves as Acting President didn’t have the courtesy to forward a number of schoolmarmish reasons for her veto. She did say that she had talked to some of the parents and that they had discouraged her, she never did get around to explaining why the parents of a group of legal adults had any influence on her decision. She did say that she had talked to some of the Trustees and that they discouraged her, she never explained why she had to sound out Trustees for her decision in the light of the fact that they would eventually pass judgement on the bill anyway. Finally, she ventured her own opinion - that the halls weren’t “ready” for such a move, whatever the hell that means.

She missed the whole point of course. It’s not her right-or-the University’s-to decide lifestyles for grown women-but let it pass. Trying to talk sense with obdurate administrators is a little like trying to restore the dead - occasionally you get a rise out of them, but generally it’s just rigor mortis. The fact that she’s only Acting President and due for a swift retirement when the merger comes can provide some small solace when one realizes what an incredibly bad actor she really is.

The question SMC student leaders will have to ponder over the next couple of days is what course of action they might take in response to the veto. SBP Kathy Barlow, in our front-page story, went over some of them. What SMC cannot do is precisely what ND has done - wait for a more reasonable judgement next year. For SMC, Hall autonomy exists neither de jure nor de facto. People actually suffer for the stupidities of their administrators.

The other courses range from a resubmission - which would presumably guarantee the same result - to widespread and far ranging violations - which would probably result in mass execution or whatever they use to deal with sinners at St. Mary’s.

The most promising course - and it’s not a very promising course - is to ignore Sr. Alma’s veto and take the thing to the Board of Trustees. They may not approve it, in which case we’re back to where we are now. But if it’s given an impressive defense - a defense as impressive as the one Barkett, Rodriguez, and Weaver gave before the stolid ND Trustees - it may sway enough people to actually carry the bill. Of all the alternative courses Barlow mentioned in her commentary, this is the only one that might give St. Mary’s hall autonomy - this year. Or, alternately, it might soften the Trustees up for concessions in other areas, as it surely did here.

In any event, it can’t hurt.

The 1972 Mardi Gras Notre Dame Charities Raffle gets into full swing this week when the raffle packets are distributed campus wide. Many people often wonder where the money goes each year well, here is an opportunity to find out.

cila: mutual experience

CILA was Notre Dame's biggest winner last year when it received a $2800 allocation from the Mardi Gras Charity Chest. This money is used in support of the summessocial work of many of our students who travel to Indian reservation, poor Appalachian communities and towns as far away as Mexico and Haiti. A mutual educational and human experience is lived by both the natives and our students during the summer.

The neighborhood Study Help Program involves some 900 underprivileged South Bend children and the concern of several hundred Notre Dame and St. Mary's students. Sometimes only a little personal interest into the life of a child can do wonders—which seems to say enough for this community project. The Charity Chest donation of $2150 was only a small portion of the program budget and our only regret was that we couldn't help them a little more.

manasa - caring for our brothers & sisters

MANASA is a student interest group which concerns itself not only with the retarded children at Northern Indiana Children's Hospital but also with those who have become afflicted with mental disease. Trips are made by those involved to the Beatie State Mental Hospital. MANASA received a contribution of $750 from N.D. Charities last year.

sr marita's giving them a chance

Sister M. Marita's Day School attempts to give some of the South Bend underprivileged a fighting chance in this world by giving them a more personal academic training. Often times these students are labeled by the public school systems as 'dope'. Sr. Marita shows what a little interest can do. Sister received $600 from the Charity Chest.

If everybody would just help a little

The above groups received the major donations from the Charity Chest last year. Others that received an allocation include the Student Infant Education Program, Bengal Mission Bouts, Non-Violence Program, Cornville Inc., People's Pantry, Notre Dame Credit Union for Account of "Prison Teachers", and the Student Drug Information Center.

When added up the allocations by the Charity Chest amounts to $16,385.00. Such a small sum - our potential is so great! If each person on campus sold but one book-well, you add it up. A small but universal effort by our community will make Mardi Gras '72 a success for everyone. Please help this year.

du lac: where your father would have gone

The following is reprinted from the October 22nd issue of the "Marianews" - a student publication of Marion High School in Marion, Michigan. The author is an associate editor of the newspaper and visited our campus several weekends back. Her observations may be taken with as many grains of salt as you wish...being based primarily upon surface impressions instead of, say, person-to-person dialogue. However, it is hoped that they still offer some insight into how other folks view this place.

Nestled on a shady campus outside South Bend, Indiana, is the social phenomenon known to college catalogues and incoming freshmen as Notre Dame. Recently I visited this university that time was seemingly forgotten, and for the purpose of educating the public, and completing this week's journalism assignment, my observations are recorded below.

Notre Dame looks like someplace where your father and favorite uncle went to school. Ivy covered halls and shaded sidewalks are reminiscent of another time, a different era. The only thing that would make you think other than football, you'll never learn to swim.

study help - wonders & concern

A study of student bulletin boards reinforces a first impression of stark contrasts. One board advertised a Saturday night bridge game at Grace Towers, an offer to sell two tickets to the football game, and a reminder to talk to your hall representative about some assignment that had been held. No demonstrations being organized. (No Black Panthers.) Just pigskin and bridge games.

While I don't support an overthrow of the system, there is a great deal to be said for an institution that encompasses a variety of opinions and life styles. A good part of our education is learning to cope with attacks. Open your beliefs. If nobody rocks the boat, you'll never learn to swim.

"the universe is not only queerer than we suppose"

but queerer than we can suppose"
Holy Cross Hall was given the second highest grant, all $800 they had requested for carpeting to cut down on the noise problem in the hall. Stanford, another hall without lounge areas, was given $400. Other large grants went to Radin, $670 for a study lounge; Walsh, $750 for improvements in a hall lounge, and Zahn, $740, including $195 for a vei for the chapel.

Farley, which made the largest request, $780.50, was given $80 to start a basement lounge. Because Farley already has lounge areas, the campaign decided that it was unfair to give them more until other halls had been improved.

Hall television sets were financed in Pangborn, Morrisey, and Sorin. Electric doors were part of Dillon's request.

Hoefer also mentioned that Stay Senators T.C. Telemen and Jim Callahan, two Senate representatives to the Committee, would make a report on the poor University space usage in several halls. Holy Cross, Farley, and Fisher were the prime examples of this.

HPC Chairman Ed Motto said he was satisfied with the way things turned out. "It was an equitable distribution," he said. "It was a hard job but the committee did it and they seemed to be consistent about it.

Motto said that the limited supply of funds was unfortunate, but that it was necessary. "Because of the money involved, many people were quite ambitious. Now they have to scrap plans or rethink their programs."

The other members of the Student Life Committee were Grace Hall President Jim Sweeney and Off-Campus Commissioner John Drost.

In other action last night, the HPC moved to have all 100 Co-Ex dinner tickets distributed through the residence halls. Currently only 50 are, with the others going through the Student Union office.

At the beginning of the meeting, Co-Ex Executive Director Gary Carson wanted to send all 100 tickets through the Union office. Keenan Hall President Dave Loring and Dillon President Phil Michaels objected immediately and after discussion, the HPC moved by consensus to give all 100 tickets to the halls on a rotating basis.

Senate hits tax relief for low income families

Washington, Nov. 16—The Senate voted today to put into effect this year an additional $80 million in tax relief for low-income families.

The action, which came on an amendment by Sen. Robert Humphrey, D-Minn., would remove entirely from the taxpayer roll an estimated 1.3 million poor families and reduce the taxes of another 900,000 families at or near poverty levels.

The Humphrey Amendment, which was passed by a 46-44 vote, was one of the few adopted today by the Senate Committee on Tax Bill and, behind the scenes, began focusing its attention on a major controversy that was scheduled to start tomorrow. The issue is that of funding political campaigns through the tax system.

Several days of private negotiations have produced a campaign-funding proposal that will apparently be supported by many democrats and some Republicans and which stands a definite chance of enactment.

Those Democrats who are supporting the plan seem intent on it as a way to help their near-bankrupt party. The Republicans who favor it are individuals who have become concerned about the necessity of most political candidates to rely on a few wealthy contributors for money to run their campaigns.

The planned campaign-funding amendment to the Tax Act is an attempt to provide relief to poor families and reduce the tax burden on the middle class.

How to get Started...

If you've always wanted stereo components but just couldn't cut the money problem, we have something for you: a really high quality " Starter Set" that you can enjoy now— and that you can upgrade economically later, if you want.

The Sony TA-1010 amplifier forms the heart of the system. It is probably the best $120 amplifier available today, delivering a clean 20 watts per channel (RMS ratings). It has all the controls, inputs, and outputs you'll need to connect a tape recorder, AM-FM tuner, cartridge, tape player, or whatever.

The loudspeakers are the Electro-Voice EV-13's. They're engineered (you'd be surprised at how many speakers aren't!) to deliver maximum performance for the price, with a clean, sparkly high end and truly impressive lows for a speaker of this size and price.

The changer is the Garrard 401, with a Shure M97E elliptical cartridge. It comes complete with base and dust cover, ready to go.

The guarantee is 3 years on the amplifier, 5 years on the speakers, and there's also a 5 year guarantee on the transformers in the amplifier.

The regular price of the components separately is $224.95. Our price on the system is $265.00, a saving of 18.5% off the regular price.

And here's a bonus to this already significant value: within one year, if your ship comes in and you want to trade in either the speakers or the amp for something more ambitious, we'll do it, and we'll guarantee the trade-in value, in writing.

Come in soon and ask Dick or Glenn about the one that gets you started. And keeps you going.
Managing; a learning experience

Compared to Ara and his staff, Mike Pavlin ’72, who stands as one of Notre Dame’s top football managers, has stood at Bulldog Stadium side-by-side with the coaching staff, because they’ve been such an integral part of Notre Dame football for the past four years. But first, Mike, I’d be willing to bet that he’d say he’s much more than just Ara’s right-hand man. Nick Nugent, Keating and Mac Donald— as much as he will All Americans.

Who? Bill Nugent? Nugent, Mike Bus ter Keating and Jimmy “Mac” MacDonald, that’s who. The guys behind the scenes.

There students who dedicate upwards of 2,000 hours in their four year managing career. For example, NIKE is a big winner.
But the statistics tell a different story. Bill Nugent puts it this way.
1.) Points Interceptions Returned: 185
2.) Sacks: 1
3.) Passes Broken Up: 22
4.) Interceptions: Ken Schlezes 3
5.) Reception Yards: Gatewood 2208

Nugent’s crew certainly proved they can score, with 10 goals in the UPI ratings. And the affiliation with the football team goes far beyond the game itself. "I’ve developed with the team after those two victories makes all that work, you know. I’ve been involved in some really great experiences after four years.”

Good news

Besides the fine showing by Cliff Brown, there is more good news out of last weekend’s sport activities—even out of losing efforts.
The Irish trashed were bested 30-1 3 in their second lop-sided loss. Yet it had been the same kind of lopsided loss that had taken place in the Michigan game: the stats were even. The Irish totalled 428 yards and the Fighting Irish have always been prone to give up two man in the managerial field on the field before a game, and stand alongside Ara or Tom Pugash.

But the years that precede the executive sideline positions are not so glorious. They are filled with the constant fear of losing tackling dummies on the practice field, or scratching mad to fill 100 of careers after a muddy practice.

But in the experience they have achieved in worth it if they say. It must be because, the drugery, the everyday work far exceeds the Saturday afternoon of the game. But there’s a lot of turnover among the freshmen.

There was little change in the top ten rankings of the wire service polls this week.

20 per cent of the nation's taxpayers lost pay raises during the

The board could allow frozen raises for school teachers either

It appears that one problem has been that while the five public members of the board are inclined to freeze the teachers a break, they are anxious not to open the door to recoveries by others with frozen raises.

The National Education association said today that a survey of its 1.1 million members suggested that 43 per cent of the nation's taxpayers lost pay raises during the freeze that ended Saturday.
