UAW, Chrysler call for news blackout

By Edward Lechtin
UPI Auto Writer
DETROIT (UPI) - The United Auto Workers and Chrysler Thursday night imposed a complete news blackout on their auto contract talks, just 29 hours away from a possible crippling auto strike Friday night.

The news blackout is traditionally a sign that a breakthrough has been accomplished in the negotiations and they have reached the stage where bargainers are reluctant to make public statements in past years, a blackout was imposed three or four days before contracts expired.

The negotiations have been under a partial blackout or more than a week as Chrysler and UAW bargainers discussed economic on an "off the record" basis.

The total news blackout came after Chrysler reportedly put together a second economic offer containing wage and fringe benefits increases topping the 4.3 pct. Phase IV guidelines. Both the company and the union denied the offer had been formally presented. "There is a great deal of work yet to be done," said Ted Ogier, director of public relations for the UAW in announcing the news blackout at 6:43 p.m. EDT Thursday. Neither union nor company bargainers met with newsmen Thursday.

The new contract the negotiators have been working on since July 18 covers 127,500 U.S. and Canadian auto workers. An auto industry strike at 11:59 p.m. Friday would end two years of labor peace.

The union and company last week set up a "super subcommittee" to discuss the wage question and it met through the day Thursday. UAW President Leonard Woodcock and his Chrysler counterpart, vice-president William O'Brien, headed their respective teams into the final day. They were not expected to emerge from the bargaining suite at Chrysler's world headquarters in Highland Park until shortly before the contract expires Friday night.

Farenthol to lead 'equality' workshop

Special to The Observer

The first female vice-presidential nominee will highlight a day-long workshop entitled "Equality: Political Style" Saturday at Saint Mary's.

Frances T. (Sissy) Farenthold is scheduled to speak at 10:00 a.m. in the Little Theatre on "A Woman's Place Is In The House," in one of several sessions in the program sponsored by the Indiana and South Bend Political Caucus.

Born in Corpus Christi, Texas, in 1926, Farenthold received her B.A. from Vassar in 1946, and her J.D. from the University of Texas (Austin) Law School in 1949. She has received honorary Doctor of Laws degrees from Hood College (1973) and Boston College (1973).

Farenthold was elected to the legislature for two consecutive terms (1968 and 1970), and ran for governor in 1972. In a field of seven candidates, she ran second, accumulating 46 percent of the vote, surpassing the incumbent governor and lieutenant governor. She also placed second among vice presidential nominees at the 1972 Democratic convention, receiving over 400 votes. She was National co-chairperson of "Citizens to Elect McGovern-Shriver," along with Pierre Salinger and John Douglas in 1972.

The daughter of a prominent South Texas lawyer, Farenthold is not the first politician in her family. Her grandfather, B.D. Telfedon, was a Texas legislator from 1901 to 1906. Her aunt, Miss Lida Dougerty, was the first female school superintendent in Texas.

Among the public appointive offices she has held are the Texas Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights (1960-present); Corpus Christi Human Relations Commission (1960-1968); Director of Legal Aid for Nueces County (1965-1967); and the Corpus Christi Citizen's committee for the Community Improvement (1966-1969). She is a member of the Nueces County and Texas Bar Association.

Presently, she is an assistant professor of law at Texas Southern University in Houston; chairperson of the National Women's Political Caucus; chairperson of the Texas Committee for National Health Security; member, the National Advisory Council of the American Civil Liberties Union; member, National Advisory Council Tax Action Campaign; member; Citizens Committee for Justice for 'Parah Workers; sponsor, American Branch, International Defense and Aid Fund for South Africa vice-chairperson, National Coalition for Human Needs and Budget Priorities; and member National Board of Advisors, Mental Health Law Project. She was listed in the 1972 Who's Who of American Women.

Sharing the spotlight with Farenthold in the workshop will be representative from the media and education, as well as politicians. Each session will include a panel of women experienced in a particular segment of political activity. The luncheon speaker will be Julia Carson, a member of the Indiana House of Representatives.

The workshop is open to the public. Admission to Farenthold's speech is $1.00; tickets for the entire day, including lunch, are $5.00. For tickets and more information, contact Roland Parent, 233-7149.

The Notre Dame Law School Bar Association has announced that Senator George McGovern will deliver the Robert F. Kennedy Lecture Series annual address at Notre Dame on Sunday, November 11 at 8 p.m. in the St. Pat Center. The SBA Lecture Chairman, Chuck Nau, noted that the Notre Dame Student Union Academic Commission has agreed to co-sponsor the McGovern appearance, in an effort to insure the widest possible student participation in the McGovern visit.
Who do I see about registering my car?

Security handles car registration and would be more than willing to square matters away with you. The Security Office is located in the Firehouse and is open for business from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday thru Friday. If you have any further questions, you can reach Security at 383-6130.

Where do the ducks go in the winter?

According to the business office of the Biology Department, the ducks don't go anywhere at all. You see, St. Joseph's Lake is warm all year long, due to the use of water for cooling by the Power Plant, and the Laundry Service discharge of warm water. In fact, the ducks nest around the discharge pipes. This is what enables them to live through the cold of the winter months here at ND.

What's going on with the shuttle bus service?

The shuttle bus service is very much in operation. However, there have been some route adjustments for security reasons. Although not drastic in nature, they have caused some difficulty for the shuttle bus riders. Presently, the Office of Security is looking into the matter and hopes to clear things up by putting out a fact sheet early next week which will sort out where and when questions about the shuttles. Until then, questions about the service, will be handled by the Office of Security (283). Remember it still costs 10 cents after 5 p.m. to ride the shuttle bus. The buses leave the ND Library Circle on the quarter to and quarter after of the hour after 6 p.m.

Ann Smith, SMC Hall Life Commissioner, has announced that the SMC Student Center in Regina Hall will officially open tonight at 6:30.

Facilities to be found at the Center include a pool table, billiards table, ping pong table, an exercise room, a studio room, two saunas (for women only), a card room, and kitchen appliances and utensils.

A task force study last year, indicated that the billiards and pool tables should be moved from the basement to the South Lounge. This rearrangement will provide easier student access and enable students to use the facilities until curfew in order to pay for the upkeep of the Center's facilities, a 50 cent fee, per person, per hour, like last year's, will be charged for the use of the pool table. The kitchen facilities will be made available in exchange for an ID which will be returned when the utensils are returned. The ID will depend on the kitchen and utensils will no longer be in effect.

Student Coordinator Nan Blais along with student workers will staff the Center.

The Center will be open the following hours: Monday, 2 p.m. to 2 a.m.; Tuesday, 2 p.m. to 2 a.m.; Wednesday, 2 p.m. to 2 a.m.; Thursday, 2 p.m. to 11 p.m.; and Friday, 2 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Orientation termed success

by Tony Prosio
Staff Reporter

Freshman Orientation Co-chairman Jim Shipp said his committee is "very pleased" with both the turnout and the response for Wednesday's Carney. The theme of the three-day orientation was "Adventures in a Challenge." Shipp said his committee is "very pleased" with the response for Wednesday's Carney '74.

Dr. Emil Hofman, dean of the Freshman Year of Studies, also voiced his praise for the committee's efforts. He noted the success of the orientation programs of other campus departments, particularly the offices of Campus Ministry and Student Affairs.

"This year's orientation did a much better job of depicting the nature of the university to freshmen," Hofman said. "It was less stiff and formal than in the past, and showed a wonderful spirit of cooperation among the people responsible."

"In any ways, the Mass was the highlight of the weekend," he said. It was celebrated by priests in Campus Ministry and was a good example of the cooperation between the Freshman Year office and the other departments on campus. Hofman also cited the close communication between his office and the Shipp-Caruso committee, a Student Government arm.

"The committee has done a tremendous job on the program," the dean added. "It is responsible for much of the success."

Among the difficulties, Shipp noted an awkward distance between the Carney and residence area. The lack of volunteers and the position of the stage also posed minor problems, he said.

Dr. Enos Hofman, dean of the Freshman Years of Studies, stressed his satisfaction with the committee's efforts. He also noted the success of the co-operative efforts of other campus departments, particularly the offices of Campus Ministry and Student Affairs.

Hall Parties

Yesterday's story about the prohibition of hall parties is not something new. This policy was decided during the summer of 1971 at the Board of Trustees meeting. What is going before the SLC this Monday is policy as decided during the summer of 1971 at the Board of Trustees meeting.

In fact, the Fisher plan coupled with the directive of the dean of students is not only sound but viable. If parties can be held in basements or in specified non-hall buildings with the “tight control” of liquor distribution, the hall is less likely to suffer damage to any living areas if the party were to get out of control. And those who do not wish to participate in the festivities (whose rights must be respected also) will be less bothered by any noise than if the party was held three doors down. Their numbers are by no means small on any given weekend either.

Therefore, here is the pitch. The university directive has been policy for sometime now. The only way a “hall party” can be held legally is if the Fisher plan is passed. Make an appearance at the SLC Monday. Follow the rules this weekend. You can still have a good time. The hall party is not the only way.

One might misconstrue the facts concerning the raid on Nickies last March 29 if attention was paid only to what Nick said in the article in yesterday’s paper. Twenty-six Notre Dame and St. Mary’s students were arrested in the raid. Twenty-four of them were officially charged with being “minors in a tavern.” All of them so charged were found guilty and had to pay a fine of an approximately forty dollars each. Nickies did check everyone’s ID, as do many other bars in this area.

Those arrested now have a misdemeanor on their records. If one had been caught with a phoney ID, it would have been a felony. The two schools did not take any disciplinary action against the students then. But, in light of the directive from the dean of students office, it may be a different story next time. This is printed not with the facts, so that you can decide whether the risk is worth it if you are intending to illegally buy a drink in any nearby tavern.

The following is a gift from a friend that the main man delivered to me one Saturday morning in July. Reading it made my Corn Flakes taste much better.

Greg,

Be prepared for a serious letter and I will discuss with you some newly-found revelations concerning life in general (or at least in my opinion). I'm not altogether sure that what I say will make sense, or that you even care, but here it is nonetheless.

The past two months (including school) I have tried to maintain a frame of mind in which I had captured during the course of my last semester, which admittedly, included a rosy picture of my future in particular and the world in general. My future as a doctor, but as a person (I don't intend to draw distinctions here), seemed to be most certainly centered around a few select, long-term relationships with friends I had made during my four years, and which were strengthened (or made) in my final term. Words play tricks - no don't misunderstand me. I am by no means despairing, perhaps just slightly discouraged. Life may be more transitional than I had previously imagined, which means any view of life will have to be made to conform to present circumstances...I feel myself drifting...but in a definite direction.

It is important, I think, is to keep in mind the fact that I will not be returning with you and the guys back to N.D. I am finding out, if you'll pardon the colloquial connotation, and I sense that there is something very transient in the entire situation. This moment you think you have discovered some aspect of life, and have captured it. This is the state of innocence that is fascination. You feel reassured as it is constantly strengthened through relationships with others and only occasionally weakened by incertitude. Then the change comes. It is expected, but you are unprepared for it as you are a new relationship. The transience stops...the尼泊尔, all previous beliefs and views and forces one to reevaluate. This is where I am.

In a sense I think we are all drifting away from circumstances dictating long-term relationships to those in which the irrational, transitional man will predominate. It is not in our place to question it. R. D. Laing wrote an interesting passage in Psyches of Experience:

"...Don't puff yourself up too much. Remember your place in the hierarchy, don't try to come it, don't shout about, don't posture, don't give yourself airs, don't think you're going to get away with it, you've had a bit of the past taken out of you, don't make excuses. Don't kick it around. Who are you trying to kid? A little humility, a fraction of love, a grain of trust, you've been told as much as you know, you've had quite your share. Don't try the patience of the gods..."

It seems that in everything I read, everyone I meet, and all the things I do there rests one commonality: that it is impossible to get to the root of anything, but the world being as it is, it is all we can do to simply get along. Yet I continue to believe (as I expressed to you two years ago that there is something more permanent to complete my personality and ease the all-too-frequent moments of loneliness which accompany this prolonged periods of questioning and doubt. Someday I think I shall find her. Perhaps I should follow Rick's example and start accepting applications.

Well, to continue: Fr. Burchaell made an interesting comment at the graduation ceremony, although I am certain that he wasn't aware of its significance. When it came time to administer the Alma Mater, he announced that the words could be found on the inside cover of the baccalaureate booklet - for the benefit of family and friends - and he smiled. The students laughed at this since they knew that he knew that few knew the words. After four years, where do one's loyalties lie? In Notre Dame? In the people you met and the friends you made? This is what I shall miss. Notre Dame's buildings are nothing more than a temporary shell which echo past friendships and experiences which can never be recovered.

Remember this, Greg, in your final year. Try to show nothing but what you can of love, sincerity, and sympathy and give of yourself to giving meaning to your life. Avoid measuring your life against the standards and counters in a meaningless milieu. And everyone has their part to play and a contribution to make, if you are only willing to open yourself to the possibility. Take the initiative and I assure you you won't regret having exploited a final opportunity to make college meaningful.

But most of all, Greg, beware of the change. Recognize that what you have established will begin to slip away late in the year no matter how hard you try. Permanence is the result of radical change. We only need accept it, but I shall miss it very much.

Some wise old sap once said be concerned with the future because it is where you will spend the rest of your life. It is difficult for an antiquarian like myself to strictly adhere to such a philosophy. I will only say that I enjoyed the story, three months, and thanks.
Letters To A Lonely God

The sentimentalist

reverend robert griffin

There is a priest working in a parish in midtown Manhattan, who loved to preach sermons on the Gospel story of the repentant sinner, "Most has been forgiven her," he would say, to the virtuous because she loved much.

The implication was that the virtuous ladies at Sunday Mass, who exhorted themselves with novena-making and eroded their necks to the collar bone by wearing medals that twisted away sanctified flesh, were real slooches as lovers: therefore, Christ didn't give a damn for them, and wouldn't, until they did something lively, like becoming prostitutes themselves, when their sins could also be forgiven they had loved much.

As one outraged virtuous lady said to me: "He's a stupid, insensitive man. He's never had to walk Ninth Avenue at night when the whores are soliciting your husband from every doorway. You get to your apartment and find some slut using your front stoop as a bathroom, and another is doing her tricks with a guy in the hallway. Their dirty, evil little men, their pimp's, are standing in the shadows, ready to knife you if you call a cop. Then your fourteen year old son tells you a breasty bitch tried to pick him up on the way home from school"

Stanley and Anna came to my door at the rectory one night, asking to be married. Stanley, whom I have known for several years, is thirty-eight years old, and works as a janitor in a New York church. At one time he was a male prostitute in Times Square. He worked at this trade until he was twenty-one, when, because of a breakdown induced by drugs, he was hospitalized for two years in Bellevue. After his release, he became an alcoholic; and he deserted and prostituted himself to get money for his booze. Three years ago, he gave up drinking, went to work, and has tried to live the life of a religious man.

For a long time, until he met Anna, he was very lonely. In other summers, he used to tell me how, on his days off, to keep out of trouble, he would move into a hotel room where he could watch television. For a couple of years, all that stood between Stanley and his temptations was a cheap, motel-room television set. Then one day, he met Anna.

Anna works as a nurse's aide. She is forty-five. She has seven children, and she hasn't seen the husband who deserted her for eight years.

Stanley and Anna want to get married. Stanley asked his pastor, who is a truly compassionate man, if he could marry Anna. The Monsignor said: "Stanley, it is really important for you to do is save your immortal soul." Stanley thinks it would be easier to save his immortal soul with Anna than without her. But the Monsignor says Stanley might lose his soul, if he marries Anna, and the Monsignor is a truly compassionate man.

Stanley and Anna want to get married. The Monsignor said: "Stanley, it is really important for you to do is save your immortal soul." Stanley thinks it would be easier to save his immortal soul with Anna than without her. But the Monsignor says Stanley might lose his soul, if he marries Anna, and the Monsignor is a truly compassionate man.

During the summer, I attended the wedding between a former nun and a priest who has been dispensed from his vows. The wedding mass was concelebrated by three priests who had been seminary classmates of the bridegroom. As the marriage blessing was read, I thought of Stanley's case and watching television, and of Anna. They had been forbidden to see one another under their vows by their immortal soul because of the vows Anna took on her wedding day. It was sentimental to ask: if a priest can be relieved of his vows, and nun can be relieved of her vows, why can't a nurse's aide also be relieved of vows so that she can marry a janitor named Stanley? The traditional answer, as given by a cardinal who plays politics, is not good enough. The fault is not the cardinal's theology but my own.

I want to believe in the religion of love as well as a religion of law, even when it says that priests can marry, but that Stanley can't marry Anna. I want to believe in the Cardinal when he says the morals of the troops is high. I want to believe in President the United States instead of the hippie that pickets him. I want to love prostitutes without believing that their sin is less grievous than that of the bishops who supported the Vietnam war. I want to love the virtuous ladies of midtown Manhattan whether they are virtuous or not.

I want to love people without sentimentalizing them.

In the summer of Watergate, in the aftermath of the Vietnam war, I'm afraid that what I'm left with is credibility gaps instead of faith, sentimentalism in place of love.

Sentimentality sounds pretty silly when it is projected as doctrine from a New York pulpit.
Louie's doing O.K.

by Joseph LaFlare

The opening of the "Library" may have taken away some customers from other establishments in the area, but "Louie's isn't apparently doing just fine," Louie Rappelli, the proprietor, denies the rumor that his place is in decline.

Louie's has added a bar and plenty of room for dancing. There is also a new game room next to the bar. "The food is still here and as good as ever," added Rappelli. A new party room will be opened downstairs in the near future. It will accommodate up to 100 people and be used primarily for clubs and family gatherings. However, Rappelli was quick to point out that any student could come and rent the room for a night if he or she intended to have a big party.

"We would like to keep the student in South Bend rather than fleeing to Michigan on the weekends," Louie said. "My place and the 'Library' are operating on a friendly and cooperative basis." He said that he has been good friends with the owner of 'The Library' for quite some time and this friendship is now better than ever.

Louie's is open from 5-2 on weekdays and from 3-7 on weekends. He invites everyone to drop in some time.

Rappelli welcomes students back to his newly-remodeled restaurant.

SLC to hold first meeting

by Al Rutherford
Staff Reporter

The Student Life Council will hold its first meeting of the year on Monday, September 17, at 7 p.m. in the Student Union (Room 10). The members will discuss the filling of seats left vacant by members of all three groups represented on the Student Senate and the Chairman of the Student Affairs Committee.

The SLC is composed equally of administrators, faculty members, and students. Each group is composed of eight members, six of whom are elected by their peers, and two of whose names are simply by their position they hold at the university. The administrators, Dean of Students and the Vice-President of Student Affairs, sit in by virtue of their position.

The Chairman of the Faculty Senate and the Chairman of the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs fill two of the seats representing the faculty. The students are represented in part by the Student Body President and Vice-President. The elected members of all three groups (student, faculty, and administration) are selected at different times near the end of the school year.

The SLC was originally formed to provide a buffer zone to set up in the minds of many Notre Dame students, senior Jim Clarke and Richard Wilmot of the Placement Bureau, said. "The main purpose of the program is, of course, to provide summer jobs," Clarke explained. "But we also want to bring students in contact with the Placement Bureau's functions and with the alumni club."

The applicant registers with the Placement Bureau which sends the information to local alumni clubs in the area where the student wishes to work. The alumni club then tries to place the student in the type of job desired.

Students may register for this placement service beginning on Monday, September 24 with the Placement Bureau.

Anyone interested in helping to coordinate the summer jobs program should contact Jim Clarke at 214-528.

"If it can be done, it can be done here," is the confident statement of Fr. Dave Schlaver, referring to the Activities office, a service to students. "As an intermediary, I can provide a compliment for the mood; third, to enhance the quality of the place," said McEa...
Clements shines in last warm-up

by Greg Corgan

Directed by quarterback Tom Clements, the Irish offense showed glimpses of returning to top form yesterday. In the first half, one unit and two units demolished the third and fourth teams and in the last quarter against USC, the number one and two units demoralized the Trojans scoring 50 points. Tom Clements here running the Irish offense against USC, was impressive in yesterday's scrimmage.

But while the offense was responsible for most of the scoring yesterday, it was the defense that put the first points on the board. In the opening minutes of the first quarter, Bob Zanot picked off a Frank Stella pass and returned it 50 yards for a touchdown to give the number ones an early 7-0 lead.

Eric Pessick made it 30 minutes later when, after Tim Rodrick had returned Tony Brantly's punt to the third team 24, he scored left end for eleven yards and the score. There was a had-stop in the try for the point and Bob Thomas' kick was wide to the right.

Although Pessick made it 10-0, Clements, on second and ten from his own 27, dropped back to pass and found himself in trouble. He took a small step to his right, spun left and scrambled down the sideline for 73 yards for the score. With Clements still at the helm, the first unit scored twice more on drives of 45 and 25 yards to close out the first half leading 27-0.

Clemson salvaged a 40-yard drive in the second half pulling in from the two and junior Frank Allocco scored from the two to complete the Irish scoring for the afternoon.

Although Parshegan did find one area for improvement, the defensive line once again played up to expectations.

The defense played well although I feel they could have been more aggressive. We were trying to play smart and formations the variety of which Northwestern uses to see how well they would cope. It was a good scrimmage because it allowed me to see certain things that would come up in a game.

But our biggest problem so far is the offensive line because we're just trying to get the backs where they are. I think they're getting after the quarterback a little bit more.

Parshegan went on to say that this year's squad is a youthful one.

"We're a young team. No backs that'll start are seniors, the defensive line consists of a freshman, two sophomores and a junior." Parshegan emphasized, "we're a young team."

However, if the offense continues to improve and the defense plays as consistently well as it has then Parshegan's "young team" will have opposing coaches growing old.

The Irish Eye for tomorrow's weekly pick of pigskin prognostications: Each week, after the game sports will select a varying slate of 15 games, including one "upset of the week" as will attempt to predict the outcome of these contests.

Last year, The Irish Eye correctly predicted the results of 13 of 25 college football games. This year's column has yet to make an incorrect choice, but the situation is one, either. That situation will have changed by Monday, but hopefully it will have changed for the better.

Californians at Alabama: The Golden Bears will tangle with a nazekeeper down in Birmingham; but they should win that situation easily. That situation will have changed by Monday, but hopefully it will have changed for the better.
