WAKE ticket sale to be held

A second batch of Irish Wake tickets will go on sale Wednesday, April 3 and Thursday, April 4 between 5:00 and 6:30 pm in the North, South and SMC dining halls. The price for the function is set at $4.

Wake officials announced that there will be a "special" for off-campus students only. On Wednesday, April 3 between 11:30 and 1:00 pm there will be a limited amount of tickets available for off-campus students.

Each student must present an ND or an SMC I.D. at the time of purchase and there will be a limit of one ticket per person.

Wally Gasior, An Tostal Coordinator, announced that Kevin O'Neill's oldies will be the second set during the breaks between the rock sounds of Windjammer. Gasior also apologized for the limited amount of tickets for the Wake and explained saying, "This is the only way we could get the Wake approved."

Commenting on the success of the Wake, Gasior said, "We are pleased that the student's expectations are running high for the Wake and we are working hard to make it a success." Gasior then added, "We hope all of the students will enjoy themselves."

If the Wake's 450 tickets are sold out on Wednesday, there will be no sales on Thursday. Gasior also emphasized that there will be no ticket sales at the door and only male-female couples will be allowed to enter.

Don Nixon to testify in case

NEW YORK (UPI) — President Nixon's brother F. Donald Nixon Sr. will testify in the Mitchell-Slams trial this week.

The first time a member of the Nixon family has appeared under oath in connection with any of the allegations against Nixon administration officials.

Donald Nixon was called as a prosecution witness and will appear before the government rests its conspiracy case against former cabinet members John N. Mitchell and Maurice B. Slans this week.

Turin Bicycle People

Some people say Turin Bicycle has the largest selection of custom racing and touring bicycles and accessories in America. We don't know if that's true, but we do know we carry an awful lot of names: Cinelli, Colnago, Malaguti, Pignal, De Rosa, and Cinelli. From England: Bob Jackson, Henschel, Mercian, Raleigh and Carlton. From France: Motobecane. From the USA: Ernestine, Sterling, Bob Meyers, and Yellow Jersey. And more— from Japan: Honda, Germany, and Argentina. What's more, our bike experts together have more than 100 years of experience behind them, so you can count on the best possible advice and help.

Lally predicts crackdown against streakers

by Pat Flynn
Staff Reporter

"If the streaking craze continues much longer on campus, students will force other administrators to take action," vowed Father Vincent Lally this week in an interview with the Observer.

Lally continued, "The students must see that some persons and communities take this type of thing quite seriously. Already we have had complaints from other students, who consider this type of behavior boorish and infantile, and who are offended by it. We have also had complaints from other persons connected with the University who are also offended by it."

"Before semester break, one streaker apparently used by his streak walk by a group visiting the university. The group was very badly offended by the action," added Lally.

Lally pointed out that Indiana law (Notre Dame regulations) states inclusion of indecent exposure in a public place or in any place where other persons offended or annoyed thereby. The Guidelines on University Life (Notre Dame regulations) states that any serious disturbance of the University community infringing on the rights and well being of others is strictly prohibited. "To leave streaking go on as if unimportant, would blow away as quickly as it began. But now it seems to have become more extensive," Lally reflected.

"I think that as this phenomenon of streaking continues, and becomes more widespread at colleges all over, we are forced as a community to take a look at it," he continued from a more ethical standpoint. "Is it just a fun event or is it a kind of 'monkey see monkey do' thing in which social pressure is exerted on certain students to continue this type of behavior?"

Lally concluded the interview or a lighter note: "If the students want to continue this type of 'monkey see monkey do' behavior into September, I hope they have bodies good enough to stand the test."

Rev. James T. Burcheall, Provost of the University, has announced that beginning September 1, Rev. James P. Flanagan, associate professor of art, will serve as chairman of the art department. Father Flanagan will succeed Dr. Thomas S. Fern, who joined the art faculty as chairman in 1967.

Father Flanagan received his baccalaureate and master's degrees from Notre Dame and his M.P.A. from George Washington University in Washington, D.C., in 1965. He also did advanced work at Corcoran School of Art in Washington.

"This position should give me more direct contact with the students," said Fr. Flanagan. "Though I have had contact through my figure drawing classes and as assistant rector of Alumni Hall, the position of Associate Vice President of Student Affairs does not allow one to be in close contact with the students."

Fr. Flanagan has become familiar with the Notre Dame Art Department, having taught a figure drawing course for the last eight years which he will continue to do this fall. The new chairman plans to speak privately with all the faculty of the department and see what they have to offer in the way of improvement. However, he does not foresee any major changes in the department.

"Things are going well at the moment and I hope to see things continue," noted Fr. Flanagan. The major problem that Fr. Flanagan will inherit with his new position is that the department is scattered among four separate buildings. We hope to acquire the old field house," said Fr. Flanagan. This way we can have our facilities in one physical location and then we

New Bard Film Class Organized

As a spin off of the successful Shakespeare film series last semester, English Prof. Paul A. Rathburn asked for and received permission to teach a special Shakespeare film course during the summer session.

"The course is focused on the special problems faced by modern film-makers in adapting Shakespeare to the screen," said Rathburn. "The class will meet three times each week during the six weeks of session to discuss the play itself, once to view the film adaptation of the play, and finally to discuss the 'play-film' as a new art form, and unique teaching aid."

In correlation with the course, the English department will present a Summer Shakespeare Film Series.

Rathburn has scheduled the following six films: Franco Zeffirelli's Taming of the Shrew on June 26, Zeffirelli's Romeo and Juliet on July 3, Tony Richardson's Hamlet on July 10, Laurence Olivier's Henry IV on July 17, Roman Polanski's Macbeth on July 24 and Peter Brook's King Lear on July 31.

All films will be presented at 7:00 and 9:00 p.m. in the Engineering Auditorium except King Lear which will be shown at Washington Hall. Rathburn hopes that faculty members and students in the South Bend area will take advantage of the free Summer Shakespeare Film Series.

In addition to the film series, members of Rathburn's class have access to video-tapes of four other films. These are Joseph Papp's controversial Much Ado About Nothing, James Earl Jones' King Lear, Lawrence Olivier's Merchant of Venice, and John Barrymore's unsuccessful test film for Hamlet.

Rathburn's three credit course will meet on Tuesday and Thursday from 1:00 to 2:30 p.m. in addition to the evening viewings session.

Bank Your Blood

Successful blood drives have recently become a custom on the Notre Dame campus. This semester’s version will premiere tomorrow and run through Friday. The students, faculty, and administration members who donate an hour or so of their time and a pint of their blood are the stars of the show. It’s a benefit performance for all donors and volunteers, and the benefits are for all of us.

This semester the three day drive has three different acts. On Wednesday, donors will have the chance to help two Chicago children who suffer from hemophilia. In addition, donors will receive Red Cross blood benefits for six months.

On Thursday, the Fort Wayne Red Cross chapter will collect blood for Red Cross supplies and donors will receive blood benefits for one year. And on Friday, as on the other days, donors will be driven to the South Bend hospital blood bank, where they can contribute to the Notre Dame Fund, which provides blood for any member of the ND community who needs it.

So the script is finished, and although the plot is familiar, it is still an excellent production. This blood drive deserves the strong support of the ND community. Once again, let’s make sure the reviews are favorable.

The Images of Notre Dame

Where do you go to school? Notre Dame
Oh yeah? Great place to be from!

Ain’t it the truth...with Number One and Knute Rockne and Golden Dome and religion and the when star studied and the but in approaching this glorious monster one is urged to caution...the distinctive public image of Notre Dame generates a real problem. Image is a frightening and evasive thing that makes its objectives ambiguous to the point where it rests its power on itself and in our case it does a great job (the subways alumni). Yet behind that image lies something else, call it the reality, the truth or whatever, that students must deal with. And therein lies the problem. The Notre Dame image is not based in student experience, in the roles of spectator. How fulfilling is the role of spectator? It’s as if the quality of Chicago’s professional athletic teams gives any indication of what’s it’s like to live there. Similarly, Notre Dame’s Catholicity exerts no real influence over the way life is lived here. Besides the Catholic background of most students and the rectors in each hall, what does it mean that Notre Dame is Catholic? Princeton has its C-Press in The Wall Street Journal article said, “A Catholic university emphasizes moral leadership, commitment to justice, integrity and honor. If so, did any indication of what’s it’s like to live there. Similarly, Notre Dame’s Catholicity exerts no real influence over the way life is lived here. Besides the Catholic background of most students and the rectors in each hall, what does it mean that Notre Dame is Catholic? Princeton has its C-Press in The Wall Street Journal that deals with Notre Dame within the boundaries of its image and students justifiably feel that something is left out. They are not getting the real Notre Dame as seen and Notre Dame as lived. The tragedy is that practical Catholics who fall to the previous image, which results in the natural demand to deliver the goods. “Here I am Golden Dome Lay it on me!” So we come here and expect Notre Dame to provide its glory and thus we sit back and wait and wait and wait.

There is an amazing undercurrent of sadness and loneliness here, but people stay on resigned to waiting for what Notre Dame will give them later. It’s a long time to wait for a rich career. It’s a long time to wait for a quality of life. It’s a long time to wait for a quality of life. Which is not to say that that’s bad - that Notre Dame prepares its students well for significant careers is a nice thing, but it’s not the only thing. While all back home who say we should get rid of the Catholic schools because they’re not producing any Catholics. Finally, Notre Dame’s academic excellence is fact as well as image, yet this fails to set it off from many other schools.

So the student comes to this school called Notre Dame, with its glamorous public image, and he finds its not so special after all because the Notre Dame image is not based in student experience, in the life that it is lived here. Then an article appears like the one in The Wall Street Journal that deals with Notre Dame within the boundaries of its image and students justifiably feel that something is left out. There are no indications of the “Image Gap” - the distance between Notre Dame as seen and Notre Dame as lived. The tragedy is that practical Catholics who fall to the previous image, which results in the natural demand to deliver the goods. “Here I am Golden Dome Lay it on me!” So we come here and expect Notre Dame to provide its glory and thus we sit back and wait and wait and wait.

There is an amazing undercurrent of sadness and loneliness here, but people stay on resigned to waiting for what Notre Dame will give them later. It’s a long time to wait for a rich career. It’s a long time to wait for a quality of life. Which is not to say that that’s bad - that Notre Dame prepares its students well for significant careers is a nice thing, but it’s not the only thing. While all back home who say we should get rid of the Catholic schools because they’re not producing any Catholics. Finally, Notre Dame’s academic excellence is fact as well as image, yet this fails to set it off from many other schools.

It can change. If the students who live here and know what it’s really like get the message out to future Doners that Notre Dame doesn’t give you anything, that you have to do it for yourself, then it will begin to change. That special image the public harbors will leave you colder than the South Bend winters. Anything you get will take effort. There’s a tremendous opportunity to make this place Golden yet, but it hasn’t been tried. Tell them that.

Then maybe “The Image Gap” won’t be such a devastating effect. Then maybe Notre Dame won’t be floored by the image Notre Dame won’t be floored by the image Notre Dame won’t be floored by the image. The image seduced, the ones with great expectations, who later drown themselves in books, beer, loneliness or the fortunes of the athletic teams when the discover “The Image Gap.” Then maybe Notre Dame students will begin to invest some of their own creative energy to redeem the present, to make Notre Dame not only a great place to be from, but a great place to be. As Joni Mitchell writes: “Things that you held high. And told yourself were true - Lost or changing as the days come down to you - It all comes down to you.”
If you have been attending the Sewell seminars and have attended this lecture you know the warm,human personality of Elizabeth Sewell. Her exuberance for and love of words characterizes her lectures.

Elizabeth Sewell explored "Magic as Poetic Mode" throughout her seminar. She commented, "The central powers are not the one we have been thinking of, the powers of your imagination." Sewell believes people must free themselves from their own Twentieth century universe and start constructing another universe. The Universe. She believes that with the imagination one can become more fully aware of his relation to another universe.

Elizabeth Sewell investigates the nature of the cosmos in her own poetry. She is like a scientist. Both the poet and the scientist make their discoveries through leaps and bounds. Sewell states, "The life of thinking isn't separate from the life of action."

Sewell's poems take a look at the universe within and without. They strive to see more of the whole of the universe. Her poem, "The Transformations of Love," shows us the unity of man and the universe and the harmony of that union.

"Till at your kiss only the cosmos hung
And every atom moved out of his place
Making such consort
That the elements cry out in new align­

Deep dark places where moral decisions are made, the University can make no rules. At the same time there is a need for us to go on record as saying that there are certain things we believe in—not because of arbitrary moral standards of the Church but from our own human experience. We know that these things lead to deep suffering.

Take, for example, the 18 or 19 year old couple who sleep together. There is a consequence for the things they do. One consequence, of course, if that the girl may get pregnant. And this leads to other decisions—whether the girl should have the baby; whether the couple should marry even though they are not ready for it. So she decides to have an abortion and, again, the thing is not ended with the surgeon's knife. People live to have nightmares for years after this kind of thing.

Toohey: Griff, that reminds me of something you said the other day. It was to me, the loneliness that people are concerned with the life of the students who are in care.

Griffin: When you start talking about human sexuality and Notre Dame it always sounds like you’re talking about the rules which the University has in this whole area. You find yourself defending the rules, or expected to do so. But that isn’t the point. If there is some reason for the rules, then we should be able to argue for them not just from some sort of official point of view but because we are people who are concerned with the life of the students who are in our care.

Toohey: Griff, that reminds me of something you said the other day. It was to me, the loneliness that people are concerned with the life of the students who are in care.

Griffin: Yes, we have a fifty something year old man who just handed down the Ten Commandments on plates. I suspect that the Commandments represent more than the word of God through human experience. So, for example, people who are questioning the area of human sexuality will ask, "Is this a sin?" or "Is that a sin?" as though it would be all right to do this and that, but they don’t see well that these things are self-destructive. Therefore, I think we need to ask about a man’s relationship with his male friends on campus and with girls, or a woman’s relationship with other women and men.

Toohey: I think students want relationships to be genuine and honest, not phony. On the other hand, they don’t want this because it hurts to be real to another person, to open up. I think that this is the only principle that appeals to students, that what I’m doing from the most casual kind of contact to the deepest contact is consistent with the reality of my relationship with the other person.

McTaggart: Yes, that’s the issue. What you’re talking about is the main thing that is going to exist when one leaves here regardless of what oppressive or unoppressive situation exists at the University.

Toohey: I agree that we don’t have to apologize for norms. But we have to talk about them. I think we can learn to appreciate the tremendous range of variation that exists in the spectrum on anonymous sex where the girl becomes a sex object. In this case sex is simply a form of recreation much cheaper than bowling if you get someone who is willing. On the other end of the spectrum is a couple whose relationship is growing, who may be quite close to marriage. By sleeping together they’re saying, "We’re two in one flesh, we’re united, we’re one." But they’re not and so what they are doing is not consistent with the reality of their relationship. But it’s still much less culpable, psychologically speaking, from the pick-up kind of thing where the relationship is non-existent.

Stella: I heard a husband and father of seven children say once that he didn’t know a lot about sex. I think that’s true for me, too. But one thing I do know is that what they are doing is not consistent with the idea that the married plans of getting themselves involved in destructive things. So it might be better if you went to a place where it is better to get married to others around you because of the moral choices you make.

Students eligible for Food Stamp Program

by Dan Baker

The Food Stamp Program enables low-income households to buy more food for the same amount of money, an amount based on household size and net monthly income, and receive a larger value of food stamps, which can be spent like money at grocery stores. Even students can qualify for this federal aid program.

To be eligible, a household, may be considered a gain or benefit. Expenses include rent, utilities, tuition, and medical bills.

The monthly coupon allotment and purchase requirement varies, but a household of one would get up to $82 worth of food stamps.

The student must follow the same procedure as any other Food Stamp applicant. He should contact the local office in the City-Country Building in South Bend to complete an application form and be interviewed. He should have all the necessary papers showing where he lives, how many are in the household; how much income they have, and how much they are paying in expenses. Important papers include bank statements, school bills, and lease contracts. The student ID card is necessary to prove that the student has no meal validation with the university dining hall.

Food Stamps are received through the mail on a monthly basis. Each applicant maintains his requirement payment. Thus the monthly payment can prevent waiting in line again at the Food Stamp office. After the first month of getting stamps, a notarized statement of financial contribution must be signed by parents of students receiving stamps. There is no set amount of stamps allotted for any particular community; thus a student getting stamps would not be denying the poorer people of South Bend from acquiring the food subsidy benefits.

Do the people who need food stamps know about the program? Actually there is no way of finding out. Caseworkers investigate the stamp recipients, but there is no agency to inform people about the program.

Caseworker Randy Rider elaborated, "The people involved in the system, the welfare recipients, they are pretty much aware of it, in fact, they know about as much as we do as to what they can and can't do. I imagine there are a lot of borderline people that would be eligible and do not know about it."

These resources include such liquid assets as cash on hand, in bank or other savings institutions, U.S. Savings Bonds, stocks and bonds, and such other valuable items as jewelry, furniture, and certain real or personal property. Each household is allowed up to $1,500 in resources. The following resources are not considered for eligibility: home, car, life insurance policies, and income representing real estate. Usually household members must either be working or seeking employment, but this requirement is waived for students.

If a household meets these eligibility qualifications, the Food Stamp Agency must determine the monthly allotment of food stamps. The general formula is income minus expenses.

Income is any money received by all members of a household, including wages, support payments, scholarships, educational grants, fellowships, dividends, interest, and all other payments from any source which

Prof. Bellis to lecture on archeological finds

by Judy Peterson
Staff Reporter

The series entitled "The University of Notre Dame’s Archeological Field School Excavations in Marshall County, Indiana," will be presented by Professor James Bellis of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology, Wednesday, 8:00 p.m. in rm 115, O’Shaughnessy. The slide-lecture presentation will give students an opportunity to view the results of two years of field excavation in Northern Indiana.

(specifically the Rouch Site) and to register for this year’s six week session.

The course is offered for six credit hours and instructs students in the following areas: excavation techniques, field record and note-taking, watching, cataloging, and basic sorting and analysis of artifacts recovered, the use of survey and mapping instruments, and photographic techniques in the field, laboratory, and in the darkroom.

In 1973 the course was funded by the Lilly Endowment of Indiana, providing scholarship grants for students. This year the cost will be approximately $500.00 per student, unless Bellis can find other sources to fund the project.

The Rouch Site, which was primarily utilized by prehistoric man as a workshop area for manufacturing tools and weapons, was chosen because it provides excellent insight into the lives and habits of prehistoric man. Bellis described the site as a "culture contact zone" because in any given area you can see materials which indicate that the area was used continually from 5,000 years ago up to the time of European contact with the Indian cultures."

Bellis stressed the fact that the dig is purely a study of prehistoric man, not a money-making scheme. He said, "If you define archeology as the study of prehistoric behavior and not as a search for goodness, then it is apparent that here we have been able to reconstruct a great deal of the activities of the prehistoric people’s who inhabited the region."

Bellis wants to continue the project in future years, expanding to other points in the vicinity of the Rouch Site, in hopes of gaining an overall view of prehistoric man in Northern Indiana and Michigan.

He concluded, "We haven’t been able, at this site alone, to get a total picture of prehistoric man’s attitudes anymore than you could today look at one spot of a modern community and re-construct a total picture of its life-style."

Sign-up books stolen from SMC in protest of policy

According to the student on desk duty, who asked to remain anonymous, the three approached the main desk at about 9:15, asked to use the telephone, and were directed to the public phone in the lobby. The girl then returned to watching television until she heard the sound of "books slamming" and looked up in time to see the three take off in a car and the sign-out books missing.

"I didn’t see them take the books because I had my back turned to the counter. Then I heard the noise and chased them to the door, but they got away in a car. They left a bag with a note on it saying, ‘This is not an April Fool’s joke’ and that it was a protest of the S. M. C. policy.

The identity of the students is not known but it is believed they were Notre Dame students.
Rick Slager, doing double duty on courts, gridiron

by John Fismier

Rick Slager proved no different than other athletes at Notre Dame when he first came here in 1971. There have been times when he would have had to decide between tennis—where he currently is a national champion— and football. As he says, "I'd never any doubt in Slager's mind when he decided what he wanted to do first."

The sophomore from Columbus, Ohio, has decided to play both sports, but only he knows the degree that tennis doesn't interfere with his football chores. As he says, "I can't cut in on football and that's what I really want to do."

"As soon as football starts, I feel obligated to play," he says. "You can't miss spring practice, especially if you are a quarterback. Perhaps if I played another position, I could."

But both coaches have been cooperative. I am sure I mess up Coach Fallon's plans, but he has really cooperated. As for Coach Parseghian said he would allow me to play tennis here. In fact, he gave me permission to go to Wisconsin with the tennis team during the next weekend of spring practice, but I decided not to go. As it turned out, it rained here that weekend.

You would think that combining two sports at Notre Dame would be difficult, but Rick does not agree. Slager carries a 3.1 academically. "It isn't too hard to mix football and tennis."

Fellows named All-American

by Joe Wilkowski

Freshman epeeist Ed Fellows is one of many talented quar- terbacks seeking to backup Clements. However, there was a number one position in the nation with a 9-2 effort. This should really make us strong in foil, had a bad round Thursday against the bottom half of the pool, but he put it all together on the first day, closing with a 7-5 feature the top players of both the North and South Quads in action against each other. Their finish was good enough for a tie for fourth place, but on the basis of points he was dropped to 10th.

The Interhall Hockey All-Star Game will be played tonight in the A.C.C. at 8 p.m. The game will feature the top players of both the North and South Quads in action against each other. Their finish was good enough for a tie for fourth place, but on the basis of points he was dropped to 10th.

But the bubble burst, as they say, and this time the squad had left, Slager was not only travelling—he was the number-one player.

So far this season, Slager is 5-4, but the squad is 7-4. The number-one position is the toughest one for any player, but Rick was competitive, if not superb and a little bit unlucky in California.

"The only match I lost badly in California was against Southern California," he reflects. "But the UCLA match the previous day really drained me."

Against the Bruins top man, Slager went to two tie-breaking sets before finally surging 6-4, 6-7, 6-7. Slager had his problems in tie-breaking sets losing five in the six match matches around the quads on Fridays before home games, it really gets to you. "And I like that way. To me, Notre Dame is the ideal school—first academically and then athletically."

There was a lot of pressure on Slager when he went to hometown Ohio State. Some of the pressure was directed at Slager's father, an Ohio State grad who, like his son, combined a pre-med major with both tennis and football. However, Rick fell no pressure at all from his father when Steameo finally made the decision. "My father was recruited by Leach," he continues, "and he always wanted to come here. Even though he is an Ohio State grad, I really think that he was happy that I wanted to come here."

"And I am happy I came. The greatest moment for me here was the Sugar Bowl locker room. I wish everyone could have been there. I think every player felt that it was his effort that made the difference in the game. Everyone felt he contributed to that one. There was something special about last year's team."

"I can be the same this year," he finishes. "We have everything it takes and more—experience. The only thing to hold us back this year is attitude, and I think Coach Parseghian can control that."

Rick Slager might not yet be a winner on the tennis court, but he might not be the first-string quarterback. But with his winning attitude, Notre Dame's two sports can only benefit. It is just a matter of time, and time in this case is where Rick Slager finds it.
