Capp, McLaughlin in run-offs

Five SLC races decided, Sirica chosen Senior Fellow

by Ken Bradford

The tickets of Ray Capp-Greg Ericksen and Pat McLaughlin-Frank Flanagan will face each other Friday in a run-off election for Student Body President and Vice-President.

In the elections yesterday Capp-Ericksen received 1110 votes to win their spot on the March 1 ballot while McLaughlin-Flanagan polled 1007 votes. The two winning tickets will have until midnight Thursday to campaign for the Friday run-off. The two tickets reached the run-offs by polling together more than 50 percent of the 3628 votes cast.

The Capp-Ericksen ticket won eleven of the voting districts with the McLaughlin-Flanagan ticket winning eight districts. The Gahagan, Oberhardt, and Rahill tickets controlled one district each, winning the home halls of each presidential candidate.

Immediately following the announcement of the election results, the tickets of Rahill-Wordal and Winarczyk-Famula announced their support of the McLaughlin-Flanagan ticket.

The largest victory margin of the election was achieved in Pangborn Hall, where McLaughlin is hall president. He scored 170 votes to Capp's 17, out of 198 valid votes cast.

The four candidates will appear at a forum at Standard-Keanan Hall tonight at 11:30. Also, the candidates have been invited to join Provost Fr. James Burtchaell on a WSND "Contact" broadcast Thursday night at 10 p.m. Plans are being made to allow students to phone in run-offs by polling to gather more than 50 percent of the vote.

"We alone of all the presidential tickets have presented a platform of researched and feasible programs that simply cannot be picked apart anymore," Capp noted.

"I would never vote for a candidate for student body president who refuses to tell you anything about what he's going to do once he is elected," he explained.

"We're new people but we're not ignorant of the ways to get things done. This is demonstrated by our thorough research and the administration's acceptance of our proposals," Capp continued.

Capp listed plans for serving the off-campus student, finding student jobs for students, special TGIF parties every Friday in La Fortune, and providing students with the information needed to understand the workings of student government.

"Because of our concrete proposals for student services, we've been labelled as simply a service organization. This is not true. We will turn our enthusiasm and determination to the area of the procurement of students' rights," Capp stated.

Pat McLaughlin and Frank Flanagan, who finished second in the primary voting, said after the final tallies were announced, that "we did better than we thought we would."

McLaughlin explained that he thought the retraction printed in The Observer concerning the controversial proposal of Capp and Ericksen to establish basketball courts in Stopen Center would hurt them more than it did. "The heart of our argument was the quote from Dr. Facenda, "that the proposals for the courts had not as yet passed the University Officers and the Business Affairs Staff. We didn't want something to be put out as definite when it was not stated McLaughlin.

He also stated in an interview after the election proceedings which were broadcast over WSND that the low key campaign style that he and Flanagan had employed had been effective.

"We wanted the word of what we were about to spread around in the halls by word of mouth. We relied very heavily on our campaign workers in each of the halls and they really came through," he claimed.

McLaughlin added that the students would have a clear choice on Friday, terming Capp a strong service orientation candidate, while rating himself moderate on service but, emphasizing strong student leadership.

Frank Flanagan added that "he was looking forward to tomorrow" to campaigning and making clear to the students the differences between the two candidates.

Upon completion of the election returns, the other candidates reacted to the totals. Andy Winarczyk issued a statement endorsing McLaughlin and Flanagan. Winarczyk said that "Pat and Frank are by far the most talented candidates available."

St. Mary's receives new visitation hours

The committee appointed by St. Mary's Board of Regents to initiate an expanded visiting hours policy has met and implemented a new visitation schedule for the spring semester. The new hours will be in effect starting Monday, March 4, and will be operative during the entire semester.

The committee, consisting of Deans of Students, Registrars, and Residential Life, has worked diligently to ensure that the new hours are convenient and conducive to the needs of both students and visitors. The new hours will allow for a longer period of visitation, providing more opportunities for students and their families to connect and stay informed.

The new visitation hours are as follows:

- Monday to Friday: 8:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.
- Saturday: 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.
- Sunday: 1:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m.

In addition to the expanded hours, the committee has made several improvements to the process, including the implementation of a new registration system and the assignment of dedicated staff to assist visitors.

Hynek reports possibility of UFOs

by Patrick Hanlin
Staff Reporter

Dr. Charles Hynek, Chairman of the Astronomy department at Northwestern University and Director of the new Center for UFO Studies last night that one out of every five UFO sightings remain unexplainable by any known scientific laws. "What we have is a lot of incredible stories told by very credible people." Hynek said in front of a capacity crowd in the Architecture Auditorium.

Hynek pointed out that "it would be almost impossible for intelligent life not to exist on any other planet but earth." Out of the 156 billion stars in the galaxy he estimated that as many as eight million might have planets with civilizations more advanced than ours.

"The big problem," Hynek stated, "is how they could get here from there. We have no way of knowing for sure what such hypothetically advanced beings could do.

Hynek who has studied UFOs since he was a consultant for the Air Force's Blue Book study in the 1940's, told of several cases which he had investigated but was unable to explain.

"There was a case in Utah last year in which a UFO supposedly left a glowing ring in a field. We analyzed soil from the ring and found it was greatly changed from just a few weeks before, it would not even absorb water like samples from a few feet away," he noted.

He also pointed out the credibility of many of the observers. "They include astronauts from Gemini 7 and Apollo 11, pilots who tracked UFO's on radar and trained scientists. Gallup polls have shown that as many as 15 million Americans believe they have seen UFOs. All of these people cannot be crooked or cracked."

When asked specifically about the possible extraterrestrial origin of UFO's Hynek said that there simply was not enough evidence to conclude anything.

"Their motions seem to show intelligence but when you consider that interstellar trips could take thousands of years it seems like they are wasting an enormous amount of time investigating us. There are really too many cases, including over 800 of supposed sightings of the creatures themselves," said Hynek.

To investigate the unexplained cases Hynek has created a Center for UFO Study staffed by scientists from universities around the country and with a nationwide information-gathering network.

"We should treat UFO's like any other scientific problem," Hynek concluded, "study the facts and do the hard research rather than burying anything we don't understand."

Advice for University offenders

Student legal aid available

by Joe LaFlare
Staff Reporter

There is now available legal aid advice to all students who are brought before the Dean of Students Office. This aid is available at the Judicial Coordinator's Office, which is located on the 2nd floor of LaFortune.

According to Mary Jude Bremer, SLC representative of District V, if the student contacts the office early, they will be able to inform the student of the options open to him/her. Bremer mentioned the options are basically two:

1) The Dean of Students, or a hearing officer appointed by the Dean of Students, may hear the case.
2) The student may choose to have the University Judicial Board hear the case.

Bremer would like to emphasize that all the information which the student provides will be strictly confidential. No files of any sort will be kept and names need not even be known. If the student wishes he can simply call the office at 6413 or preferably come over in person.

This service is for the benefit of all students. Brewer, related, and is to insure their rights as students. These Student Rights are outlined on the last two pages of the Judicial Code, which was sent to students last month by the Dean of Students Office.

The Judicial Coordinator's Office has already handled many cases and the students involved have been satisfied. "If necessary, the Office has the ability to utilize the resources of the law school," added Bremer.

A Smooth Round

Round One of the Student Body President elections was held yesterday and the tickets headed by Ray Capp and Pat McLaughlin received enough votes to enter the run-off.

Round One was distinguished by two factors. First, a high turnout of over 3600 voters. That's an increase of 300 voters over the prior round of last year's election.

The second element that distinguished Round One from past years was the excellent work and organization of Jerry Samaniego and the Election Committee. The balloting went off without a hitch. The organization provided coordinators in each hall who monitored the ballot box. It also provided for district monitors who covered each SLC District and watched for violations and complaints.

The system worked well and as of press time, no election violations or problems with the balloting were reported. The counting of the ballots was accomplished in a short time and in a very orderly fashion.

The success of the first time around is due largely to the work of Samaniego, Bill McLean and the entire Election Committee. With luck, Friday's Round Two will be run as smoothly.

A Good Hint

The advice of the Judicial Coordinator's Office that appears in today's paper is sound advice. Basically, it says that if you have disciplinary proceedings being brought against you, come to this office for help.

It serves merely as an aid to students who are having trouble with the University. If you are being brought before the Dean of Students on disciplinary reasons, before you go, make sure you know what avenues are open to you. Use this service and go in prepared.

Not Our Poll

The survey taken last night concerning the John Denver Concert supposedly in The Observer's name is fraudulent. Purportedly, we were to have been polling students by phone to determine: 1) whether you were going to attend the concert, 2) If you were taking a date, and 3) Why or why not. The Observer disclaims any such survey.

The Editorial Board
Missing Furniture

Dear Editor:

Several cushions were removed from the new couches and chairs of the Keenan Hall lobby one night a few weeks ago. Being optimistic, we at first assumed that someone had just borrowed them for some purpose and would return them. They are still missing.

It was last year that Keenan and Stanford Halls decided to refurbish their common lobby. The lobby was then only a noisy tile floor and a few pieces of shabby furniture. At one time, there had been more furniture, but over the years it had gradually been removed by those who thought it needed the couches and chairs more than the two halls did.

Both Keenan and Stanford feared that new furniture in the lobby might meet the same fate. However, in an effort to make the halls look a little more livable, in order to make the lobby a little more presentable to parents and other visitors, the two halls decided to take the chance on restocking the lobby. So last spring, wall-to-wall carpeting was laid, and this past fall new couches, chairs and tables were brought in. The furniture was strong with wire cable and bolted to the floor. Although it looked bad, at least whole couches wouldn’t be escaping in the middle of the night.

With the new furniture, suddenly students were sitting down in the lobby. Suddenly the lobby was a place to stop and have a few drinks at the beginning while we’re meeting the other beautiful people to sit and more ‘settling’ down to groove to the tunes and watch the skits, etc. In addition, we would have the added advantage of being able to drop that mild facade would ‘literate’ a worship which is even more boring than it is anticipated.

Well, I hope you’ll consider implementing these little innovations. I certainly would make your “mass” a much more meaningful experience for me, and I could contemplate the full social relevance of your abysmal profundities. Thank you for your time and right on, brother!

Peace, Love, and Happiness,
Beppo Leonard

Lithurgical Hints

Dear Editor:

I attended the twelve-fifteen “mass” at Sacred Heart Church on Sunday, and a few suggestions which the celebrant, Fr. Toobey, may find helpful occurred to me.

First of all, I think Fr. Toobey should try and engage a location which would not only the present crowd, but also the future seats to numbers which would presumably ensue. The A.C.C. would, in my opinion, be the best spot since it already has an excellent lighting; a suitable sound system and stage could easily be acquired. It would be a sort of theater-in-the-round, and there would be a more uniform dispersal of that energy (a mixture of love, humor, and an anti-social concern) which perpetually emanates from his very person.

You know, just as an aside here, I think it’s a shame that this happening which takes place weekly at Notre Dame under Fr. Toobey’s benevolent guidance has thus far gone unnoticed and failed to catch the roving eye of television talent scouts and Ted Mac’s boys. I’m sure that if it were aired nationally it would preempt the top spot in the ratings at least among the soap operas. Sam Ervin, “Happy Hour.”

Well, I hope you’ll consider this.

Thanks for your revelations, the personal reflections and experiences you did send in.

Bill Shiels, Jr.

Time for Truce

Editor:

Wednesday’s Observer carried a very perceptive opinion regarding the failure of true co-education at Notre Dame. Barry O’Neill’s description of the current social attitude as “comic” is not entirely correct but it is a little understated. What all of us are trying to do is not only not competition, it’s downright war! That this campus can become a battlefield is truly saddening. Who wins when every weekend cable calls are replaced by a wall of charade from an unidentified Zahm window? Who really loses when SMC and ND continue to feed after a few drinks because the men who invited them do not suit their select tastes?

Cattlemen, it was almost the most curious and monstrous notion of such activity was taken for granted, strange as it may sound, while I became the culprit and target of your men.

I am appalled at the language used in the recent issue, by a lady, by elder men and question its frequency.

I take offense to the abusive manner in which I was questioned and the despair expressed concerning my name.

Moreover, I believe that such incidents inflicting on the basic rights of students such as I should not be tolerated. I am sure that it is my duty to expose these misbegotten arts in your system, not calling for an answer, but rather with the hope that you can restore some common decency. I write in order to build a more effective structure.

Respectfully,
John F. O’Gara

Save Our VIP’s

Dear Editor:

After repeatedly seeing various Student Union and Student Government dignitaries gracing the front rows of such events as concerts and the recent Marcel Marceau performances, I feel that I must speak of the effect this is having and well-being of these public-spirited office holders, I would like to suggest that this may be seen in the practice of giving the above mentioned functionaries complimentary tickets for the front seats at many events. Such a practice is literally out of our eggs in one basket, for if some catastrophe were to befall the front rows of seats, such as the floodlights exploding, or the ceiling falling, or a performer making a machine gun going berserk, the elite of our Student Union and Student Government would be left.

What a terrible thing to befall the student body. No more dedicated, hard working unpaid public servants. The entire campus would be thrown into turmoil, for great fear would be our fearless leaders.

Naturally the real purpose of the students to prevent such a calamity. Therefore, I suggest that the S.U. limit the complimentary tickets they give away in the future. I believe that a very fair and easy way to accomplish this would be to sell at least some of these tickets to the public, as is the case. For large. After all, if disaster did strike, they’re only students, and at least some of them on campus will be relieved.

William A. Phillips

realize the original complaint defamed you but possibly misunderstood it. But there is no misunderstanding how disgusted you really are and if you continually compare them with cows, a while and you will find a few of us who are human and act. Party-hokey, not to mention you and more importantly, where is your compassion? Someday there will be no more party-talk as we all be SITTING alone in your rooms and I believe you don’t have a damn about your feelings either.

These words are not my private letter proving how virtuous and concerned I am. These words are supposed to be, I believe hund- reds of people share right now.

There are thousands of others capable of feeling the great need if only we show concern and understanding for each other. I am not the only one disappointed by these incidents and the many others like them. As a member of Notre Dame are some fine individuals who are very close friends; it never occurred to me to consider them enemies. These friends and casual acquaintances as well as men I’ve never met are not people who foster alienation or frustrate co-operation. There counterparts exist in the many ways and situations, just as objects to be dangled or collected, or used as some sort of measuring sticks.

These men and women realize that of being a different sex has not at a level of inferiority. They see competition as in the sexes as something artificial and unnecessary. They prize a good relationship, at whatever level two or more people choose to relate.

EVERYONE at the lagoon could speak with a more objective level than this ridiculous war that we are currently engaged in. I would say, anonymous letters that strike out left and right but in the end only serve to incite some basement writer’s bitterness, they strike out the trenches. There’s no better time than spring.

Gentlemen:

I am writing to see your letter to the Editor of the Observer. I want to thank you very much for the demonstration in the recent endeavor to control student misbehavior. I think that your action shows maturity and understanding.

We are aware that it is almost impossible for management to police student conduct in this entire facility. Student conduct in dining rooms is to be regretted. It must come within the student group itself. Your decision indicates that you are working to the positive action on improving the general situation for all students and you are very much for your approach to the problem! Your resolution is better than any I could have imagined without your help.

Thank you once again.

To probe University Accreditation teams arriving
by Chris O'Brien
Staff Reporter

From March 18 to 20, the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools will visit Notre Dame to decide whether Notre Dame retains its accreditation with the Association. "It's a standard cycle, occurring every ten years to what are called 'mature universities,'" said University Provost Fr. James Burtchall.

The North Central Association sends a team of about ten members to probe into any aspect of Notre Dame they choose. The accreditation team will examine files, talk with students and professors and attend classes as part of the process.

"We can be said concretely in advance since we don't know which departments they will choose to probe," said Fr. Burtchall. "Obviously, they cannot check an entire university of this size in three days, so they will pick different places to check.

David Sparks, director of Memorial Library, stated, "What they basically are trying to find out about the library, is whether or not you have a collection of books large enough to support your instruction. They will check such things as doctoral dissertations and master's theses which are present. They are pretty thorough.

Bernard Waldman, dean of the College of Science said, "Each college had to collect a massive list of facts and data about each department. Included are such things as minutes of college council meetings and departmental meetings.

Dean Thomas Murphy, of the College of Business Administration explained, "There is no standard procedure for the method of reaccrediting, it depends entirely on the committee. However, since the College of Business Administration, the Law School, and the Architecture School, all have their own private accrediting association, it is possible that this committee will not probe our departments too hard. But that is in the hands of the committee, we wouldn't want to say we wouldn't or could!"

The Dean of the Law School, Thomas Shaffer commented that the law school is not unaffected by the accreditation. "We expect a visit from the American Bar Association next year, so we are involved only peripherally. In fact the association is only concerned with the way we affect the undergrads," he said.

"This association is checking into the university as a whole," said Joseph Hogan. Dean of the College of Engineering. He further stated, "And when they find a problem, they will focus on it and make recommendations to us about how to prevent it or cure it."

Dean of the College of Arts and Letters, Frederick Crosson remarked, "These committees usually probe into five basic areas: finance, student affairs, the library, the curriculum, and governance of the university. Really all we can do is provide the statistics for them and then wait for them to come to us."

"A good team will talk to you why you are doing what you are, why you are different from other universities, and other questions along those lines," he continued. The association is important to students because it guarantees that the school is 'licensed.' It provides students with the knowledge that a particular school maintains certain minimum standards.

Crosson is himself a member of the North Central Association, as is Hogan. Dean Murphy is a past member of the association.

Crosson said about his membership, "It is most helpful to me because when I go out to other colleges, I learn about mistakes that we want to avoid, and also about improvements we could use here.

Murphy calls the reaccreditation process an excellent medium for an "interchange of ideas." Fr. Burtchall agreed, "The thing is to make sure, healthy, because people who are unused to Notre Dame and therefore have a fresh look at the place and we get new comments on how to improve our university."

Von Braun to give lecture
Dr. Wernher Von Braun, who pioneered the development of rockets and played a significant role in the United States' space program for 25 years, will speak at 8 p.m. Friday, March 1, at the CCE auditorium. Currently vice-president-engineering and development with Fairchild Industries, Dr. Von Braun served with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) until 1972. From 1970-1972, Dr. Von Braun was NASA's deputy associate administrator responsible for planning efforts for future United States space missions.

The German born scientist directed NASA's George C. Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Alabama from 1960-1972. During his term as director, the center developed launch vehicles for all U.S. space flights including the manned lunar landing program and developed the manned space station Skylab and the Lunar Roving Vehicle, which provided transportation for two astronauts on the lunar surface. In addition, the center began studies on advanced space transportation systems (Shuttle ).

Dr. Von Braun began experimenting with rockets as a student assistant to Prof. Hermann Oberth of the Berlin Institute of Technology in 1930. In 1934, he received his Ph. D. in physics from the University of Berlin. His rocket research led to a position with the German Ordnance Department and he served as director of the German army portion of the Rocket Center at Peenemunde until 1965. There he directed the team of researchers which developed the V-2 rocket of World War II fame. Dr. Von Braun and his colleagues surrendered to the U.S. Army in 1945 and came to the United States to direct high altitude firings of the V-2 at the White Sands (New Mexico) Missile Range. From 1960-1960 he was associated with the U.S. Navy's Ordnance Department at Huntsville, Ala.

Improvements planned for Angela

by Tom Russo

Staff Reporter

Plans are being finalized to improve the flow of traffic at the congested intersection at Michigan Street (U.S. 31) and Angela Blvd., according to Rollin E. Farrand, Director of the Department of Public Works of South Bend.

The proposed improvement requires the acquisition of a strip of land approximately 12 feet wide and 400 feet long, presently part of the Notre Dame golf course, to be used as a right turn lane.

"A contract will be signed with Notre Dame this spring at the beginning of construction season," said the department's traffic engineer. "The project should be complete this summer in time for the upcoming football season."

Father Jerome Wilson, Notre Dame's President for Business Affairs, said that the Department of Public Works will replace the old tms which presently lie on the property and move the fence along the golf course in exchange for the small parcel of land.

"Often you have to wait through four lights going west on Angela," commented Father Wilson. "Hopefully people will leave Notre Dame in a little better frame of mind if they don't have to wait so long."

South Bend's traffic engineer stated that the worst congestion is caused by vehicles turning from west-bound Angela to south-bound Michigan. To correct this, Angela will be divided into four lanes in each direction: right turn, straight, left turn, and opposite direction. A wider turn radius will be constructed on the north east and southwest corners to improve traffic flow. Right turn lanes will also be constructed on Michigan St.

The average daily volume on Michigan St. is 34,000 vehicles, according to department sources.

The intersection has an above average accident rate, most of which involve turning turns. Definite plans have been discussed with Notre Dame since last June. "The University has been very cooperative," commented Mr. Farrand.

SLC positions determined

off Friday for the SLC representative from the fourth district, released the following statement: "I want to thank all the residents of the fourth district for their desire and interest in being elected to vote for me today. I am thankful for their support and I hope they will support me again on Friday."

Joe Fiorella responded by stating, "I am happy to be in it. I feel I've got a very good chance. The person who gets Chuck Wilson's vote will win."

Sullivan had polled 255 votes to Fiorella's 199. President for the upcoming football season."

In the election for Senior Class Fellow, Judge John Sinica received the top spot with 255 votes. Elliot Richardson took second place with 170 votes and Groucho Marx finished third, fourth, and fifth respectively.

The acceptance procedure will begin immediately with the top candidate being notified and given a chance to claim the honor. If the candidates declines the highest vote-getter is contacted until a Senior Fellow is determined.

Big A: An upclass freshman by Greg Cogan

They claim he's only a freshman, but to the fans he has gone scurrying through their programs during a game just to get his name in the record book.

But while they find him hard to sort out, the fans can see a major college basketball arrival on the horizon.

"I want to make sure that I have a chance to develop and have the confidence in myself," he says.

"From watching Notre Dame last year, I know that Pat, "I worked with the J.V.'s for the first time I could. I knew that Pat, "I worked with the J.V.'s for the first time I could. I knew that Pat, "Frohman," a senior and a big man, could help me considerably in the first month as a defensive men.

The key to getting enough players for the school, Fremont in High School, under pressure his role, but an Irish veteran all year, and his current 14.3 points and 9.4 rebounds per game averages bear out this one for me: to go to his school, and this impressed me."

I hope to play against University of California, Los Angeles, in the regional this weekend, but Shu influenced me."

"I've got to work more on my stamina and my endurance, and during the summer this is what I'll be concerned with: I'll also work on being quicker on my feet."

"I'm playing like I should be playing, and I'm more relaxed now. At the beginning I was thinking a lot and worrying about where I'm at, and I'm just going out there and playing my game."

"One person who helped Danley, with his decision was his mother, and she said very clearly to me: "I'm an only child," says A.D. "All I've been alone with for all my life."

"Most importantly," he continues, "I'm going to try to be a good student, and I'm going to try to be a good person."

"For Adrian, basketball wasn't as much of a part of his life. In fact, he didn't play the sport until he was 17 years old. But Still, playing enjoyed basketball, and more interested in basketball, and that's why I've liked to play basketball."

"It's tough for a freshman to adjust here academically whereas it's not bad academically. But even though I agree there shouldn't be a one-and-done rule, I wouldn't have come here if they weren't following the rule, even if it would have been a good opportunity to come to Notre Dame."

"Irish are glad they followed Novitzki rule, but an especially too, especially of late. In his last two ball games, for instance, the big A has really come through a split second and let the puck in front of the shot at the right time and distance."

"I've had 300 scholarship offers," said Pat. "I had no trouble at all deciding to go to Notre Dame."

"Shumate, Clay, and Brok have definitely helped me in the transition, especially Shamrock because we're pretty close."

"And I've been alone with my mother all my life. She's been a big help to me whenever I was trying to decide what school is come to. She knew what was best for me, and she didn't lie to herself. She was glad I picked Notre Dame although she was worried about me going away and being alone, but now I think she's happy I came here."

"I'm playing with more confidence now," offered Adrian. "I'm playing like I should be playing, and I'm more relaxed now. At the beginning I was thinking a lot and worrying about where I'm at, and I'm just going out there and playing my game."

"I'm not going to sound cocky or arrogant, but I'm going to try to adjust and have the confidence in myself."

"I hope to play against University of California, Los Angeles, in the regional this weekend, but Shu influenced me."

"I've got to work more on my stamina and my endurance, and during the summer this is what I'll be concerned with: I'll also work on being quicker on my feet."

"Opposing coaches don't delight in the prospects of having to face an even quicker Danley, but Adrian works for the team as well as himself, and when he speaks of an eventual rematch with the Bruins of UCLA, he displays un-freshman-like confidence.

"If we play in the finals and do everything the way coach Phelps wants us to do it, instead of being driven down the line, then we can whip 'em."

"For Adrian Danley confidence is the name of his game, and a far rooker, so far, he's made it pay off.
