Basketball compromise lowers season pass prices

by Bob Mader
Staff Reporter

A compromise was reached on the price of this year's student ticket packages by Student Body President Pat McLaughlin and University Executive Vice President Fr. Edmund Joyce. Ninety thousand student season tickets, which constitute a major portion of gate receipt income, were in favor of a boycott. About 2000 students seats will be made available to students in any case anyway.

$18 per ticket, and 3500 bleacher seats will be sold at $18 per ticket.

The referendum held Friday indicated that about 60 percent of the students were in favor of a boycott. About 2000 students seats will be made available to students in any case anyway.

The referendum held Friday indicated that about 60 percent of the students were in favor of a boycott. About 2000 students seats will be made available to students in any case anyway.

Secondly, since all seats were the same price last year, McLaughlin felt that it was extremely unfair to let the price of the increase be carried by the juniors and seniors. He went on to say that Student Body Government could have accepted a $21-$14 price, but the number of good seats would have decreased while their price would have been the only one to increase. McLaughlin said he interprets this to be a compromise, but as the results of the referendum indicate, the opinion would be only fair that a price increase be carried by everyone, not specific classes.

Future price increase

McLaughlin reiterated that the total number of seats has increased from last year, and the number of St. Mary's students has also increased. McLaughlin feels that the compromise will "the best offer we'll get" with the prices being reduced from the original offer and the total number of seats increased. Cushion seats, offered at $28 per ticket in the original proposal, were sold at $22. The number of cushion seats has remained unchanged from last year.

$18 bleacher seats

Bleacher seats, originally offered at $21 per ticket, will be sold for $18. The total number of tickets has been increased by 400 over last year's allotment of 2006, and 400 tickets will be offered to St. Mary's students, instead of CUB students. McLaughlin will also try to buy any remaining Notre Dame student tickets before they are put up for public sale.

In his statement, Fr. Joyce said he strongly expects next year's price increase to be $28 for a cushion seat and $21 for a bleacher seat. McLaughlin said he interprets this to be a forewarning, but defined what they saw as a formal decision. A price increase next year will depend on the trend of expenses, and McLaughlin explained that he has committed himself to looking into other means of covering costs in the remaining months of the current year. He hopes his successor would feel the same way, and he is confident something can be worked out.

Freshman lottery

When asked about the possibility of a freshman lottery, McLaughlin said he has yet to figure out why the matter was even brought up. He pointed out that last year, when it was expected that we would not have enough seats, the Notre Dame's best basketball teams, student demands did not come near exceeding the quantity of tickets. Last year, about 4800 tickets were sold to ND-SCMC students out of a possible 5000, and the president said he cannot foresee how there would be an increased demand of 600 tickets over last year. He said the chances of a freshman lottery are close to zero.

However, in the event that in the future demand does exceed the supply, McLaughlin said he foresees how there would be an increased demand of 600 tickets over last year. He said the chances of a freshman lottery are close to zero.

Freshman lottery

Many students had already placed their reservation in the line-up and asked for their support.

Reasons for compromise

"We were truly astounded at the reaction of the student body to the announcement of increased ticket prices for 1974-75," Fr. Joyce related. "The charge of $2.00 per game for the lowest price was a shock, and the $5.50 per game for the upper arena seats seemed to us, and still seems, eminently reasonable. It represents a 20 percent increase over the face value of the tickets. It is not out of line with the price of other games." McLaughlin said this compromise was chosen over the other two reasons. First of all, in the other compromise which was discussed, the number of cushion seats would have been reduced from 1900 to 1900. Each

Black runs against Brademas

by Brian Clancy
Managing Editor

After the Bayh-Lugar contest, the next most important duel to be decided by local residents on election day will be the third district Congressional race, pitting Republican Virginia Black against incumbent Democrat John Brademas.

Black, a Roman Catholic who has been a high school teacher and homemaker in South Bend for years, is running on a pro-life platform against Brademas, who she said has voted twice in favor of bills she said has voted twice in favor of bills allocating funds for abortions.

A graduate of Seton Hill College in Pennsylvania, Black decided to run because, she felt that it was her duty to do something to stop the murder of two million innocent children.

Brademas is a member of the First United Methodist Church who is a graduate of Harvard and a former Rhodes scholar, in seeking his ninth consecutive term in office.

In Indiana, the politics of the 1974 election will be the third amendment Congress in favor of bills she said has voted twice in favor of bills allocating funds for abortions.

Brademas has proposed a four-pronged attack which he feels the government should take soon to alleviate the impact of inflation and recession on those hardest and most immediately affected.

His attack consists of: (1) cuts in federal spending on wasteful activities; (2) a reduction in personal income taxes for middle and low-income families; (3) a boost in loan funds for housing, consumer purchases and small business; and (4) an expanded program of public service jobs.

Brademas has been very active in the Revolutionary War. The program will serve to establish "a double standard of justice in the country."

Regarding the national economy, Brademas feels that President Ford is making a mistake by, "listening to the same economic advisors responsible for the disastrous economic policies of the Nixon administration."

Black feels that the major problem with the economy is "tough government spending."

She pointed out that there were major items of concern expressed by the freshmen in their economy, Brademas feels that Ford's economic policies of the Nixon administration were a mistake and that it served to establish "a double standard of justice in the country."

On the nomination of Nelson Rockefeller for Vice President, however, the candidates once again parted paths. Brademas hailed Rockefeller's nomination because "His long service as a chief executive of a major state and his considerable acquaintance with foreign policy clearly qualify him."

Black, on the other hand, is opposed to Rockefeller because of his actions as Governor of New York. Rockefeller was governor when New York's controversial abortion legislation was passed.

One of Brademas' chief accomplishments in the House was the Higher Education Act of 1972 which established the Basic Opportunity Grants and Guaranteed Student Loans programs. This bill was designed to help both low and middle income students to finance their college educations.

Black feels that her lack of political experience is to her advantage. "I am starting fresh, I can't be blamed as a Republican for Watergate, and I also have no ties to anyone," she said.

Brademas emphasized that 85 percent of Brademas' contributions are from outside of his district. "If I'm elected," she said, "I can represent just the people in my district."

Black further pointed out that her campaign is hurting severely from a lack of funds. On September 10, when both candidates declared their contributions, Brademas had over $40,000 compared to Black's $3,000.

What are the rights and responsibilities modified in the Academic Manual?

Dear Sirs: Students squeezed by fiscal views, and struggling with tuition rates. Were not amused when they were told. That they'd be led out in the cold. (Again.) Permit me now to set the stage. And cite the reasons for the rage. (Among students.) The Observer is my creditor. Its letters to the editor informed me of an awful deed. (A price increase I barely need.) Now basketball is getting bigger. Thanks to efforts of King Digger. (And his court.)

But as the team and rankings grew," so I'm told, the prices go. (To see the action.) And by some tricky jurisprudence. The rules allow St. Mary's students to send, at best, a meager fraction as token viewers of the action. Now there are reasons, I surmise. For ticket prices on the rise. Three baskets will soon grace their floor. (So Irish teams more points can score.) And Digger's teams won't freeze on courts. Since they'll be clad in fur-lined shorts.

The coach should keep in step with facts. So I suggest we buy his plauds. Advise your date, the treat is Dutch. Since tickets now cost twice as much.

Though shocked I was, I'm more inclined, To force the issue from my mind. For Iam told that hardy creatures Survive the season in the bleachers. Yet one concern I think I share. With those who sit in thinner air. When lesser foes the team is beating.

Who will stop my nose from bleeding? Thomas A. Pearson

Where Is Freedom?

Dear Editor:

Where can freedom go? If the University listens to the editorial of Tom Draper's editorial of 8 Oct. 1974, freedom will be just another word with no reality at Notre Dame. Because of the nature of campus life, i.e., maids, dining hall, and laundry, and because of the Administration's emphasis on their new morality, freedom is limited to the point of non-existent. Even with all the problems of off campus living, at least we are free from the threat of in loco parentis. Mr. Draper, do not suggest that the University as a land lord to the off campus students, for then we are back to the dorm life all over again without the conveniences of on campus life. At least a choise between life styles at ND. The value of individual freedom and the new value of moral character should be allowed to co-exist. The value of a Notre Dame academic education is worthwhile. Must, however, we all be subjected to the ND bureaucracy in the running of our every day and non-academic lives? One of the first orders of business, the Administration apparently is the off-campus affrays. The more responsibility it will assume; the more ability to make mistakes and live with the consequences of one's actions. Living off-campus is one of the most wholesome experiences a student can have at ND for his personal development. The more the University participates in the off-campus affairs the more responsibility it will assume; the more ability to make mistakes and live with the consequences of one's actions. Where Is Freedom?

Dear Editor:

As a Notre Dame student and a human being, I am outraged at the one-sided controversy now in progress over revision of the sexual code. The absurdity of allowing the Notre Dame Administration to dictate the extent of human relationships is all too apparent; however, the student body, typically, is meeting the dicatcism with childish submissiveness. The administrations priorities, in order, appear to be the Catholic, academic, and democratic, with the following students importance following far down the list.

If false, just precise comments (Oct. 7) are an indication of the thought involved, it is a mockery to call Notre Dame a place of open learning. His vague Catholic platitudes (note Catholic, not Christian, Brother) were an insult to the intelligence, and a typical administrative action on the part of the University.

It will be disappointing, but not unexpected, if the student body allows the SLC to retain present premarital sexual codes. The N.D. student, indoctrinated into being ashamed about panty raids and steak days, must wake up and make noise. If the rule holds nevertheless, I may be among those off-campus folk. We won't be leaving the flock, though, just the sheep.

Gordon Lightfoot ambled onstage last Friday at 8:45, and although the show went on till 11:29—nearly two-and-a-half hours, an extraordinary amount of time for a solo performer—the audience of 5,000 would have surely stayed for more. During that period Lightfoot began thirty-four different songs, everything from "Sunspirited versions of "High and Dry," and that period Lightfoot began thirty-four different songs, everything from "Sunspirited versions of "High and Dry," and the soundman which Lightfoot said contributed to the overall finesse of the production—"I had already been bowled over by that the night before—but the beast strength of the two bands and the flexibility of the dancers," David McClain's latest effort is a multimedia ballet, "El Cieco." Duly committed, the critics have suggested that the Joffrey of the New York City Ballet would probably like to steal it. Much credit for the company's success must go to David McClain, under whom the group achieved professional status. A teacher-choreographer at the University of Cincinnati, he is also head of the Dance Division of the College of Conservatory of Music. Prior to coming to Cincinnati, McClain held positions with the Robert Lofton Ballet Company and the American Ballet Center in New York City. He was also a member of the faculty of the School of the Pennsylvania Ballet in Philadelphia. He is a past chairman of the National Conference on Ballet in Higher Education and a former member of the board of directors for the American Association of Dance Companies.

Lending a classical bent to the ballet troupe, it is she who will be staging and coaching Anton Dolin's recreation of the Victorian "Pas de Quatre" when it is performed in O'Laughlin's California Ballet. Director David McClain has begun to build a series of modern ballets developed by the late Lester Horton, a well known West Coast dance figure. Monday night the company will be dancing "Verve," a Brazilian carnival street dance which is based on Horton's "Tropic Trio." The Cincinnati Ballet Company's diversity and flexibility was well noted in its Wednesday night performance June 1974 production of Michel Fokine's "Firebird." An elaborately panstomimed fairy tale, the ballet was performed in Cincinnati and broadcast over CBS television. Though Wiorabiak, music critic for the Cincinnati Post wrote: "The thing that struck me most while viewing the Cincinnati Ballet Company (CBC) in its Saturday night performance of Fokine's "The Firebird" was not too much the overall finesse of the production—I had already been bowled over by that the night before—but the beast strength of the two bands and the flexibility of the dancers."
Octoberfest activities set

The SMC social commission is sponsoring Octoberfest '74 on October 16th and 17th on SMC campus. The idea originated last year in the spring when current members of SMC social commission thought that a traditional event similar to An Tostel but in the fall would be a welcome addition to campus activities. Jenny Lee, manager of public relations, described it as "a social activity that does not involve a lot of money but does involve a lot of fun."

The festivities start out on Tuesday, the 15th, with an interclass softball game and an ND soccer exhibition. On Wednesday, Saga will present a German dinner.

Erratum

In the Thursday, Oct. 10, issue of the Observer, the $600 faculty salary supplement was misstated as amounting to an 11.5 million dollar expenditure. The increase only amounts to approximately 5 million dollars.

ND social atmosphere discussed

by Mary Reher
Staff Reporter

Last weekend the rectors of the female dorms expressed their views about the hostility between Notre Dame men and women. Many of the rectors attribute this antagonism to a lack of the right kind of social activities.

"The Letters to the Editor in the Observer last week expressing a lack of the right views about the hostility between female dorms expressed their personal hurt," explained Sr. Jean Lenz, rector of Farley. "Instead of taking the time to work out their problems, they just walk away and blow off steam by writing in the paper. It would be ideal if they could be more patient and discuss their frustrations," she said. Lenz expressed her belief that couples are too possessive of each other too soon in their relationship and girls to do active things with someone all night," she continued. "It's better for guys to make an effort to help the individual."

SMC board to revise judicial case procedures

by Bill Flanagan
Staff Reporter

The St. Mary's Student Relations Board is undertaking a plan that will revise the procedure in which cases before the Board are to be heard.

Mamie Antho in instrumental in the planning of the revision, said the Board is "pre-writing the entire judicial procedure."

Her feelings are that the changes will not be available for some time yet, according to Antho who feels that they would be inappropriate to discuss any of the specifics until the plan is completed. Antho said that in the future cases will be handled on a half- half basis. "We will only probably be some type of representative hall board which, in any case, would give the individual a fairer chance to present a case," she said.

Antho added that the purpose of the revision is not to provide a "disciplinary mechanism," but instead to make an effort to help the individual well because the women and men are playing together and not competing against each other," she said.

Sr. Barbara Counts, rector of Lyons, noted that women prove to be competitors in classes and the men resent this. "American men, in general, think they have a role of dominance they must follow and some women aren't aware of these feelings," she stated.

The problem stems from the fact that it's a virile atmosphere at Notre Dame into which women have come," said Sr. Jane Pitz, assistant rector of Walsh. She said there was an antagonism between men and women last year, too, when girls from other colleges were housed in for Marli Gras. This year it was triggered by the panty raids, she claims.

Rector Helen Gallagher said, "Male-female relationships involve risks of rejection and being made a fool of. Guys are scared of being turned down and girls are compared to St. Mary's girls and stereotyped."

Gallagher stated that young people need to feel freer and more relaxed together. The problem is the decrease of large parties, where people were used to interacting.

The campus is much quieter as a result, she remarked. "It makes me feel uncomfortable to think that students have a place to call home" for nine months of the year.

The rector of Breen-Phillips, Jean Thomas, observed that there are lonely men and women who have never dated, would like to meet someone, but don't know how. She feels they would fit into small groups better than large one-shot parties. Thus, they need a place to interrelate without force on a regular basis.

Pitz, Thomas, and Counts all mentioned the Nazz and Darby's Place as good places for young people to meet informally. "We need more places with neutral atmospheres like the coffeehouse feel, and some type of representative hall board which, in any case, would give the individual a fairer chance to present a case," she said.

Flags fly, but Owls grounded 10-3

by Greg Corgan
Sports Editor

Even without playing, Saturday's referees, in Notre Dame's 10-3 win over Rice, compiled some impressive statistics. In fact, they even outgained the Owls.

For the afternoon, referee Tom Paraskevich and his crew garnered 269 yards in 175 penalties, each of which included a flag. The combined 175 flags (172 false starts, 3 delay of game, and 1 unnecessary roughness) would be a new penalty record for a single game.

"I have been coaching for 25 years and I have never seen a call like that," said a somewhat bewildered Paraskevich. "We ran an offside penalty play for first down yardage and there was no motion on the play. The official indicated our offensive lineman were not lining up properly on the ball. We said their helmets were not on a line even with the center's numerals.

"I went down to the 30-yard line to talk to me I 9's, but without my ball club," he continued. "I just kept asking, 'Where do you want them?' I was merely soliciting information so it would not be called again."

"The official turned to me and said, 'You are beyond the 35-yard line.' I was merely soliciting information and I did not use any profanity. If they had merely moved every time we moved the line, there would have been a new penalty record set.

"The long gain by the officials contributed to a scenario that would be pleasing to冰川 Notre Dame."

Notre Dame was in the midst of a well-executed drive originating at the Rice 23 yard line, where on first down they received a five-yarder for a delay of game.

"We've made too many mistakes. I never saw so many flags drop," said the wrinkled coach.

"We had a lot of bad breaks," echoed guard Gerry DiNardo. "We were forced into too many third and long situations."

"The penalties are what hurt us most," added DiNardo's counterpart at left guard Al Wujciak. "But they're no small team. They're going to win some ball games."

"We played well, we played hard and wanted to win," said Rice Head Coach Al Conover. "We've just got to get better offensively."

"Our kids played their hearts out, and we'll be a good football team before it is over. That's all I want to say for now."

"The Irish said a little more in the second half, but not much."

The offense outshone the defense Saturday afternoon. The Irish "D" total offense, and only 43 in the second half in the 10-3 ND victory.

Of the end zone.

The Owls scored their only points of the half game on their second possession. A 59-yard drive stalled at the Irish 19 and Alan Pringle, a senior from Caracas, Venezuela, boomed a 36-yard field goal with 2:25 left to play in the quarter.

The Irish didn't tie things up until their sixth possession of the half game. Starting from his own 46, Clements hit Demmerle for 13 yards, Al Samuel for 11, and Jim Weiler for four down to the Rice 30.

A 15-yard holding penalty put the ball back at the Rice 41, but Clements came back to Ron Goodman for 18 yards and Samuel and Goodman for seven, putting the Irish on the Owls' 16 yard line.

Clements then lost 12 back to the 38, and two incompleted passes later, Dave Reeves kicked a 45-yard field goal to knot the game 3-3 at halftime.

"We're playing the kind of fundamental football we like to," noted Paraskevich. "We're making too many mistakes to be a good football team."

"I think the first penalty was uncalled for, because I was merely trying to get information and I did not use any profanity. If they had merely moved every time we moved the line, there would have been a new penalty record set."

The long gain by the officials contributed to a scenario that would be pleasing to ice cold Notre Dame.

"I think Rice did a great job defensively. There were too many mistakes on our part, it made for an extremely close football game."

The good and the bad

"Notre Dame won. What more can you say?"

However, notre Dame's defensive and, uninterestingly, the Irish defeated Rice 10-3 in what was supposed to be another soft touch Saturday afternoon.

The Notre Dame defense, hampered extensively by penalties, generally sputtered. For the first 57 minutes of the game, Clements and Co. could not find their way into the Owl's endzone. With a fired-up Rice defense to complement the ineligible receiver penalty, the Notre Dame offense was stifling.

The offensive secondary, burned early by short passes, adjusted itself to shut off Rice quarterback Claude Reed in the final period.

Over all, there were many standout Irish performances. Tom Clements (15-26 for 179 yards) turned in his usual fine game and the Notre Dame defense was simply devastating. Despite the individual efforts, the game was somewhat less than inspiring with 39 penalties, 16 punts, and only 13 points between the two teams. The crowd responded to the lackluster football by pushing up against the stands with a new innovation, batting around giant football balloons.

For many, the games in the stands seemed a lot more interesting than the field.
