First draft of guidelines presented

by Fred Graver
Staff Reporter

Dennis Etienne, student body president yesterday presented a revision of the first draft of the student manual guidelines to the Student Life Council.

The major change in the guidelines was in respect to parties in private rooms. The guidelines now would provide for gatherings in private rooms in two forms.

According to the revisions the first type of party would be, "Private in which they do not attract undue attention, by noise, commotion or numbers, and always are confined to the host's room."

The "undue noise clause" was explained by Etienne in terms of the time that the noise occurs. "There's a difference between having your stereo tuned up three-quarters of the way at ten o'clock and at four in the morning," he said.

The second, and more controversial form, was stated in the new draft as a "gathering of residents and invited guests occupying adjoining rooms in which alcohol is present (and which) will conform to the above stated guidelines, (printed in yesterday's Observer), and have the consent of surrounding residents."

The first question was raised by Dean of Students John Macheca stated that the ramifications of peer group pressure in a student's dorm area of residence. Etienne answered that there is very little else occurring on Saturday night that would give a student cause to object. He then added, "I haven't met many people at Notre Dame who would block a party." He believes that the kind of person who would do that would probably have other problems with the people he was living with.

The question of what was meant by "adjoining rooms" also was raised. It was stated that the words were not meant to be taken literally, but that they meant rooms in the general area where traffic between them would not cause a problem.

The form of party does not apply to section parties. Members of the council stated that they felt gatherings of this size should be moved to a larger center of social activity in the hall.

The active involvement of rectors, their staffs, and the staff of the Student Affairs office in approving parties was discussed. Father Schlave, director of student activities, commented that the guidelines were too stringent and placed too much judgment in the hands of the rector to set a consistent standard for the University. Edwarr Radill told the council, "a rector knows his own hall" and that this should be enough to allow for a reasonable assessment of his hall's life.

As the time for adjournment drew near, certain students members of the council pushed for a clarification of policy for this weekend. Fr. Schlave told them, "The students should be told 'Don't get paranoid.' The spirit of the new guidelines is present, even though they haven't been passed."

Dean Mashara elaborated that the rules for this weekend would come from the old manual, as they did last weekend. "This may be more difficult because this is a football weekend," he said. "I know it's difficult, and I know there may be exceptions."

Dr. Philip Fairburn, vice-president for student affairs commented that the crackdowns last weekend were the actions of individual halls and rectors.

The new revision now goes back to the Student Affairs office. A report on their reaction will be presented to the SLC when they meet again Monday at 4:15.

In contrast to Indiana, Michigan is well into its second year as an 18 year-old drinking state.

At Michigan State, regulations permitting drinking in the dormitories by any student. In addition, recognized clubs and organizations can sponsor social functions for members who alcohol is provided. At other social functions on campus, the custom is to 'bring your own.'

The University of Michigan at Ann Arbor also allows drinking in private rooms.

"In fact," says Associate Director of University Housing Robert Hughes, "halls can apply to the city for 24-hour liquor licenses and operate them.

"There has always been drinking in the halls, whether there have been rules or not," Hughes continues. "I'm not aware that drinking rules are any problem at all here."
Future guest speakers to include McGovern and Chisholm

by John McEachin
Staff Reporter

Rep. Shirley Chisholm and Sen. George McGovern highlight the list of guest speakers for this semester sponsored by the Student Union Academic Commission (SUAC).

The New York Congresswoman's appearance, which has been re-scheduled from last spring, will be Monday Sept. 24 as part of Washington Hall. It will kick-off a series of lectures by celebrities and scholars who should be of special interest to the Notre Dame audience.

Chisholm marks the visits of Leonard Woodcock, president of the U.S. War Widow, the Socialist black mayor of Berkeley, and George Plimpton, sports enthusiast and author of Paper Lion.

McGovern, the 1972 Democratic Presidential nominee whose running mate R. Sargent Shriver spoke here last fall, is scheduled for November 15. "Our big problem this year will be to present a quality program on a tight budget," said Ron Natale, director of the Academic Commission. Last year the commission was able to co-sponsor a number of events with various departments of the university.

However, their budgets have been cut, and they probably won't be able to help much this year." SUAC's budget, which comes from Student Union's share of the Student Activities Fee, was approximately $17,000 last year and Natale expects to receive about the same again this year. Out of this money the commission must pay speakers' fees and travel expenses. Since they will be sponsoring most of the events alone, they will need an additional source of revenue.

"We don't like to charge admission to lectures," Natale said, "because we are already using students' money to bring in the speakers. So we may show a few films that are academic in nature and interested in the University of Notre Dame and St. Mary's College. Subscriptions may be purchased for $10 per semester ($14 per year) from The Observer Box Q, Notre Dame, Indiana 46556. Second class postage paid, Notre Dame, Ind. 46556.
Administrative mix-up delays new plaids for Irish Guard

by Mike Dewey
Staff Reporter

Due to an administrative mix-up this fall, Notre Dame's famous Irish Guard will be missing their new plaids for the first time in over 45 years. Notre Dame has accepted $325,521 in awards for projects, according to Dr. Robert E. Gordon, Notre Dame vice-president for advanced research.

J. Mueller, professor of aerospace and mechanical engineering, Dr. John R. Lloyd, assistant professor of aerospace and mechanical engineering, and Dr. David B. Craig, assistant professor in aerospace and mechanical engineering, were honored Alumnus.

These two individuals can get you squared away about the tutoring program for South Bend kids. By the way, your interest in the organization is The Neighborhood Study Help Program.

ND awarded grants for projects

Notre Dame has accepted $325,521 in awards for the month of August to support individual faculty projects in research as well as innovative educational programs, according to Dr. Robert E. Gordon, Notre Dame vice-president for advanced studies.

Awards for research totaled $306,711, including: $119,630 from the National Institutes of Health (NIH), $70,000 from the National Science Foundation (NSF) for a study of the genetics and reproductive biology of Aedes mosquitoes by Dr. George E. Craig Jr., professor of biology; $70,000 from the NSF for a study of transport phenomena related to an artificial heart valve by Mr. Thomas J. Müller, professor of aerospace and mechanical engineering; and $27,000 from NIH for "nuclear magnetic resonance studies of metals in kinase and related enzymes" by Dr. Thomas L. Nowak, assistant professor of chemistry.

Dennis Etienne's suggested revisions to the parties regulations that are now being discussed in the Student Life Council are a step in the right direction. The suggestions, though they are not substantial, nonetheless are significant and produce a little more leeway in the regulations besides providing a less ominous tone.

Etienne's suggestions include a move to make the noise clause dependent upon the hour and a second clause that allows parties in adjoining rooms or rooms in a general area with the permissions of the residents of that area. These seem to follow the spirit of the central staff's suggested regulations. The emphasis here is not on alcohol, but on providing the best social atmosphere within the spirit of the new rules. Students must be allowed to have the party as an outlet and to remove parties elsewhere. There is the importance of making the noise clause dependent upon the hour and a second clause that allows parties in adjoining rooms or rooms in a general area with the permissions of the residents of that area.

For the Weekend

The situation for this weekend, however, is still uncertain. Schlawer said that students should not be paranoid and Macera said that exceptions may be made. So, the implication seems to be—go ahead with your plans. But the spirit of the new regulations also brings another implication—keep it in order.

What that means, is a little more considerable of the people in the dorm. Try and keep the noise at a minimal level and the party in some kind of order. At least that seems to be where it stands for this weekend.

An Apology In Taste

An ad which appeared in the special football weekend supplement of The Observer proved as much a surprise to the staff of the newspaper as it did to all the readers. The tasteless and offensive ad shocked us also. The supplement was a production of Co-operative Publishing Co. in Mishawaka, the firm that print The Observer Monday through Friday mornings. They sold the ads, prepared the copy and printed the supplement. Then the supplement was inserted into The Observer per the arrangement that was made with the firm. Negligence on our part is The Observer's plea. I should have checked the insert. By allowing it to be added to the Wednesday edition of the paper, that check was not made however and the tasteless ad was allowed to run.
New Alcohol Commissioner named; experience cited
by Jack D'Aurora Staff Reporter

"Since alcohol is a major concern on our campus, student government deemed it necessary to appoint someone as their expert in this field," stated Jim Roe, student union administration assistant.

Thus, after enjoying a Harvey Wallbanger mixed by Fred Monroe last Monday night, he appointed Monroe to the unprecedented office of Alcoholic Beverage Commissioner.

On the duties of this commission Roe commented, "I'm not sure what they will be, but hopefully he can be incorporated into the viable structure of the student government. Anyway, he'd make a great bartender." Roe added, "Some people don't know how to drink. Perhaps Fred can introduce drinking as a type of art.''

Roe commented, "It's surprising we haven't appointed a commissioner earlier. Obviously a need has existed for a person of such expertise, especially on our campus." "I feel it's a very important office," said Monroe. "And besides, it will look great on my record for law school." He feels his credentials for alcoholic beverage commissioner are adequate, "having extensive background in the subject dating back to elementary school." Monroe is serious about his appointment "I think it is a most appropriate time for his office to be instituted in light of these times of boorish drunken behavior," he said. "I hope my appointment will offer me the chance to work closely with the administration in order to promote the proper attitudes and uses of alcohol.

The new alcoholic beverage commissioner promises to help the university "turn over a new leaf" with regard to campus drinking.

ND Students appointed to Engineering Council for first time
by Greg B. Bangs Staff Reporter

The College of Engineering council's third meeting this year, and for the first time Engineering students will have a vote on the Engineering College Council.

The Engineering College Council is the newly appointed group to Dean Joseph Hogan. It is made up of the five Engineers, the head of numerous engineering departments, a few at-large faculty members and two student representatives. Last year, there were students on the committee for the last two meetings, but this will be the first full year of participation.

The council is composed of fourteen members, at least one from each engineering department, with the heads of numerous engineering departments, a few at-large faculty members and two student representatives. Last year, there were students on the committee for the last two meetings, but this will be the first full year of participation.

Mary Ann O'Connor, a Notre Dame senior majoring in metallurgical engineering, is one representative. Miss O'Connor is also President of the Joint Engineering Council, an organization composed of fourteen students, which represents separate honor fraternities and professional societies. Other officers of the J.E.C. are: Matt Cassavant-vice-president, Jim Pfister-treasurer, and Todd Cat-tune-secretary.

According to Miss O'Connor, the purpose of the Joint Engineering Council is "to coordinate activities for the whole Engineering College, review advisories, put out newsletters and choose one student to work with the President of the J.E.C. on the Engineering College Council."

O'Connor said that any junior, senior or graduate student (who has attended Notre Dame for at least one year) who is interested in the one remaining position must submit his (her) name and a resume to the Dean's secretary by September 21. The student representative will be chosen on the basis of his resume and perhaps a personal interview.

Once they join the Engineering College Council, Miss O'Connor and the other student representatives will help advise Dean Hogan on the curriculum of the Engineering College. Miss O'Connor thinks it's a good idea to have students on the council "because students, after all, take these courses and their recommendations to the committee would be coming from direct experience."

Badin elects new president:
keeps old traditions & parties
by Jeanne Murphy Staff Reporter

Badin Hall elected its second female president in a run-off election held yesterday. Laura Dodge, a sophomore sociology major, served as interim president since last May and won this office officially in an election with two other candidates yesterday.

The newly elected president served as chairman of Mardi Gras and A Toast last year. "I plan to carry on the traditions we have already established here and hopefully begin new projects," she explained. "I tend to continue hall parties stressing "social interaction" as a party's major ingredient, and will agree with some of the party regulations, but explained that the hallways in Badin are well-suited for social gatherings and should be made legal.

In keeping with the Notre Dame athletic spirit, Badin's new president is forming basketball, football and volleyball teams. She is looking into the possibilities of buying a pin-ball machine and a juke box for the lounge with time restrictions on each.

Miss Dodge is tentatively investigating the provisions for a coffee hour featuring guest speakers from different sections of the University. She hopes these "informative parties" prove successful throughout the coming year.

Badin Hall is working under a new constitution written by last year's officers. The hall government calls for a president, seven section leaders, and four members from the hall on the Steering Committee. The Steering Committee consists of four phases: social projects, communications, finance, and special projects.

The members of the hall government will work with the president in determining Badin's role on campus, and improving its social, cultural, and athletic activities.

Who is Anne Green, anyway??

Remember Freshman year? Remember the shaving cream on the telephone? Remember picking the Fredy's door with the bathroom door?

Practical jokes have long been a tradition on college campuses. Everything from rebuilding a Volkswagen in someone's single room to painting a blank wall of solid concrete in front of someone's door has sprouted from the imaginations of college students.

Yesterday, the ultimate in practical jokes was executed. The name and face of Anne Green, a junior at Saint Mary's, appeared 506 times all over the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's campuses.

Posters were also seen at Nickies and "The Library."

When asked if she was having a happy day Anne Green said, "I'm having a lousy day."

Apparent prankster engaged in a long, friendly feud, Anne and her former Le Mans Tower roommate have tried to out-do each other's practical jokes. Anne cited a fresh fight as type of amusement these past three years.

Commenting on what she thought was the reason for the joke, Anne said, "I attribute it (the practical joke) to the unhappy childhoods of my friends."

She went on to say, "But I'm planning something really big to retaliate." The pranksters have put up by a group of Dillon Hall men. When asked for a specific reason for the joke they admitted their friendship was strong.

The leader's comment for publication was, "Anne Green is a warm and friendly person. I merely wanted to share this feeling with the rest of the campus. As a member of the recently formed committee for more meaningful student life, I hope to continue to spread good cheer and stamp out pranking habits."

The Notre Dame-Saint Mary's committee was not amused.

"You can say we can't have a concert and you can't fool a prankster, but we have to try our best to stop them."

Take this incident as a warning, however. Next time you call someone up at 3 a.m. to find out what time it is, be prepared to wake up finding your room missing.
Carrigan, chairperson of operations and Mary Anne Gillespie, chairperson of decorations will host each coffeehouse.

The coffeehouse is located in the lower level of the SMC dining hall. All students, faculty and administrators are invited every Friday from 9:30 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. Any interested in entertaining or aspiring to participate in activities can call Carrigan at 336.

Copernicus display at library

An exhibit of significant books and other library materials relating to the Polish scientist Nicolaus Copernicus is on display as at the Notre Dame Library through the first weekend of November.

The exhibit, celebrating the 400th anniversary of the birth of Copernicus, is sponsored by the library. In addition to exhibits of the library's special collections, various editions of his works as at the library are on display in the first floor, part of the exhibit is a dramatic setting of the life and work of Copernicus. Included in the exhibition are facsimiles of his work, "De revolutionibus orbium caelestrum," and a selection of his letters and manuscripts.

Another special feature of the display is a special display of publications by Dr. Brian Skolnick, Notre Dame professor emeritus of history, concerning the impact of the scientific theory on the Far East.

SMC Coffeehouse re-opens

by Pat Tie Connell Staff Reporter

St. Mary's coffeehouse re-opens at 9:30 p.m. this Friday night. "We're anticipating a big post-poly crowd," commented Kathy Carrigan, chairman of entertain-

The coffeehouse is intended to provide an on-campus opportunity for socializing and entertainment each weekend. Initiated last March the coffeehouse "enjoyed great success averaging 300 people," said Carrigan.

The coffeehouse was originally proposed by Campus Ministry, and Father Roger Comier serves in an advisory capacity. However complete operation and mainten-ance is conducted by SMC students.

Performing for patrons on Friday will be Cindy Cosaro at 9:30, and the folk group Slow at 10:30. In addition one of last year's favorites the Pete Slate group will perform at 11:30 p.m. and Tom Faught at 12:30.

Sages SMC's folk service organization will be dispensing subtraction snacks at 4 cents apiece and Paul Bunyan chocolate chip cookies at 8 cents. Student government at SMC has donated $500 and Saga donated $100 for the program. Future plans call for the purchase of a sound system. "We are anticipating the same success as last year as there is need on campus for a place providing an informal atmosphere for conversation," explained Carrigan, Jamie Massa, chairman of operations and Mary Anne Gillespie, chairperson of decorations who will host each coffeehouse.

The coffeehouse is located in the lower level of the SMC dining hall. All students, faculty and administrators are invited every Friday from 9:30 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. Anyone interested in entertaining or aspiring to participate in activities can call Carrigan at 336.
Defensive line coach Joe Yonto has his boys primed and ready for the season opener against the Wildcats. "Our boys are not only solid collegiate football against Northwestern. Yonto sees this as not another "typical" home opener. "It has a veteran club, with a new coach, and some fine backs in Tripple, Mitch Anderson, and Greg Boykin. We'll definitely have to run hard." The Irish "big four" shouldn't have their hands quite as full if they follow the Joe Yonto philosophy: "get there firstest with the mostest."
