Ford asks for tax increase

BY GENE CARLSON
WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Ford asked Congress Tuesday to enact a one-shot tax increase of $4.7 billion on middle-class and wealthy Americans and corporations so that the government will have more money to spend.

In asking Congress, Ford also proposed tax cuts for poor Americans and for businesses which must expand to meet the needs of the economy and to take inflationary pressures off the economy.

Effective for one year

The Administration believes that businesses and corporations would be in effect only one year and would amount to a 5 per cent surtax on families earning over $15,000 and single people earning over $7,500.
A typical middle income family of four with $20,000 of taxable income would pay a surcharge of $198 on top of its normal federal income tax of $2,500.

Another goal was to cut oil consumption by 1 million barrels a day. The nation now imports 6.5 million barrels a day for prices that average $15 a barrel.

Public enemy

"I say to you with all sincerity that inflation, our present public enemy will—unless it is whipped—destroy our economy, our liberties, our great way of life and finally our national pride—as sure as any well-armed wartime enemy," Ford said in the second appearance of his young presidency before both Houses of Congress.

Treasurer Secretary William E. Simon told reporters Ford's foremost goals are to reduce inflationary rate from 14 per cent to 6 per cent. Ford refused to speculate how far it could actually be broken down even if all 30 bills proposed by Ford were enacted.

The President also proposed:

-Boosting hard-hit housing industry by extending the 4 per cent investment tax credit to 10 per cent for one year.

-A bill to raise the interest rate on one-dollar bonds from 5 per cent to 6 per cent.

-A bill to permit companies to sell existing non-taxable bonds at a price higher than the face value.

-Further cutting of income tax rates. A proposal for reduction of income tax bills to 45 per cent, as in the tax cut approved last year, was not expected because of the Administration's desire to raise taxes to avoid a deficit in 1974.

-Limiting the ''special' companies at universities who intend to do business with the Federal Government to 12 a year.

The engineering education program at Notre Dame is the oldest at any Catholic university in the nation. The engineering education program has been occurring ever since he moved into the Oval House two months ago and confronted an economy troubled by two directions—a stubborn inflation which started during the Vietnam War and a sluggishness which some economists say has already descended into a recession.

In his speech, Ford said he wanted to zero in on lots of things the government itself can do to get prices up or make goods scarce or otherwise add to inflationary pressures.

He urged Congress to establish a National Commission on regulatory reform to re-examine federal "rules and regulations that increased costs...without anything for every bill he sends to Congress..." I'm aware that any proposal for new taxes just four weeks before a national election is considered politically unsafe," he said. "But I will not play politics with America's future," the President said.

University announces Cushing renovation

The University of Notre Dame today announced a renovation and expansion of Cushing Hall of Engineering at a cost of between $1.5 and $3 million. The University, according to C.S.C., president of the University, accumulated for the project, in- cluding money raised for the College of Engineering.

Homecoming to be "unique"

by Bob Radziewicz
Staff Reporter

The gala event, directed by John Huckle, will feature the live band WIND with music lasting until 12:30 (South Bend time). 15 kegs of beer, 75 gallons of pink chablis, fruit, bread and cheese will also be served by the Student Union in rooms adjoining the main dance floor.

For those not planning to drive up to Silver Beach, 12 buses will take the couples up to St. Jo's, approximately an hour away. The shuttle service will begin at 7:30 p.m. from the circle by the Law Building, and continue until all buses have been filled, according to Guiltinan.

The Social Commissioner pointed out that because the party site is so far, no continuous shuttle will be made back and forth. Buses will return to Notre Dame between midnight and one o'clock.

Homecoming Party tickets will be available for the remainder of the week either in the dining halls at dinner or at the Student Union ticket office on the second floor of the LaFortune Student Center during regular hours. Guiltinan added that tickets for the Gordon Lightfoot concert and the Rice game are also available at the Student Union ticket office during regular hours.

Guiltinan was very optimistic that the party will be sold out. With a total of 500 tickets originally available, the Social Commissioner guessed that about half had already been sold.

"The tickets are slowly dwindling down. Usually people are undecided as to whether they are going until the week before the event. I think that we should sell the remaining tickets by Friday," Guiltinan stated.

For those who will be driving to the party, the directions are north on U.S. 23 through Niles and Berrien Springs to U.S. 33; U.S. 33 into St. Joe, Michigan; left on Port St., then one block up to State St., right on State and follow winding road over railroad tracks; and here called Broad St., follow Silver Beach sign to parking lot; ballroom is at far end of park.

Alternatives to rule discussed by HPC

by Bob Radziewicz
Staff Reporter

The Social Commissioner called the meeting by Frank Flanigan, SLC chairman, after discussion among the Hall Presidents' Council meeting by Frank Flanigan, SLC chairman.

In addressing the HPC, Flanigan cited two alternatives that are being considered to the present human sexuality rule. Either the Rules Committee will recommend that the University's views on pre-marital sex be expressed as a "statement of philosophy" only, without any stated restrictions, or else a more definitive University regulation, in which all possible consequences are explicitly stated.

"I agree that it is the right of this Catholic institution to express its views on pre-marital sex. However, I think that in making the issue a statement of philosophy only it would serve the same purpose as the rule does now," he said. "The University should recognize that the students are responsible persons with a basically good moral background. The individual must make his own choice on the matter," Flanigan told the "full and detailed explanation" by Don Boudoir, ticket manager, should be sought.

Don Sullivan, from the Mardi Gras raffle committee, addressed the hall presidents concerning distribution of this year's raffle booklets. A quota will be given to each hall, with a guaranteed remittance to the hall for meeting their quota, Sullivan stated.

Unlike past years, the student seller will not get any money back for selling chances; however, Sullivan pointed out that the money will be given to the halls instead, to do with whatever the hall wishes. The booklets will be distributed within the next three weeks.

The final business included an announcement by Flanigan that the United Fund drive will commence this weekend with shamrock sales before the game. Next appealed to the presidents to help get the support of all the hall residents for this worthwhile cause.

Erratum

Paul Soglin will not appear in the Library Auditorium tonight as stated in yesterday's observer. His lecture will be at 8 p.m. to night in Washington Hall.
Dear Editor:

Remember freshman year when we were 6-20? It wasn't much fun, but we were there.

Mr. B.: The game was over before it began.

Questions: Where have things lead us? Where are we now?

And what can be said about last season: Mr. Bouffard to St. Francis, to Marquette, we were there.

They were three great years, and you said it best at the circle when the student body greeted you after the win.

Mr. B.: Yes, that's just here.

Questions: Where have things gone up 100 per cent? Or is that just here?

Mr. B.: Yes, that's just here. Question: You still haven't answered the question. Why did the tickets go up?

Mr. B.: We felt a student paying $1 for a $4 seat just wasn't right.

Question: How would you like it if none of the students went to the game?

Mr. B.: If none of the students went to the games, we could make a lot more money.

Question: But isn't the basketball team supposed to entertain the students and not necessarily designed to make money? Mr. B.: I disagree.

Question: Well didn't the basketball team make money last year?

Mr. B.: I am not privy to that information.

This determination, which I lead me to accuse Mr. Bouffard and the people he represents of using the students and taking advantage of the campus situation.

Mr. B.: I disagree. We realize that this bold and outrageous move of yours came on the heels of our good President's call for non-inflationary prices.

However, good kind Mr. Bouffard, the freshman math major in our exemplary hall, was certainly not a part of this picture.

Mr. B.: I disagree.

Questions: Here is how the ticket office and ask some questions. Here is how the ticket office...

Mr. President?

Mr. President?

Yes, Mr. President, is it?

It's about tomorrow's party, isn't it?

No, it's about the DASS party, isn't it?

Oh, the DASS party.

Mr. President, you asked all the craft societies to donate something for the DASS party.

Oh, yes, the DASS party. No gifts, just a penny.

IN THE HALL

Mr. President, isn't DASS something about the student government?

Yes, Mr. President, it is.

Well, I first column on the grad students did not produce the results I had hoped for. Although I did receive quite a bit of positive verbal feedback, the letters were not forthcoming and I don't know exactly what the reasons for this are. Perhaps the gift was generic, or perhaps there was something that the grad students found poorly conceived. The only effect which could possibly attributed to my column were 278 tickets for the Powers that Be. As it is, there exists no counterpart of the SLC or HPC in the graduate sphere, and there is a need.

One problem concerning the graduate students here at du Lac has to do with the lack of a voice or spokesman for the grad. Graduate students would be able to find a consistent outlet for grad on any one topic (grads are a lot more heterogeneous than undergrads) and it is that it would probably have much of an effect on anything, it still might be nice to have some sort of grad voice which could be heard by the Powers That Be. As it is there exists no counterpart of the SLC or HPC in the graduate sphere, and there is a need.

The closest example of the latter is the calendar dispute of last year. Obviously such an early start would stand to affect the grad just as it would the undergrad and so the Powers That Be, or a least 15 per cent of the student body, in the dispute were conspicuous only by their absence. Such a situation is hardly defensible.

There do exist, of course, several candidates which could and could represent the grad in areas of this sort, but none of them appear to have the inclination to fill the shoes. To wit:

1) The Graduate Student Union. This organization does indeed exist, although no one has heard from it in this year. In fact, many first year grad students had even heard of it until they learned of its existence in the last 'Grad' column. The GSU has been charged with the job of improving the social aspect of the grad student, the grad student of the entire campus. If a student had not formed a moral code before he or she arrived at Notre Dame, then he or she must build one from the living social experiences. The only effect which could possibly attributed to my column is that the grad students are going to get acquainted. Don't you think it's a little too late?

2) There does exist several candidates which could and could represent the grad in areas of this sort, but none of them appear to have the inclination to fill the shoes. To wit:

The Observer. The Observer is for all practical purposes the forum-spokesman of the undergraduate student body. It highlights undergrad affairs, sits undergrad opinion, and chums undergrad causes. Unfortunately, like almost any other institution, it ignores the graduate. By far the largest portion of this blame can be placed at the Observer's door, but no small fault rests with the grads who seem unwilling to make use of the paper like the letters column, hint hint).

Thus we find a need for a graduate student political force, some process by which the grad can make themselves felt. The traditional institutions have either failed or been unwilling to try, leaving the grad effectively in the lurch, a situation all too likely to continue.

Chances are that no large number of professional dancers will develop from a group of students who begin dancing ballet on the college level and work only two days a week. Ballet is best learned when it can be practiced every day and the muscles begin to function automatically. But Mr. Stygar doesn't see this as a necessary drawback for the program. Ballet, he says, is the best form of physical training, and allows for the development of "maximum control with maximum freedom" in any individual who works at it. There is the possibility that St. Mary's will eventually have an independent dance program. This would be designed to come here and develop a familiarity with art, music, and theatre as well as excellence in dance.

The program as it is right now though, is certainly more than the beginning of the local fitness for an adventurous few. Anew art form is taking hold on Notre Dame's campus, and hopefully our appreciation of ballet can grow along with its availability for instruction.

The Cincinnati Ballet Company will soon perform both classical and modern works in O'Laughlin Auditorium. The performance is sponsored by the Dance and Drama Series of the Cultural Arts Commission, and will be at 8:00 p.m. on October 21. Tickets are $3.50 for adults and $2.50 for students and will be on sale starting October 9. This group will be accompanied by the local orchestra and the Notre Dame Symphony Orchestra.

by John Mahne

Wednesday October 9, 1974

Mr. Maurer and Mr. Stygar love to teach. Their enthusiasm has carried over to the St. Mary's Music Department, and they both are looking forward to teaching in the same time frame. Dr. Bain and Mr. Duley are waiting for new people to replace those who will not proceed from what has finally become a reality. The intended support is fully grasped, the first vigorous notes of the piano sound, toes out, heels in, and the demi-plier (passéouvé plié) begins.

The aim is to stretch and then relax the muscles, to develop a flow of movement so that not one fraction of a beat is wasted in stillness. A far distant goal is grace proceeding from what has finally become control. The demi-plier (in rapid succession) becomes the grande-plier; heels are allowed off the floor and the knees bend deeply.

This up and down movement ("pull up, relax down") is the first type in a sequence of increasing complexity. Soon one extended leg is in concert with a balancing act in the other. Finally, a series of jumps, torn pointed in the air, are accomplished with a tendu leg in concert with a balancing act on the floor. The intended leg is in concert with a balancing act on the floor. The intended leg is in concert with a balancing act on the floor.

The first task is to find something to hang the movement on, so that the art of ballet is a time corollary to that of drama.

Dr. Bain would like to see an expansion of the arts on both campuses and says "We're going to learn alot this year about interest and how this is structured next year. He speaks of first developing the ballet program within the already existent program of speech and drama. The department is now set up with consent to variations, so the first project will be to develop a concentration in dancing.

The bars and the mirrors, although ordered weeks ago, still haven't arrived, but this is a minor problem and no one's getting discouraged. Says Dr. Bain, "The first year we have to go through growing pains."

But Marsha Maurer and Christopher Stygar have arrived. Ms. Maurer, with expertise in movement that defies imagination, demonstrates for the class and goes on to talk at the department's恳切 to coordinating the exercises, often countingoud load (and one-and-two-and-three-and-four) and (literally keeping the notes of the class so that everyone is given the opportunity to at least test his or her limit of physical endurance.

Mr. Andrew McMck, a likeable, good-natured Scotman, can be found any day of the week in his job at the Ave Maria Press. Mr. McMck is the Director of the Ave Maria Press. The organization of a home football game was started by a man named Bill Duley, forty-three years ago. A man with a great love for Notre Dame, Mr. Duley felt that with a new 50,000-seat stadium being built, it would help greatly if there were trained men to control the expected swarm of people and automobiles. After discussing the idea with Knute Rockne, Mr. Duley received permission to build the organization that still exists today under Mr. McMck and his assistant, Mr. Arthur James.

Although his full time job is with the Ave Maria Press, Mr. McMck must still devote a good deal of his time to his work with the stadium personnel. The football season doesn't begin until September, but his work begins in February, when he starts looking for new people to replace those who will not be returning from the previous year. Any aspiring usher, gateman, or parking attendant may apply via a recommendation for in it we find the first - and only woman in the organization. Her name is Debbie Swett, and she writes up the injury reports on anyone who enters. Occasionally, the two doctors on duty didn't have after they were reported in the next day, so one could read their handwriting. During the week, Miss Swett is a secretary for the Ave Maria people.

On the Sunday before the home game, the men all meet to pick up their caps, the only real uniform clothing they have. A deposit is put down on those caps, which serve as quick identification, both to the stadium patrons and each other. The work begins in earnest at 4:00 p.m. on the Thursday before opening day, when Mr. McMck meets with his superior, Business Manager of Athletics Robert Cahill. Any new instructions are passed along to the supervisors in.a meeting which begins at 7:00 p.m. on Friday. Both of these meetings are held before each game.

There are fifteen supervisors in all, and these men can be easily identified by the gold caps that they wear. Each of these supervisors is in charge of four sections and has the authority of two of who are in charge of the parking areas, two in the field seats, and one in the press box. Each section has both a captain and a junior captain, who can be distinguished by the white caps they wear.

Counting these men, there are twelve ushers per section. Each gate, except for the two large main gates, has five gatemen, one of whom is in charge, also with a white cap. The large gates have double this manpower.

On game day, the men are told to show up no later than an hour and a half before kickoff, but many arrive as early as 7:00. At 8:45 a.m., a stadium inspection is held, and the men literally turn the building inside out to make sure everything is clean and in good working order. Any litter, broken phones, overflowing garbage cans, or other such problems are noted and, if possible, corrected before the game begins. The men must stay for an hour after the game, but do not see the hours of excitement that happened to Mr. McMck, who files a written report to Mr. Cahill the next day.

What I have described is the part that we, the fans, do not see - the hours of preparation that these men put in so that they are ready to help us in any way we can. It is important to note that this job is done strictly on a volunteer basis, for there is no pay. They meet at the same time holding down a full time job. Their name is not required to be present if they are free - provided that they're not busy aiding the fans, do not see - the hours of excitement that happened to Mr. McMck, who files a written report to Mr. Cahill the next day.

The last name is the idea with Knute Rockne, Mr. Duley
Students await completion of Campusview

by Matt Yokom  Staff Reporter

Students living in Stoneridge Garden Apartments and Townhouses, while waiting for their Campusview apartments to be completed, are confused as to whom they should give their rent. The confusion is a result of a change in the management of the Stoneridge apartments. The Crestwood Management and Development company, which owned Campusview, managed Stoneridge until Oct. 1 when Mr. and Mrs. Lu Barber took over. Since that time some students have written checks out to Stoneridge and some have made them out to Campusview as they had done previously. Both sets of managers believe that they should receive the rent.

Crestwood General Manager, Joseph Kleiser said when his firm terminated management of Stoneridge, a condition of their agreement was that students would continue to pay Campusview. Kleiser stated that the matter was turned over to their attorney in and "there is no law suit!" Kleiser said that the situation "will not affect the students at all; they will not be asked to pay twice." He also indicated that students do not have to pay the higher rent normally charged for Stoneridge, but only the rate they signed for with Campusview.

Mrs. Barber only stressed that the students will have a place to stay and need not worry. She wished not to be quoted on any other aspects of the situation other than saying that "both Campusview and Stoneridge are trying to take care of the boys."

Clinton Gibler, a senior engineering student living at Stoneridge, expressed his concern as to the legal rights of the students living at Stoneridge while under two different managements. He felt that "in spite of reassurances from management, that there is some doubt of their creditability because of past assurances that Campusview would be finished earlier." Gibler hoped that the University would "get into the problem and see what could be done."

Gibler stated that presently "22 units were occupied and another 24 units will be ready in a week to ten days." He indicated that all students would probably be in Campusview by the end of the month and some more will be moving in within a week.

"We are trying to eliminate construction around the buildings that will be occupied" Kleiser continued. "The first completed building with students in it was finished except for some details that are being attended to."

Kleiser concluded that "We won't have that problem in the other units. In the first building problems arose that couldn't be anticipated."

One of the first Campusview occupants Senior Marketing major John O'Brien who said "At first many things weren't installed, but only during the first two weeks." O'Brien also indicated that his rent was reduced to make-up for the inconvenience. He felt that in spite of the continuing construction, "it isn't too bad."

Junior Sociology major Mike Ishan also lives at Stoneridge and he indicated that he has had some disappointments, besides the confusion about the rent. He cited the poor response to service requests and the ambiguity of the final construction date as the major cases. Ishan did feel that although further from campus that "we have received equal or better facilities."

Gibler also indicated that he and his roommates were generally pleased with their present apartment, and that they had received their utilities free. He felt that "since the Campusview people have bent over backwards, while in a tough position, we hate to be obstinate. But we want to move into our apartment."

The annual Christmas card sales to raise money for CILA will be held for one week in the beginning of November. Money raised by the sales will help support CILA's many community projects.

CILA, the Council for the International Lay Apostolate, is a service organization affiliated with the Catholic Church. It responds to the needs of the community.

Members work with the day care centers, nursing homes, and the retarded. They offer their help to the community and run some programs of their own like tutoring sessions.

CILA also extends its service to summer projects. Members volunteer to work on projects to help underprivileged people in different parts of the country. Some of these regions are Appalachia, Panama, Mexico, New Orleans, and mid-western Indian reservations.

Like all clubs CILA receives money allocated by the University. Because this is not enough to meet the expenses of their programs the Christmas card sales have been held for several years.

This year's goal is to sell 40,000 cards for $1 each. The card design is by Joe Caranci, financial director of CILA. "Meeting the goal would give us about $40,000." Caranci noted.

For the most part, the emphasis of the sales will be concentrated on campus. A member of CILA will be assigned to each dorm so as many students as possible can be contacted.

Planned are sales by: Monday, beginning of Nov.
Tuesday, Beginning of Nov.
Wednesday, Beginning of Nov.
Thursday, Beginning of Nov.
Friday, Beginning of Nov.
Saturday, Beginning of Nov.
Sunday, Beginning of Nov.

Recently varsity hockey coach Charles 'Lefty' Smith has sounded much like an advertisement for a new detergent product Bluestar, "new and improved" or "a whole different look" are common among Bluestar's monogram winners, junior varsity players who could have been overlooked S'Mith's core of sophomores will be left short at the start of the season.

"Lefty" Smith is not in the business of looking back or winning hockey games. On September 27th the 1974-75 edition of the Bluestar will hit the ice in the ACC ice rink.

"Our squad will be skating together, emphasizing a go-no-go movement on the whole shift. With our good physical size, the game plan will be to control the flow of play by aggressive forechecking and backchecking," remarked coach Smith.

"We are really going to surprise a lot of people, including our own," commented Brian Walsh, last year's WCHA rookie-of-the-year. "Our game will be exciting two-way hockey, with a lot of hitting on both the forward line and the backcheck."

"We can't rely on those few key individuals to put the game together. Everyone connected with the last year's team felt we were too good a club to have that kind of season (14-2-2 overall, 11-16-1) in the WCHA. This changed attitude gets better with each practice. The attitude this season is completely different than last year," explained Brian Walsh, regular goalie the past two years, graduated last May and left a 4' 6" hole to fill.

"We are really going to surprise a lot of people, including ourselves," commented Brian Walsh, last year's WCHA rookie-of-the-year. "Our game will be exciting two-way hockey, with a lot of hitting on both the forward line and the backcheck." According to coach Smith.
