Rectors see no problems

Football weekend parties to work within guidelines

By Paul Colgan & Claude Devaney
Staff Reporters

Parties and alcohol will not pose any unusual problems this weekend for rectors on the South Quad. "Small parties only" is the consensus of an Observer poll of South Quad rectors. Even though this is a football weekend, all those questioned said they expected few big parties.

On the North Quad Fr. Thomas Tallardia, rector of Zahm Hall, said that there would be "no hassle on private parties in the room."

"Last year's manual is in effect and I'll enforce it like last year." commented Kathy Cekanski, rector of Brennan Phillips. "Girls halls are different from men's. I don't expect any problems."

Assistant rector Joe Gower expects "a certain amount of conviviality" in St. Ed's. "Parties are size affairs," commented Fr. Robert Griffin, rector of Keenan Hall. "We will try to do as we did last weekend and try to help them to be sociable. Obviously as a rector, I have instructions to stop large parties so if any large parties going on I'll have to stop and say that's a no no!"

South Quad rectors agree that big parties are not a serious factor on the first football weekend. Fr. Dave Schlau er, rector of Dillon Hall, could "sense a spirit of cooperation" among the students of his hall. He said that on football weekends so many other things were happening that numbers would not be a problem. If people were planning any big parties, he hoped that they would "work within the spirit of the guidelines" for alcohol and parties.

"Students would be aware of their responsibility as a certain factor on the first football weekend. Fr. Schlau er said he had made the guidelines "clear to his hall. He "was not going to play a game."

Sr. Karen Anne Ptol, the rector of Badin Hall, said that she did not foresee any problems this weekend. Because no large parties had been planned Sr. Ptol felt that if a problem did exist, it would tend to be in the men's dorm's rather than the women's.

Fr. Schlau er said he has made the guidelines clear to his hall. "He was not going to play a game." He felt the students would look at the hall with some respect.

According to Fr. Chambers, the new guidelines would help a hall. They would create another vehicle for hall unity. People would have to get together and be creative in order to find a place to hold a party.

Fr. Chambers said: "The fellows have to follow the rules of the university. He said hall parties with alcohol were never permitted in Morrissey.

"It's "the people not the parties" which impress others about the resident halls. The students have respect according to Chambers for each other.

Takes Riggs in three sets

Billie Jean King stops the mouth

By MIKE RABUN
UPI Sports Writer

HOUSTON (UPI) - Billie Jean King avenged the name of women's tennis and put at least a muffle on Bobby Riggs' non-stop mouth with a decisive, straight sets, 6-4, 6-3 victory Thursday night in their "battle of the sexes" extravaganza.

Mrs. King ran the 35-year-old Riggs into submission in a match that produced much better tennis than anyone had the right to expect, and the lure of the oldest rivalry of all - man vs. woman - attracted 30,472 to the Astrodome, the largest crowd ever to watch a tennis match.

In so doing, Billie Jean, 29, pocketed $100,000 in the nationally televised, winner-take-all carnival.

With $100-a-seat customers swigging champagne at courtside for a dollar a glass, Mrs. King, excelling in every phase of the game, put to rest the question of whether a champion female tennis player could whip "an old man with one foot in the grave."

The old man did not give up without a struggle, however. After dropping the first two sets, Riggs, who almost single-handedly promoted his way into a fortune by challenging first Margaret Court - whom he beat handily on Mother's Day - and then Billie Jean, woreied noticeably. In the final set, Riggs, who had been treated all week for tendinitis in his right elbow, paused briefly to have his hand massaged.

Then, he rallied briefly in the third set - but by that point there was no question as to the outcome.

The quality of tennis played by both almost covered up the pomp and ceremony which had been pumped into the event. But not quite.

Around courtside was an all-star cast, a well-stocked bar, scores of photographers and the elite of tennis decked out as they would be for a Broadway opening.

And both competitors played it for all it was worth before the national television cameras.
Panty raid causes damage
by Melissa Byrne

The first panty raid of the year occurred at midnight, Wednesday, September 19 on St. Mary's Campus. Tony Kovalch, director of St. Mary's Security, reported extensive damage to campus buildings.

Kovalch estimates 700 boys raided St. Mary's campus. Notre Dame students took clothes from girls' rooms in Holy Cross, Regina and McCandless Halls. Clothes were also taken from the laundry room in LeMans Hall basement.

SMC dorms suffered broken windows, broken door hinges, slashes screens and broken firelocks.

Further damage included 3 broken globe lights costing $40 apiece. Joe Boniades, St. Mary's groundkeeper, estimate $150 damage to trees, shrubs and college equipment.

Kovalch met Thursday morning with Arthur Pears, director of Notre Dame Security and with Student Affairs directors from both ND and SMC.

The group discussed damage caused by the raid. The total cost of damage has not yet been determined.

"This panty raid was easily the worst I've seen in my 3 years at St. Mary's," said Phyllis Ledoux, LeMans Hall director. "The majority of students in LeMans acted immaturely. The girls hung out windows; dangling things on string. It is extremely disappointing to me when women respond to a panty raid with foul language and encourage destruction of their own property."

SMC Security will take no specific action against ND students because too many were involved. "The girls were just as bad as the boys," Ledoux said.

Hotplate causes Sorin fire
by George Velchic
Staff Reporter

An unattended hotplate caused minor damage in a third floor room Wednesday night at Sorin Hall. Upon hearing the sounds of the threatening panty raid, a freshman left a hotplate on the floor in his room causing a small fire. He apparently forgot to turn it off in the desire to set to the rally. A few minutes later, other hall residents noticed smoke from the room. They called the campus fire department, and in a short time, the flame was extinguished.

What little damage occurred happened to the rug and the hotplate.

Notre Dame football lever lights more than one kind of fire.

‘No drinking in public’

by Howard Wood
Staff Reporter

With the first draft of the new guidelines presented to the Student Life Council, Dean of Students, John Macheca, has said that the basic change in the student manual would be, “no drinking in public places except under the guidelines established by the Office of Student Affairs and approved by the SLC.”

This change could allow for legal drinking in the peripheral areas of the campus, such as the An Tostal field and the football parking lot. This is prohibited under strict enforcement of the present student manual.

Past abuse of these rules has brought tighter restrictions on the use of alcohol on campus. This is also the reason for the changes requested in the wording of the student manual.

Commenting on the reasoning for stricter enforcement, Macheca stated, “We have rules to live by that are realistic and addressed both to the individual and common good. I would like to see the SLC rules amended but until they are, we should try to live by the ones we have.”

Under the new guidelines, large social gatherings with the consumption of alcohol will not be allowed. Drinking and parties are restricted to the private rooms and these “should not attract undue attention.”

Concerning the subject of drinking in the football parking lot by visitors before Saturday's football games, Macheca noted, “Drinking in the parking lot is not a problem because no one is infringing on someone else, whereas, big parties in dorms can infringe on other’s rights.”

Macheca added, “The majority of people who are here to enjoy football games conduct themselves in an orderly way and there is no great concern in the university community. Obviously, there are exceptions and because students see exceptions, I hope it doesn’t mean they will follow suit.”

Appealing to student observance and cooperation, he said, “We have rules and we must abide by them. We are trying to change these rules and in the meantime, we’re all trying to live within the rules established in the existing student manual.”

Dean Macheca added that Notre Dame is very concerned about educating socially as well as academically. Notre Dame is one of few universities that is making commitments to help students learn, mature and grow beyond the classroom.

The administration’s announcements concerning the rules for halls parties seemed to me to be somewhat heavy-handed and off-putting, but I did not altogether feel unreasonable. The letters of student’s concern in them on Monday’s edition never seemed to me to be anything more than childish ravings out of sorts of students here to get a good education.

As for the party being an inhibiting influence on having a good time...well, all that I know is that both the Rector and the Assistant Rector in my hall are of the opinion that the hall parties here are too loud and too rowdy, and we should perhaps discourage them.

Remember El Che Guevara? Before he died he was nothing but a communist. Feel free to ask any Latin American about him. He is a hero and a martyr of justice. Do not be surprised if Allende receives the same type of honor. I know that he will.

Please, before you write anything more about Allende, just think! He was wrong in the way he carried out his policies, but he was a true man who deserves to be alive helping his people, not under the ground helping the miagros."

Editor, Fellow Students, and Other Rabbles:

Ever since the Orange Bowl last year, I've been stripping my brains out pondering what went wrong. I guess I will have to take some of the blame for our poor showing down there because I must admit that my performance was lacking a few things; also! But I attribute this to the 1) per cent pure "orange juice" that the native fed to me and my Holders prior to and during the game.

All in all, last season had its good points and its bad points, but now we must forget about all that came off last year and look forward to bigger and better things to come off. Tomorrow the football team will participate in their first game of the '73 season. They have been working hard and are anxious to show us what they have learned. And I also have been working hard and with a year of experience under my belt, I feel that this will be a very productive year.

But now I will get down to the bare facts. Last year I asked for a female volunteer to come forward and join me in letting it all hang out. The few girls who took me up on my offer were rather dubious about the "undress" rehearsal. Since it was to be held in private, they felt that I may be influenced by some extra-curricular activity. Therefore, in order to do justice to all the females that apply for the job, I feel that a public audition would serve the purpose.

What better opportunity is there to display their wares than at the first game, it not only gives the fans a chance to practice their viewing, but it also gives me an opportunity to familiarize myself with her and work out a sensational routine for the next home game. Remember all females are invited to enter and if any female is interested, feel free to contact me about any of the details. Although helpful, it is not necessary to contact me first before entering, because all surprise entries will be viewed with just as much enthusiasm.

So come tomorrow, I certainly look forward to seeing many young ladies out there giving it their all off. And may the best body win!!

There was an article in your newspaper concerning President Allende of Chile which disturbed me greatly and I would like to make a response to that article if I may.

There is nothing wrong about a man trying to help his country. Nothing at all!!! Therefore, no one has the right to accuse him of being a clown.

If President Salvador Allende failed to help Chile because of his beliefs, that does not give anyone the right to say that "He did a favor to Chile by killing himself." Allende, like everyone else, has the right to make the wrong approach to help Chile.
The Raid Tradition

Panty raids have become a thing of tradition at Notre Dame. When raids at universities across the country have slowly disappeared, they still have continued at Notre Dame. There is nothing basically wrong with panty raids unless they end up as the one did Wednesday night.

Damage was widespread at St. Mary's and rumors of damage to the women's halls on the ND campus have been circulating.

St. Mary's dorms hinges, slashed screens and broken firelocks. The groundskeepers estimated $150 damage to trees, shrubs and equipment.

Yet blame cannot be placed solely on any group involved in the fiasco. The estimated 700 guys who invaded the campus were inconsiderate and extremely destructive in their actions. But, as SMC security suggests, the girls called a lot of the destruction down on themselves.

This is the kind of senseless violence and destruction that brings bad results at ND. It's the kind of actions that lead the members of the administration to believe that ND students cannot handle themselves. It's the kind of action that results in "in loco parentis" and party regulations.

Next time around cool it. It'll be better for everyone.

We are not about to suggest that those who did most of the damage step forward because the damage was inflicted by most of the people involved. Just try and learn a lesson from this one. If lessons are not learned and the raid is not perpetrated in a spirit of fun instead of vulgar destruction, there's maybe it's time that this campus tradition passed from the campus, too.

The Triumph of Ms.

Even United Press International would not admit to what happened last night. In their story, filed by male sportswriters, they said that Billie Jean King put to rest the idea that women do not belong in the same endeavors as men. Mrs. King agreed with his stance—as he said on ABC last night—that the male is superior, the female is not.

They would not admit that Billie Jean King defeated more than a man last night—she defeated an attitude, an attitude that says that women do not belong in the same endeavors as men. Mrs. King proved that they do and Bobby Riggs asked for it.

Riggs proclaimed himself the monarch of the male chauvinists. Across the country, millions of men banked on Riggs' lob to beat that woman. They agreed with his stance—as he said on ABC last night—that the male is superior, the female is not.

In their agreement with him, many suffered what they must consider a major loss last night.

This date will probably not be listed with the day that women received the right to vote. Nor will Billie Jean King be remembered in the same light as Susan B. Anthony, but women will be holding their heads up a great deal higher tomorrow... and with good reason. And if the reactions that roared through Badin, Farley, Walsh and Breen-Phillips last night are any indication of things to come, don't challenge any women from around here to a tennis match. You may end up on the short end too.

Congratulations B.J. ... and thank you.

Polar Bearings

One year ago I strolled through Piazza Partigiano in Perugia, Italy, taking in for the first time the Italian way of life. During the year I lived to share some of my experiences and revelations of life abroad with you.

Now, sitting in the library with my Bic fineliner and legal pad, I share my first impressions of being at Notre Dame with you.

I had no doubts about transferring from SMC to ND this year. Academically as well as spiritually I sense the move is right for me now, although friends advised me otherwise.

"I don't know if you're going to like being on campus again or not, Ann," a friend wrote during the summer. "I'm sure any experience will seem anti-climactic after a year in Rome, and Notre Dame has changed. It's a more cynical and drunken than you remember."

I've been here a couple weeks now. Already I am behind in my studies, finding myself yet too weak to pass up sharing and celebrating with the people I love and the many more I continue to meet here. This experience hardly makes me an authority but it has given me time to realize changes, to work off, my own personal hangover.

What I see at ND now is not a cynical world decorated with empty beer cans but rather a refreshed community highligted with signs of youthful optimism and growth. I'm sure the cynics, the skeptics, and the drunks are here, too. But perhaps the sharp edge of their experience has been softened by the innocence of those new to Notre Dame this year.

I met an old friend in the Huddle today.

"Hey, Cammy! How's it feel to be back?"

He seemed a bit surprised when I told him it felt great to be here.

"I bet you miss Rome, though, don't you?"

"Well, actually, I don't miss Rome at all." He was puzzled by my reply as many others have been.

It's difficult to condense a whole year into a few words, especially when that year was such a neat one. Things like jazzing with the Circus Maximus, riding a camel in Egypt, or teaching a seven-year-old Roman the arts of Frisbee, suffer in translation.

These memories keep yesterday alive but somehow both yesterday and tomorrow always seem to have the habit of showing up and it's a good thing it works that way.

Yesterday, I was in Rome and it seemed right to be there, then. Today I am at Notre Dame and it seems right to be here now. I am becoming a part of Notre Dame and am beginning to feel Notre Dame as an integral part of me.

This may not be the first time we've been here, but it is a first time. It is a new chance for all of us to grow, to care, to share things that have yet to be dreamt.

I'm glad to be here. I hope you are too.

For a couple of days, I tried to avoid meeting him, hoping for some time to gather my thoughts. But it isn't easy to avoid meeting someone when you are both living in a community of fifty or sixty people in a few buildings isolated on a lakeside. Eventually, Father Kenna sent word that I had been noticed skulking around in a particularly diaphanous shirt I was fond of that summer.

I knew then, that as far as this man was concerned, it was time for me to give up my hiding places.

In the first talk he gave us seminarians, he said: "You have taken vows as men of God, and you must not be afraid to show the world that you are men, because when he spoke of students, he said: "I can see how much they loved them."

Father Howard Kenna was educated at Notre Dame all. He was a former master teacher and administrator at Notre Dame. At the time of his death, he had just concluded eleven years as the Provincial Superior of the Indiana Province of the Priests' Society of the Sacred Heart. He was a member of the Board of Fellows at Notre Dame, and as honorary degree recipient of the University.

None of those biographical facts will tell you how much Father Kenna cared about Notre Dame and its people. But if you ever talked with him, you would know that he cared about you, and about all the others, in ways that you had forgotten to care about yourselves.

Many of us came to know Father Kenna when he was assigned to our seminary in Washington as its superior in 1952. There were some priests in the Community who thought he was a provincial president of Notre Dame that year, instead. Father Hesburgh became president, and Father Kenna came to us. Like a number of other seminarians, I was at first frightened by this logical, mathematical man with the erect posture, the white hair, and the stern glance (mostly caused by impaired vision), and theittle boy's manner of communication that caught our first glimpse of him as superior when he came to visit us on our first day of Lent. He was not a man who executive director for the redevelopment, said that such traffic will be "discouraged".

Out of 240 small parcels of land in that area, only ten remain to be sold to developers. Lennon stated that the buyers are there but now the city can afford to be selective since the stipulations for the selling of the land state that the city can sell to whoever it wishes if the land is sold for its best use, not best price. For instance, on one of the remaining parcels, a buyer has submitted a plan for a restaurant-theater complex with a 1,000 person capacity. The city can decide if, for that part of town, that plan is the better of another one such as (hypothetically) a car wash.

The Civic Center

Some of the projects have already been completed, such as the new Post Office which began operation Monday and which will employ an estimated 2,000 workers. Next to it, a new mall has risen. Others have yet to begin construction, such as the "Convention-Cultural-Civic Center". Estimated at 12 million dollars, the center will house an industrial museum, art center, exhibition units, restaurants, and convention space. It may be open 18 to 24 hours. Also in the works is a 100 foot wide green strip south of the Civic Center on the river for bicyclists and strollers. One entrance to the strip will be through a glass enclosed, environmentally controlled mall in the Civic Center.

The Key

Throughout all this time of redevelopment, the key to the project is federal funding," stated Lennon. The idea for redevelopment began twenty-one years ago in 1952. The trouble since then has been selling the idea to those merchants and such involved, said Lennon. "The whole key to the project is federal funding," stated Lennon.

When the parcels downtown first went on sale to developers and private interest, no one was buying, said C. Wayne Brownell, the assistant director of real estate. Real Estate Research, Inc. was called in from Chicago to study the project and make suggestions as a Land Use Marketability Project (L.U.M.). From their recommendations, the land finally started to sell. The date for the completion of the project is the end of 1974.

SOUTH BEND: CHANGING
Focus: Indiana and South Bend Politics

by Jack Colwell
South Bend Tribune Political Writer

Indiana, birthplace of the John Birch Society, home of the national headquarters of the American Legion and President Nixon's best state in 1960, often is regarded as conservative, hawkish and Republican. Yet, in races for the U.S. Senate, Democrats with liberal voting records have won five straight times, dating back to 1964. Sen. Vance Hartke, one of the first Senate critics of the war in Vietnam, and Sen. Birch Bayh, who led the fight to block the Hays- swath and Carswell nominations to the Supreme Court, project no conservative image.

Can't Pigeonhole Indiana

And in races for governor, Democrats have won two of the last four races, six of the 11 races since the days of the Great Depression.

In other words, Indiana, as now is true with most of the nation, cannot be pigeonholed in terms of party politics.

There often is a great deal of split-ticket voting. For example, when Nixon was making his best-in-the-nation showing in Indiana in 1968, Bayh was winning re-election.

Browne

The state administration now is in Republican hands.

The present governor, Otis R. Bowen, a medicolegal from tiny Bremen, a town about 20 miles south of South Bend, is a moderate Republican who looks like a wild-eyed liberal in comparison with the prior two governors, Democrat Roger D. Branigin and Republican Edgar D. Whitcomb.

Whitcomb, known for austerity inthanking and government, frequently tangled with Bowen when Bowen was speaker of the Indiana House of Representatives.

Senator Birch Bayh

Bowen's victory in the gubernatorial race in 1972 was a blow for the ultra-conservative wing of the Indiana GOP. Ironically, Bowen's surprise in large measure from the anti-McGovern tide which swept Indiana and helped the Bowen-led Republican state ticket.

The South Bend area is regarded in state politics as a Democratic bastion. In fact, the conservatives in Indiana and Southern Indiana look with much suspicion on the South Bend area as some kind of a camp of radicals.

Actually, St. Joseph County is very representative of the nation in political leaning.

From 1888, when there was a technical miss, until 1968, it was a case of: "As St. Joseph County goes, so goes the nation." The county had given a majority of votes to the presidential winner from the Grover Cleveland vs. Benjamin Harrison race in 1888 until Hubert Humphrey carried the county by exactly 300 votes over Richard Nixon in 1968.

While the county voted for Democrat Cleveland rather than presidential winner Harrison in 1888, Cleveland actually had more votes nationwide and lost only in the Electoral College.

Brademas

The congressional district in which South Bend is located is represented by Congressman John Brademas. South Bend Democrat now in the No. 4 post in majority leadership in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Brademas is in his eighth term in Congress and at the age of 46 is regarded as an outstanding prospect for future higher leadership, even speaker.

The congressman has a liberal Democratic voting record and, because of his education subcommittee chairmanship and sponsorship of major education acts, he has been referred to as "Mr. Education" in Congress. He also was on the White House "enemies list" cited by John Dean in the Watergate hearings.

South Bend

The city of South Bend, while regarded as Democratic, does some political swinging.

The present mayor, Jerry J. Miller, is a Democrat who is in his first term and who will be seeking re-election in 1975. The mayor before him was a Republican, Lloyd M. Allen, an activist mayor who won two terms, each taken by a landslide, after a prior Democratic administration had staved off a tax increase by letting streets crumble and progress move full speed backward.

The 1974 Stake

Four Democratic representatives and two Democratic senators also are members of the St. Joseph County area delegation. The Assembly goes back into session in January.

There is no election in Indiana this fall. But political activity will pick up by the end of the year, with maneuvering and campaigning for the May primary.

At stake in the 1974 election will be county offices, state legislative posts, Sen. Bayh's seat in the Senate and Brademas', ninth term hopes.

South Bend Symphony encourages students

by Ellen Duffy
Staff Reporter

The South Bend Symphony Orchestra promises a good year. The symphony will play under the supervision of a new conductor, Seymour Rubinstein, from New York. There will be five concerts. With each concert there is a guest. There are special student rates. For season tickets the cost is: first floor, mezzanine - $9.00; first balcony - $6.50; second, third balconies - $4.50. For an individual concert it costs $2.50 per student.

The Schedule

The season opens on October 2 at 8:00 p.m. featuring the classical pianist, Philippe Entremont. The second concert is on December 2 at 4:00 pm. Michael Lorimer, classical guitarist, will be the guest. The next concert offers Christine Walewksa, cellist, who will be playing from The Planets by Holst. It takes place on February 2 at 8:00 pm. The fourth concert is on March 17. John McCollum, tenor, will be singing.

Robert Hamilton, pianist, will perform in the final concert on April 20 at 8:00 pm. Some of his selections will be: Overture to Midsummer’s Night by Mendelssohn, Billy the Kid, and Brahms’ Concerto No. 1.

Remember, the symphony will accompany the guest at each performance. If you are interested in purchasing tickets, see Dr. Biondo of the Notre Dame choral department.

The 100 Center Complex, located in the 700 block of Lincolnway West in Mishawaka, is a $15 million development which seeks to preserve the Kamm and Schellinger Brewery. The Brewery was built in 1853; the brick and masonry are being preserved.

Self-protection:

By Judy Rauenhorst

Staff Reporter

Self-protection for St. Mary’s students was the subject at the afternoon May 17 in the St. Mary’s College student cafeteria. Kathleen Mulaney, Anthony Kovatch, and John Quello were the speakers. Kovatch, an attorney, is a member of the FCC. Mulaney is a student affairs official at St. Mary’s College and the director of the student safety department.

The panelists discussed the importance of being aware of one’s surroundings and taking steps to protect oneself from potential threats. Kovatch emphasized the need for students to be vigilant and to report any suspicious activity to the campus security office. Mulaney added that the campus safety department is available to answer any questions or concerns students may have.

The panelists also discussed the importance of building a support network among friends and acquaintances. They encouraged students to be aware of their personal safety and to take steps to protect themselves.

The panelists concluded by reminding students to stay vigilant and to always be aware of their surroundings. They emphasized the importance of taking proactive steps to protect themselves and others on campus.

Quello nominated for FCC position

WASHINGTON (UP) — Despite probable consumer group opposition, President Nixon Thursday nominated James H. Quello, a former vice president of Capital Cities Broadcasting Corp., to a seven-year term on the Federal Communications Commission (FCC).

If approved by the Senate, Quello, 69, would succeed Nicholas Johnson, a frequent critic of the broadcast industry who retired in 1972 as vice president of Capital Cities and manager of one of the company’s stations, WJR in Detroit. He is a graduate of Michigan State University.

Quello’s nomination had been rumored for weeks and several critics — including Ralph Nader, members of Congress, citizens’ consumer groups and Johnson himself — are expected to oppose it when it comes before the Senate Communications subcommittee.

It is a volume no Notre Dame fan can be without. It is a volume no football fan can do without. It is the story of Notre Dame football, covered by the magazine and the writers that were there as each chapter was unfolding. And it is the story of those kids who can’t get back to campus, call a cab,” Mulaney suggested. “The Hall Director will lend you the money.”

In any emergency situation on the Notre Dame campus, girls can phone N.D. Security. They will take the girl to the gate where SMC Security will pick her up. “Many girls have been walking because of the inefficient bus route,” Garrett explained. She has heard complaints from girls who waited at the Grotto for a bus which only passed them by.

Tapes settlement fails

WASHINGTON (UPI) - After a series of court-suggested negotiating sessions, White House lawyers and special prosecutor archibald Cox have failed to reach a settlement in the historic Watergate tapes battle.

The collapse of the negotiations, announced by both sides late Thursday, means that the two-month long constitutional dispute over possession of President Nixon's tape recordings will almost certainly have to be decided by the Supreme Court.

Cox and President Nixon's chief lawyer, Prof. Charles Alan Wright, advised the US Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia that tapes involved in the Watergate hearings - on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday - could not be released on the impasse. The appeals panel had suggested that the two sides attempt to reach an out-of-court settlement.

"I regret to advise the court that the sessions thus far have not been fruitful," Cox and Wright each wrote in separate letters addressed to the court clerk. "All participants in these conversations have agreed that we shall say nothing about them except to make this report to the court."

The dispute now reverts back to the appeals court, which will make a decision. Whichever way the court rules, the decision is certain to be appealed immediately to the Supreme Court.

Cox subpoenaed the tapes in July, shortly after their existence was disclosed at the Senate Watergate hearings. Nixon refused to comply and Cox filed suit to get them. Chief US District Judge John Sirica, who also presided at the trial of the original seven Watergate defendants in January, ordered the President to turn the tapes over to him so he could decide what portions of them, if any, should go to the grand jury. The White House then asked the appeals court to overturn Sirica's ruling and Cox asked that it be altered to order that the tapes bw delivered directly to the grand jury.

Laxity plagues communications

SVC President sets environmental plans

Even though Dr. Edward L. Henry, Saint Mary's President, resigned as the director of the Center for the Study of Local Government two years ago to accept his current position, his concerns for the environment and growth of public utilities would result in serious consequences for the utilities commission, and has warned that these consequences could well have undesirable repercussions for the electric companies and governmental bodies in Minnesota on this issue; a particular plant; a survey of criteria that should govern application and start of construction. He also recommends a 10-year rolling inventory of plant sites to be accumulated for administrative purposes. Such studies might properly be done. Henry said, by colleges and universities which would bring certain detachment and minimize political pressures for biased conclusions.

Other recommendations include a state ombudsman who would organize the testimony of environmentalists and other groups for presentation to local hearing examiners on the suitability of proposed sites and a streamlined licensing procedure.

The report includes chapters on the nature of the problem, a study of attitudes held by environmental groups, power companies and governmental bodies in Minnesota on this issue; criteria that should govern decisions regarding the location of a particular plant; a survey of current and pending legislation in states that have pionered systems to control the geographical location of power producing complexes; and 11 volumes of appendices.

The report was researched and written by Dennis Ference, former director of the CSLG and now a state legislative researcher; Dr. Dennis Kleinmasser, director of the CSLG; James Olida, head of the Rural Development Institute of the CSLG; and Dr. Henry, former CSLG director, currently president of Saint Mary's College.

A former co-worker, Richard Davis, 23, said he complained "I have never seen anything like it," said Bishop, a retired Air Force sergeant.

The Saigon center, formerly named by U.S. Army Personnel, is now under the U.S. Defense Attache Office in South Vietnam. Davis said it receives top secret and other highly classified messages from the White House and Pentagon.

Davis, 23, said he complained about the apparent security violations "approximately 100 times orally and four or five times in writing."

He was employed from Jan. 9, 1973, to June 30, 1973, at Site 662 by Federal Electric Corp. (FEC) of Parsons, N.J., which calls itself a "worldwide service associate of ITT.

Davis, who once served in Army intelligence as an enlisted man, said he decided to make his allegations public because he was concerned he would become a "scapegoat."

Davis lost his job because he was "excess to our requirements," according to an FEC document he showed UPI.

Wednesday welcomed the two German states into membership.

The delegations of 26 nations stood in the 28th annual session of the U.N. General Assembly as the German Federal Republic formally became members.

West German foreign minister Walter Scheel and East German Foreign Minister Otto Winge signed the document.

"It is an indication that tensions between nations can be peacefully resolved."

Along with newly independent Bahamas, the two Germanies were elected to membership Tuesday, raising the U.N.'s membership to 135 nations.

The black, red and gold flags of the two German states, similar in appearance had been ceremoniously hoisted outside U.N. headquarters Tuesday morning along with the black, blue and yellow banner of the Bahamas.

Sheedy award for teaching

by Paul Colgan
Staff Reporter

The Charles E. Sheedy Award for Excellence in Teaching will be awarded to Robert A. Vacc at 5 p.m. today in room 116 of the Center for Continuing Education.

A sherry hour will follow. All students and faculty are invited to attend.

The Sheedy award represents the highest honor given by students to a teacher in the College of Arts and Letters. Past recipients include Joseph Evans, Francis O'Malley, and William Storey.

A special student committee is formed every spring to choose the recipient for that year.

Mr. Vacc is an Assistant Professor of Modern Languages and has been a member of that department since 1969. He received his B.A. from Marquette University and his Ph.D. from the Committee on Social Thought at the University of Chicago.

His wife, Linnea, teaches in the English department at Saint Mary's.

Mansfield comments on investigation

'Vice-President innocent until proven guilty'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With Vice President Spiro T. Agnew reported ready to deny reports he will resign, Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield declared Thursday that Agnew should be shown Dec. 3 at 7 and 10 p.m. in the White House, Deputy Attorney General Richard L. Leonidas would consult congressional leaders of both parties if such proceedings were started.

At the White House, Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren refused to say whether Nixon wants Agnew to resign. "We will have no comment on this entire matter until the attorney general completes his work," he said. "Any comment would be improper and unfair."

But Warren rejected a Washington Post report quoting his boss as saying Agnew's resignation would give Nixon "an opportunity to set a whole new tone to the administration." Warren said it "absolutely does not reflect the thinking of the President."

The Post also quoted a key White House official as predicting Agnew would resign "in the next few weeks." Warren said this unnamed source was representing the President's view.

In a diplomatic reception the vice president attended Wednesday night, one of his friends commented: "The vice president told me he is not resigning. You can say that he said he was standing firm in face of all these charges and is going to stay in, and see the thing through."

Today or Tomorrow afternoon by 5:00 p.m.

ATLANTA (UPI) — Vice President Spiro Agnew was quoted Thursday as saying he felt as though he were "fighting a division with a platoon" in his battle to clear himself of political kickback charges.

Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter said the vice president made the statement during a telephone conversation he had with him Wednesday night. Carter said he called Agnew to cheer him on and to tell him that the vice president seemed pessimistic.

"I happened to feel (Agnew) needed a friendly voice" Carter explained. The vice president has been very accessible to the nation's governors.

Carter said Agnew told him he was "facing a very difficult situation."

"I don't have any way of knowing whether he is guilty of any charges or not," Carter said, but added he felt it was wrong to bring accusations before any evidence was produced.

A federal grand jury resumed its investigation of the case in Baltimore Thursday.

Student killed in money argument

Irish 1973: It all begins tomorrow

by Vic Dorr
Sports Editor

During his nine-year career at Notre Dame, head football coach Ara Parseghian has never known conference football. The season has never come close to having a losing season, in fact, the team has never come close to having a .500 season. He has won the National Championship twice and been the consensus number one team twice. And his teams have been ranked in the top ten on four different occasions. But despite the successes of recent years, the team's nine-month winning streak has been muted only by scores or a victory over the University of Mississippi and LSU, with a 3-0-4 record and respected an Orange Bowl invitation for the young, largely rebuilt squad.

The season has been successful up to that point, point scored with a 30-26 loss to Missouri, but after the Irish accepted the bowl invitation, Parseghian's luck has been minimal. The team has been defeated in consecutive losses to Georgia Tech, Florida State, and Ole Miss. The Irish are now winless in the SEC, with only a 2-4 record. The team is no longer rebuilding and will be ready to go again in 1974.

Miami of Florida in late November of 1972, and it gave Notre Dame an 8-1 record and secured an Orange Bowl invitation for the young, largely rebuilt squad.

The great thing about athletics, said Parseghian, "is that new challenges always lie ahead." We're a year older now, a year more mature, a year more experienced. Our biggest problem this fall has been the injury bug, and that sort of thing has handicapped us most of our pre-season drills.

"Still, I've been relatively pleased with the overall development of our defense. It's a young defense, but I believe our defense will gel before the season has gone too far. Offensively, we've been a little inconsistent this fall, and I think injuries go a long way towards explaining that. But we're hoping we'll see it there, at our advantage."

Tom Clements' surprising Northwestern Wildcats, and he'll begin it with a team which is no longer rebuilding.
