Proposal made to combine two colleges

by Patrick Hanifin
Staff Reporter

Nine major proposals on revising the University curriculum and academic organization have been announced by the Committee on the Course of Study, including suggestions to possibly unite the College of Arts and Letters and the College of Science, to require a senior seminar on values, and to expand credit by examination programs.

The committee, appointed by the administration at the same time that the OUP was appointed, has forwarded its findings to the Faculty Senate for consideration and to the Academic Counsel for possible approval.

Regarding unification of the College of Arts and Letters and the College of Science, the Committee pointed out that there is already a large group of students who have a double major qualification as "arts and sciences". More than 85 per cent of the students in the College of Science are pre-professional majors or science majors who do approximately one-half of their academic work in Arts and Letters," the report said.

The committee pointed out however that few Arts students take science courses and suggested that there would have to be the three if the two colleges were united. It also suggested that "the rationale for collegial structure is less educational than purely administrative." The committee proposed an in-depth study of the merits of unification by an ad-hoc committee of faculty and administrators from both colleges, and in the interim, "more cooperative educational endeavors"

The proposed cross-college course selection is "healthy" and ought to be "encouraged" according to the report which pointed out that student should be taken to courses outside of their major often feel discriminated against in other colleges. Recommendations called for all those increasing in formation to students about course offerings in other colleges and "ensuring that all courses in the University are equally available to all qualified students," once department majors had been taken care of.

A five-year combined bachelors-MBA program was strongly recommended to take advantage of the market value of MBA degrees and to avoid the increasing financial problems students face in pursuing graduate studies. The program would involve finishing undergraduate studies in three years in any college and completing two years of graduate work.

The undergrad college would determine what courses in the MBA program would be acceptable as undergrad electives. Enrollment in the program would be limited to not more than 15 per cent of the total number MBA candidates to insure that the majority would have the "vital experience in the business community" needed to share with other students.

There would be a South Route which will run to Scrollsnae Mall, stopping at bars and restaurants on the way. There will also be the Michigan Route, which will now include the HotelBorg and the White House. An exact time table will soon be available.

"We hope to offer those Notre Dame students who are without cars a chance to have an enjoyable evening," said McLean. McLean also said the shuttle would offer all safe means of transportation for students who go to Michigan to drink.

The Quickie Bus will not operate this weekend because all available buses have been rented for the Michigan State football weekend. Once, said Bill McLean, Ombudman director. "We have contacted four bus agencies and there are no buses available for the weekend," McLean said. Buses could be rented for Friday night, but they would have to be returned by 12:00 midnight. "If we return them in time, we would strand people in "Michigan South Bend," the director said.

McLean explained that the steppage is not a product of financial difficulties or failure of the program. "The Quickie Shuttle incurred a deficit of nearly forty thousand dollars," he said, "but we are not running because buses are not available."

Regarding the financial loss McLean has developed a new program for the shuttle. Two 40-seat motor coaches will be used instead of the two 260 seat buses used this past weekend. In an effort to limit student government expenditures, the fare will be raised 10 cents to 25 or 30 cents.

"This would give an incentive of between 20 and 30 cents," the director said.

‘Quickie Bus won’t be running this weekend because of conflicting interests with the homecoming program.

Press: ‘Salary increase possible’

By Bill Gonzebach

The University can afford the Faculty Senate salary increase request, said Professor Irwin Press, chairman of the Faculty Affairs committee, said in an interview yesterday.

"There is no question that the University can afford it," declared the professor. The passage of the request deals therefore with faculty morale, not financial capabilities.

"It is no question of priorities. We feel that the priorities now lie with the faculties achieving some better status with respect to the cost of living and we feel that this superseded any other kinds of priorities the administration might have for that excess money," said the chairman.

Press stated he had no idea of what the chances were that the Administration and Board of Trustees would pass the request. "I do feel, however, that equity and justice be our request," added the professor.

Salary increase proposed to the faculty, the faculty has lost more than the requested increase of $1,000 in buying power in places that wasn't the past several years," Press said that the increase "is not going to go the half way that we lost but it is certainly going to go a long way towards making up for that." The chairman also addressed the problems of the Notre Dame faculty. "A majority of them of course are Catholic and this means that they are going to have a greater sense of children than are their colleagues, who are not Catholic at our peer universities," Press said.

Press also said that many of the faculty were convinced to stay at Notre Dame. "This means, in a sense, to receive lower salaries is to be penalized for being a particularly pious (faculty) member and a committed Catholic as well," the professor said.

The University can be a great university holding classes in huts, but you can not have a great university without the faculty—you can't skimp on faculty," concluded Press.

Tomorrow’s Issue

Coverage of the local Indiana congressional elections will begin in tomorrow’s Observer. The coverage of the elections will give the percentage of the large percentage of Notre Dame students who vote in St. Joseph County, will continue up until the General Election.

In tomorrow’s Observer, Staff Writer Matt Yokom will focus on those who vote for national, state, and local offices. He will also examine the three referenda on the Indiana Constitution to be considered in November.

SMC professor leaves for another position

by Thomas O'Neill

SMC Psychology professor Dr. Larry Scrivner left St. Mary's last week to assume a position at the Thomas Jefferson Mental Health and Retardation Center in Philadelphia, according to administrative officials, who named him Acting Director of Research and Evaluation at the center. Dr. Joseph Miller, chairman of the SMC Psychology Department, said Scrivner was released from his 1974-75 contract obligations Wednesday, Sept. 25 after consultations with college and department officials.

Miller said the decision to allow Scrivner to break his contract carefully considered the厉害 of Scrivner's absence on his students. "We know that we had the competence among other staff members to assume the responsibility of his courses," Miller stated.

Another consideration, according to Miller, was the attractiveness of the Philadelphia offer in view of a tight job market. "We realized the change is beneficial to both sides and believed the transition should be made as rapidly as possible," Scrivner, who served as acting department chairman last year, came to SMC in 1971 after teaching at the University of Manitoba in Winnipeg, Canada.

Until a full-time replacement for Scrivner is recruited, his classes will be taught individually by Drs. Miller, Wamchuiru, Rudy and Keller.

Shakespeare Marathon sets record

by Ken Bradford

The world's longest Shakespeare Marathon ended yesterday morning at 8:30 in the Notre Dame Bus Shelter. The marathon, which lasted 111 hours, 15 minutes to beat Purdue University's previous record of 109 hours, raised a total of $257 for local charities.

The reading ended with the last line of Shakespeare's Sonnet 73: "To love that well which thou must leave ere long."

Chris Keen, president of the Notre Dame Alpha Phi Omega (APO) service fraternity chapter sponsoring the event, said he was disappointed with the participation turn-out for the event. "It's a shame the people are not more aware of the local charities needing contributions," Keen stated.

Keen noted that most of the money raised by the marathon will be donated to Sr. Maria’s Day School. He had earlier set the financial goal for the event as $1000 in donations.

"We had expected a much greater turnout of spectators after the Purdue game but the campus was vacated right after the game," Keen observed. He said he was very thankful for the enthusiasm of students who participated in the oral reading.

The Shakespeare Marathon was threatened by stormy weather late Saturday night when the tarpaulin shelter for readers on the South Quad was blown down by strong winds. The reading, however, was uninterrupted as the readers hastily moved to the bus shelter, Keen said.

The tarpaulin was stolen sometime later in the night, Keen said, and APO will have to spend $275 from their funds to replace the canvas unless the tarpaulin is returned.

Future APO activities, according to Keen, include a phone-booth stuffing contest and a second "Ugliest Man On Campus" election. APO, a national service fraternity with over 135,000 members, is open to all male and female students.

Students interested in becoming members are asked to contact Keen at 7183.
Emphasizes economic problems

Lugar campaigns at N.D.

by Marlene Zloza
Managing Editor

Calling for a "balanced federal budget" that includes significant cuts in all discretionary areas, such as defense spending and public works programs, U.S. Senatorial Candidate Richard Lugar last night focused entirely on the "issues and solutions" surrounding economic conditions.

Speaking before a sparse crowd at Stepan Center, the Indiana Republican stressed the "need for a degree of public sacrifice" if the U.S. is to cut federal spending.

"People will soon begin to look for inflation and obviously asking for unmercifully drastic cuts in the budget," Lugar said. "The fiscal consequences of cutting spending is a degree of public sacrifice." Lugar added. "We are more comfortable with recession and we know how to treat it - spend more, and hard to do some of the things anyone can say that our 12 percent inflation rate is less than that in Britain, France, Italy and Japan."

For wage and price controls, Lugar sees no solution in that direction. "Many people have advocated wage and price controls as an inevitable conclusion, but how do we escape from it later?" Lugar asked. "It would bring an end to collective bargaining for awhile and it would bring an end to free market prices for awhile. It's an appealing thought that if someone would call an end to inflation, it would come, but it doesn't, and it won't happen."

Regarding his opponent, Indiana Democratic Senator Birch Bayh, Lugar attacked Bayh for "just lately becoming concerned with inflation and suddenly asking for unmercifully drastic cuts in the budget." Even so, said Lugar, Bayh still thinks all of his spending measures have validity.

"Bayh has introduced 410 bills that would have spent 25 billion dollars on new programs," stated Lugar. "Most of these bills mercifully died in committee but once in awhile one passed into law." It is time to remind people of the long-term record, said Lugar.

After his speech Lugar answered a variety of questions from the audience, clarifying his position on different economic measures. Lugar came out against any federal gasoline tax, and in favor of tightening some tax loopholes.

Lugar also voiced approval of the choice of Nelson Rockefeller as vice president. "He is the president's choice and I have seen no predominant objections to his appointment."

South Bend theaters offer discount tickets

by Greg Bangs
Staff Reporter

The Student Union Ticket Office, in conjunction with Pilt Theatres, is now offering a discount ticket to students of the Notre Dame community. The plan, which started October 2, enables the purchaser of a $1.56 ticket to gain admittance to most of the movies shown by the Pilt Theatre Corporation.

"Generally, most theaters owned by the Pilt Corporation charge $2.50 for admission," said Nick Golden, director of Student Services, "but the purchase of a $1.56 discount ticket at the Student Union ticket office will enable a person to gain admittance to one movie and save an average of $1.00 in the meantime," he explained.

"All attractions, except those advertised by the theatre as 'special attractions' are included," pointed out Golden. A special attraction is a movie which will have the ticket prices priced at $2.50 or over. Two such movies are The Exorcist and the Great Gatsby.

"Golden stated that the special attractions are relatively rare. If someone is not sure that a movie is a special attraction or not, he can either check the theatre's ads or call the theatre," he advised. Participating theatres in the South Bend area are Scottsdale, Town and Country, and State. The Marquette Theatre in Michigan City is also admitting discount ticket holders. The tickets are honored by any Pilt theatre in the nation unless otherwise specified on the discount ticket.

Coming attractions at the Pilt Theatres include The Dove, Airport '75, The Godfather and Funny Car Summer.

The Observer 3
Incident at SMC

Dear Editor,

In regards to the excellent job SMC security does.

Last Wednesday night (Sept. 25) at 2:30 a.m. another guy and myself brought two friends back to Regina South. One was totally passed out and we were going to carry her up to her room. The rectress told us we weren't going to take the girl upstairs after hours. I said we were but then the other guy split. In the meantime another lady, who turned out to be the assistant rectress, came down. She and the girl's friend went with us upstairs after hours. I happened to walk by the guardhouse when my two friends pulled in. I couldn't resist one more crack so looked at them and said, "Nice uniform!" The one without the uniform went mental and told me "That's it. You're coming in right now." I told him I wasn't and I kept walking. He yelled "Turn around!" or something like that and when I did I caught a stream of mace all across my face. I was 10-15 feet away, back turned and leaving and he still found the need to mace me.

The official report said the student kept up abusive language until we had to mace him. I'm sure I used abusive language but no language warrants the use of mace. If these guards are not mature enough to handle some abuse or criticism then one of two things should be done. Either the man should be fired or have his mace taken away. What would happen if he really got hassled?

The next day I went to file a complaint at Dean Mathews's office. He wasn't there but Mrs. McCabe, the assistant Dean, was. She said she'd check out my information and then push the complaint through. Monday she told me that they had sent a report over asking SMC security to use mace only in cases of physical danger. Other than that there was nothing else that could be done. The official complaint on the top of the report was man in woman's room after hours. In the report security said they stopped me to explain that I couldn't go up there without an R.A. or something, but I had the assistant rectress.

Plea for Prisoners

Dear Editor,

I am writing this letter in appeal for the inmates in the Southern Ohio Correctional Facility Institution. We have no family or friends who care to write or who we can correspond with. Nobody knows or cares if these men exist.

If some of these inmates could receive a letter once in a while from somebody, their whole outlook and future would be much brighter.

We are rejects of society being punished for crimes we committed. But most of us are rehabilitating ourselves to enter society again. We are not asking for much, just some friendship from people of the outside world.

We will welcome pen-pals young or old, male or female, who wish to discuss or ask questions on any subject. To those who write: Please state in your first letter the age or race of person you wish to correspond with and, if you have any special interests you wish to discuss such as Art, Crafts, Sports, or Hobbies, so you can be better matched.

Direct your first letter to Sonny Royce No. 138-827 P.O. Box 787, Lucasville, Ohio 45686.

Listen to yourself. I mean, listen to how you change in your reaction to questions throughout your years here at Notre Dame; not the ordinary, boring, classroom type questions, but questions you encounter day in and day out as you traverse this campus. Here's a for instance: someone drives up to you and stops as you walk by the circle on your way to the post-office. "Excuse me, but can you tell me the way to Stepan Center?" You are a freshman. If they catch you early enough in the school year, you find a bright, eager lad, awed and impressed by the campus he now calls home, and if they catch you early enough, odds are you won't know where Stepan Center is or what it is. Or why it is (don't fret...few people know why it is). The normal student response in this case is. "Gee, gallee mister...I'm sorry, but I don't know." You will be duly thanked and left to wander in your ignorance.

A year rolls over and dies and suddenly you are a sophomore. You know full well that you run this place and that if the sophomores ever decided to leave en masse the University would be forced to close, the stock-market would plummet, the price of gold would fluctuate wildly, and the coyote would finally catch the road-runner. Now you are some craky alumnus, come strolling up to within inches of your very person, but you try to ignore such in-solence. "What's Stepan Center?" you begin to chortle wittily (with the thought of your cleverness). "Sure, I know where that is...you go around the lakes until you come to that thing that looks sort of like a cave, but it's full of candles and freshmen and pre-neds...that's Stepan Center." Sometimes your cleverness astounds me. Another year is towed away, and to your total disgust you find yourself a junior; on the whole, a rather calm junior at that. The experiences of your first two years have mellowed and somewhat numbed you, so for the most part you are harmless. Now here comes somebody to test your knowledge of the campus. You never know when favor could pay off for you later, so you give as precise a set of directions as you can. "Stepan Center? Yes...uh, go down approximately five-hundred yards until you come to a traffic light. It will either be red or green, although I do remember on occasion being yellow. Make a left turn there. Then you go down about one thousand and twenty-five..." You are not quite as polite as you are afraid of making a bad impression.

Twelve months manage to escape over the wall, and you come back to your beloved sweet off-campus home. You're thumping one way and this character who is going the other way stops, rolls down his window, and yells into your haggard face. Quick! you console yourself: "Stepan Center? Hey buddy, I'm sorry, but I don't!...oh yeah! I remember now. Stepan Center. Here, let me get in and I'll guide you there personally. It's right across the street from the Colfax apartments."

Now, the years hurry by like student out's of Emil T., and many a fail has seen you return to your Alma Mater...how many years? Thirty? Forty? It doesn't matter. You simply enjoy being a part of the school again and you hearken back to memories of things long past. Suddenly a car pulls up alongside you: "Excuse me mister, but can you tell me how to get to Stepan Center?" The years roll back. You are an undergrad again and you are honored at the question, but it is cut short as you stare off toward the horizon, and a sly smile works its way across your face: "You go...you go around the lakes until you come to something that looks like a cave..."
Students want more steak

by Pat Cuneo
Staff Reporter

Edmund Price, director of food services, met with the Student Advisory Committee yesterday to discuss the possibility of having more steak nights. No decision was reached.

Price explained, "there was little time to discuss the many suggestions of the committee, but we have scheduled another meeting in two weeks."

The council's major objective in the meeting was the suggestion of more 'steak nights' even at the expense of less special' nights. Chairman of the committee, Joe Fiorella, pointed out that if a student was to purchase a special night ticket, it would cost $3.50, whereas the steak would be $3.25. From this economic view, they believed this to be a very good suggestion but further research is supposedly needed.

Sue Nordstrom, another member of the group, responded by saying, "It is really difficult to talk with the food service panel simply because they repeatedly find fault with our suggestions."

Fiorella cited the biggest problem they have had thus far as being the inability of the food service to define the special' nights. Right now, Fiorella explained, students think that special nights are like tonight's Russian night. However, the board has been quoted as saying that these nights are different but not exactly 'special'. The special' nights are Thanksgiving, Christmas dinner, etc.

The second phase of the advisory committee's proposal is to trigger a food ecology movement. This, however, is in the very early planning stages. The segment will include testing of various recipes for future use and refinement for some current ones.

The third phase is the use of the committee as a complaint board. Many ideas have already been submitted and they welcome new suggestions. Member Mike Singer issued a number of proposals received so far. Some of these are for more broiled and baked foods rather than fried, fresh fruits, and the labeling of the salad dressings.

Marching Band to perform at MSU game

by Andy Praschak
Staff Reporter

The annual road trip of the University of Notre Dame Band will take place this weekend, according to Mr. Robert O'Brien, band director. The band will be performing Saturday at the Notre Dame-Michigan State football game in East Lansing.

The Notre Dame Band performs at one away football game each year. The entire band votes on which away game, within the budget, they wish to attend.

The 157 member band is scheduled to depart from the Stepan Center parking lot Friday afternoon in four busses and one instrument truck. While on tour, band members will be staying at the Holiday Inn-South, in Lansing. They will return home Sunday afternoon. Band members are then expected to be at practice Monday afternoon to begin preparing for the Rice football game scheduled for the following weekend.

Looking forward to the trip, O'Brien commented, "We have a lot of good friends at Michigan State and I'm sure it will prove to be a rewarding experience."

O'Brien also pointed out that he has received a great deal of assistance from Mr. James Phillips, associate band director, Rev. George Wiskerchen, associate band director, and the band officers.

Terry Cavanaugh, Irish Guard captain, expressed the Guard's view of the Michigan State performance. "We really have to be at our best because the Irish Guard is a great novelty at other schools and consequently more watched than here at home," said Cavanaugh.

Holm meets with Freshmen Advisory Council

Dean Emil T. Holm of the Freshman Year met with the Freshmen Advisory Council in an informal discussion of such topics as the guidance test and drastic anti-cheating precautions.

Advisory Council members pointed out discrepancies in the guidance test administration focusing on the fourth written essay introduced at the end of the testing session. Hoffman explained to the Council the rationale and methodology of such tests. Action or suggestions were entertained by the council at this meeting.

The Notre Dame Honor ooe was another topic of concern. Hoffman said that it is "up to the individual teacher or professor to decide on the implementing of the honor code. Some freshmen complained that their "integrity has been insulted" in some classes due to the drastic precautions some professors have taken to prevent cheating.

Dean Hoffman told the Advisory Council that all of their suggestions, comments and criticisms would be relayed to his staff for their consideration. He further stated that the Council's recommendations, in the past, had been a valuable factor in the decision-making process of the office of the Freshman Year.

Holm also hopes to hold informal meetings with the council on Sunday evenings at his home.

Second time is sweetest for DiNardo

On October 4, 5 and 6, the Notre Dame tennis team will host an eight-team tournament at Court­ney Center. This will be the Second Annual Fall Tennis Tournament held at Notre Dame with participants this year including Big Ten powers Indiana, Purdue, Illinois, and Iowa, as well as Indiana State, Illinois State, Southern Illinois, and St. Francis' Prep.

A round robin format will be used in which every team plays every other team once during the three-day tourney. The team championship will be determined on the basis of the best overall record.

With the action scheduled to get underway at noon on Friday, Irish coach Tom Fallon is reasonably pleased with the progress shown by the squad thus far. Coach Fallon lists the following men as his tentative starting lineup. The no. 1 singles spot belongs to Randy Shehak, a sophomore from Peru, Indiana who lettered last year as a frosh at no. 4. Posting a record last year, Shehak has been the most consistent performer in fall drills. At no. 2 singles, John Carrico, a senior team captain from Lake Forest, Ill. A three-year varsity player, Carrico played no. 6 last year, and is generally considered to have the best serve on the squad.

The four remaining singles slots are currently up for grabs and Coach Fallon feels that any number of six plays could see action. Leading the contenders for the remaining spots in Chris Kane, a senior three-year letter winner from California. Kane played no. 1 as a freshman and sophomore and will likely be in the starting lineup on Friday. Also in contention is Mike O'Donnell. A junior who played on the JV squad last year, another man with the big serve, O'Donnell will definitely help out the varsity this year. Two foreign transfer students, Ron and Juan Inchaustes have been playing well and both should see action in the tournament. Rounding out the 1974 varsity is a pair of freshmen, Brian Haillone and Tony Bruno. Both have demonstrated an ability to play intercollegiate tennis and Coach Fallon feels they both have a great deal of potential and development.

Testy doubles combinations find Shehak and Carrico at no. 1; Kane and Al at no. 2, and either O'Donnell and Bruno or the Inchaustes at no. 3.

The teams will play two rounds of Friday, three rounds on Saturday, and the final two rounds on Sunday. Admission is free and everyone is welcome.

Gerry DiNardo is still hoping for his second national championship despite the loss to Purdue. He indicated Notre Dame’s failure to convert on important third and fourth down plays was the big factor Saturday. For according to Gerry, national championship would be better the second time around. And for him, this year is the last time around. "Last year was the best time. I’ve ever had playing football. It was the most fun," said Gerry. "As a senior, I’d like to do well. I’d like to go out a winner." Gerry did his share in helping himself and the Irish become winners last season. The 6-1, 237 lb. native of Howard Beach, N.Y. played every offensive play with the first team on the championship. This year, his experience and know how have established him as the leader of the offensive line.

"I thought we could have had the breaks, and they were just better when I was a freshman. I think the activity has been forced off-campus.”

Off-campus is the route Gerry has taken since his marriage this summer to his girl friend of five years. "It’s going real well," he says. He admits that football is a consideration for the future, but as of now everything is still up in the air.

Regarding this year’s team, Gerry concedes that his outlook has changed since spring practice. “I just thought we couldn’t come back and win even then. And I think Purdue knew we could try harder," he says. "We lost a touchdown, it really broke the camel’s back.”

He credits Purdue with playing inspired football. "They’re a good team, they got the breaks, and they were up for the game. More than we were, at least.

Gerry sees the offense’s inability to convert in third and fourth down situations in the third quarter as the crucial factor in the eventual defeat. "I really don’t know what the reason was, we used our regular plan and did a few plays, runs that have worked before. It was either our bad execution or their good execution on defense.”

As to the team being complacent going into Saturday, he is hesitant. "We could have been more up for the game, but you can always be more up." Gerry concedes that he, like the rest of the team, was pretty down after the game. "I think we could have played better, we made too many critical mistakes. We’re a better team than we showed on Saturday.”

He is quick to point out, however, that there are only four or five major unbeaten teams left in the collegiate ranks after only three weeks of play. He remains optimistic about the rest of the season.

"I definitely think we can still win the national championship if we play better, and other teams lose—but most important, we have to play football. We can’t rely on Hailman losing, we have to do it ourselves.”

"I see the reason to lay down and die," he says. Gerry DiNardo is not about to. For him, the second time around is the sweetest.
