Allen launches Nixon team...

by Dean Mayes
Observer Staff Reporter

Lloyd Allen, current chairman of the local Republican Campaign, opened the St. Joseph County Nixon headquarters last night by sounding a note of "cautious optimism." He acknowledged that President Nixon currently holds a large lead in the polls but hastened to add that much more work must be done to elect the "entire Republican team." Allen, former Mayor of South Bend, officially opened the headquarters in downtown South Bend, before approximately one hundred fifty people. The event featured speeches by Republican Congressional candidate Don Newman and Andrew Nickle, Chairman of the local Young Republicans for the President organization.

Allen cited Nixon's success in the areas of Vietnam, the economy, and welfare reform. He praised the President for "having done more than any other man in recent history to make a major thrust toward world peace." "a clear choice"

U.S. Congressional candidate Don Newman made a late appearance, but his extemporaneous remarks were clearly the highlight of the evening. Newman asserted that for the first time the voters of Indiana have a "clear choice" between him and Democratic Congressman John Brademas.

Newman refrained from attacking Brademas directly, however, and referred only to theBrademas campaign to remind his listeners of Nixon's opening of the headquarters.

Newman gave his support to President Nixon's stance on the Vietnam War. He voiced his agreement with Nixon's anti-bussing stand, and his statement that "the education of our children is evidently a particularly enthusiastic response from the gathering.

Newman closed by admitting that he possessed neither the organization nor the funds to rival those of the Brademas campaign, but he assured the gathering that his "persistence would lead him to victory."

V.P. chairman Andrew Nickle opened his remarks by reading a telegram from President Nixon congratulating local Republican Voters for the President opening of their headquarters. Nickle, a Notre Dame law student and former member of Nixon's White House staff, told the gathering that the President has "returned a sense of dignity" to the White House through his concern for Americans as "individuals."

...while some polls show McGovern gaining support

by Jack Rosenthal

Washington, Sept. 28—Two new political polls reported today that Sen. George McGovern, the Democratic presidential nominee, has narrowed the massive lead for President Nixon found in previous surveys. There were differences of opinion between the poll-takers, however, as to the significance of the findings.

One new survey, conducted by Louis Harris and associates, reported a Nixon lead of 59 to 31, a 28-point spread. This compared with a 24-point spread, 63 to 39, reported early this month.

"Statistically," Harris said in an interview, "the change is significant. But politically, well, Nixon still has barely a 2-to-1 lead."

The other survey, conducted for McGovern, showed that he has cut President Nixon's lead to 22 percentage points and is thus well within the margin set by his campaign managers.

The survey offered several signs of optimism, according to spokesman at a news conference held today. They said they took the unusual step of releasing their findings in an effort to counteract the "flurry of surveys, conducted earlier, showing a widening Nixon margin."

The Harris survey findings were based on 1,686 interviews conducted September 18 to 21. The 10 to 21 per cent finding included people who described themselves as leaning to one candidate or the other.

The principal change found over the prior survey, Harris said, was a movement toward McGovern among voters under the age of 30. In the prior survey, they were for Nixon, 52 to 42.

The new findings, Harris said, was 47 to 45 for the President.

The McGovern camp found further grounds for encouragement in new evidence of "enormous volatility" in the electorate, according to one of its spokesman, Patrick Caddell who is head of Cambridge Survey Research, Inc. He is also McGovern's chief public opinion survey analyst. Caddell cited figures showing that fully one-third of the electorate had not yet finally settled on its presidential choice. This volatility, he said, gives McGovern a real chance in the November election.

The new McGovern survey findings were: Nixon, 56 per cent, McGovern, 34, undecided, 10. This represents a drop from the findings of a McGovern survey made in July which showed a 27-point Nixon advantage. But the new findings represented a substantial gain, Caddell said, over the 34-point Nixon margin reported in public polls conducted in late August.

The new McGovern findings were released at a news conference called after the New York Times and Time Magazine published the results of a 14-state survey conducted by Daniel Yankelovich, Inc., a leading social research concern. This found a 62- to 21 per cent Nixon lead. (Story page 3).

The McGovern spokesman did explicitly take issue with the Times/Yankelovich survey, drawn from interviews conducted between Aug. 23 and Sept. 12. But Caddell said that "the public forgets" that polls taken three or four weeks ago "are a snapshot of that period," not of the present.

United Nations, N.Y. - The United Nations asked the United Nations to convene a meeting early next year to act on international terrorism. The meeting called for by the U.S. would have full powers to define and to set up the legal basis for taking forceful action to put an end to terrorism.

Washington-The House approved and sent to the White House an emergency United States-Soviet agreement to freeze a major portion of their offensive nuclear arsenals for five years. The agreement would result in the massive land-based and submarine-based missiles possessed by the United States and the Soviet Union.

Billings, Mont.-Sen. George McGovern charged that the Nixon administration was dominated by special interests in environmental and regulatory agencies. The Democratic presidential nominee told the Western States Water and Power Consumer Conference that "you wouldn't have to go back at least as far as the administration of Warren G. Harding to find an administration so beholden to special interests and big business."

Washington-The House Ways and Means Committee voted to give President Nixon unlimited authority to cut whatever government programs he chooses, between now and June 30, in order to keep up government spending for the fiscal year at no more than $300 billion. The Committee's action, if approved the entire Congress, would constitute the most sweeping delegation over made to the President of Congress's constitutional authority to control government spending.

Catholics boycott Irish summit

by Bernard Weinraub

(C) 1972 New York Times

Dartington, England, Sept. 25 - A three-day conference on the political future of Northern Ireland opened here today in mood of discussion and dialogue on the problems facing the province.

"It would obviously be premature to sit down and talk," said William Whitelaw, Ulster’s administrator, said after today’s session: "It is not now the right time to examine the whole question of the future of Northern Ireland.

solution is discussion

"I have always believed that if you talk about a situation quietly and calmly in a way you can do nothing but good," he said. "If you don’t discuss problems you’ll never solve them, and this is what we’re attempting to do.

"Almost all" of the delegates at the European Lodge, discussion centered on the next steps, and the political questions facing the province.

These ranged from the shape of the new regional assembly to replace the old Stormont Parliament, which Catholics rejected as unjust and one-third to the delicate problem of how to control the province’s peace and security.

Former Prime Minister Brian Faulkner, who heads the Unionist delegation at the talks, urged a return to a modified Stormont Parliament with control of the police and security in the hands of Ulster’s Protestants. This was the rule from the formation of Ireland in 1921, to last March, when Britain took over the province. "We are prepared to sit down and talk," he said.

But the Alliance and Labour parties supported a move for a local assembly—with wide powers to the Catholic minority—as all police and security firmly controlled by the London Government and out of the hands of Ulster Protestants.

The three parties have, however, confirmed that Northern Ireland should remain linked with Britain. It was generally agreed that the delicate question of unification with the Irish Republic to the South was ruled out by the Protestant majority in the north agrees to such a move. This is improbable since the majority is not in the north, with two thirds of the population centered in Ulster, which is a strongly pro-British region.

Through today’s conference, it was the absence of the Social Democratic and Labour party that plainly annoyed the delegates as well as British officials.

The boycott by the party—a powerful force in the Roman Catholic district of Northern Ireland—was an especially sharp blow to the British Government, who are holding the talks in the hopes of working out some formula between Catholic and Protestant politicians.

The party, which is the majority opposition group, has refused to take part in political discussions as long as 243 suspected terrorists remain the Long Kesh internment camp.

legal tribunals condemned

The Social Democratic and Labour party is joined in the boycott by two smaller opposition groups, the Republican Labor Party and the Nationalist Party. These three parties, representing the Catholic political grouping, have condemned Britain’s decision last week to create special legal tribunals to deal with suspected terrorists as a replacement for the controversial policy of internment men without trial.

A fourth group boycotting the talks is the Rev. Ian Paisley’s militant Protestant Democratic Unionist party. It is angered at Britain’s refusal to order an official inquiry into the killing of two Protestants by British soldiers during a recent Belfast riot.

Whitewall wanted the talks held outside London for security reasons and, in what his admirers termed, "its atmosphere of calm" Whitewall has made clear that the discussions are merely advisory. "It is the government’s intentions, when we have heard the views of the delegates at the conference, to draft firm proposals for the future," he said.

Poll finds Nixon’s war stand popular

by Frank Lynn

(C) 1972 New York Times

New York, Sept. 25 - The Vietnam War, which was supposed to be Sen. George McGovern’s strong suit politically, is actually working to the advantage of President Nixon.

Nixon, 56-22 per cent, was ahead of McGovern, 30-20 per cent, a 30 per cent margin, the same as the over-all national survey announced today, according to a voter survey released today.

The voter view of the President’s rule in the war is a major reason for his massive 33 per cent lead over McGovern in the second phase of a tribute survey conducted for the New York Times by Daniel Yankelovich, Inc.

The findings on the war as an issue in turn pointed up the fact that foreign policy generally is the President’s strong suit. Typically, for example in the tristate area, those who are supporting McGovern by a 54-40 per cent tally, still feel that Nixon can deal more effectively with Russia and China and would treat Israel more fairly than his opponent.

The survey showed Nixon leading in each of the three states in the following tables:

New York, 57-26 per cent, a margin of 31 percentage points, is more than in the first phase in mid-summer.

New Jersey, 52-22 per cent a spread of 34 points, compared to 30 New Jersey, 56-20 per cent was a spread of 34 points for Nixon.

Connecticut, 51-27 per cent, a 24 per cent margin, the same as the over-all national survey announced today, according to a voter survey released today.

New student SLC members emphasize issues

Observer Insight

Fred Giuffrida

District 6 representative Fred Giuffrida sees the SLC as presently being defined very loosely. He believes that the SLC must "define its role in the university structure." He added that the SLC has the potential to take on anything".

Giuffrida agrees with Abowd that for the body to become well respected, its members must do their job and present the Administration with responsible recommendations. He also sees the main issue this year as being the coresidential question. Like Abowd, he feels that only when the SLC comes up with something concrete are the students going to respect the SLC as a legislative force.

Frank Devine

Frank Devine, elected from District 5, feels that this is the year when the SLC must take the initiative in dealing with the campus issues. He feels that the Administration would like to see the SLC take on more issues. He pointed out that the Provost office ends up handling the issues because of the vacuum created by no one else willing to take them on. He sees the SLC as the body to relieve the Administration of many of the issues.

Devine also believes that the SLC has got to stop thinking about legislating and get down to "the nuts and bolts things." First and foremost again is the coresidential issue. Devine feels that the SLC must present the Administration with reasonable accurate surveys. He thinks that he wouldn't see coresidential living in this, its last year at the University, but that the SLC is obliged to lay the groundwork for later years.

He is not satisfied with the university's continued plans for coeducation. He feels that the SLC must expand Notre Dame's commitment to coeducation. All three representatives see the need for the SLC to redefine itself. They believe that the SLC must take on more student issues with the biggest issue being the coresidential question. Finally, all three believe that this is the year that the SLC must prove itself to the Administration and the students.

MARDI GRAS '73
Kezele, Cavanaugh, Hunt desire effective SLC

by Richard Toland
Observer Staff Reporter

Newly elected SLC student-representatives Floyd Kezele, Matt Cavanaugh and Jim Hunt are well in harmony in their hopes for the present role of the Student Life Council as an organ operating within the university framework. All three want the SLC to quickly redefine and expand its responsibilities and powers.

Floyd Kezele, the only one of the three returning to the SLC after previous membership has many proposals for the council. Kezele, from the third district, feels that more thorough insight into questions can be achieved by decentralizing the workload into committees. The committees' recommendations would then be submitted to the entire council and then to the Board of Trustees.

He also hopes to expand the considerations of the SLC to include certain business affairs. He envisions a shopping mall on campus run by outside firms operated in harmony with prearranged university policies. He called the book store a "monopoly on campus that should be investigated." His statement arose from discussing the administration's order for the Crypt, a record store on campus, to relocate.

All three agree that to achieve effectiveness the support of the student body is imperative. Jim Hunt, District One representative, pointed to the alteration of this semester's calendar as the clearest example of what the SLC is capable of when it has student support. Saying that "numbers talk," he insisted that "once the students become insistent 33% of the battle is won."

Although disagreeing slightly in their methods of approach, all were convinced that the question of coresidential dorms would be the most controversial issue before the council this year. The new student representatives thought that any reasonable suggestion would be at least considered by the university administration, although they were doubtful of abrupt change in present university policy.

None of the three felt that the administration's veto power was an insurmountable problem when good ideas were being considered. They all felt that much time and work would be necessary to research ideas into realistic proposals.

Matt Cavanaugh, elected to the Second District, suggested that the ideal manner of pursuing coresidential housing would be a combined effort of the SLC and the Hall President's Council. "The HPC is better equipped to deal with the issue since it is more closely involved with the questions that have to be raised."

All three of the members appeared optimistic toward what the SLC is capable of achieving. They think of the council as a well rounded body able to probe into the problems of student life. They also agree that the alumni are quite powerful and consider them generally conservative toward change. "Once change has occurred and has proven itself," Hunt said, "the alumni tend to accept the changes."

We invited a few friends for dinner and they helped clean up the Genesee River.

With the aid of a few thousand pounds of microorganisms, we’re helping to solve the water pollution problem in Rochester. Maybe the solution can help others.

What we did was to combine two processes in a way that gives us one of the most efficient water-purifying systems private industry has ever developed. One process is called “activated sludge,” developed by man to accelerate nature’s microorganism adsorption. What this means is that for the majority of wastes man can produce, there is an organism waiting somewhere that will happily assimilate it. And thrive on it.

The breakthrough came when Kodak scientists found a way to combine the activated sludge process with a trickling filter process and optimized the combination.

We tested our system in a pilot plant for five years.

(At Kodak, we were working on environmental improvement long before it made headlines.) And the pilot project worked so well, we built a ten million-dollar plant that can purify 36 million gallons of water a day.

Governor Rockefeller called this “the biggest voluntary project undertaken by private industry in support of New York State’s pure-water program.”

Why did we do it? Partly because we’re in business to make a profit— and clean water is vital to our business. But in furthering our own needs, we have helped further society’s. And our business depends on society.

We hope our efforts to cope with water pollution will inspire others to do the same. And, we’d be happy to share our water-purifying information with them. We all need clean water. So we all have to work together.

More than a business.
Gorch skeptical of changes

by David Rust
Observer Staff Reporter

Because of the growth of what he terms "the student center," LaFortune Student Center Manager Bro. Brother Gorch is adamant against keeping LaFortune open all night. A move that is seen by several groups as both desirable and possible.

Bro. Gorch, LaFortune manager for the last 16 years, says he believes it is not worth it. "I don't see any reason to keep this place open all night," says Bro. Gorch. "There's no point to it. People on campus really retire around midnight. Everyone has to feel like they're walking about the place after that time. Why, even the Observer staff (the Observer offices are located in LaFortune) is out of here by 1:00 A.M."

Assuming that there is some kind of need or reason for maintaining ND's student center open the full day, Manager Gorch stands even more convinced of its near impossibility.

"To the dorms, they're the big things," says LaFortune's manager. "The dorms, now, it's outrageous. Things are always being left in the hallways.

Brother Gorch reports that those things which are left, north of furniture is usually from the center of the room. It is a case of leaving a piece of furniture, and ten of that same piece of furniture, and ten at 1:30 Sunday and Sunday morning.

"To keep LaFortune open all night means we have to require posting security guards in the building, and paying them," says Bro. Gorch.

"Students couldn't be responsible for its safety. For a security like this to be far different from that required for a residence hall. We're a national magnet for drunks and riffraff."

He notes that LaFortune has trouble now with vandalism. "If they bother us before midnight, they certainly would be here with greater frequency after," says Bro. Gorch.

To meet this threat, he believes, students would be incapable of providing the necessary force and would have no power to arrest or threaten the vandals. "They'd be scared, wouldn't be able to do anything," says Bro. Gorch.

Expenses is the common denominator underlying all of what Bro. Gorch sees as im- posements to the proposed 24-hour opening; losses incurred by in- creased theft and vandalism, costs in maintenance (especially electric light bills) and salaries for the security guards. It is these things which keep other school student centers closed, he contends.

"I've not seen a single school whose student center remained open after midnight," says Bro. Gorch. "I wonder just how many schools keep their own open past eleven.

"We can't have a real opportunity in cooperation with student government on elimination of these same problems, having had several bad experiences with student government people in the past.

"Sure, it's very possible that they could help eliminate the theft, the costs," says Bro. Gorch. "but they won't. I never have had any cooperation from them. They might keep the organization light a little bit lower, but after that you couldn't depend on them."

But Bro. Gorch's general disenchantment comes out from matters of costs, losses and lack of student support. LaFortune cooperates from the belief that the wall is succumbing to the "The Modern Selfishness," "...everybody wants to destroy everything to satisfy his own immature whim," which attitude would render any kind of security or responsibility for him impossible, opened 24 hours a day, impossible.

"Everybody's gone to destroy the good things these days," says the manager. "They're destroying everything, beautiful, everything dear." He is not optimistic about guarding his building against the masses who he believes, subscribe to this policy.

In the end, as Bro. Gorch will readily admit, it is not he who would make the decision whether or not to open LaFortune for the full 24-hour period, that is the privilege of the Administration. And, if there is a decision to open LaFortune on a full-day basis, Bro. Gorch does not believe he will be the one to oversee its nighttime operation.

The Notre Dame rugby team unleashed a powerful offense and a stingy defense last Saturday as it rolled over the Kalamazoo-Western Michigan Rugby Club by a score of 34-6. The win was the fifth of the season for the ruggers, and all of the Irish have come on the road.

The Irish drew first blood early in the game when Herb Giorgio scored a try on a fine individual effort to give ND a 4-0 lead. Kalamazoo fought back early in their own end and with a successful conversion led 4-6.

But the Irish were not to be denied, and after a couple of tries Giorgio scored his second try on an assist from John Greiving. Joe DeLois added another try for Notre Dame when he bullied his way into the end zone from five yards out to give the Irish a 12-6 halftime lead.

It wasn't until the second half, however, that the Irish ruggers really got untracked. Early in the third period, after a series of hard hits by the Irish scrum, Ed O'Connell fell on a loose ball in the end zone to up ND's lead to 16-6. Dan Lee then added a pair of tries and O'Connell, who had misfired on the earlier conversion attempts, booted successfully after each of Lee's tries to further pad the Irish margin.

Henry Clarke rounded out the scoring on a breakaway run to give Notre Dame the final 34-6 spread.

Once again—as the second half explosion indicated—Notre Dame's superb conditioning paid off. Captain Joe Hafner feels that there isn't a team that can run with the Irish for two forty-five minute halves, and the last two games have supported his belief.

The emergence of a fine kicking game on the part of the Irish backs was also a factor as ND kept Kalamazoo in a hole most of the afternoon.

In the "B" game, the Irish ruggers turned in an awesome display of power as they overwhelmed their opponents, 44-0. Scrum half Ed Fishburne led the way for ND by scoring three tries. Jerry Raser added two more scores—one a long run in which he broke numerous tackles.

The Irish tallied another breakaway score when Dave Simpson rammed 30 yards for a try. Bill Sweeny and Mark Fredette also scored tries for Notre Dame, and John McIntyre contributed 12 points on six conversions. The win kept the Irish "B" team's record to 2-0.

Notre Dame plays its home opener against John Carroll University this weekend behind Stepan Center. The exact time of the game will be announced later.

I-H exchanges

Exchanges on Interhall Football equipment can be made Wednesday, September 27th from 6 to 7 p.m. at Gate 11 at the stadium.

This will be the last date for any equipment exchanges.

The Irish drew first blood again Saturday as it rolled over the Boilers.

An improved Fighting Irish soccer club took on the University of Cincinnati Saturday afternoon behind Stepan Center, and defeated the Bearcats 4-1. After taking a half time lead of 2-1, the Irish were not seriously challenged, as a goal defense combined with two breakaway goals accounted for the Notre Dame margin.

Arno Zoski, the new Irish soccer coach, has installed a brand-new approach to soccer—which stresses versatility. Instead of each player specializing at one system, the Zoski system attempts to field players capable of playing any position. The team converts also downplays individual scoring, favoring instead the team effort involved in setting up goals.

Coach Zoski attributed last week's win to a variety of factors, including a balanced attack with a strong physical conditioning, a tight defense which rarely produced breakaways, and forcing the Cincinnati squad to play Notre Dame's type of game. Once the Irish had established their style of play, the Irish were not seriously pressured.

Despite Notre Dame's four-goal margin, the game was a defensive one, and promised that his Irish would be moving toward a more offensive type of game.

The Irish travel to Goshen today to face Goshen College, a team they have not beaten in years. Saturday morning, Notre Dame takes on Purdue.

FB injuries few

Injuries were few in Notre Dame's see-sawing football triumph over Northwestern.

B uncinn huck Greg Hill suffered a pulled hamstring and is questionable for Saturday's meeting with Purdue. Defensive captain Greg Marx had to have stitches to close a gash in his face, but he will play against the Boilermakers.

Inspired scrum action in Saturday's games paved the way for a pair of rugby laughers for the Irish
