Congress receives budget; record deficit predicted

by Edward L. Dale Jr. (c) 1972 New York Times

WASHINGTON, Jan 24-President Nixon today sent his third budget to Congress showing a wide margins of error. If the current fiscal year 1972 without risking a new wave of inflation. Stimulation economic recovery at a proper pace said the deficit planned for next year would figures, in light of recent experience, subject to individual programs. The salient choice in this budget, confirmed by high officials taking privately, was a big increase in defense allocation after several years of essential leveling out.

Because of the long "lead times" in building ships, planes and other weapons, actual defense spending will not rise much-about $700 million in fiscal 1973 to an estimated $76.5 billion but new spending authority, if Congress agrees, will jump about $16 billion to $83.4 billion, meaning higher outlays later. Mainly because of the momentum of existing domestic "human resource" programs, above all wage and price controls, is strong but necessary medicine, the president said. We take that medicine because we need it, not because we like it, as our economy successfully combats unemployment, we will step down the medicine well before we become addicted to it.

For the current fiscal year, now half completed, the president estimated the deficit at $11.8 billion, by far the largest "peace time" deficit in history. A year ago, for this same budget year, the deficit was estimated at $11.6 billion. The huge error was caused by a number of factors, but the main one was the failure of the economy to grow robustly last year, which in turn, cut back receipts to the federal government. The sluggish economy is a major element in all three deficits.

The budget contains no proposals for tax increases, except for the perennial request for $300 million in taxes on truckers which is regularly rejected by Congress. Social security taxes would rise for many, however, because of the proposed increase in the "wage base" from $9,000 to $16,500, effective this year.

The president again cut back the growth of government spending under his administration to nearly $25 billion, Nixon expressed pride in his record, saying that "the rate of increase in government spending has been cut nearly in half compared to the three comparable years before this administration took office." Noting that individuals this year will pay $22 billion less in taxes than under the laws in effect in 1969, he added.

The basic shift in the government's fiscal philosophy has gone relatively unnoticed. The administration has cut back the budget of increase in government spending has been cut nearly in half compared to the three comparable years before this administration took office.

The category of the budget called "income security"-cash payments to people- has soared to a total of $7 billion in the new budget, up from less than $1 billion in fiscal 1971. Social security is the biggest item, but not limited to the program, the budget also includes rapidly growing welfare, food stamp, unemployment compensation and various military and civilian government benefits.

The president said the "Central purpose" of the budget was "a new prosperity for all Americans without the stimulus of war and without the drain of inflation."

Supreme Court: no-wait welfare

by Fred P. Graham (c) 1972 New York Times

Washington, Jan 24-The Supreme Court unanimously struck down today "emergency" laws passed last year by New York and Connecticut legislatures in efforts to curb rising welfare costs by barring state welfare aid to persons who had not resided in the states at least one year. Both states had sought to avoid a 1969 Supreme Court ruling against such residency restrictions by calling them necessary to avert financial catastrophes due to mushrooming welfare costs. But in both instances, special three-judge Federal District Courts had struck down the laws, terming them transparent efforts to circumvent the Supreme Court's 1969 decision.

Today the Supreme Court acted unanimously and without a hearing to summarily affirm the rulings of both lower courts. There was no opinion, since the justices simply issued an unsigned order in each case saying: "The judgment is affirmed.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's recommendation last spring for enactment of a new one-year residency law was based upon a remark in the Supreme Court's opinion in the 1969 decision, Shapiro V. Thompson, that such a restriction on free interstate travel could not be justified unless it was required by a "compelling governmental interest." New York's old one-year residency requirement had been struck down by a lower court, shortly after the Shapiro decision was announced.

The American Civil Liberties Union, which filed the suit that overturned the law, said in an opposing brief that only about 11,000 new people who had been in New York less than a year were added to the welfare rolls in 1971, or less than 1 percent of all who received welfare benefits in the state.

All three of the justices who dissented from the 6-to-3 ruling in 1969 have since left the supreme Court. They were Chief Justice Earl Warren and Justices Hugo L. Black and John M. Harlan.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger had indicated in an opinion two years ago that he did not agree with the 1969 Shapiro decision, but today he joined the majority as the court indicated, as it has on several occasions in the recent past, that it will not be quick to reconsider liberal doctrines that were established before the Supreme court acquired its present conservative cast.
Include Laos and Cambodia in Paris talks: Mansfield

Washington, Jan. 24-Senate Majority leader Mike Mansfield said today that the Paris Peace Talks should be expanded to include the opposing forces in Laos and Cambodia, and should be relocated in or near Indochina.

In a speech prepared for delivery in the Senate, Mansfield suggested that Prince Norodom Sihanouk be returned to power in Cambodia in the place of the Lon Nol Government which overthrew Sihanouk two years ago. In Laos, he suggested, the "compromised" leadership of Prince Souvanna Phouma be replaced by a new government under the King, Sire Savang Vatthanavong.

Mansfield said there had been no serious negotiations in Paris during the three years of the talks there, and that it now appeared impossible to work out a settlement of the war in Vietnam without expanding the talks to include the neighboring countries in Indochina.

"What once was one war, winding down, has now become three wars sealed into one," Mansfield said. "That was the inevitable consequence of the invasion of Cambodia in 1970 and the military adventure into Laos in 1971."

Mansfield said the government of Souvanna Phouma in Laos was created as a result of the second Geneva settlement in 1962 when the Prince "held the confidence of various Laotian political factions."

"For a decade the Prince tried to shape a single government of national unity," Mansfield said. "His efforts have been at best abortive and at times sealed into the memory hole from the very beginning."

"In the past few years they have broken down completely and the second Geneva accord has come to be disregarded by all sides."

While North Vietnam has supported the Pathet Lao, he said, the United States has supplied "hundreds of millions of dollars of military and other aid to Souvanna Phouma's government and I regret to say it, but it seems to me that our help has been so overwhelming that we may well have compromised Prince Souvanna Phouma's neutral status beyond any expectation of recovery."

Mansfield said the King, who resides in the Royal Capital at Luang Prabang while Souvanna Phouma is in the functional capital at Vientiane, "may command sufficient trust and respect among the Laotian political factions which, when combined with the quasi-religious loyalty of his people, may permit him to speak for the entire country with a measure of authority."

Mansfield's assessment of Cambodia was even more pessimistic. "The blunt truth is that the present government in Phnompenh is helpless, hopeless and helpless," he said.

"Only the resources of the United States stand directly and indirectly between the continued survival or the sudden demise of that government."

He added that "the sooner we remove ourselves from this situation the better for all concerned."

Mansfield credited Sihanouk with keeping Cambodia out of the Indochina war for 15 years. "In retrospect," he said, "the overthrow of Sihanouk has proven more than regrettable; it has been a tragedy for the Khmer people and it has served this nation's interests not at all."

Sihanouk has been living in Peking as a guest of the Chinese.

ND prof invited

The director of the industrial relations section of the University of Notre Dame economics department, Rev. Mark J. Fitzgerald, C.S.C., has been invited by President Richard M. Nixon to participate in a White House Conference, "The Industrial World Ahead," on February 7-9.

The first of its kind the conference will bring together national leaders in various fields related to the private enterprise system for an in-depth look at the economic future.

A member of the University faculty more than 30 years Father Fitzgerald will participate in discussions on social responsibility and the human side of business as they will develop during the next twenty years.
Dacca. Pakistan—Bangladesh was recognized Monday by the Soviet Union in a move announced simultaneously in Moscow and Dacca. The recognition was the first by a great power to the new nation proclaimed by Bengali separatists in East Pakistan. The only other nations to recognize Bangladesh have been from the Indian subcontinent or Eastern Europe.

Karachi, Pakistan—President Ziauddin Ali Bhutto reversed his stand against Pakistan's financial elite and appealed for the help of businessmen in rebuilding the war-shattered economy. He also announced that no new categories of industry would be nationalized and released from detention three industrialists charged with holding foreign exchange outside the country illegally.

Washington-The Nixon administration was accused by Ralph Nader, the consumer advocate, in a lawsuit filed in Washington, of illegally raising the federal price support for milk in return of $322,500 in campaign contributions from the dairy industry. The White House declined to comment on the matter since it was before the courts.

Washington-A proposal to give strong enforcement powers to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission was delayed in the Senate when administration opponents, who had prevailed in early votes on the measure, saw their strength dissipate when Senators Hubert H. Humphrey and Henry M. Jackson left the floor to go campaigning for presidency.

Record budget deficit seen

The budget appears to contain employee retirement programs. The bulge in unemployment compensation payments, to an estimated $2.2 billion in the current year, partly because of new legislation, was a major reason for the serious underestimation of total spending in fiscal 1972. The total is now put at $236.4 billion, compared to the estimate of $229.1 billion a year ago, and a revised estimate of $232 billion in early September.

If the spending estimate for the new fiscal year proves correct—which is doubtful—the rate of increase in spending will, as the President claims, swell sharply. Outlays rose $15 billion in fiscal 1971 and an estimated $25 billion in fiscal 1972 and this would drop to an increase of just under $10 billion in fiscal 1973.

But looked at in another way, the jump of $25 billion in spending in the current fiscal year was the very few "gimmicks" designed to hold down the spending total artifically. One such item is a saving of about $300 million by shifting some farmers home administration programs from direct to guaranteed loans.

New SMC ministry head

A new Director of St. Mary's College Campus Ministry, Sr. Katherine Reichert, has been appointed to take the position temporarily filled by Father Roger Curner.

Sr. Katherine graduated from St. Mary's, taught theology here for three years, and worked on the Upward Bound program for three summers. For the past two years, Sister has taught theology and served as a freshman advisor at Dunbarton College.

Sr. Katherine is "committed to the concept of Campus Ministry because on the modern day campus, specialization has caused the neglect of religious needs."

Sr. Katherine Reichert

"Deeply happy" to return to St. Mary's, she hopes that the Campus Ministry will be able to supplement the theology in the classroom situation. Sister is presently team teaching a theology course at Notre Dame.

Hall Life Board- Futility revisited

Notre Dame witnessed another administrative abortion Monday—the announcement by Rev. Thomas E. Blantz, of the appointment of members to the Hall Life Board. Of all the various committees and commissions that deface Notre Dame’s landscape, this is one of the more grotesque. The Hall Life Committees was set up by the Student Life Council to oversee the halls. In the spring of 1970 the Trustees made the Board a separate entity and charged it with the responsibility of “reviewing hall constitutions and parietal regulations and insuring both conformed to standards set down by the board.”

Its achievements rank among those of other outstanding committees in the nations past, like the emergency cow manure production committee, set up during the last great conflict. Speculation, if one was so inclined.

Inertia. A few bare beginnings have been made, a few bare beginnings esconsed in the halls and the student center. Nothing has been done to fulfill the problems they are called upon to investigate.

The Trustees made a pledge last fall to the Student Government to improve conditions in the halls and the student center. Nothing has been done to fulfill this pledge. Nothing has been done to fulfill this pledge because of administrative inertia. A few bare beginnings have been made, a few bare beginnings esconsed in a lot of rhetoric.

The Hall Life Board, according to available information, is not mandated to carry out this pledge. Even if it was, it probably couldn’t. Such a body would need members with lots of time, some money and a good dose of expertise. The Hall Life Board lacks all three.

It isn’t easy to get the Trustees to make a pledge to do anything, much less promise sweeping changes in student life at this university. The present student government managed the difficult task of extracting that pledge. So far they have failed to obtain a commitment from the administration to carry it out.

Lack of funds may delay immediate implementation of physical improvements on a broad scale. The Trustees though, the same trustees whose job it is to scrutinize our financial affairs decided last fall there was enough money to begin.

There is no cogent reason why that beginning hasn’t been made, no reason at all, save the fact that the people responsible for that beginning have been unwilling to do it.

The best thing the Hall Life Board could do is to meet, dissolve itself and call for the creation of a body empowered to begin reconstructing the halls and the student center.

That is the best thing the Hall Life Board could do and the only thing it could hope to do well.
For $1.00 tomorrow you can see a one-line joke go on for forty-five minutes, Sophie says. She's a sorority girl, some- underwear, and three fairly reputable directors add nothing to their reputations. The production director and music director's presentation of Boccacio '70, an Italian film, was nothing, according to the chairman of Carlo Ponti, who is married to Sophia Loren. He should have quit while he was ahead.

The Temptations of Dr. Antonio is the much-anticipated sequel to the biggest hit of the summer, Federico Fellini's film of the same name. It features a custom-made schlumberger symbolism. It was Fellini's first color effort - the film was made in Technicolor and in use of color was perhaps the only category in which it excelled. The thing was in short, gaudy, overripe, overplayed, oversentimental. I say the film was a flop; but I mean that the film is a flop as entertainment; of Dr. Antonio ticket offices before a Cowboy game. No matter who the opponent, there was a line of ticket buyers in training grounds for future jocks, huh? People honk their horns while he's talking or talk over him or ignore him or agree without understanding. Nothing new, there.

At this point his rage boils over into action. He hurls inkbottles at the huge billboard until the boy decides to head him off. Later that afternoon, they cover the billboard with paper.

Many were set up as completely as 18-year-old Ruck Doucet here, and others, like the late Kitewell, were told that they had very few conveniences. Blur in upper left-hand corner is Kevin.

At that time, the wind invaded the lobby at about 30 miles per hour. Immediate chortles of "Close the door! Close the door!" rang out, but by then the temperature inside had dropped around 20 degrees, which was a bit too frosty for Kevin. I ditched that for a warmer corner. He found one and crawled into it and listened to the tinny sounds of a local pop radio station.

After about half-an-hour, a small, vaguely retarding man with a hint of moustache approached him. "Wanted some company?" he asked Kevin, standing in his "Fellini" role.

"Name's Jerrold," he told Kevin.

A long conversation began, during which Kevin learned the tickings of a "gang bang" fan the cowboy fan boy. His mother had apparently given him ticket options for the Cowboys, and he was in line for the tickets that he got the tickets.

"What about the people who comprised about 50 per cent of the crowd, people who would actually use the tickets they were handed out for?" he asked.

Kevin explained. It seemed that a roll call was made at odd intervals to make sure nobody signs up and leaves. Then proceeded 30 minutes of name-calling. "Everybody always gets real hyper about roll call," Kevin said, after the man had pronounced only half of his name. "The first time, guys were calling wolf, 'Y'know, fake roll calls--and gettin' everybody backed off. The second time, it didn't work."

By this time, equipment was at its peak in the Towers lobby. People waiting in line had brought any and everything: spare car seats, a spare radio, a blanket, a radio, a spare pen, an extra roll of toilet paper. "Not for fifty bucks," said Kev, "so I ditched that for a warmer corner."

Kevin finally lay down for the night about 4:30, with three car seats, a spare car radio, and a spare blanket. He had been registered and placed in the parking garage. At this time, also, a system had been worked out to give everyone a specific place to sleep. "This was the ultimate in sheepherding," Kevin commented. "We were all shuffling around and put in a place, y'know number so and so--the waller's name, the ordinariness, here, and so on." Until 10:00.

Boccacio '70 has been called an art film, and that's just plain tiny app- preciations from Fellini's clown-and- cardboard shoes or from little camera tricks. But it lacks the synthesis of form and content that a good film ought to have. The directors exploit bodies, not souls; and in general fails to spare the suspense, Sophia pays off all the action. She had only a blank and a radio, but one man had an entire stereo, complete with turntable and speakers, a card table and speakers, a card table and speakers, a card table and speakers.

By 3:30 that night, nearly 500 people had been registered and placed in the parking garage. At this time, also, a system had been worked out to give everyone a specific place to sleep. "This was the ultimate in sheepherding," Kevin commented. "We were all shuffled around and put in a place, y'know number so and so--the waller's name, the ordinariness, here, and so on." Who in a community obvious discrepancies arise between the ideals hoped for and the actualities practiced, we firmly feel it not only our right, but our obligation to honestly oppose them by voicing our concern.

There has been a breach of trust. The women of St. Mary's, specifically the freshmen, had been led to believe through official college publications that because of the recent unification of St. Mary's College and the University of Notre Dame, freshmen entering SMC in the Fall semester of 1971 will have available to them all the bachelor degree programs of the University of Notre Dame. That promise has been broken. The merger has been called off. Many of the members of our community are suffering due to that about face decision; time, money, and opportunity have been lost. The students might be willing to accept this decision if they could be assured that it had been made for the common good of the community. Unfortunately, the Trustees lack of an explanation causes doubt as to whether this decision is in fact for the common good. This silence is especially appalling in a so-called Christian community. As Fr. Burtchaell so aptly illustrated: "The first and most serious deficiency in our religious situation is a certain persistent disregard for the common good...a society of trust needs members who will not only contribute their personal integrity, but will take responsibility to oppose publicly those who exploit the common good." In Fr. Burtchaell's own words, then, we would ask "How Christian is our community?" It appears to us that in the midst of the Trustees' silence and the apathy of most Notre Dame students, not only people upholding their Christian responsibility are the women of St. Mary's. By organized and selfless actions they have indicated their concern for and rejection of the discrepancies brought about by this decision. We hope that their actions will lead all members of our community to move more toward the realization of the Ideal as the Actuality.

The unification discussions between St. Mary's and Notre Dame, like other important and difficult negotiations remain necessarily confidential. One result of this silence and confidentiality is that evidence is simply not available to pass judgment on the individuals and personalities involved. Thus your recent attacks on Sister Alma have been most unfortunate. Your editorial remarks seemed needlessly cruel, unsupported, and I believe irresponsible, blaming Sister for present difficulties without evidence, and ignoring her many positive accomplishments during this difficult period since the death of Monsignor McGrath Sister Alma and the whole Notre Dame-St. Mary's community deserve much better of you.

I find it necessary to respond to your editorial of January 21, 1972, entitled "The Ideal Plan." A few facts are needed to avoid an uncalled for slur upon the quality of education at the Law School. First, regarding the faculty, there can be no doubt that these men are of outstanding scholarship and ability. A clear indiction of this fact is the that the published works of these men are known and utilized by the members of the legal profession. Textbooks and casebooks authored by members of the faculty are in use in many other Law Schools throughout the nation. Another indiction is the number of graduates passing various State bar exams last year. In New York, where passage is not routine, all candidates from the Law School passed.

Next, regarding the student body, a few facts clearly show the level of quality. This years First Year Class entered the Law School with a mean LSAT score of 620 and cumulative college average of 3.3. Next years entering class will enter with a mean LSAT score of 645 and a cumulative college average of 3.4. These figures evidence a student body which is well qualified. The fact is that the Law School is already well stocked with excellent students and a well qualified faculty. The new building addition will add the last element necessary for the development of a high quality Law School.

When it was all over, Al McGuire had compliments for everyone except Phillips, the Irish basketball team, and yes, even the crowd.

Of course, had the game gone the other way, McGuire might have been snapping terse comments along the way to Milwaukee. But McGuire was in a playful mood coming out of top-74 in a game that saw the second ranked Warriors extended almost to the limit.

"Phillips is an excellent coach with a great future," ahead of him at Notre Dame, and his players never quit. The crowd noise here is really something. It hurts me because I like to communicate with my players, but I can't here because of the noise. I'll always contend that it was the noise that beat us here two years ago in a double overtime.

Gary Novak connected on a 3-pointer in front, Jim Chones countered with a 3-pointer of his own. Allie McGuire then scored for Marquette and the Warriors led the rest of the game.

Surprisingly enough the Notre Dame lineup managed to score a much taller bracket. 57-54. "Goodie" Novak had 25 points and 11 rebounds. He just dominated against Chones. Add to this the fact that Novak guards Steve McFarland so closely to him 12 points and reason to believe he was the
