Carney '74
Freshman orientation concluded

by Valerie Zurdis

Carney '74, the freshman orientation wrap-up, was held on the South Quad with its traditional outdoor items: refreshments, games, and refreshments. The games at this year's carnival included the dart throw, football pass through a tire swing, a frisbee throw for distance, and accuracy, and a water balloon toss. Popcorn, cotton candy, snow cones, and helium balloons were available. The Irish Green Blues Band and WSND provided musical entertainment.

Highlighting the campus social was University President Father Theodore Hesburgh in his yearly address to the students. He expressed his thoughts on the Notre Dame students changing the world.

"It is always a great feeling to stand on this mall and see so many of you, and I can't help but think that in this group there are people who are going to change the world," he commented.

Then Fr. Hesburgh recalled the past summer when freshman Boni Burton was killed in an auto accident. He told the crowd about a letter she had written to her parents last semester.

"Last year was the greatest year in her life, because she could be herself. She didn't have to be a phony cookie-cutter type that was turned out by the dozen. She could be loved and cared for by a lot of people around her," he continued.

Fr. Hesburgh stressed Boni's thought of "becoming somebody" as a theme for starting the year at Notre Dame. He told the students to "be somebody that is you, and somebody that is going to make the world a little bit different."

At the conclusion of his speech, Fr. Hesburgh said, "I like to think that this group of Notre Dame people is one of the great hopes as I look out to the world today with its million problems. All of these problems can be handled if each one of us tries to do something. You can change the world if you want to."

Student Body President, Pat McLaughlin also made an appearance at Carney '74. A key point in his speech was that the Birch Bayh organization has said that students can register to vote in their home state and Indiana as long as they vote in only one state per year.

McLaughlin is also looking into bussing students to Michigan and a wholesale food program for off-campus students. Also, a coffeehouse will tentatively open September 15 in LaFortune's Rathskellar.

The winners of the 1974 WSND "Name that Tune" contest were announced. First place was Mike "Tunes" Murphy, second Marge Meagher, and third Rob Sobanski. Prizes were gift certificates to Gilbert's, Mark Grove and Mary Iden, co-chairmen for Carney '74, said the carnival went "surprisingly well. The weather held up and everyone seemed to be enjoying themselves," stated Iden.

Other activities in this year's orientation included movies and a concert at Stopen center, campus tours, activities day and activities night.

"The transfer program was most extensive," stated Grove. "A special off-campus housing office was set up to aid the transfers and also a breakfast and picnic."
Students persuade legislators

by Paul Young
Staff Reporter

A change in the new alcohol regulations affecting the Notre Dame community must be sparked by the students, according to University Counsel Phillip Facenda and law school professor David Link.

Facenda stated in an Observer interview that "intelligent student protest to local legislatures is a way to change the law." He also suggested local legislators dependent on student votes must be inclined to listen to such arguments.

The University Counsel added that these student efforts might be coordinated with administrative efforts to change the situation. The administration, he stated, "could not make a public argument since its position of administrative responsibility and compliance to state law would not allow it."

However, he implied, in private that some intrudes might be made by the administration if life at Notre Dame was adversely affected by the new regulations. In the meantime, Facenda continued, "the students should be making their own argument and the faculty should be helping the students."

In any conversation with state officials covering the alcohol issue, Facenda stressed, "I can't say that the students are all stirred up, that the faculty's upset, that it's affecting our whole curriculum and say it effectively without the results to back it up."

Link commented that student involvement could play a big role in any change of alcohol regulations. He urged students to "find out what the law is and whether it stands for what the students of the university want." "If it needs to be changed," he continued, "the students should formulate a well reasoned argument as to why the law is ineffective or inappropriate."

Link admitted that the administration is still "in the early stages of finding out exactly what the law requires of the student and the university." He also stated optimistically, however, that the "law is a living document to adjust with the times."

Class formal featured

A class formal and the traditional Junior Parents Weekend will highlight the year for the class of '76 according to Angie Grace, class president.

The formal, to be held this semester, will give off campus in Michigan, is being planned by co-chairwoman Betty Kall and Sue Caranci. They are still looking for more volunteers. Other first semester activities include showing the Movie "Catch 22" Sept. 13 and 14 and a bus trip to the Northwestern game Sept. 21.

"Those who are considering the trip," Grace said, "should contact Greg Marino, new class treasurer, since only a few tickets are left. Perhaps we can get another bus if enough people contact us early enough."

Pat Boyle has been appointed Parents Weekend chairman and has the aid of the sub-committee chairpeople, but "more help is always welcome," Grace said. A relay road race will also be held during the second semester and the juniors plan to work on a bicentennial program with the University Committee.

InPIRG reveals yearly activities

InPIRG Treasurer Mark Clark yesterday estimated that 13,000 dollars was contributed to the group via the three dollar addition to student tuition bills. Clark stated that this constituted about a 70 per cent response from the student body. This contribution will go to InPIRG state headquarters in Indianapolis. Most of these funds will be used for legal fees and for the state-wide staff.

$1,500 to $2,000 will be funneled back to Notre Dame InPIRG and will be used primarily for communication, transportation, printing and office expenses. InPIRG, Indiana Public Interest Research Group, is basically a student organization interested in no, only the Notre Dame, but also the South Bend community, reported Board Member Andrew Burner. Organized at Notre Dame last spring, the group was successful in obtaining 60 per cent of student signatures in order that the three dollar addition be made to student bills. This past summer they were incorporated into the state-wide organization.

Other schools involved in the consumer oriented group are Indiana University at Bloomington and Earlham College. Clark stated, 'Hopefully, Valparaiso, Indiana Central College and Ball State will be involved by next semester.' Currently the state-wide organization is bringing suit against the National Board of Pharmacists in an effort to force the advertisement of prescription prices. It is now illegal to post prescription prices. InPIRG has also joined with other consumer groups in filing a petition to block a proposed rate increase by the Indianapolis Power and Light Company. Other projects include the blocking of the legalization of phosphate detergents in Indiana and the lowering of the state drinking age.

The Notre Dame branch of InPIRG has also been involved in grocery price survey. Since the beginning of the semester InPIRG has been encouraging greater student involvement through boos at registration and at Activities Night. Burner estimated 65 to 70 people signed up to participate. He added they will also be contacting faculty members by letter asking for their support and involvement.

Notre Dame InPIRG is currently searching for a Staff Director. The salaried position requires the director to coordinate analysis and research, assist in litigation and serve as an active representative for InPIRG.

Clark stated that the organization would prefer a law or graduate student. Applications will be taken at the InPIRG Office on the Second Floor of LaFortune from 1 to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Food survey results released

by Bob Radziewicz

The quality of food served in University dining halls last year received a rating of "fair" in a survey taken by the Food Advisory Committee. The flavor of food failed to satisfy many individual tastes and also received a "fair" rating.

The most frequent complaint last year involved the temperature of the food. Phyllis Roese, University dietitian, pointed out that many foods have a tendency to go bad if not immediately served. However, servers have been equipped with thermometers to insure that the food is warm.

The flavor of food has also been cited in criticism. "The price is no reflection on the quality of food," commented a student.

Seniors Barred

In a sense, the Senior Bar should be referred to as a Senior Club. Unlike a private club, the Senior Bar can offer a unique and special place for seniors to share during their final year. The Club could offer more than a place for knock-down drunk but rather a place for entertainment, informal meetings with teachers and friends or a simple place to relax.

But Student Affairs should not include complete control of the Bar in their acceptance of its supervision. Members of the senior class can police their own backyard and should be granted that responsibility. For example, an arrangement with a Student Affairs officer such as Dr. Robert Ackerman, who has past student-relations experience as Student Activities Director, to supervise the senior class management of the Bar would be an effective working relationship.

Use of the Bar has always been challenged. However, to deny this senior class the chance to affect solid changes with the cooperation of Student Affairs would be unjust. Student Affairs' assumption of this responsibility would be a senator in part of their constituency and could prove a worthy example to the rest.

Odd Man Out

A "tall, black, white, and gutsy" man with a "God-fearing" air, Nash was known for his "bright" style and "witty" persona. He was one of the founders of the CSNY, a band that was formed in the 1960s. Nash has been described as a "visionary" musician and a "legendary" figure in the music industry. He has been involved in many projects throughout his career, and is known for his work with the CSNY, a group that included Crosby, Stills, and Young. Nash has also released several solo albums, and has worked on projects with other artists such as Joni Mitchell and Lindsey Buckingham.

The church stood quietly on the corner of Cincinnati Avenue and Second Street, as it had for years. Now it was being used as a community center. The building was being maintained by a local church group, and was open to the public.

It was festal seating and I spent the first part of the concert down in front, not ten yards away from the elevated stage. However after about an hour of this mingling with the "quadruple freaks", what Crosby calls people who sit in front, I went up to be with the human beings that were there.

The impression I carried away from the concert were away from the were not always up to my expectations. There were a number of things to be admired. For one the music group of the church was excellent. Two of Nash's numbers, "Love the One You're With", and "Black Queen" were done electrically with a power that I thought those songs possessed. Still's also provided help with their music from the other three on harmony, and of the few times the harmony worked the best ever version of McCartney's "Blackbird".

Crosby's voice is still clear and pure, something I can't say anymore about Nash or Stills. Nash provided two of the highlights of the concert with an emotional version of "Southbound Train" and a beautiful as yet untitled love song which Crosby would call the "Our House" of the new CSNY album.

However there were also a number of things wrong. Nash, except for the above mentioned moments, was outstandingly professional. His songs from a few years ago simply do not stand with the other's efforts and his own CSNY work.

And listen to the songs the other three did during their respective solo parts. Nash did "Gypsy Saturday Night and Old Man from Harvest" an album of two years back. Stills did "Change Partners", "Know You Got to Run" and "Work Game" which has used

WASHINGTON UPI - John W. Dean III went to prison Tuesday for his role in the conspiracy to cover up the Watergate bugging scandal, a plot in which he con-and Richard Nixon himself was prime suspect.

Wearing dark glasses and surrounded by a half-dozen federal marshals, Dean surrendered at the U.S. courthouse where, in a few weeks time, he will be the star prosecution witness at the cover-up trial of six former White House colleagues accused of conspiring to hush up the scandal. He had nothing to say to a swarm of reporters and photographers who had waited six hours in a sweetening Washington sun for him to arrive. His words were barely audible when asked if he felt Nixon, too, should go to jail.

Party faithful when he decided to bow out of politics after one term as governor, but he figures to win the nomination over Sam Cavner and James Talbert, both of Las Vegas.

On the Democratic side, Maya Miller, an oil millionaire who favors cutting the depletion allowance to oil companies, battled Lt. Gov. Harry Reid and tax consultant Dan Miller. Reid was favored but some observers said Mrs. Miller was closing strong in the waning days of the campaign.

Marshals have been guarding the Deans at their $110,000 dollar hilltop home near Beverly Hills, California, for months. Disbarred from practicing law as a result of his plea of guilty to a felony, Dean has turned to writing and repertedly has nearly finished a novel of Washington politics.

Close Nevada primaries
decides nominations

RENO, Nev. UPI - Former Gov. Paul Laxalt, who led a party sweep in 1966, Tuesday was favored to win the Republican nomination for the seat being vacated by retiring Democratic Sen. Alan Bible in the Nevada primary election.

Officials predicted 37 per cent of the 222,000 eligible voters would turn out. The weather was hot and fair, but some afternoon thundershowerers were forecast.

I have no comment on that, Dean said, his face grim. The 32-year-old Dean, once Nixon's White House counsel and now his chief accuser, pleaded guilty last fall to a single count of conspiracy to obstruct justice and was sentenced Aug. 2 to one to four years in prison. U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica gave Dean a month to get his affairs in order before going behind bars.

Marshals whisked him away to an undisclosed location in the Washington-Baltimore area where he will be kept until he is no longer needed as a witness by Watergate prosecutors. The remainder of his term is expected to be served at a federal prison camp at Lompoc, California.

Due to go on trial Sept. 30 accused of cover-up plot are former

White House or Nixon campaign aides H.R. Haldeman, John D. Ehrlichman, John N. Mitchell, Gordon C. Strachan, Robert O. Mardian and Kenneth W. Parkinson. The same grand jury that indicted them last March also unanimously named Nixon an uninstructed co-conspirator; Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski is weighing whether to seek Nixon's indictment for criminal offenses now that he is a private citizen.

Though federal officials would not say where Dean would be incarcerated at first, a number of other Watergate figures have been kept in protective custody at Ft. Holabird in Baltimore.

Except for his escort of marshals, Dean was alone when he arrived at the courthouse, dressed in a gray suit, light blue shirt, dark tie and black wing-tip shoes. Neither his lawyer nor his wife, Maureen who was at his side constantly through his dramatic testimony 14 months ago before the Senate Watergate committee accompanied him.

Cinema '75 Series Co-director Tom McGinty yesterday announced the film schedule for the

In discussing the goals behind the series that he and co-director

Bill Wylie have compiled McGinty stated, "Our main objective is to create a high level of appreciation for film."

McGinty said they have tried to gather the best in both directing and acting as represented in differ-tent types of film: mystery, comedy, musical, drama and foreign productions.

The series revolves around four themes: American film directors (Orson Welles, Fred Zinnemann, Howard Hawks); foreign film directors (Federico Fellini, Ingmar Bergman, Roman Polanski) and contemporary films (The Way We Were, American Graffiti, Siddhartha). The fourth aspect of the series is the special festival which will examine in some detail a particular type of film.

The two slated series are an Alfred Hitchcock festival and one of literary adaptations.

McGinty stated, "We feel that those who attend the entire series will see film as it serves as entertainment, cultural statement and as an art form."

Patron cards for the first semester, at a cost of $3.50, will be available in the Saint Mary's Dining Hall, the South Dining Hall and the Cultural Arts Commission office on Thursday and Friday, Sept. 5 and 6.

Those purchasing patron cards will be entitled to a film booklet containing reviews of the series' films. These will be available at the showing of The Stranger, Sept. 9 and 10. Admission to a single film will be $1.00 throughout the series.

Ford delays amnesty decision

WASHINGTON UPI - President Ford has postponed until possibly Monday or Tuesday a decision on how to offer conditional amnesty to war resisters who have fled to Canada, the White House reported Tuesday.

Press Secretary J.F. terHorst told reporters that Ford had hoped to be able to announce the decision this week, but decided to confer further with Pentagon and Justice Department officials on the issues. "He wants to refine his thinking," said terHorst. "He has some ideas of his own."

Asked if the President might be reacting to the shipment of his plans for leniency toward war resisters, terHorst replied: "Absolutely not."

Signs bill

WASHINGTON UPI - President Ford has signed the bills Tuesday designed to increase the use of energy from the sun and the earth, to provide grants for research and development, and to substitute for conventional fuels.

Maddock defeated

ATLANTA UPI - Flamboyant Lori Morgan defeated Lester Maddox on a crash Tuesday night in a stunning upset by veteran state legislator George Busbee for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Maddock, who served as governor from 1967 to 1971 and now is lieutenant governor, faced veteran state Senator George Busbee, a South Georgia lawyer who campaigned as "The Georgia Workhorse." The campaign slogan was "You want a workhorse, not a showhorse."

Republicans, greatly outnumbered, said they also chose their gubernatorial nominee from their list of second choice candidates, as have previously Joe Thompson, a gospel-singing, law-and-order advocate, and Atlanta businessmen John H. Shalik and Harold Daily, former Democrat and state official.

The Maddox-Busbee campaign was 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. EDT.

The duel between Maddox and Busbee, who was 1 in 2 in the first primary balloting Aug. 12, has been vicious on the issues. Each accused the other of being a "showhorse," not a "workhorse.

Ford also signed an amendment to the Voting Rights Act of 1970 that expands and makes modifications necessary to states to provide summer work-education programs for 15-18 year olds in national parks and other lands administered by the Department of the Interior.

The President expressed "some concern" that the measure could increase the annual cost of the Youth Corps, but said it was "not inconsistent with the 1975 budget and thus I am pleased to be able to sign it."

Maddock defeated

Ford moved over the question during his weekend at Camp David, Maryland, and met Saturday with Attorney General William B. Saxbe and Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger on how to proceed with granting amnesty conditioned on a period of public service. terHorst said the President may not reach a final decision until Monday or Tuesday.

The press secretary gave no details as to what Ford's thinking is on the subject except saying he hopes to come up with a plan that would require congressional approval. Ford announced at the Veterans of Foreign Wars convention Aug. 19 that although he was against blanket amnesty, he was leaning toward a plan to permit the war resisters to work their way back into society, which he described as "war resisters returning." The President devoted most of Tuesday to the economy, meeting with a bipartisan panel of economic leaders including Alan Greenspan, executive director of the upcoming economic summit, and Ford Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller. He also called in all his economic aides.

terHorst said he does not know whether the President agrees with the idea of his plan, which he said will take as long as two years, to work the battle against inflation.

"I don't think the President has thought about in terms of a time frame," he said. "He's hopeful to come up with a plan that will attack it and won't take that long a time."

The renovation of St. Mary's Science Building is near completion.

An old apartment was converted to an advanced chemistry lab which raises the total number of chemistry labs to four. This, in conjunction with the increased storage room which allows adequate space for instruments, has relieved some of the pressure caused by the large departmental enrollment since 1967.

There is also a threefold increase in the micro-biology preparation room facilities, a 25percent increase in the micro-biology lab and a completely new lab for general biology. Also, an older, Classroom was converted into office, research, darkroom and audio-visual facilities. Other additions were the installation of blackout curtains and the purchase of a Honeywell 4320 computer which will be used by the entire college.

When asked about the $110,000 project's completion, which is scheduled for two weeks, Dr. David Pilger replied, "I was mightily relieved that we got started on time.

Student Managers

Editor's note: Steve Euvino is a Junior at Notre Dame and also a student manager for several sports. This year, Euvino has the opportunity to recruit freshmen managers for the upcoming '74-'75 athletic season.

Freshmen entering Notre Dame are special people. One look at their high school records show that some were valedictorians, some class officers, others the editors of school newspapers and yearbooks, or the captains of their teams. They come to Notre Dame to build on their talents. While only a small part of their education takes place on the field or court, it is an integral part of their education, the extracurricular activities at Notre Dame. They see four years spent in the dorm as a waste of time and money. Notre Dame is everything to them.

Freshmen managers are one of these activities.

Many people have preconceived notions about managers--those short, weak, dim-witted guys. It is a misconception that managers are limited to only a few hours during practice and always have a football on them. Well, that's just the manager's job, but not nearly all of it. Most of the time is spent in the ACT student manager's office. In that office managers keep records and files about all the athletes, in case they're needed by a coach or sports information. The managers prepare all the paperwork and accounting for every game.

Managers work not only with the coaches but also with the athletic business directors. College sports today is big business and student managers have had to adjust to the increasing demands. It is an education in itself to see the efficiency of a modern athletic department.

To meet the demands of a manager is limited to football. The Notre Dame Student Manager Organization works with all sports, including basketball, soccer, wrestling, fencing, tennis, swimming, track, cross country, and baseball. A manager gets a well-rounded view of all these different teams. Working with different sports provides a chance for the manager to decide which sport he may prefer to work in--work hockey or basketball. This too is a great part of the manager's education.

Managing is hard work which many times seems to interfere with the athlete's life. The long hours are just another part of the manager's education, a lesson in self-discipline. Class, studying, and attending varsity meetings must be scheduled and arranged to fit into one day.

Sophomore managers prepare equipment on Thursday night for games; they know well that studying for a quiz Friday must be done on Wednesday.

The managers creed is very simple: "We expect 100 percent from 100 percent of the time." And that's what a manager is all about. Managers have to be on their toes all the time to be on the lookout for anything, whether it be a missing uniform or a minor injury. It is tough to manage, but those are the duties a manager is needed for.

The coaches and players respect the managers for their honesty and the way they maintain that respect by the way of that same hustle.

Right now we are in the midst of a recruiting drive for freshmen managers. The work is there, but so are the rewards. If you're interested in becoming a student manager now is the time to get involved.

Shumate in hospital with blood clots by Greg Corgan

John Shumate, starting center and leading scorer of Notre Dame's 1974-75 basketball team, has been hospitalized in Phoenix with blood clots in his lungs.

Shumate, who had been working out with the Phoenix Suns of the National Basketball Association, was admitted to Good Samaritan Hospital last Thursday after complaining of chest pains.

According to Suns team physician Paul Kibler, the big center had undergone a lung scan last Tuesday when he first complained of pain.

The scan showed that scar tissue had built up in left lung causing the clots to form. A further lung scan Thursday showed that Shumate's condition had deteriorated, he was admitted to Good Samaritan.

Shumate is in no immediate danger," explained Steinberg. "His condition is very stable and is nothing like the clots he suffered in his leg three years ago. He had some blood disorder, which as yet we are unsure of, but we have had conditions analyzed. We are trying to eliminate the clotting through blood-thinning and are attempting preventative measures so that Shumate will not be bothered with the disorder in the future.

Larry Cox, of the Phoenix Gazette, added that Shumate would be out of action six weeks to three months. According to Cox, Shumate was in good standing and was congratulated on his position with the Suns when he was stricken with the blood ailment.

So I took her advice, and here I am," says Barnett.

Hockey Tryouts

The Notre Dame hockey team opens October 25 with a two game away series with the Wisconsin Badgers. Head coach "Lefty" Smith announced that all students interested in trying out for the varsity hockey team should attend a meeting tonight, September 4, in the ACC Auditorium near Gate 2 at 7:30.
