Students voice complaints

Registration presents problems

by Dennis Kelly
Staff Reporter

A few smokes, more disappointments, and some bitterness marked the first official day of pre-registration for spring semester classes at Notre Dame as students tried to fill certain classes in the English Department. That department employs the "major" system of selection in which declared majors in the field choose courses before non-majors, regardless of class. Among those courses appearing at the start of registration yesterday were Professor Albert's "Poetry" and Professor John Garvick's "Hemingway" both filled within minutes.

Senior quota

This type of pressure for courses did not develop at other departments using the "major" system, however. Government professor John Kromkowski, undergraduate advisor in that department, noted that many spots remained available even in the most popular classes there. He pointed out that the decision four years ago to allow non-majors to carry major coursework in government was a way to relax pressure for registration impossibly.

Many seniors were dismayed when only ten seats were allotted them in Russian Literature, a popular offering in the language department. Its professor, Joseph Gatto, decided upon the quota because, "the last half of the second semester of senior year seems to me to be a total waste."

"Usually seniors have been accepted to some graduate school by that time," Gatto stated. "I want students who will graduate.

As a result, 20 seats were kept open for underclassmen. In addition, Gatto reserved a minimum of five spots for seniors who told him the boys were pushing them out of line while waiting for the course," he explained.

Business registrations

The degree of satisfaction with registration procedures in Business Administration corresponded to the success had in securing desired class cards.

One junior finance major said that he used a senior identification card to get a jump on other class seniors. Another student said that several other classmates used the same method. A junior accounting major attending a registration meeting expressed a feeling of "helplessness" as he watched his desired courses close.

Finance students were allowed only two courses in their major. Students registering last, as determined by a Finance Department lottery, could obtain only one course.

The office of the dean then offered the students one additional business course each.

"Some business students only received six of their required 18 credits," a finance major said. "Thus, four courses would have to be electives obtained outside the business college.

By comparison, a more serene atmosphere surrounded course sign-ups in the colleges of Science and Engineering, with very few student complaints registered there.

Athletes and CAP

Some students felt that problems they encountered in registering were compounded by alleged "preferential treatment" afforded to athletes and to the Committee on Academic Progress members.

"Mike Raymond was the opposite of true—athletes were not getting a fair shake in registering for classes," DeCicco, academic counselor to Notre Dame athletes and a professor of civil engineering, said that athletes in business administration were having great difficulties in registering, because of work-outs conflicting with registration meetings.

He explained that the only concession he received from Dean Raymond was that graduating seniors would be given courses needed to fulfill graduation requirements.

"Fish or cut bait"

Ford calls for deadline in V-P confirmation

By R.H. GROWALD

PHOENIX (UPI) — President Ford said Thursday it is time for Congress to "fish or cut bait" on Nelson A. Rockefeller's nomination as vice president, and urged a new law or constitutional amendment to speed up vice presidential confirmations.

In something akin to aanger, Ford said in a prepared speech to a convention of the professional journalistic society Sigma Delta Chi that it took him only 11 days in office as President to nominate Rockefeller for the vice presidency but that three months Congress still has not said yes or no to his choice.

Ford suggested that Congress give a deadline set in which to confirm a vice president.

Ford arrived here Thursday afternoon from Las Vegas, Nev., where he announced in a speech to the National Association of Realtors a $300 million federal program to aid home buyers. On arrival at Lake Air Force Base, Ford formally placed on active duty the first of more than 700 new F15 jet fighter planes.

Speaking as the Senate Rules Committee continued hearings on the Rockefeller nomination in Washington, Ford said: "I believe the time has come for them to fish or cut bait in this matter.

He said House Speaker Carl Albert and Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield have assured him "they will make every effort to bring Mr. Rockefeller's nomination to a floor vote" before the lame duck Congress ends in December.

Ford said this cooperation is what the Constitution demands and the people want. "I am as convinced as ever that Gov. Rockefeller is the right man for the job and I am anxious to have him as a working partner in the government," Ford said.

"For the future, however, I will propose to the next Congress a re-examination of the 25th Amendment, which has been tested twice in as many years, to see if the provisions of Section 2 (dealing with selection and confirming a vice president when the office is vacant) cannot be tightened up either by another constitutional amendment or by public law," he said.

Deadline suggested

"There should be a specific deadline both for the president to nominate and Congress to confirm a vice president," Ford said.

Under the Ford plan, if Congress does not approve one nominees by deadline time, it must automatically begin confirmation hearings on another nominee.

Ford said it had been suggested to him that if a deadlock between a presidential choice and a congressional failure to approve or disapprove stretches out to the time limits of the Constitution, he would put forward a new candidate.

The President said he is not prepared to advocate this suggestion. But he stated, "In the next 25th Amendment amendments, we need a vice president at all times. And speak as one who ought to know."

Veto discussed

Ford also talked to the journalists' society about his veto of the Freedom of Information Act Amendments. Replying to criticism in the organization's magazine The Quill, he said: "I really don't think my veto suggests a "discredited policy of cover-up as usual" or that the Freedom of Information Act is as things or as amended, played or could have played any part in uncovering the Watergate cover-up.

Speaking to Congress the type of bill he would accept, Ford said he had these main objections to the legislation he vetoed:

—It would have given federal judges the right to open national security and diplomatic secrets if the judge found a reasonable position of the person seeking the disclosures.

—Ford said judges are not experts in deciding what should be kept secret, and should be the ones to make decisions only if the government cannot provide the 30 days to answer a request for handing over a secret document, whereas in his opinion the time should be extended to 45 days.

The bill did not carry sufficient guarantees against opening FBI records and the investigation files of other law enforcement agencies.

President Ford yesterday urged legislation to speed up vice presidential confirmations.

Marijuana Conference

The National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML) is meeting in Washington, D.C. this weekend. In a special series to the Observer, Ray Eckert and Cathy Pessinman, both juniors at Georgetown University, will file stories on the conference beginning Monday.

In the conference NORML will focus on the problem of marijuana laws and the laws from a medical, legal, legislative and law enforcement viewpoints.
Court-ordered checkup could endanger former president

By JACK V. FOX

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Richard Nixon, shaky and pale, went home from the hospital Thursday and his physician expressed concern that a court-ordered checkup by outside doctors could endanger the former President's recovery.

Clad in light blue pajamas and a robe, Nixon was brought out to a back service door in a wheelchair and helped into a limousine for the drive to San Clemente with his wife, Pat.

Nixon had been reported close to death following an operation for his phlebitic condition Oct. 29, and Thursday he seemed to totter slightly on his feet as he stood for a few moments and shook hands with nurses and others who had cared for him.

Shortly after Nixon's departure, Dr. John Lungren, the physician who has overseen his treatment, was asked about the imminent examination by three specialists appointed by Watergate coverup trial Judge John J. Sirica.

Lungren said Nixon's blood pressure shoots up markedly when exposed to almost any stress.

He was asked whether an examination for his fitness to testify for the Watergate trial would constitute stress.

"I would have to say yes, that it does," Lungren said. "But it is a court order. I have no control over it. He has no control over it."

Lungren said the question of Nixon giving testimony in some fashion was "his own decision."

In answer to another question, Dr. Eldon B. Hickman, who performed the surgery to prevent blood clots from Nixon's left leg to his heart and lungs, said he felt examination by the court-appointed doctors was "unnecessary."

Hickman said he would not want to risk such a step unless "I had the willingness and agreement of the patient."

Lungren said "just honestly he doesn't know how long Nixon should remain on a schedule of very restricted activity."

He said the 61-year-old former chief executive would be under "watchful observation" at San Clemente.

A hospital bed has been placed in the bedroom at his home so his leg can be elevated. He will wear a surgical stocking on his left leg and has been advised to take only brief walks.

Hickman was asked whether he thought it would be possible to conduct the new examination at San Clemente or whether it might be necessary to have Nixon re-enter a hospital.

Hickman said that was up to the three doctors but that he personally would not want to subject Nixon to the strain of going into a hospital again.

Judge Sirica has instructed the fram to report back to the court on their findings by Nov. 29. A spokesman for Dr. Charles Hufnagel, chairman of the team, said Thursday, the doctors have been in touch with each other and are making "tentative plans" as to time and place of the examination.

The Notre Dame Law School and the Pre-Law Society will hold an open-house in the law school housing this Sunday at 2 p.m. Student Bar Association President Chauncey Veatch, Co-ordinating Chairman John DePietro and Pre-Law Society President Thomas Denklo will host Deans Thomas Shaffer and David Long in Nativity Hall. They will all give a formal presentation and a question and answer period will follow. Student law students will give guided tours of the law building. Refreshments will be served. The purpose of the open house is to give prospective students an opportunity to see if Notre Dame is the right school for them. "ND is interested in a law school student and recently was informed of the future of the law school," said Veatch. Professional students are faced with certain demands from the public, but we in the law school government believe that student government should participate as fully as possible in the life of the University," explained Veatch.

Student Council

The Law School is working with Brian McGinty, judicial coordinator for student government, on the possibility of having legal advocates assist in representing undergraduates who face disciplinary procedures.

"We would try to assert an influence through our involvement," said Veatch. This matter will be considered soon by SLC, he added. If passed, this resolution would mean that students facing disciplinary action could benefit from the counsel of law students, if they so desire. Law students would also benefit from the practice since the law school is prepared to give law students credit for this.

Projects

The Law School wants to involve Notre Dame in nation events. The law school, arranged for Georgetown law student David Erdman, president of the National Law Student Division of the American Bar Association to speak here next week. The school's goal is to elect several ND law students in succeeding years to the Bar Association. The first step towards this goal was taken when Chauncey Veatch was elected chairperson of the Bar President's Association of the ABA at the National Convention. This is important because the law school had been minimally involved in the past and Notre Dame is an important school in the Midwest. This circuit has always been disregarded, said Veatch.

"The law school has cooperated with our Law School Alumni in setting up a national job placement service," said Veatch. An alumnum is in charge of each specific area of the country, he explained.

"We also have groups working to raise money for our loan service," added Veatch. "A most helpful group has been the Law Wife's Association. It sponsors a booth before football games selling quilts, pillows and dolls. During the October break, the law school and the Law Wives Association co-sponsored a dinner with Fr. Hesburgh. This year the law school is representing both the law students and the MBA students on the Academic Council."

Hunger panel advocates more efficient use of resources to curb food crisis by Pat Flynn Staff Reporter

A further challenge to students to better use world resources was issued by Notre Dame graduate Al Sondej last night before a crowd of 25 in the Marian Lounge.

"If Americans stop eating meat, enough grain would be available to take care of the world's population before the next year," Sondej said. "It takes ten pounds of grain to produce one pound of beef," he explained.

"People should eat fish," he continued. "It takes one pound of fish to produce one pound of beef." Sondej estimated that the world population would be reduced by about a billion people before the end of the decade.

Sondej, a campus familiar with his dining hall food-refuse collections, was one of four panelists discussing the world food, population, and energy problems. The panel, which was sponsored by the Non-Violence Program, also included Fr. Edward Mallory of the Theology Department, Professor Edward Manier of the Philosophy Department and Professor Basil O'Learcy of the Non-Violence Program.

"Sondej realized that because we live in a world of finite resources, men are faced with certain limitations in satisfying the food problem. "We cannot do certain things with our money, some of which will mean people will live, others that they will not," said Sondej.

"World ecology is a function of both population and individual impact on the environment," he said.

O'Learcy advocated an ethical principle which he termed, "purely secular yet radical by contemporary standards."

"We have to weigh the margin of utility, stated O'Learcy. "In individuals in the developed countries must look after and insure their self-satisfaction. But above that level, they are committed to assuring every means at their disposal the plight of the starving nations," he explained.

O'Learcy employed two analogies in his remarks to make his position clear. If we were to walk by someone drowning in a pond we would be obligated to assist on a purely secular basis.

On the other hand, world famine is like a number of life boats on the sea after a shipwreck, no one's interest would be served if the boat with the chance of surviving let a group from another boat with no chance of surviving abandon their ship and board their own. In short, in a situation of scarcity we need to weigh discriminating factors as well as moral obligations, O'Learcy explained.

Manser, claiming not to be an ethicist, asserted that his concern in the world food problem was with the moral and political question involved in building a good society. Manser described his notion of the good society as a place where all members were granted their rights to health, care, education and welfare, and where all members outside of the society were also granted these rights.

Manser stressed that he believed these things were individual human rights, not owed in charity but as a necessary item in creating a good world.

Malsky stated he believed that the world hunger problem was a function both of the absence of population control and unequal distribution of world resources.

Malsky noted, however, that he has certain ethical doubts about certain kinds of enforcing population control. Among these methods he cited forced sterilization and punitive abortion. Sondej reported a number of the difficulties in maintaining the present balance of the world's ecosystem.

Energy consumption is limited by the level of heat that can be described as a normal part of the atmosphere, stated Sondej.

"If we put more heat than one percent of the solar heat disipation into the atmosphere, stated Sondej.

Sondej also pointed out that water-use is limited to the run-off rate of 100 million cubic kilograms per year. "To produce a single automobile requires 100,000 gallons alone," he noted.

Sondej explained that deforestation is a real problem in maintaining an ecological balance.
Ombudsman successors named

Vincent Raymond, business administration associate dean; James Roemer, university counsel; and Fr. James Riehle, Pangborn rector.

Also, Fr. James Shilts, physics professor; Dr. Lillian Stanton, ichard Sullivan, registrar; Joanne Stafford, Walsh rectress; and Robert Waddick, assistant dean of Arts and Letters. Berry was selected to serve as chairman of the group.

These are people who cannot only give us sound advice but who can get things done," McLean stated.

The advisory board is divided into four units: planning, award, academic and assistance. The Planning Unit is designed to coordinate the work of the other units.

The OAB Award Unit is designed to recognize outstanding students for outstanding work in non-academic pursuits. McLean said, "Students who contribute and sacrifice for the community often do not get the best grades." McLean observed. He said the award committee would present each student with letters of commendation which could help the students in seeking positions after graduation.

The OAB Academic Unit, according to McLean, would serve two purposes. The first function is to help keep students working for the Ombudsman service from ignoring their studies. The second is to help with Ombudsman education programs, such as workshops and briefings.

"This will not be a grade grievance group," McLean noted. He said the unit will help "facilitate new course ideas" for the University as a whole.

The Assistance Unit is a "catch-all" department which will help with Ombudsman projects not covered by the other units. One function of the group will be to help develop better relations with South Bend, McLean said.

Berry stated the advisory board's primary purpose "is to lend stability and support for the Ombudsman organization." He said the members of the board have been helping the Ombudsman as individuals for a year and a half.

Rolling 201: HOW TO ROLL BETTER

Required Textbook: e-Z wider

Prof. E. Z. Joy

1. Hold both halves of the paper, cradling the tobacco inside with your thumbs closest to the center and the paper edges out to the sides.

2. Take the tobacco end that is covered by the other unit's work and pinch the tobacco and the paper at the center. Twist so that when you start to roll, the paper is on the outside. (continued on page 6)

3. When the tobacco is prepared and packed, secure the butts with your thumbs and index fingers. Roll the paper in the opposite direction and your second and third fingers on the sides.

4. Use the grooved edge closer to the butts to roll the paper. The cigarette will be easier to hold. (continued on page 6)

5. Make the cigarette lighter, pointing at the center and pulling, work your fingers out to the sides.

6. The course is open to both beginning and advanced students of hand-rolled cigarettes. Experience is not needed. The advice is based on the use of the e-Z wider double-width rolling papers. The course expresses the disadvantages of conventional rolling practices such as sticking two regular papers together to roll one cigarette. Students will be shown how to roll better finished papers made with e-Z wider.

LaRue discusses hush money role

By JANE DENISON
WASHINGTON (UPI) - Fred LaRue, who inherited the task of passing cash to the Watergate burglars, testified Thursday he had no doubt the money was meant to keep them quiet so the truth would never come out.

That truth, LaRue told the Watergate cover-up jury in his soft Mississippi drawl, was that the 1972 campaign to re-elect Richard Nixon was responsible for the breaking and entering the Watergate.

"My understanding was that the payments were to fulfill the commitments that had been made to the defendants," LaRue said when asked by the prosecutor what the purpose of the money was.

"My understanding, or feeing, was that if these commitments were not kept, these defendants might divulge certain information they had that would lead back to the Committee to Re-Elect the President," LaRue testified.

A close friend and confidant of former Attorney General and Nixon campaign manager John N. Mitchell, LaRue said he took over payments to the seven-man bugging team in the fall of 1972 when Nixon attorney Herbert W. Kalmbach refused to have anything more to do with it.

Mitchell is one of the five former Nixon aides now on trial for conspiracy in the cover-up plot.

"During the course of your whole participation in the Watergate affair did you ever find out who made these commitments?" demanded Mitchell lawyer William G. Hundley when it was his turn to cross examine.

"No, I did not," replied LaRue, who earlier testified he had been told of the commitments by bugging conspirator G. Gordon Liddy.

"Did you try to find out?" asked Hundley.

"No, I did not," LaRue replied.

"Did anybody try to find out?" Hundley asked.

"I have no knowledge about that," said LaRue.

But he said he had discussed the "commitments" to the burglars with Mitchell many times after the June 19, 1972, bugging arrests and that it was Mitchell himself who authorized a final $75,000 payment to conspirator E. Howard Hunt Jr. on March 21, 1973.

That payment was one of the most controversial of the Watergate case. Earlier testimony and House White House tapes indicate it had Nixon's blessing and was made after Hunt demanded $125,000 with a threat to reveal "sneaky" things he had done for the White House unless the demand was met.

LaRue testified that White House counsel John W. Dean III called him the morning of March 21 to report that Hunt was demanding $75,000 for legal fees and $60,000 for family support.

"He said he was no longer in the money business and was very apprehensive about the operation," LaRue testified.

"He said he was withdrawing from it...he told me to call Mr. Mitchell and I did."

About the same time, according to earlier testimony, Nixon was meeting with his top aides to discuss the Hunt demand and concluded that according to it was something that "damn well better get done fast." The indictment charges the word was immediately passed to Mitchell.

LaRue said he called Mitchell and told him that Hunt was demanding $75,000 for attorney fees. He quoted Mitchell as saying, "Under those circumstances, I think you ought to pay it."

LaRue said he did not tell Mitchell about the $60,000 Hunt was demanding for family support and immediately made arrangements to deliver the $75,000 to Hunt's attorney that night.

Cancer claims Novotny

by Dan Reimer
Staff Reporter

Dr. John Novotny, professor of Aerospace and Mechanical Engineering, died yesterday ending a five-month fight against cancer.

A memorial Mass will be celebrated at 5:15 p.m. today at Sacred Heart Chapel. The Mass will be concelebrated by Fr. Theodore Hesburgh, Fr. James Burchael and Fr. Ferdinand Brown.

The cancer which caused the 40-year-old professor's death was first discovered in July of this year. Novotny was hospitalized during the summer and underwent two operations in recent months.

Novotny appeared to be winning his battle with the disease in the months just preceding his death. He had returned to the university at the beginning of this semester to continue his research and teaching, and he was gaining weight in the past few weeks. He suffered a relapse, however, early this week, and passed away quietly near 8 a.m. Thursday.

After receiving his Ph.D. from the University of Minnesota in 1965, Novotny taught at both his alma mater and the University of Delaware. His major included the areas of heat transfer, thermodynamics and fluid mechanics.

Novotny came to Notre Dame in 1966 as an assistant professor and was promoted in 1969 to full professor. He was very active in the College of Engineering, serving on numerous committees since 1969. The work of Novotny in the area of heat transfer gained national recognition for the University's heat-transfer group.

On the national level, Novotny was well-known and highly respected. He served on several national committees and chaired seven national and international meetings during his career.

The professor delivered lectures at various colleges and universities since 1967, including Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He also authored or co-authored 36 scientific articles.

Novotny's colleagues in the College of Engineering generally described him as "hard-working, well-respected and extremely conscientious."

Dr. K. T. Yang, department chairman of mechanical and aerospace engineering, described Novotny as, "one of the most productive teachers and researchers in the college. He was the kind of guy who expressed his feelings, but was willing to listen to others and agree if they proved him wrong," continued Yang.

Yang also mentioned that a memorial fund is being set up in Novotny's name to help deserving students prepare for college teaching.

Associate Dean of Engineering Edward Jerger, who was Novotny's first departmental chairman, said, "he had a great deal of promise and was presently well on his way to becoming a top man in his field." Novotny was characterized by Jerger as "very dedicated to doing a thorough job in both teaching and research. He was very hard-working, conscientious, and loyal to the university."

A fellow professor and personal friend, Associate Professor John Lloyd, commented, "he was hard driving. He knew what he was doing, where he was going, and he worked very hard to get there. He was a very strong person."

Lloyd pointed out that Novotny continued working even while he was in the process of fighting the disease and sighted this as typical of Novotny's "hard-driving" nature. "Everyone told him with a great deal of respect both for his honesty and his tremendous drive," noted Lloyd.

A third floor window had been broken and Fr. Conyers went outside to investigate the situation. As he went outside, he caught a South Bend high school youth throwing snowballs at the window.

"I asked him what he was doing and he said that he was having fun," the student said. "I then asked him for his ID card and he said that he left it in his room, so I asked him to wait inside for Security," Conyers said.

"He started to get away and, as he did, I reached for him and that's when my glasses got knocked off and lost." Two tremendously huge snowballs were placed in front of the double-door passages of the Towers.

There were reported injuries, perhaps not connected with the wars on the quads. A girl was rushed to the hospital that night at 1:30 a.m. with a possible broken hip. A male student was taken to the hospital at 3:30 a.m. with a mild concussion and then brought to the Infirmary at 3:30 that morning.

ND SMC to sponsor bicentennial in March

by Mary Reber
Staff Reporter

A bicentennial festival will be sponsored by the Student Union of St. Mary’s College in March, according to John Conklin, yesterday afternoon.

A steering committee of four members, appointed last year by Provost Fr. Theodore Hesburgh, dean of the University for Continuing Education; Ronald Weber, director of the American Studies Program; Jack Detelich of the St. Mary’s College Development Committee; and Conklin.

“By this stage of planning there are just three or four people working on the bicentennial,” said Augie Grace, junior class president, “but more will get involved as the program gets bigger, and we hope to eventually involve the whole St. Mary’s-Notre Dame community.”

Conklin explained that the two main features of the festival will be an academic conference and cultural activities.

A dance will be held in the ballroom and adjoining the lounge of the Four Flags Inn.

If ticket sales continue slowly, we might be due in part to the Doobie Bros. concert that evening, which was booked in the ACC by a private promoter and had not been anticipated.

But even for those who are going to see the concert, the formal would be an excellent place to go afterwards,” Grace urged. The dance will begin at 9 p.m. and continue until 1 a.m.

Both features, the academic conference and the cultural activities, are expected to extend over a duration of four or five days, but the exact dates have not been determined yet, according to Conklin.

“We do expect to invite community participation,” noted Conklin, “because we feel it is an important ingredient. The events will be open to the South Bend community and some of the cultural areas might involve local organizations.”

Beyond planning the festival, the committee has been contacting department chairmen and the directors of other university groups, suggesting that they relate their calendar of activities to bicentennial themes.

“There are two ways of doing this,” Conklin said. “We can use historical treatment of the arts, such as a concert of colonial music. Or we can present contemporary music that reflects themes persistent throughout the history of America. We don’t necessarily need to confine ourselves to the colonial period,” he explained.

Junior class to hold formal next Friday in Michigan

In an effort to “do something different,” the junior class has decided to go outside the Notre Dame community in sponsoring a formal dance next Friday, Nov. 30.

Entertainment for the evening will be provided by “Flight,” a professional group from Chicago, rather than the regular formal, the event will be held at the Four Flags Inn in Niles, Mich., rather than on campus.

“Flight” is an eight-piece brass band that has been together professionally for five years. After their appearance at Notre Dame, they will begin a three-month tour of Arizona and California.

The group plays for both a listening and dancing audience, performing material from Chicago, Blood, Sweat and Tears, Santana, Grand Funk and the Doobie Bros.

The dance will be held in the ballroom and adjoining the lounge of the Four Flags Inn. The Four Flags is located in downtown Niles, off U.S. 31 (maps are available at the Student Union Ticket Office).

Tables will be set up in the lounge, leaving most of the ballroom as dance floor. Snacks will be provided and refreshments can be purchased at the cash bar.

It is not a true “formal” dance, rather an opportunity to get dressed up and enjoy an evening of dancing, according to Augie Grace, junior class president.

Tickets, at $5 per couple, are limited to just 100, with a $5 donation by their guests. They can be purchased now at the Student Union Ticket Office, in La Fortune, from any junior class officer, or at Friday’s Happy Hour at Kubia’s.

Grace stated that only about half the tickets have been sold and urged juniors to buy theirs now.

“If ticket sales continue slowly, we may open it up to the other classes around Wednesday,” he said.

DeCicco further emphasized that student-athletes must schedule all classes before 3 p.m. which “strips the athlete in his class schedule.”

He also flatly denied the existence of academic programs exclusively for student athletes, and claimed that “the image and mystique about student-athletes having academic problems are just that— image and mystique.”

He also flatly denied the existence of cards by the teachers of certain students.

The CAP is given a limited number of cards by the teachers of certain courses that are usually filled quickly. These cards are distributed among the CAP members on a class basis.

Twenty million people will starve to death. Before the season brings us Mardi Gras, An Tostal, and new academic worries, twenty million human beings shall be dead of famine. Twenty million.

Imagine, twenty million people starving to death. Not the relatively quick and easy death guns or heart attacks or sudden violent acts bring. But the slow, hard death starvation brings. Then too, in famine, there is the utter despair of inaction. Inaction in the face of seeing one’s village and ultimately one’s own family die. Consider the apocalyptic horror of a woman who must not only see her own life fail, but also her child’s because she cannot feed it.

Before the season is over twenty some million people will die from such suffering in areas across the globe. Twenty million – enough to fill the Notre Dame dining halls FOUR THOUSAND times. As the U.N., the World Food Conference and our own government debate the “issue” and spin off a myriad of complex obstacles to any real solution, people die and we eat. Governmental inaction and material prosperity have numbed us so badly that most of us cannot fathom the suffering that daily occurs in Africa, Asia, and even Latin America. Because of the bureaucracy of a government which subsidizes farmers to plow under tremendous acres of wheat, and which ineptly starves while the other half close their eyes and turn on their television sets while eating a big bucket of popcorn and drinking a beer.

Money saved by foregoing a regular dinner will be sent to the starving. That is painfully little. Those who eat this simplest of meals will reaffirm the oldest sign of solidarity. That is painfully little. They will on the night share the affliction which daily sends thousands not to bed, but to death, hungry. One night of hunger is also painfully little. Little as it may be, it is a start.

Hopefully, it will bring a deeper compassion and a more urgent concern for those who must die so hard a death. Perhaps, just perhaps, such compassion and concern will spread and ultimately move those holding power to a massive relief of the pain which slaughters so many.

Release your dining hall number and forego dinner for tea and rice on the Tuesday before Thanksgiving when this nation “blesses” God for what millions lack. On one evening, minutely the affliction of hunger that slowly, tortuously takes so many lives.

Robert Baker

I will not eat the regular meal in the Dining Hall on Tuesday evening, November 26, and I will join in the rice and tea meal.

LET US NOT FOOL OURSELVES. THERE IS NO SUCH THING AS AN ENERGY CRISIS. IT WAS ALWAYS EASY TO GET GAS. THERE IS NO SUCH THING AS THE FOOD CRISIS IT IS EASY TO GET FOOD. THIS IS NOT A TRICK BY GROUPS OF PEOPLE WHO ARE TRYING TO RAISE PRICES AND TAKE MONEY FROM THE AMERICAN PEOPLE. THERE HAVE BEEN TIMES WHEN I HAVE BEEN TEMPTED TO BELIEVE THESE THINGS. THE POWER OF MASS ADVERTISING IS A GREAT APPEAL TO THE SENSES. WE CAN BE APPELLED JUST AS EASILY BY A PICTURE OF A STUDENT BEING SLAUGHTERED AS A NAKED DECAPITATED HORSE IN A FILM LIKE THE GODFATHER. IT COULD BE A TRICK.

IT IS A SHAME TO SAY THAT THESE TWO THINGS MAY HAVE THE EXACT SAME IMPACT ON OUR PERCEPTION OF REALITY. AFTER ALL WE HAVE BEEN KILLED BY ANYONE KILLED LIKE THAT AND WE HAVE NEVER SEEN ANYONE STARVE TO DEATH. THOSE THINGS ARE OUT THERE IN PICTURES. MASS MEDIA IS POWERFUL BUT IT IS CONVENIENT. WHEN WE DON’T WANT TO SEE THE PICTURE ANYMORE, WE FLIP THE PAGE, TURN OUR HEADS OR LEAVE THE THEATER. IT IS A NICE, EASY WAY OF HANDLING THINGS. IT IS NOT REAL.

THERE IS A DIFFERENCE, THOUGH. THE FILM STOPS. THE HUNGER DOESN’T. IT GROWS INTO THE VERY MOUTH OF YOUR STOMACH, ROBBING YOU OF ANY THOUGHT SAVE A PIECE OF BREAD OR A BOWL OF RICE. AFTER THAT IT SWELLS THE STOMACH TILL IT ALMOST BURSTS AND IT WON’T GO AWAY—GOD, IT WON’T GO AWAY! IT IS LIKE A BAD NIGHTMARE HAMSTRING THE ESSENCE OF YOUR BEING, SEARCHING OUT YOUR EXISTENCE AND DRAGGING IT DOWN TO ITS KNEES. IT JUST NEVER GOES AWAY—IT WON’T, IT CAN’T, IT DOESN’T.

THIS IS NO TELEVISION PROGRAM OR MOVIE, IT IS LIFE IN THE UNDERDEVELOPED COUNTRIES OF THE WORLD. IT IS ROTEN TEETH, AND DYING BABIES, AND WORST OF ALL, AN ETERNITY OF HUNGER. THIS IS WHAT HAPPENS IN PLANET EARTH AND WE CALL IT OFF. THIS IS LIKE THE BAD MOVIE THAT DOESN’T GO OFF. IT IS THE ENDLESS SUCCESSION OF LATE NIGHT MOVIES THAT WOULDN’T STOP AND THE MORNING NEVER COMES.

SO WHAT CAN WE DO ABOUT IT? WELL, THERE ARE TWO THINGS YOU CAN REFUSE TO ADMIT THAT IT EXISTS. YOU CAN IGNORE IT AND NOT MAKE IT PART OF YOUR REALITY. THAT IS THE CASE YOU MIGHT AS WELL BE DEAD YOURSELF. AT LEAST THE HUNGRY PEOPLE HAVE DESPAIR. YOU DON’T HAVE ANYTHING BUT AN EMPTY SHELL.

THERE IS ANOTHER SOLUTION. DON’T SHIT IT OUT, DON’T IGNORE IT. DEAL WITH IT, TAKE ON, EXPRESS YOUR SOLIDARITY. AND IF YOU ARE THERE ENOUGH, MORTIFY YOURSELF. JAMES TERRY SAID “MORTIFICATION HAPPENS WHEN A PERSON TAKES RESPONSIBILITY FOR HIMSELF, FOR HIS ACTIONS, FOR HIS LIVING, FOR HIS DYING.” MORTIFICATION IS A SYMBOLIC ACTION THAT SAYS SOMETHING ABOUT MANKIND IN CONCRETE LANGUAGE. MORTIFICATION IS THE FORM OF CONSCIOUSNESS IN WHICH MY WORLD INCLUDES YOURS. MORTIFICATION IS THE WAY TO QUESTION THE FUNDAMENTAL ASSUMPTIONS OF EACH AGE AND EACH INSTITUTION FROM THIS POINT. DO YE ENABLE OR PREVENT HUMAN LIFE TO THE FULL? AND WHAT CAN WE DO ABOUT IT? THERE IS ANOTHER SOLUTION. DON’T SHUT IT OUT, DON’T IGNORE IT. DEAL WITH IT.

WHAT CAN WE DO ABOUT IT? WELL THERE ARE TWO THINGS. YOU CAN...

I have done nothing. I have done worse than debunked the futility of this fast. You have done nothing.

Humility is required for this to be a success on all fronts. The choice to participate or not is yours entirely. You may not see any viable reason for fasting and eating a rice meal. It could be if you don’t see any point in it. That it you should not do it. However, the alternatives in this land of plenty are few. If you don’t do this, you have done worse than debunked the futility of this fast. You have done nothing.

Join in the fast on November 26th and come to the Mass given by Father Henburgh. Let them know that we are alive and well in South Bend.
After the recent election there was talk of massive political dislocation, of a stunning blow to the American Dream: Democrats lost seats in Congress, and the sign of approaching third-party. Cartoonists showed us a beaming donkey and a snarling elephant. And, relatively, it was a big electoral turnaround. The Democrats won over twice the congressional seats normally taken back in presidential off years, plus some big governors' chairs (including the two biggest).

But to say this is merely to remind ourselves of the basic conservatism of our electoral system. We speak of a major dislocation as if roughly 10 percent of the congressional seats changed hands—44 or so out of 435. Three percent of the congressional seats changed hands. But in general it was a big electoral turnaround. It was really, it was a big electoral turnaround.

Whatasad big electoral turnaround means, that affected 53 members, or just over one percent of the House membership. It is a change in the leadership of the House Judiciary Committee—punishment that affected five members, or just over one percent of the House membership. I repeat this is considered an outside development, because the normal electoral displacement is only half of that, or less. Which is in itself a vote for the system as it is an outcome of the system.

Whereas, the get elected by promising there will be no war. Thus the vote means practically nothing in policy terms. It reflects mood, and can give a retrospective approval (to FDR's New Deal in 1936) or disapproval (to Nixon's Vietnam War). But in general it was a big electoral turnaround.

Opposite the word valor, the word valor is in it itself a vote for the system. And yet, by and large, our politics is not a bad thing. It means they both end up saying much the same thing, aiming at the same potential voters. When the parties, of course, are seen coast back slightly from full consensus by the traditions of their first constituency, but that's only to blur the differences as the electoral deadline nears.

Thus the vote means practically nothing in policy terms. It reflects mood, and can give a retrospective approval (to FDR's New Deal in 1936) or disapproval (to Nixon's Vietnam War). But in general it was a big electoral turnaround. It was really, it was a big electoral turnaround.

The Missing Precinct

CANTON, Ohio—On election night millions and millions of Americans watched as the NBC and ABC television networks announced that, according to their computers, Gov. John Gilligan had defeated former Gov. James Rhodes in Ohio.

Gov. Rhodes, like all of us, was so impressed by the fact that two out of three networks had given the election to Gov. Gilligan that he conceded on the spot and went to bed certain he was a loser. When he woke up the next morning he discovered that, although the networks had chosen Gilligan as the winner, the real result showed that Rhodes was ahead by 12,000 votes.

I happened to be in Canton, Ohio, so I went over to a sample precinct 50 miles away, one that both ABC and NBC had used to decide the network. I called the place Bellwether because the networks like to keep their sample precincts secret.

Thus the vote means practically nothing in policy terms. It reflects mood, and can give a retrospective approval (to FDR's New Deal in 1936) or disapproval (to Nixon's Vietnam War). But in general it was a big electoral turnaround. It was really, it was a big electoral turnaround.

Dear Father, and see how many of those who vote in those elections.

The Missing Precinct

Dear Fr. Toohey,

I was very pleased to read your column Monday, 6, to read what a nice trivial vacation you had. It must be nice not to have a care or financial worry at this time. I'm sure you are happy you have the time to enjoy this vacation and get the chance to do many things we would all like to participate in. But Father, it is just too bad the students were not able to enjoy such a break.

It appears as if the majority of students at this university were not able to just sit back and relax during the break, and wasn't that the reason behind the break, relaxation? Ask around, Father, and see how many students were forced to take home their books to study. The students took this action not because they are overly, though, but rather due to the great amount of work given right before and after immediately after the break made it imperative to work during the "vacation." A case in point would be an organic chemistry test was scheduled and given Monday night following the vacation and those students had no chance but to study during this "vacation." Students are not financially independent many had no choice but to leave and go home because of the closing of the Dining Halls. True, the South Dining Hall pay cafe was open, but the fact stands that the quality of the food has deteriorated to the point that almost no dinner is worth the $2.50 price. And during this time the budget was even cut down.

Because of this factor, I was one of the students forced to leave. To help pay for this glorious "vacation," which according to the opinion polls conducted, the students were not needed before, I had to work from 9-9 Tuesday through Saturday. After finishing work on Saturday I then went back to school from Boston. I can't begin to tell you the people I met on the way back. Also, I made the attempt to work upon my thesis for history, but this type of work is a little difficult in a house with four other siblings. Due to work I did not have the time to attempt to drive to Boston to use one of their universities' libraries. When I arrived on campus Sunday night, I realized that I now needed a break to recover from the "vacation." I was not able to afford the luxury of three movies due to lack of time, but more importantly financial shortcomings. Because of the timing of this break I lost two weeks of wages during the summer and I had to work just to break even. So, in closing, I must repeat your column did bring a touch of joy to my heart, to realize at least one member of our "community" did enjoy the break with no scholastic or financial worries. The only problem is, Father, that is according to Fr. Burchael, the break was for the well being of the students and regrettably, Fr. Toohey, you are not a student and cannot keep their sample precincts secret.

The staging was more elaborate in lighting, props, and positioning, and the performers, in flashy dress, played in a professional and vibrant manner.

Yes played for 2 hours, providing a unique experience for the audience.

The audience was left unsatisfied which is an important lesson for future performances.

The increasing sophistication of Yes' music will undoubtedly alienate some of their older fans, but for those who make the effort to understand, Yes' future is unlimited.
Ford acknowledges recession; pledges aid to housing industry

Never before has the President acknowledged publicly in his own words the existence of a recession. But Wednesday his press secretary, Ron Nessen, acknowledged that conditions showed America may be moving into that condition.

Ford told the convention of the National Association of Realtors that to combat inflation and recession he had ordered $300 million in federal aid to help finance mortgages on existing homes.

The money will come from $2 million previously earmarked only for aiding the financing of new homes.

Ford, repeatedly cheered by the audience, said he will ask Congress to aid the recession-hit housing industry by enacting proposals for financing not only for single-family houses but for condominiums and rental housing.

Further, he said he is asking Congress to make it easier to get mortgages by letting banks and thrift institutions "compete more effectively.

But as he had discussed the "commitments" to the burglars with Mitchell many times after the Watergate break-in, and that it was Mitchell himself who authorized a final $475,000 payment to conspirator E. Howard Hunt, Jr., on March 21, 1973.

That payment was one of the during periods of high interest rates.

Ford, gesturing for emphasis, hit at criticism that his anti-inflation campaign is aimed at having Americans spend less money.

"Instead of curtailing purchases, I say to consumers simply: Buy wisely, shop sharper," Ford said.

PLO leader Arafat leaves U.S. for Cuba

By BRUCE W. MUNN

UNITED NATIONS (UP) - Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat, pleased by his unprecedented U.N. visit, flew to Cuba Thursday, leaving a nine-man delegation to press Palestine Liberation Organization demands for an all-embracing state of its own.

The burden of the Arab campaign for such a state before the General Assembly fell upon Lebanese President Sleiman who asked delegates in a low-key speech to help the Palestinian people "recover fully its national rights."

Shafig el Hout, the PLO delegation spokesman, said Arafat was pleased by his reception in the world organization and more than satisfied with the security arrangements, the tightest in New York history.

He said he conveyed 200 and 300 messages were received by the PLO delegation from all parts of the United States, approving Arafat's Assembly appeal Wednesday for a Palestinian "one democratic state where Christian, Jew and Moslem live in peace, equality and fraternity."

Hout also said a 10-member delegation of Congress conferred here Thursday with PLO representatives, their first official other than security arrangement with their visit.

He said the PLO, while disapproving of U.S. policy in the Middle East, sought to work out relations with the United States.

The Congressional visitors included four senators and six representatives, including a woman member, Hout said, but he did not name them.

The PLO said the members of Congress were in New York for a three-day visit to acquaint themselves with the situation of various U.N. delegations, including that of Israel.

After a brief night's rest at the Waldorf Astoria hotel, Arafat was whisked away by secret service men before dawn for his flight to Havana aboard an Algerian jetliner.

Havana radio said Arafat gave Cuban premier Fidel Castro a "bear hug" when they met at Havana's Jose Marti airport.

Franjieh, who was picked by the Rabbat summit conference to speak in the Assembly's Palestine debate on behalf of all Arab countries, did not discuss details of an expected Arab resolution on the question.
Rep. Rangel opens civil rights conference

by Matt Yokom
Staff Reporter

U.S. Representative Charles B. Rangel, (Dem, NY), will address Notre Dame students and faculty December 5 in the Center for Continuing Education.

According to Howard A. Glickstein, Director of the Center for Civil Rights, Rangel will be the kick-off speaker of a new CRC program to bring leaders from politics, business and labor to speak on campus. The lectures are part of an 18 month long effort to develop social and economic reform proposals to be presented to the 1976 political conventions, new candidates and the new Congress in 1977.

"Representative Rangel is eminently qualified to inaugurate our ambitious program," stated Glickstein. Rangel has represented the Harlem congressional district since defeating Adam Clayton Powell in 1970. Rangel, a lawyer, is a member of the House Judiciary Committee and also plays an important leadership role in Congress as Chairman of the influential Congressional Black Caucus.

During this last summer's impeachment hearings, Rangel was one of the most outspoken critics of former President Nixon's conduct. Rangel's address, free and open to the public, will begin the CRC program to look beyond the traditional concern of civil rights and to develop an agenda of reforms. "To do this we will need to consider broader social and economic issues," Glickstein said.

This program, Glickstein announced, will bring a number of prominent leaders from politics, business and labor to speak on the campus. Like Rangel, the speakers will discuss critical issues they feel are facing America and how those issues effect minorities.

In addition to Rangel, United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock, and Hunter S. Thompson of Rolling Stone will be invited to speak.

These speakers will be in addition to the fourth annual Civil Rights Lectures co-sponsored by the CRC and the Law School, according to Michael Wise, Assistant Director of the CRC. This set of lectures will be in conjunction with the CRC spring conference entitled "Beyond Civil Rights."

The spring conference will be held April 17 and 18 and will focus on health, care and urban education, especially on the deficiencies in these areas bear on the economic security and the position of minority groups.

"In particular, we would like our conference to focus on the right of economic security, a right that might be fulfilled through guaranteed jobs or some form of income supplement," Glickstein said.

According to Wise, "A number of distinguished academic and practical experts have agreed to present papers and discuss critical issues at the conference."

By SCOTT LATHAM

NEW YORK (UPI) — Outgoing Federal Energy Administrator John C. Sawhill said Thursday he was "delighted" the Ford administration was interested in raising the federal gasoline excise tax.

The issue, thought to be dead a month ago when President Ford announced he would not seek such an increase from Congress, was revived Tuesday by Interior Secretary Rogers Morton, President Ford's chief energy adviser.

Morton expressed strong interest in raising the federal gasoline tax and indicated that such an increase would have to be at least 10 cents a gallon to discourage consumption and reduce oil imports significantly.

He said President Ford might go along with raising the tax, now four cents a gallon, if it were part of a larger economic and energy program to be shaped jointly with Democrats on Capitol Hill.

Sawhill, whose outspoken call for a similar gasoline tax increase several days before President Ford's economic message to Congress on Oct. 8 was one of the reasons Morton cited for Sawhill's forced resignation, refused to express any public bitterness.

"I am delighted that Secretary Morton is beginning to give serious consideration to a gasoline tax increase," Sawhill said, adding he saw "a good possibility" of such a tax being implemented.

Sawhill made the comment following a speech at the Financial Times and Oil International Conference. In his address he urged stronger international cooperation to cope with the energy crisis and said some form of mandatory conservation program was necessary in the United States.

In his discussion of a 10-cent gasoline tax increase, Sawhill suggested that the added revenue raised by the levy be partially refunded to lower income people to insure that it is not too burdensome on the poor.

He said that while this country could never be truly independent of the Arab oil-producing nations, the United States could achieve an immunity to further embargoes within 5 to 10 years by implementing an energy conservation program.

He ruled out gasoline rationing on the grounds it would unfairly burden those with low or middle incomes. He also said it would take a force of 17,000 persons to administer such a program.

Although Sawhill has submitted his resignation, no date for his departure has been set.

Sophomore defenseman Paul Clarke isn't much different than other collegians who play the game.

And although he does profess to be surprised by his selection as the Irish leader on the ice, Clarke does realize that he had to do help. Each player seems to realize what he has to do, and he is working on it. "That's what is helping our team."

Pittsburgh ready for Irish

"Their offense is quiet and versatile and their defense has hung in there when it's had to," Clarke says. "Johnny Majors has done an outstanding job with them, and he'll have his team ready to play tomorrow, you can count on that."

If Majors haven't the Panthers ready to play against the Irish, that fact in itself will rate as the biggest upset to occur since the 29th of September.

"Our football team is looking very much forward to this game," says Majors. "We know that we're going to be definitely undersized, and maybe justifiably so, but we're looking forward to it nevertheless. It will be the first time I, personally, have ever taken a team into Notre Dame Stadium, so the game presents a special challenge to all of us. Players, coach, and a quarterback like Billy Daniels, you are eager to play this one. All of will be ready.

Kickoff for tomorrow's game is set for 1:30 p.m.

Cagers in action

Notre Dame's 1974 basketball teams will defeat the Ohio State West evening with an exhibition game against Athletes in Action West.

The Athletes in Action squad is composed of top flight basketballers from around the country and coached by former Chicago Bulls player-coach Jim Cleamons.

As a special attraction, a film of the last five minutes of last season's 71-70 upset victory over UCLA will be shown at half time.

Tickets for the exhibition game are $2 for adults and 50 cents for children 18 and under as well as Notre Dame students.

Pep rally set for tonight at Step on Center

Notre Dame's newly inspired effort to retain its national title after losses by Ohio State and several other top teams last Saturday, began tonight at the Pittsburgh pep rally in Step on Center.

The importance of the rally is indicated by the presence of the speakers. Linebacker coach George Kelly and split end Pete Foster will address last night's fullback, Tom Parsie, who has doubleshouldered an important task at today's 1:30 game. An all-Judge function, will be featured at the 7 p.m. rally.

Special guest speakers at the rally will be the kicking specialists of the 1973 National Champions, punter Bob Thomas and placekicker Bob Thomas. Both are Notre Dame, as are current Notre Dame.

The Thomas holds ten all-time Irish records, including most punts (59), longest punt (62), most consecutive PAT's made (121), most consecutive PAT's made (80), and best PAT percentage in a season (108 per cent) and in a career (97 per cent).

The band will step from Washington Hall at 4:40 p.m.
Pittsburgh at Notre Dame: The Irish have had two weeks to get ready for this one, and a loss would now mean disaster. The Panthers have a talented but inexperienced team that will be led by the veteran Lenny Walker, but neither is 100 per cent. Still, the Irish's defense faces its biggest test so far against Pitt's multi-faceted attack. Notre Dame's defense has not held up well this season, but they may be better prepared for the Panthers. The game is important for both teams, but Pitt is in a better position to leagues and post-season bowl activity.

Also of note, the Pittsburgh Panthers defense will be tested against the Notre Dame offense, which has scored over 40 points in each of the last two games.

Coach Lefty Smith and his Irish will be counting on the scoring punch of Tony Dorsett in the backfield. Dorsett has scored over 1,000 yards this season and is one of the top running backs in the country.
