Hesburgh may veto
passes revised sex rule

by Pat Hanifin
Staff Reporter

The Student Life Commission yesterday (Tuesday) passed a revised rule on sex, after four attempts, passing a new sexuality rule. The rule, which now goes to Fr. Hesburgh for approval or veto, prohibits under pain of suspension or expulsion sexual misconduct which is "coercive," or is "perverse." The rule, after previous warning or any sexual abuse of another person through coercion and/or violence, may result in suspension or expulsion. The new provision, passed by a fourteen-six vote, is divided into three parts. The first section is similar to the philosophical wording in the present rule and will be placed in the preamble. The second section provides for serious misconduct and would be inserted immediately after Rule 5 in the Rules section of the SLC meeting minutes. The third section, covering less serious misconduct would be placed in the present rule on sex and reads: "The University realizes that sexual misconduct has greater and lesser degrees of seriousness and the members as well as staffs have the primary responsibility for dealing with instances of sexual misconduct within the residence halls included in number 6 above. Rectors may warn, penalize or refer students for counseling. But all such cases should be handled in the halls in the true spirit of community and concern that exists at Notre Dame. As in number 6 above, any provision should be consonant with the nature of the offense." The four meeting-long debate centered on the meaning of various terms in this rule and demonstrated considerable concern among the members of the SLC as to exactly what was prohibited. Some confusion may still exist.

At an earlier meeting Student Body President Charlie Moran explained that "frat" rule applying to the facsimile of a fraternity is not applicable to the residents of the SLC. Whether homosexuality was covered by "perverse" was also debated. There was still confusion after the vote. "It is not perverse but it would come under serious misconduct to be dealt with in the halls," Dr. Carl Ebye, rector of Fisk Hall, several members interviewed at the meetings. "I don't think that we covered the requested means by Fr. Hesburgh in his last veto letter." Ackerman stated, "but I may take into consideration the trade-offs that were necessary in debate and to the advantages the version does have." Over the summer the SLC voted to an earlier revision providing community from the on-campus community as the maximum penalty for sexual infraction of a special rule, which was not available for direct comment called for a rule that would specifically what was banned and what the penalties would be. The letter also stated his expectation that extra tramal sexual activity should also be included in the above and would allow the legitimate presumption of extra-tramal sexual activity to be prohibited. Neither Ackerman nor McNamara would agree on whether Hesburgh would veto the proposal. Flanagan commented that "overall we thought Fr. Hesburgh's guidelines but not word for word of course. Now it's up to him to decide." Palma, however, thought Hesburgh will definitely veto it. "There was not a strong enough majority behind him, it could object to the wording and the division into serious and less serious parts. If he does reject it then we are back to the beginning again." Six members voted against the proposal, the McNamara, Sullivan, and Cairk, the students who voted against it. "Flanagan explained "I don't believe they did because they didn't want any rule and felt the compromise was too vague." Flanagan himself commented that "there were many unanswered questions left, such as those on homosexuality and the trust between the students and administration." Also voting against the proposal because of vagueness were Br. Just Pacy, S.C., John Hall, Tom Jones, assistant director of SLC, Tom provost, and Fr. David Schlafer who also objected the the vagueness. "The more I think about this thing, the less I understand it," Jones stated.

McLaughlin, who voted against the proposal partly due to this conclusion that "no one answered the question of whether homosexual activity normally falling or not," and Palma agreed that "he thought that the matter was "left undecided." As to what was definitely covered by the rule, Prof. Thomas Werge of the English department advanced the theory that "anything that involves bringing a horse or a sheep or even a large chicken into the dorm is definitely perverse." Other matters included under number 6 are sexual abuse of another person through coercion, which met with no objection, and sexual abuse of another person normally falling under number 6 but repeated after a warning. The provision requiring a previous warning was added, after lengthy discussion of whether "cohabitation" was "perverse" and therefore fell under number 6 or was simple sexual misconduct and fell under the lesser penalties of number 8. Flanagan interpreted the warning rule and did not think that the specification was prohibited only by number 8 unless an offender was convicted of violating number 8. The Commissioners did agree that any "sexual misconduct" not covered by number 6 would be covered by the rule, but they avoided any precise definition of "sexual misconduct" in this context. After lengthy discussion the SLC did agree to leave lesser misconduct to the rectors to deal with in a primarily counseling way. However rectors do have the power to punish under the same rule, and without maximum of expulsion from the hall. There was no dissent at the SLC meeting to this question when McLaughlin stated his interpretation that the "power to 'penalize' under this provision is restricted to the rector and does not extend to the Dean."

Pulitzer prize winner Kamen discusses American maturity

By Mark Jakne Staff Reporter

1973 History Pulitzer Prize Winner Dr. Michael Kamen

emphasized America's "rise of passage" into maturity last Friday in the Library Auditorium.

Kamen, history department chairman at Cornell University, spoke on the topic "The American Revolution and the Historical Imagination.""

Drawing on contrasts and comparisons from American literature, Kamen said "A part of our knowledge and part of our self-image as a nation result from historical romances." He defined three periods of strong revolutionary feeling in American literature.

The first period, running through the 1800's and 1860's, was a time of strong anti-British feeling in American literature. Kamen believes that much of this feeling resulted from anger following the War of 1812. The works of James Fenimore Cooper were the primary references of this period.

The second period occurred in the 1830's and 1850's when, "anglophobia" mellowed somewhat. Citing the works of

InPirg chairman announces future projects

by Jim Donahen
Staff Reporter

Grocery pricing, toy safety and public utility surveys lead the list of current InPirg projects announced by Joe Shickich, chairman of the board of directors of the Notre Dame chapter of InPirg. Yesterday, Shickich outlined the research group's activities and stressed the need for volunteers.

"The amount of work we can do is a function of the amount of people we have. We have a list of about 100 people who volunteer in InPirg, but we can use two or three times that number," Shickich emphasized.

InPirg, a statewide, student operated and student financed organization, applies its research to both immediate and long-range social changes. InPirg operates a state office at Indianapolis with chapters at Notre Dame, Indiana University, Earlham University, and Valparaiso University.

Currently, Notre Dame InPirg is conducting biweekly price surveys of South Bend supermarkets, said Shickich. He noted the group needs students to survey stores and key punch data cards for company processing. A study of toys sold in South Bend stores is part of a statewide effort to expose dangerous toys. On Dec. 2, InPirg plans to release a report on the survey, based on improper design, poor materials and inflammability. Interested persons should contact Frank Musica, InPirg staff director, at 1560.

InPirg needs volunteers this week to examine the gas, electric, and water companies treatment of elderly and middle income families. The survey, a joint project of InPirg and the Institute for Urban Studies, will be presented before a state hearing on utility rates, Shickich stressed.

Shickich outlined other InPirg projects requiring student help:

Environmental projects

Bottle bill--A consumer preference survey will be taken for background for lobbying efforts to reduce the availability of throw-away cans. Project head Matt Kennedy at 1239.

Recycling-A recycling program, with dump pick-ups of beverage containers, is being organized. Call project head Julie English at 1238.

Health projects

Mental patients' rights--A study of the patients' right to humane treatment in mental hospitals is in commitment procedures and the right to labor is being performed. Call project head Joe Shickich at 289-3638.

Director of Doctors--Area doctors will be questioned on type of practice, fees, acceptance of Medicare patients, etc. Call project head Frank Musica at 1603.

Political projects

Lobbying information--The backgrounds of state legislators in Northeast Indiana are being examined. Call project head Tom Benjamin at 3481.

Power structure survey--InPirg is checking the inter-relationship of people controlling Notre Dame area banks, industries, utilities, civic organizations, and city government. Call project head Mark Clark at 289-8289.

Small claim courts--Students are investigating the possibility of small claim courts in South Bend for lobbying purposes. Call project head Andy Burner at 289-4242.

InPirg information

InPirg information can also be obtained at their second floor LaFortune office or by calling 4613. Office hours are 12:30 to 4:15 p.m., Monday through Friday. On Friday evening, contact staff director Frank Musica at 1603.

Walton discusses development of American business attitudes

by By Bill Flanagan
Staff Reporter

Dr. Clarence Walton, President of Catholic University of America, lectured on "Historical Perspectives on Society-Business Relationships," Monday afternoon in the A.C.C. Walton, the first lay president of Catholic University, first examined American attitudes during the nineteenth century. "The most interesting thing to me was that people were saying, 'It was an everyday occurrence,' he emphasized.

Walton contrasted this with the present position by mentioning a recent New York Times editorial which declared that the "best present day issue is the imminent collapse of western civilization." He also pointed to syndicated columnist Joseph Ahipp's comment that in Europe there is a "mood of despair" concerning the West.

Despite the forecaster of doom, Walton said Adam Smith saw the solution to quarrels among the merchant class was in the system itself. Smith encouraged hard, tough competition but at the same time, building with gentleness and benevolence.

In talking about how we adapted ourselves to all this, Dr. Walton mentioned the law of contract and the law of corporations. He said the law of contract stated a contract is binding without regard to any undertaking either side and the law of corporations "insured the ending of authority.

Walton showed how we were "children of Europe" at first, but were able to reach into history and form a unique Constitution. We are, in effect, a "prefragmented" nation and our major invention is law.

Walton said we are a people of laws, not men. Or as Herbert Hoover said, "We are a nation unto ourselves."

Walton, Pres. of Catholic University, departed from the doom-like opinion often expressed about our future. Instead he urged America to critically analyze and control their future.
It appears that the ACC has once again exercised its right to set ticket prices as it sees fit, without regard towards fairness or justice. This time, the actions extend to St. Mary's basketball tickets, and the implications run further than economic discomfort.

As Stevie Wernig, assistant to the vice-president of student affairs at St. Mary's, said, "there would have to be a complete change of attitude concerning St. Mary's over at the Notre Dame Athletic Department," before any change in ticket prices could be accomplished.

It's time for members of the Notre Dame community to retreat from their defensive post-merger stance and begin to realize that St. Mary's is a vital part of the Notre Dame community.

Not only is the pricing of tickets unfair, but a new seating arrangement introduced this year further aids in widening the gap between the two colleges. In the past, St. Mary's students have been able to sit in the same sections as Notre Dame students. This year, they have been relegated to a separate section in the bleachers, at a price of ten dollars more than their Notre Dame counterparts.

In spite of the fact that this seating arrangement is common knowledge, ticket manager Don Bouffard claimed that the Notre Dame Athletic Department sent a bulletin announcing ticket sales and dates to Pat McLoughlin, the Observer, and the Scholastic. All three deny having received such a notice.

These actions are characteristic of the behavior practiced by the ACC in regard to students. The last instance dug into the wallets of Notre Dame students, with little, if any, explanation as the real reasons behind the raise in prices.

The handling of St. Mary's basketball tickets has served to weaken another link in the already decaying relationship between the two colleges.

I can now understand why President Kennedy proclaimed "my proudest boast is, Ich bin ein Berliner." Less than thirty years ago, Berlin lay in ruins, a massive rubble pile monument to the effectiveness of the Allied air forces. Corpses floated in the lakes and streams, derelict tanks and guns clogged the streets. The city ceased to function in a country that had ceased to function, a Germany defeated in body and spirit, and occupied by four nations. The Allies' sector of Berlin stood isolated in the Soviet zone, precipitating a couple of war-potential confrontations over the West's freedom.

Undaunted, Berliners systematically cleaned up and rebuilt their city, the West more vigorously than the East. As with most of Germany, new buildings were constructed on the foundations of the old, with some of the historic sectors restored to their earlier glory. Many structures erected during the immediate post-war period, that deteriorated into slums, have also been replaced, furthering the amazing revival of the city. Now, building after pictures of Berlin would make Charles Atlas blush with envy. The scars of World War II, except those meant to be monuments, have been swept away while erecting what is almost a new metropolis.

The Cold War, however, has left behind a structure that has become a symbol of the destruction of man's freedom, the Berlin Wall. It cuts across the center of the city, interrupting canals, streets, street car lines, and until recently, lives. From the west, only the painted concrete block wall and the guard towers can be seen. A twenty foot buffer zone is marked by a railing, as the closest point the Wall can be approached before the East German guards go into action. It is from the east that the whole wall complex is visible: all the patrolling guards and dogs, with several layers of barbed wire and electric fencing before the block wall.

The wall has dissected the city on idealogical grounds and fostered the evolution of two cities within one. The West has grown up brave and brassy, probably the fastest moving city in Europe. In many ways, it resembles New York and Berlin without the skyscrapers. It houses the headquarters of some of West Germany's top corporations, financial institutions, and government offices, though connected to the mainland by only three roads. Perhaps it is this somewhat precarious link that has helped to mold West Berlin into the free-wheeling place it is today. Kurfürstendamm Strasse, the city's hub, is awash with bright, flashing neon. Many of the top businesses and stores are located on the "Ku-damm." And for night people, the great restaurants, theaters, and cabarets have revived here with full fury, along with open prostitution.

Amidst all the modernness, the past has certainly not been forgotten. At the head of Ku-damm stands the hollow remainder of the Kaiser Wilhelm Memorial Church, as a monument to the wrath of WW II. The 18th century Charlottenburg Palace has carefully been restored, along with its fine museums, art galleries, and gardens, to its condition as a monument to the West's freedom.

The impressive French, German and Italian pieces soon gave way to spirited drinking songs in the great tradition of the Club, as the owners of Rocco's or Sweeney's could confirm. The teasing harmonies of "Blow Ye Winds," as an amusing "great American adventure" built up.

The Glee Club audiences have come to look forward to the skits interspersed throughout the concerts, and they definitely were not disappointed with those last night's performance. Jim Johnston, Brian Lemon, Ed Prizen, and Jack Kurzynski became trick-or-treaters in a delightful barbershop quartet-style interpretation of "Hallowe'en." The trend towards nostalgia and talent led men behind it, the medley of "Baby songs" (containing such oldies but goodies as "Baby Face" and "Rock-a-Bye Baby") following next could not help but steal the show. Frank Barrett, the club accompanist, rehearsed the extent of his talent in his arrangement and performance of the set, while the audience smiled and clapped to the song and dance of Jeff Brummer, Paul Fisher, Jay Parks, Mike Savino, Paul Shay, and Craig Spengel, and were genuinely disappointed when their prolonged cheering was not rewarded with an encore.

The second half of the program contained two more excellent sketches: Jay Parks and Nick Strittmatter's convincing, joyous interpretation of "Where Would You Be Without Me?" from "The Roar of the Greasepaint," and a polished production of "But, Mr. Adams" from "1776." From the costumes and movements in their singing scenes, the Simon family: John, John Murphy, Art Panfile and Scott Wathie's performance glowed with a sense of professionalism.

This portion of the program also showed the club's tightness and ease in handling quickly changing temps, as in "The Battle of Jericho," as well as the composing talent of their director in their performance of Isele's powerful "Psalm 64." Finally, more than a few sights and sounds beamed the predominately female audience when the Club gave as one of the greater stressors the Beach Boys medley so enthusiastically received at their concerts last year.

Despite occasional, momentary hesitations to come in at the beginning of songs done early in the program, and the including of two members' Simon and Garfield medley which could have worked well in a coffeehouse, but not in this type of concert, the audience was treated to a polished, creative performance. The Glee Club members enjoy a great sense of solidarity and love for music; when, as at last night's concert, they share this with their audience, the result is an exciting, uplifting experience.

It was definitely a far cry from the weekend of Blues just ended when the Notre Dame Glee Club presented their fall concert in Washington Hall last night. The two events shared important qualities, however: musical excellence and a cheering, appreciative audience.

Under the exacting and often innovative direction of Prof. David Isele, the Club presented a program which displayed their control, vocal range and versatility. Composers as Purcell and Schubert, the "la-la" with their consistently excellent tone, quickly changing tempos, as in "The Battle of Jericho," as well as the composing talent of their director in their performance of Isele's powerful "Psalm 64." Counsel-Center relocated

by Martha Fanning
Staff Reporter

The Counseling Center has finally moved to its new location on the fourth floor of the Administration Building. Dr. Sheridan McCabe, Director of the Center, describes the new offices as "one of the best facilities for a counseling center I've ever seen."

The Center is for use by anyone connected with Notre Dame, and is intended to help students make the most of their college experience by resolving problems which get in their way. "The present location is designed for this work and set up for effective functioning," stated McCabe.

A wide range of problems—academic, vocational or personal—are dealt with by the center. Most students who go there are given the opportunity to take some type of test to help them discover their interests and aptitudes.

"We use tests to find answers to students needs," said the director. "When a student is trying to decide a career or major he might take an interest test. This supplies some information on what that person is suited for and can be used by the student to make a good decision," McCabe added.

Counseling is done in groups or on an individual basis, which ever is most helpful in solving an individual's problem.

One general problem the campus which the center is exploring is the male-female attitude. Last spring the center started a male-female education group. A group of eight-four of each sex—met for six sessions to explore difficulties and attitudes encountered when relating to the opposite sex. In doing so they hoped to make it easier to relate to each other.

"The program proved successful last year and we would like to run it this fall," commented McCabe.

A program designed to help deal with test anxiety is also being started. It will be offered to students so they can "learn how to deal with anxiety which can get in the way of their being effective when taking a test," explained McCabe. These sessions would not be counseling but training in handling test anxiety. The center hopes to start such a program this fall before final exam week and continue into next semester.

The Center would also like to help the student who is doing well but feels there is room for improvement. In order to expand on this idea several programs are being planned. For example, the center would like to hold, before Thanksgiving, workshops to help students bring their goals into focus. It would be a one time workshop meeting for several hours. Through self-exploration and discussion the members of a group would consider their life's goals.

Another program in the works is Assertive Training. This program is designed to help people be sensitive to their own behavior and become correctly assertive. McCabe stated. "Many people are unable to refuse a request even if it causes a great deal of inconvenience. Hard feelings and misunderstandings can result. Showing people how to assert themselves to the right degree in an effective manner will help to eliminate this problem."

The Counseling center began in 1967. Its predecessor was the Department of Guidance and Testing which has since been replaced by the Freshman Year of Studies.

The center also serves as a setting for graduate courses in Counseling Psychology. Everyone in the center works either directly or indirectly on that program. The professional staff is headed by Sheridan McCabe, Ph.D. He is assisted by Paul Bankietes, Ph.D., Thomas Meruzzi, Ph.D., and a part-time member Rene Wiltet.

An Open House is planned for the first week in December, to enable people to come in and acquaint themselves with the center. Individuals who would like to sign up for a program or desire information can either drop in the Counseling Center located in Room 400 of the Administration Building or call 283-1717. The center is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Local bars, students 'harassed' by police

by Ken Lamb
Staff Reporter

Reactions to the recent Alcohol Board Commission warning directed against the bars near Notre Dame ranged from anger to indifference.

Louis Rappelli, owner of Louie's, said the 'pubic's got it against the students and five little bars.' He cited the raids and felt the students and the bars near Board Commission warned Notre Dame ranged from anger to "harassed" by the police. He said that since the students haven't hurt anyone it was unfair that they should be harassed. "Wouldn't it be nice for people to stop picking on us?" he asked. "I was outside today cleaning up my yard and if everybody would clean up their own yard there'd be no problem."

"The only thing wrong is the cups," Rappelli said. He suggested "the students don't take their cups out, but leave them in the bar. walk on sidewalks instead of the streets and just keep a little quiet" when they leave.

He said "the students have got to help out." "My place is for the students and I want the students to help out." "My place is for the neighborhood," he said. It will take a couple of weeks before anything definite happens, however, said Lombardi.

Lacrosse meeting

There will be a Lacrosse meeting held today at 4:30 in the ACC Auditorium. All members of the Lacrosse club and anyone interested in joining should attend.

Lombardi said that students don't recognize the problem and "try and sneak out drinks all around" and will "hassle anyone they see with an open beverage." He expected there to be "no change."

Professor Arthur J. Quigley, leader of the Northeast Neighborhood Association, stated that "it is a little too early to tell." He said it would be a few weeks before any results would show.

When asked if he felt the bars could enforce the ruling, Quigley said, "I don't know whether they can, but they have not in the past." He said he expected his group's "tough, drawn out process" to continue and that one "can't expect miracles."

Lombardi said the bar owners are getting together to discuss the problem. One solution mentioned would be for "all the bar owners to chip in to a clean-up fund and then have a clean-up crew come through every day," he said. It will take a couple of weeks before anything definite happens, however, said Lombardi.

Dillon, Sorin advance in pivotal intrahall contests

by John Higgins

Dillon, in pursuit of its fourth Intrahall Football championship in the last five years, took a giant step toward both goals on Sunday as the Big Red clinched the South Quad title with a 29-0 win over neighboring rival Alumni on the last day of the Southern Division's regular season.

The win, Dillon's fifth, with a tie against Nebraska, virtually assured it of its 11th straight perfect slate, was much closer than the final score indicated when it was over. Dillon led 14-7 at the half and went on to defeat the Irish fullbacks to 29-0 in the last five years, took a giant

Dillon, in pursuit of its fourth Intrahall Football championship in the last five years, took a giant step toward both goals on Sunday as the Big Red clinched the South Quad title with a 29-0 win over neighboring rival Alumni on the last day of the Southern Division's regular season.

The win, Dillon's fifth, with a tie against Nebraska, virtually assured it of its 11th straight perfect slate, was much closer than the final score indicated when it was over. Dillon led 14-7 at the half and went on to defeat the Irish fullbacks, led by Kevin Bolyard and Audino, who tried to return, Driscoll fired to the sidelines. Cornerback Kevin McLoughlin hauled in the unreturned bug, his second theft of the game, and sailed 22 yards untouched for his final score.

With the game safely in hand, former Dillon quarterback Geef Campbell took to the air and moved his team like no other club could have done this year.

The defense, however, bent but did not break, and remained unscathed on this season.

With Driscoll employing four wide receivers and passing almost exclusively to his right, the offense moved the ball and converted a first down, and then followed with an 11-yard touchdown to get a 7-0 lead early in the game. The Alumni drive was halted on the next play, however, when rugged tackle Karl Weyand stepped in front of another screen pass and Dillon took over at the 27. From there, O'Neill led his offense to the Alumni 60, when only two drives by Dillon on the day, to the end zone. O'Neill then scampered 10 yards on a perfectly executed option to get the offense in the end zone.

A low spiral followed on a pin sweep for 7.

Weekend results

There was a banner in Spartan Stadium last Saturday at the Michigan State game. It read: "The Irish Eye's top twenty: The Irish Eye's top twenty: No. Weekend Results Position

1.) Oklahoma (8-0) Beat Missouri 37-0 2
2.) Ohio State (8-1) Lost to Michigan State 16-13 1
3.) Texas A&M (7-2) Lost to SMU 18-14 11
4.) Notre Dame (7-1) Did not play 7
5.) Navy (7-1) Lost to Navy 28-21 unranked
6.) Ohio State (8-1) Beat Michigan 8-7 6
7.) Nebraska (7-2) Beat Iowa State 23-13 12
8.) Texas A&M (7-2) Lost to SMU 18-14 11
9.) Florida State (2-2) Lost to Georgia 20-0 9
10.) Stanford (6-1-1) Beat California 28-22 10
11.) North Carolina State (8-2) Lost to North Carolina 9-9 1
12.) Penn State (7-2) Lost to Penn State 9-9 6
13.) UCLA (7-1) Lost to UCLA 7-1 7
14.) Arizona State (8-3) Lost to Arizona State 7-1 4
15.) Notre Dame (8-0) Beat Irish 3-0 8
16.) Rice (9-0) Lost to Rice 9-0 5
17.) Wisconsin Parkside (9-2) Beat Wisconsin Parkside 8-2 3
18.) Purdue (9-0) Beat Purdue 8-2 2
19.) Minnesota (9-1) Beat Minnesota 9-0 1
20.) Arkansas (9-0) Beat Arkansas 8-2 1

As seen above, hard hitting was the trend.

The defensive standouts for Notre Dame were Tom Gillo, who blocked two punts and had an interception, and Jack Crowley, who also picked off a pass and scored a touchdown on Gillopie's fake.

Mike Foley added a third interception, as the Sorin defense limited Howard to 65 total yards.
