Chicano injustices denounced in lecture

by John Corrao

Professor Horward Glickstein, director of the Center for Civil Rights at the Notre Dame Law School, denounced injustices being committed against the Chicano population in the U.S. in a lecture last night in the Library lounge.

Professor Glickstein traced the plight of the Mexican-American throughout the history of the United States. He stated Chicano were at a disadvantage from the beginning because of the way they became American citizens, being absorbed into the U.S. against their will after the Mexican War.

Denied Political Power

Glickstein emphasized that in the early years of our country, Mexican-Americans were denied any form of political power. Despite the majority of Chicano living in the annexed areas of American government, many were considered to be the most effective citizen's lobby in Washington.

Speaking in Grace Hall, Conway focused on the provisions of the bill which prohibits the use of cash, set a limit of $1000 for individual contributions and require campaign treasurers to run the matching private contributions for every candidate.

In addition, the group is involved in lobbying at the federal level only, and concentrating on lobbying at the federal level only, and concentrating on the lobbying process. The group has been lobbying for public funding by matching private contributions for every candidate that demonstrates that he has wide-spread grassroots support. Conway explained.

Conway also stressed Common Cause involvement in the successful passage of two constitutional amendments—which lowered the voting age to 18 and the proposed Equal Rights Amendment.

Presently, the group is concerned with congressional reform, specifically the elimination of the seniority system which will end the Senate's use of the filibuster and leave more room for the House of Representatives, the last bastion of support for the war-making operations.

Common Cause was formed in 1970 by John Gardner, former Cabinet member in the Johnson administration. According to Conway, Gardner, former Cabinet member in the Johnson administration, had entered a guilty plea.

Gardner, who resigned from the administration, said yesterday that the Watergate affair had a "profound" effect on the Watergate scandal. Gardner, who was among the last bastion of support for the war-making operations, had entered a guilty plea.

Gardner, who was among the last bastion of support for the war-making operations, had entered a guilty plea.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Special Correspondent, said Wednesday that evidence in the Watergate cover-up trial will establish the guilt of Richard M. Nixon in the conspiracy. As Nixon, as he had entered a guilty plea.

Jaworski's former top assistant, Philip T. Lacovara, agreed with that assessment and also voiced another strong objection to President Ford's pardon of his predecessor.

Jaworski, who is leaving the post of special Watergate prosecutor, said at a press conference in Houston, in an interview with the Wall Street Journal, "The evidence will show he's guilty, just as much as a guilty plea."

While indicating he had no quarrel with Ford's decision to clear Nixon in advance of any Watergate-connected crimes, Jaworski said acceptance of the pardon was another indication of the former president's guilt.

"A pardon isn't just a beautiful document to frame and hang on the wall," he said. "You are offered a pardon only because it is believed you can be charged and convicted. You accept it only if you want to stop the trial and want to be cleared."

Lacovara, who resigned from the Watergate prosecution team five weeks ago, said on the NBC-TV Today program that the pardon decision was "fundamentally erroneous and inconsistent with the values that I, at least, had been working to vindicate in the American judicial system."

And commenting on the cover-up trial of five former aides to Nixon, Lacovara said: "If you take at face value the representations by the prosecutors at the opening of the trial you can fairly well assume that substantial evidence of Mr. Nixon's criminal involvement will be presented to the jury...

"We went to the Supreme Court in July of this year to obtain enforcement of the subpoena to President Nixon for an additional 55 or 60 tapes beyond those that were available to the House Judiciary Committee. And I think you would find that there will be additional items of information that will come out of this trial about Mr. Nixon's role."

Jaworski, who was special prosecutor for 11 months after Nixon had Archibald Cox fired from the job, said of the former president's pardon: "It's a mistake to believe there would have been more evidence for the public if he hadn't been tried. If he had been pardoned after indictment, the public would have had no new information."

"If he had gone to trial, he could have invoked his Fifth Amendment guarantees against self-incrimination, pleaded guilty, and we wouldn't have learned any new details."

"Chicanos for years have had a great problem with the language barrier," he stated. "Most Spanish-speaking children are forced to use English in school, which in many cases is the language for their difficulties." He noted that only 60 per cent of all Mexican American children completed high school, and that three-fifths of these have reading deficiencies.
CUBA CITY, Wis. (UPI) - The Wisconsin National Farmers Organization Wednesday offered President Ford the carcasses of 1,000 calves for shipment to hurricane victims in Honduras after Ford criticized the protest slaughter Tuesday of 600 animals.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The House Wednesday passed and sent of the President an $61.5 million authorization measure to extend for the next 18 months aid for vocational rehabilitation programs.

The measure, approved on a 344-4 vote, would set up the Rehabilitation Services Administration under a commissioner in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, moving it out of its location in the Social and Rehabilitation Service.

OAKLAND (UPI) - Oakland's Jim Holt smacked a two-run single and sparked a four-run sixth inning Wednesday night, giving the A's a 5-2 straight world championship. victory over Los Angeles in the fourth game of the World Series.

FT. BRAGG, N. C. (UPI) - About 150 members of the 82nd Airborne Division, placed on alert for possible duty in Boston, practiced riot maneuvers Wednesday.

Some of the paratroopers rehearsed gas mask drills and others went through riot baton tactics while still others stood nearby in full combat gear, including rifles.

The Board of Trustees of the University of Notre Dame will convene on Friday, morning, Oct. 18. Immediately preceding this meeting, Fellows of the University will elect four new Board members, according to Richard Conklin, Director of Information Services. Nearly the entire day-long meeting will concern itself with a discussion of the recommendations of the Committee on University Priorities. Some of the material to be considered has already been studied by the appropriate communities of the Board.

Part of the conference will be devoted to a report by Fr. Jerome Wilson concerning progress on the renovation of the LaFortune Student Center. The Trustees will also be briefed on the North Central Accreditation Association report, the conclusions of which have previously appeared in the Observer.

SMC Octoberfest continues

by Susan Divita
Staff Reporter

St. Mary's students transformed their campus into the world of German Oktoberfest yesterday as decorations were painted in dorms and music from the Veineschneit Six band.

Activities yesterday included the hayride shuttle, a pick-up truck filled with hay and pumpkins offering free rides between St. Mary's and Notre Dame.

The German dinner, arranged by Sagi food service and third floor McCandless residents, made stepping in line like stepping into a cabinet. Skits led by Sue Hausen, social commission representative from McCandless, and friends, were performed to German tunes, music from "The Sound of Music" and polkas in which everyone was invited to join.

Marge Fuchs, St. Mary's Social Commissioner and chairwoman of Oktoberfest calls Oktoberfest her "Little dream come true." She described the dinner a huge success "Everyone who talked to me was so excited," said Fuchs.

Oktoberfest continues today with a variety of activities. An Arts and Crafts Show will be held in LeMans

Elton John tickets to go on sale Monday

Tickets for the Nov. 3 Elton John Concert will go on sale 9 a.m. Monday, October 31 at the Student Union Ticket Office in LaFortune.

In order to handle the large number of students desiring tickets, a special route is planned to monitor traffic flow during the ticket sales.

Beginning at 7:30 a.m., admittance for ticket sales will be made through the main entrance of LaFortune, said Joe Russo, student union ticket manager. After entering, students are requested to turn left and go up the steps to the Ballroom. Signs will be placed in the Ballroom to direct students to the ticket window.

"The building will be locked at 12:30 on Sunday night," said Russo. "There will be security officers searching the building so no one tries to hide there to get in line first."

All concert tickets cost $7.50 with seats being distributed on a first come basis. Each student is limited to the purchase of 12 tickets, checks should be payable to Student Government Fund and include student ID and campus addresses.

"Everything will run smoothly and quickly if we receive your cooperation," emphasized Russo.

Donate Your Ticket

If you can, try to remember back to the thrill of your first college football game. Now, think of what it would mean to give someone less fortunate than yourself the chance to experience that same thrill.

This weekend, Notre Dame students are again being asked to donate their football tickets so that underprivileged children from the South Bend area can see the Irish play.

The ticket program benefits the Neighborhood Study Help Program, the South Bend Big Brothers, and the Logan Center with amazing response. Last year, over seven hundred tickets were donated. This year, a goal of eight hundred has been set.

These kids will most likely be getting their first chance to see a college football game. Moreover, it is a Notre Dame game; a factor which to a child means more than we may realize.

It looks as though the Irish will, as the sports writers say, romp over Army this weekend. So the sacrifice is not too much to ask. And there are three more home games in the future: Pitt, Miami, and Air Force.

Aside from the practical considerations, the chance to help someone less fortunate has become rare in the Notre Dame community. Now is a good time to try a gesture of charity.

Not having enough coherent thoughts this week to make one coherent column, I just strung together a column from two or three of my thoughts that would cohere. Be forewarned.

Grad Apathy
Graduate students are apathetic. I didn't realize how apathetic until the two 'Grad' columns appeared and appealed for letters. No one wrote, although quite a few grades mentioned the columns privately and a few suggested I was too soft and about the only people who didn't especially like the columns were the MBAs who resent being considered jocks and I can't help what they're considered. Even the Grad Student Union hasn't sent a letter to the Observer defending their honor. Either I don't care what grads think of them, or I'm not worth the trouble of bothering with. I'm apathetic. Most likely a combination of the three.

Incidentally, the president of the GSU is MBA Ann Darin. An interesting theory concerning the causes of grad apathy was given by a 2nd year grad student not too long ago. According to him, grades are apathetic as the only possible reaction to the Notre Dame community.

Most ND graduate students did not attend de la Rue as an undergraduate and consequently must have gone to some other institution much more likely to be rationally operated and, while necessarily liberal, certainly could not have had the ridiculous rules we find foisted upon the hapless students here at Notre Dame. Such grads, no doubt, have trouble adjusting to an administration which suddenly realizes that, after years of operating with a rule, it is right and even illegal to allow students under 21 to drink liquor.

What can a grad do but be bewildered at the hysteria of a football weekend when alumni flood the bookstore and the quad and winning a football game becomes the be-all and end-all.

Online could a grad who attended some other institution for the previous four years react to Administrators the likes of Don Bouffard who state that Notre Dame basketball games are not necessarily intended for students and it might be best for all if the students didn't buy any tickets? On any other campus to which the grads have been exposed to can we find such endearing Notre Dame fixtures as panty raids and a co-ed student body sharply split into vicious male and female factions?

Therefore, according to the theory, the only way to become integrated into ND would be to spend four years here as an undergraduate and only then (maybe) would the campus make some sense for those who didn't and are accustomed to some other form of reality, apathy is the only rational and sane alternative.

Elton John
Elton John tickets go on sale in less than a week and one is lead to wonder whether it would be worthwhile trying to get tickets or not. How long can the lines be? The situation isn't helped any by the AC, the promoter of the event. A few questions arise to a situation of this sort, the primary one being why ND and SMC students aren't given preference to the tickets. It would surely benefit the students if either 1) ticket sales were limited to ND and SMC students, 2) students were given first choice or 3) students were given a discount. Besides vague references to moral obligations to South Bend, there appears no reason that such a policy shouldn't be in force.

Aside from not giving preference to ND and SMC students, the promoters are also courting disaster by an asinine pricing policy. For those of you who don't know, all tickets in front of Elton sell for $7.50 while those behind him sell for $6.50. Consequently, the front row rickets will cost the student as much as back row bleacher seats, on the first come, first served. As it is, five South Bend cops will be stationed at each ticket outlet (so says the Ombudsman) to handle the crowds. A little wiser policy might have the tickets range from $10.50 to $5.50 depending, like most concert tickets do, on seating position. Better yet would be a range from $12.50 to $7.50 while those behind him sell for $6.50. Consequently, the front row rickets w ill cost the student as much as back row bleacher seats, on the first come. Student ignorance towards starvation revealed in poll

by Doug Meyers

A poll conducted two weeks ago by the Program in Non-Violence indicated students are poorly informed on the world food problem. The poll, part of the Program in Non-Violence's study of student awareness on current issues revealed 82.4 percent of the undergraduates questioned thought starvation was one of the three most important problems facing the world.

Junior Michael Apfeld, survey director, said only half of the 244 students questioned were aware of recent news coverage on the world's food supply. Of this number, nearly 24 percent felt the news coverage on the food situation in Africa was insufficient, 45 percent had no idea of the number of people who starved to death each month. Of those who did say they knew the number of victims, only 4 percent gave estimates within the correct range of 333,000 to 1,650,000 persons a month.

When asked whether countries should be self-sufficient and independent, 60 students, 23.2 percent answered yes. Questioned if they believed that 10 percent of the world should be self-sufficient and independent, 60 students, 23.2 percent, said it was possible.

"If the information obtained in the poll was printed in Class Notes, it may help make people who read it more aware of the problem," commented Apfeld. "The media has been brought up to such an unimportant status that it shows in the proposed senior seminar course."

The program is also working in conjunction with the Campus Ministry and CILSA on this campaign," commented junior Tim Scull, who is also working on this program.

The informal discussion will be held tonight at 4 p.m. in the Library. Town meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in the Library.

"This year the deadline for dropping a course is Friday, October 25. After a student can drop a course only in cases of serious physical or mental illness."
Four exposed to radioactivity

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (UPI) - Four employees at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory were accidentally exposed to radioactive contamination Monday during a routine cleanup procedure in the hot cell complex of the Atomic Energy Commission AEC facility here.

A spokesman for Union Carbide, which operates the laboratory for the AEC, said the four men took showers to remove the radioactive dust from their bodies, and that a number of tests were then conducted to determine whether the men inhaled any of the contaminated material.

The men underwent tests by the laboratory's whole body counter, a device capable of detecting tiny amounts of most kinds of radioactivity.

Student unrest closes schools in Louisiana

KAPLAN, La. (UPI) — Three parish schools were closed Monday as 13 students suspended and eight youths arrested Wednesday following a series of racial fist fights among students in Vermilion Parish.

Kaplan police chief Aubrey Dellanje said the district has "been having a little trouble at the schools with fights and they decided to close the schools down until Friday."

"We're getting together with the school principal and we're finding out who's causing the trouble and rounding them up," Dellanje said most of the youths arrested were high school dropouts or nonstudents.

Tension has been steadily mounting in the area since last Thursday, when a black student claimed he was beaten by several whites.

A school board official the closing had no connection with racial tensions in St. Charles Parish, 10 miles to the east, where one student was killed Oct. 7.
At workshop this weekend

Homosexuality to be discussed

A workshop dealing with questions on homosexuality will be held this Friday and Saturday at Moreau Seminary, announced Father Oliver Williams, director of the Professional Program in the Department of Theology. The purpose of the workshop will be to make future priests more sensitive and able to offer guidance to young homosexuals. "I feel it is mostly the Church's fault that young homosexuals feel so paranoid and unable to offer guidance to young people," he concluded. Said Fr. Williams.

He remarked that in training priests for today's world, many sensitive issues are being discussed that were never touched on in the past. Also attending the workshop will be two homosexuals from the Chicago chapter of "Dignity." They will speak on what it means to be a homosexual in today's society. Concerning homosexual organizations on the Notre Dame campus, Williams remarked that it is a shame that these organizations are not more open and communicative with the Fairfield Center for Counseling. "I have no problem with them," he said. Fr. Williams.

The purpose of the workshop will be to enable these organizations to come above ground and be more open in their activities," he added. One of the founders of "Gay Students at Notre Dame," also said he was optimistic towards the workshop, "I feel it is imperative that we be able to fully make peace with the homosexual." He also feels this workshop will present the plight of the homosexual in a new and different perspective. Fr. Williams expects between fifty and sixty students to attend the workshop. "Our whole point will be to stress that the Catholic Church loves everybody," he concluded.

Steve Neece: We’re going to have to keep improving

by Pete McHugh

In the glamorous world of the college football player, Steve Neece is really nothing special. He is just an offensive lineman. He has no statistics. He wins no games. But despite the veritable anonymity of his offensive tackle position, Neece is rather content where he is. “You don’t think about it too much. In junior high school and high school everybody wants to play defense, but I just wasn’t a defensive player and my coach saw that. Now, I’ve learned to really like the offensive plays.” However unglamorous his position now is on the interior line, Neece has had his share of accomplishments. A native of Janesville, Wisconsin, he captained his football team to its first conference championship in 28 years in 1973. He started all eleven games and threw a key block in Eric Penick’s 85 run against USC.

Neece is one of five returning starters to the Irish offensive line along with right tackle Steve Sylvester, center Mark Breneman, guard Gerry DiNardo, and tight end Robin Weber. He emphasized the importance of such familiarity in play execution, “The more you’re around each other, the better you tend to complement each other. If you do screw up, there’s always someone to back you up. And when everything works together, it makes things just a little bit better.”

In regard to Notre Dame’s remaining games, he stressed a need for improvement. “I hope we keep improving and end up going undefeated. Hopefully some teams we’ll get knocked off and we’ll knock some off. But we’re going to have to keep improving.”

A business major, Neece is not yet looking beyond graduation and any pro football possibilities. He said, “I haven’t really been thinking about it. I can’t afford to think about it.” He’s just hoping to have a good year. Things will happen after that.

Ruggers edged by Palmer

by Bob Kinsel

Maybe the Notre Dame rugby ‘A’ team should have worn green and gone back to bed early Sunday morning before their contest with Palmer College. The gloominess of the weather should have been a warning of bad events to come.

In a tight, evenly fought game, the Irish 11-0 lost their perfect record to Palmer, dropping a 21-18 decision. As has been characteristic this season, the Irish gave up points early in the contest. Palmer scored two quick points to put the Irish in the hole from the start.

“We always seem to get behind right at the start,” commented team captain Larry Gremming, “and then we settle down. Thesory was the same against Palmer, only we’re no good a team to give such a lead to.”

After awakening to the twelve point deficit, the Irish settled into their basic patterns in the scrum and backfield. Mike Galman opened up the Irish for a four point try with Mark Koenig hitting the conversion kick. Doug Mosser broke away on an 80 yard romp for ND’s second try. Again Mark Koenig converted the kick to even the score at the half.

“We never seem to get behind right at the start,” commented team captain Larry Gremming, “and then we settle down. Thesory was the same against Palmer, only we’re no good a team to give such a lead to.”

Whatever happened to the Irish? The scratch team had the Irish within reach even as the week ended.

The warm climate of Florida and the bright lights at Carter Field near Palm Beach didn’t do the Irish any favors. The Irish came out on the short end of the score, 17-21.

The Irish followed their second try with another, which resulted in another successful conversion kick. Palmer returned with their own try and kick late in the game to even the score.

Both teams threatened numerous times, missing penalty kicks that could have decided the game. The Irish couldn’t find the爱尔兰 against Pittsburg last year. Neece has a pulled hamstring and may miss this week’s game with Army.

The Notre Dame soccer team upped its record to 6-3-1 by winning three of four games in recent action. After a forfeit victory over Northwestern and a 6-1 loss to Goshen, the Irish swept conference opponents in an undefeated season at Craig High School.

Last year, Neece battled back from an ankle injury to win the starting left tackle spot, started all eleven games and threw a key block in Eric Penick’s 85 run against USC.

Whoever said rugby wasn’t rough hasn’t seen the Irish squad. Un fortunately, they weren’t tough enough last Saturday as they dropped their first game of the season.

The Irish went ahead on Doug Mosser’s second try of the afternoon, with Koenig commemorating with a successful conversion kick. Palmer returned with their own try and kick late in the game to even the score.
