Views on Undergrad Priorities meeting vary

by Greg Bangs
Staff Reporter

Reactions to the first meeting of the Committee on Undergraduate Priorities ranged from feelings of general satisfaction to those of disappointment. The structural meeting, held yesterday at the request of Brother Just Paczesny, vice president of student affairs, was attended by Student Affairs officials and seven student leaders in response to the October 17 report on student life presented by the students to the nominees for the positions on the committees. Paczesny coeducation, finances, residentiality and student life," concern to students and their families: academics, coeducation, finances, residentiality and student life," he reported.

The purpose of yesterday’s meeting was to organize and discuss the structure of the five subcommittees which will each address a different area of student life. "I thought that it was a great meeting," Paczesny commented. "We got a lot done and are looking forward to other meetings. Today’s meeting was a general discussion on the purpose of the committee, the extent of the individual subcommittees work and the formation of the subcommittees," he continued. Paczesny said that each subcommittee will consist of three students, one administrator, one faculty member and one trustee who will work in a special capacity.

"Since most of the trustee board members live out of town, it has been difficult to arrange meetings," he stated. "Although they won’t make a lot of the meetings, I feel they will nonetheless help the subcommittees," he commented.

Outline of Subcommittees

Paciesny and Pat McLaughlin, student body president, were agreed about the need to look at possible nominees for the positions on the committees. Paczesny will also meet with Tom Drape, Observer editor-in-chief, and the members of professional development student affairs; and Fr. David E. Schlaver, director of student activities, to elaborate on the purpose of the committee and discuss the membership requirements of the subcommittees. Schlaver emphasized that the committee was not looking for experts to fill the positions on the subcommittees, but "for resources—people who are interested.

"I like to have people, who are very interested in a certain aspect of student life, work on this committee. Sure, we’ll bring in a lot of excellent reports and resource materials," Fr. John Macheca, SBVP said. "However, these new sources will be kept in contact with old resources. For instance, if a residence subcommittee needed material on off-campus housing, he could talk to Fr. Tallard, but it is not necessary to have Fr. Tallard be the committee himself," he explained.

Frank Flanagan also thought the five-man subcommittee was a good idea. "By breaking into committees, I believe, that with small groups of four or five members, it will be easy to break down and discuss what we want to do in each respective subcommittee," he asserted.

Disatisfaction with Meeting

Although Flanagan was optimistic about the set-up of the subcommittees, he was not satisfied about the course of yesterday’s meeting. "Although the meeting was basically organizational, for a one and a half hour meeting was far too short. We got to a point where feeling of where everybody’s at, and we milled over a lot of things," he stated. "But I’m disappointed because all the good points of the one a half hours we spend talking seemed to come in the last ten minutes. However, those points were excellent," he admitted.

This meeting definitely got off to a slow start, but organization is like that," Ann McCurry, Observer contributing editor explained. "Organization is something I’ve been going on about the committee like this, because it’s crucial to the success of the committee to clarify purpose and organization from the start," she continued.

Assistant Dean of Students Mary C. McCabe didn’t think the meeting was a productivity as it could have been. "I was disappointed because I was expecting that we would come, set up committees and start work. We have the mandate to begin work from the Board of Trustees, but we didn’t," she said.

Flanagan expressed further dissatisfaction with the meeting. "It was very disappointed with the attitude of some of the people who felt suspending the SLC was required to get this meeting off the ground," he stated.

"This report is supposed to be a "mini-coup" of the enterprise," the committee chairman explained. "I don’t remember the SLC ever being shut down while that report was being formulated. Flanagan said.

"I don’t see why the important governing body that looks over everyday problems should be shut down while the committee investigates the long range problems of campus life. At the same time, I think it’s important that a review of the SLC and its purpose be reviewed within the committee’s investigation," he continued.

Future of Committee Optimistic

All of the committee members questioned were optimistic and hopeful of the committee’s future, regardless of its opponents on yesterday’s meeting. Schlaver and Dean of Students John Macheca were hopeful about the committee’s purpose and future. "I’m very optimistic. Everybody appears to be interested and seems to have things in mind that they hope will get accomplished," Macheca commented.

Flanagan thought that "by looking at long range aspects, like at Notre Dame for all people, students, administrators and faculty members can be permanently improved, not temporarily adjusted."

"However," Flanagan continued, "I thought Pat McLaughlin made an excellent summation of the purpose of this committee. He said ‘In the past year or so, we’ve been using stop gap measures to solve the problems here. We’ve been plugging the dam. What this committee wants to do is to get to the root of the problem and then get it."

Spring Irish studies offered

by Kathy Skiba
Staff Reporter

Michael Scott, dean of the School of Irish Studies, will meet with faculty and students in St. Mary's Stapleton Lounge at 3 p.m. today, to present a program of foreign studies in Ireland.

The School of Irish Studies, located in Dublin, Ireland, offers students the opportunity to live and study abroad for one-semester terms. Under the program, students live with Irish families and take up to five three-credit courses at the school. Credits are normally transferable to the students' own colleges and universities.

Ms. Gail Mandell, assistant to the vice president for academic affairs, noted that a handful of St. Mary's students have participated in the Dublin Program in the past.

"Dean Scott is touring colleges which have had students participating in the program. He will meet with students, faculty, and a few department chairmen and will be available for questions," she explained.

Irish literature, language and history are among the fields open to foreign students during the spring semester, which opens January 29 and continues through May 23. Apotolical science course and an archaeology course will also be offered.

Study in Dublin affords students the chance to meet with several noted Irish lecturers who will appear at the school as well as the opportunity to visit such sites as Dublin Castle, St. Patrick's Cathedral and the National Museum and Library.

December 1 is the deadline for spring semester applications.

Nixon court-med exam pending

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The three court-appointed doctors are trying to arrange to conduct their medical examination of former President Richard M. Nixon next Monday, it was disclosed today.

Nixon's attorney Herbert J. Miller Jr. reported on the medical panel's efforts during a surprise appearance before U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica, who had asked the physicians to determine whether Nixon is too sick to testify or provide a deposition for the Watergate cover-up trial.

Miller said he was talking by telephone last Wednesday with Dr. Charles Hufnage, chairman of the medical panel. "He said he was trying to arrange the examination of the records and of the former president for next Monday," Miller said.

But Miller urged that Sirica not make public the former president's medical history. Sirica agreed that it does not have to be included in the doctors' findings.

The judge also reassured Miller that Nixon would not have to foot the bill for the examination, even if his own doctors are called in as consultants.

Nixon, who has been subpoenaed by defendant and former aide John D. Ehrlichman, is recuperating at his San Clemente, California, estate from near fatal complications following surgery last month for recurrent blood clotting brought on by chronic plasmobiasis in his left leg.

For the first time, the Senior Class Honorary Degree Committee is seeking nominations from all the members of the Senior Class for the recipient of the honorary degree to be awarded by the class at their graduation in May.

The members of the Senior Class Honorary Degree Committee are eligible to submit nominations to the trustees through Father Hesburgh, and all nominations are subject to trustee approval.

Thanksgiving travel threatened

Greyhound strike cripples service

by Fred Herbst
Staff Reporter

The current Greyhound Bus Lines strike involving 16,000 drivers has "quite adversely affected," local service, according to Tom Marshall of the South Bend Bus Terminal.

Marshall stated yesterday that in order to provide bus transportation around the nation from South Bend, individuals are being re-routed on Indiana Motor Bus Lines to terminals where connections can be made with Continental Trailways Bus Lines.

Continental Trailways is the second largest bus line in the nation next to Greyhound and travels to all major cities.

There appears, however, to be another serious problem forming. Marshall pointed out that there is a very good possibility that Indiana Motor drivers will strike at any time.

If Indiana Motor Bus Lines does go on strike, Marshall indicated that South Bend would be virtually "isolated" as far as bus travel is concerned.

Outlining an alternative if the proposed Indiana Motor strike occurs, Marshall said that an individual could take an Indian Trails bus to Chicago. This bus would unload at Randolph Street and the passengers could walk two blocks to the Continental Trailways Terminal and make further connections there.

Noting that Thanksgiving is one of the busiest times of the year, Marshall said that all the other bus lines will be overcrowded due to the Greyhound strike. Since it is impossible to make reservations for a bus, Marshall stressed the importance of being at the terminal early to insure boarding a desired bus and to avoid any unnecessary inconvenience.

Although unable to project an end to the current Greyhound strike, Marshall said that he is "hoping against hope that it will be settled by Thanksgiving."

Anyone having any questions concerning bus travel should call the South Bend Bus Terminal.

Counseling Center offers new programs

New student aid offered by Norman F. Bower

Staff Reporter

Staff members of the Notre Dame Counseling Center have instituted three new programs for student assistance. The programs include training in anxiety management and assertive behavior, as well as test anxiety.

These programs are going to be conducted by two Counseling Center staff members, Marie DiSabatino and James Covino, both doing graduate study in psychology, and by a University instructor, Thomas Merluzzi, who is one of the center's counseling psychologists.

Covino's area of concern is anxiety management as it relates to students. Specifically, he will deal with test anxiety and anxiety related to math, such as that caused by preparation for aptitude tests. Covino noted that this training is particularly useful when it deals with problems of social situations such as a student not reciting in class due to imagined pressures and fears.

Symptoms of this condition are a "nervous feeling, change in appetite, difficulty concentrating or remembering, but mini-sessions before the end of this year are being considered. Students interested should phone the Counseling Center at 1717 or visit the facilities in room 400 of the Administration Building.

Marie DiSabatino's psychological services will deal with assertiveness training which in her words, "is needed to keep people from hiding true feelings and to make them stand up for their rights without violating the rights of others. She will help people learn reactions to harmful behaviors such as non-assertiveness and aggression.

DiSabatino's training program has three goals. First, instruction will be provided in interpersonal rights. Then methods of overcoming blocks to assertiveness will be taught. Finally, assertive behavior will be developed and refined by means of active practice.

This program will be divided into three different two hour sessions with four to ten people participating in the work groups. There will be two groups set up just for women, just for men and for mixed groups as well.

DiSabatino stressed that these programs would be valuable for "all members of the general population, not just those who are wrong out." She described this program as being "fulfilling, especially for women who have been socialized into dependent, non-assertive roles.

The training will be offered many times during the remainder of the academic year, but the first rotation will begin Monday, November 35 at 3 p.m. It will be for women only and will also meet on the next two Mondays.

A course on life planning will be under the direction of Dr. Thomas Merluzzi. According to him the meetings will be "semi-structured group discussions about goals." After assuming the viewpoint that each person is more in control of his future than he may believe, the participants will be encouraged to think concretely about interpersonal relationships, careers, education and private time.

Merluzzi sees this program as method instruction in using short-term strategies and tentative goals to plan one's future.

This system will be organized into units of three to five people meeting twice for three hours with a discussion leader. No definite starting time has been established.

Merluzzi is waiting for student response before initiating the program. He hopes to begin before semester break if student interest is adequate.

SMC bike storage to be held today and tomorrow

St. Mary's winter bike storage will be conducted today and tomorrow in the Regina Hall basement, room 12, between 12 a.m. and 4 p.m. There will be no charge for the storage.

The project, sponsored by the Hall Life Commission, is for residents of Holy Cross, Regina and LeMahn Halls. Augusta and Candlewood residents may store their bicycles in the basements of their halls.

Those who wish to store their bikes in Regina should bring them to the southwest door of Regina and then downstairs in the elevator, said Hall Life Commissioner, Marty Kabbes.

Commission members will be on hand to store bicycles, and to issue a receipt to each student storing a bike.

After Friday, the door to the storage area will be locked until spring, when bicycles may be reclaimed according to Kabbes.

A day in February and another in March will be set aside for bike pick-up.

Experience the spirit of Christmas as never before.

what can never be shown

tim o'reiley

The town where poets once sought the greater meanings of life, became the site for the "final solution of the Jewish question."

Adolf Hitler, the architect of this transformation, had no greater influence than the execution of the fanatical doctrines that brought him to power. In March 1933, he had munitions factory here converted into a concentration camp for Jews, clergy, and undesirable elements, foreever ta in ting them from all they possessed. They were transported here, stripped of their identity, then commuted with number and prison pajamas.

The gravel walk ways now open to tourists were filled with stone and confined crematoria, providing a graphic display of what so many endured, effectively complement the print and pictures of the museum. And thankfully, no neon signs or souvenir stands have yet peppered it.

Despite those efforts, what happened can never be shown. Today, we can walk in and out of the camp at will, and have had such freedom all of our lives. We can stroll about the grounds, examine one sight, then move to another. We can wear a heavy coat if it is cold, or open up an umbrella if it rains.

Because of this, we can never appreciate the ordeal of the people, who, thirty years ago, called this place home. Once they entered the gate, they had no guarantee that they would ever again see the outside world.
The barracks were overcrowded by hundreds of men, a fact of life that had to be endured. The food rations were barely sustained, and the clothing offered only the most primitive protection against the elements.
The crematoria building, "Arbeit macht Freiheit," ("Work makes you free") was remembered by them of their fate to hard labor. No one could escape the tortures witnessed by them. Perhaps the mental tyranny can best be comprehended. Men who had lived lifetimes as good citizens and fathers were suddenly branded enemies of the state, and turned to all the crimes, sadistic tortures, or execution.

Near the end of the war, this gravel was covered with the living corpses that could only exist, too weak to contemplate survival evermore.

Essentially, two camps are named Dachau, the being dead prison of pain, which gave birth to what is now the teacher.
This touches us, how did so many innocent people, or one-thousand and one ways to vicarious aberrations? What is God that can mi neal protection against the serene people, or one-thousand and one ways to vicarious aberrations? What is man that would turn such suffering upon him self.

We may never answer such questions, but Dachau implores us to never quit seeking.

europe on five experiences a day

by carol ghiglieri and liz mortell

Going to Europe was our fathers' idea:

"What a better way to see the world and experience life than to spend a year in Europe?" All our friends, with whom we would discuss the traveler's needs, would say much of the world we'll see, but we'll tell you it is different. We would have had so much life to be experienced!

Before coming we prepared for everything.
All the world was large, and the world was huge. We did not have to worry about the equivalent of all the wares of the country. We would not have to worry about language, unless it became near impossible to understand the words. We would have had the opportunity to experience the European life fully.

Senior class trip discussed

by Ted Guth
Staff Reporter

In an interview last night, Senior Class President Greg Ericksen discussed the upcoming senior class trip to the USC football game, contending that no real discrimination was intended in the placement of students on flights.

While admitting that each of the flights was slightly different, Ericksen asserted that all have advantages and disadvantages, and in the end are very comparable.

"The departure times are not really different, at three most hours," Ericksen commented. "The return trips are also similar, with the exception of the one American flight which returns Monday morning rather than in the afternoon."

The main reason for the differences was the inability of any one airline to handle all the flights at convenient times, he said.

Ericksen also clarified the alcohol issue, stating that both the United and TWA flights will definitely have "open bars," and stated his belief that "there will be at least one or two free drinks on the American flights, perhaps even open bars on those as well."

Regarding the assignment of people to particular flights, Ericksen stated "Preferential treatment was given to anyone who made any special requests. Otherwise, the assignments were pretty much open, except that SMC girls were restricted to the American flights because of the airline rules."

However, switching of tickets from one student to another is not permitted by either the airline or the Civil Aeronautics Board, and such switching could result in the cancellation of the flights. "During passenger check-in, they'll be checking I.D. cards; if the name is not on the trip list, then you won't be allowed to board. So if anyone planned on switching, they should switch back," Ericksen explained.

For a similar reason, no more adjustments can be made for anyone in either departure and return flight time.

Those who have signed up for the trip should pick up an information packet Thursday or Friday afternoon from 5 to 6 in La Fortune basement. The packet will contain tickets, direction, information about the Los Angeles area, and two baggage checks. On the outside will be stamped room assignments, flight and bus numbers and time of the departure from the circle.

Each person must pickup his own trip packet, I.D. cards will be checked.

On arrival at the airport in L.A., students should take the busses to the hotel, pick up their room keys, and go to the rooms to wait for the rental cars to be ready. The list of drivers for the cars has already been sent to L.A. and the contracts made up. However, each driver will have to pay a $10 insurance fee upon picking up the car.

Lufthansa jumbo jet crash in Nairobi kills 59

BY JOSEPH RODRIGUEZ

Nairobi (UPI) — Survivors said Lufthansa Boeing 747 with 157 persons aboard faltered while trying to gain altitude moments after takeoff Wednesday and plunged tail first into a muddy field, killing 59 persons in the first fatal crash of the world's biggest commercial jetliner.

Lufthansa said 98 persons on Flight 340 bound for Johannesburg survived. Among the 65 Germans, 10 Britons, four Americans, two South Africans, two Japanese and eight Australians, one was not identified.

Survivors credited skilled emergency maneuvering by the captain for saving their lives. The airplane, which revised its customary count several times during the day, said many of the bodies were charred beyond recognition.

Most of the 138 passengers and 18 crew members were West Germans. In addition to the 12 Americans, Lufthansa said 45 Germans, 10 Britons, four Canadians, two South Africans, two Japanese and eight Australians, one was not identified.

American survivors included two crew members and 10 passengers. An unidentified couple was still accounted for hours after the crash.

The crew members were identified as a stewardess, Scott from Hackensack, N.J., and a steward named Seeholme from San Pedro, California.

The 230-foot jetliner had just lifted off the runway here for the flight to South Africa when it dropped abruptly and impacted tail down on the field about one mile from the end of the runway. It broke into pieces and burst into flames.

Survivors said Capt. Christian Krack, 34, saved their lives by his skillful attempt at an emergency belly-landing that sent the 747 skidding through the mud, leaving a 200 yard swath of debris but keeping the badly damaged fuselage intact. Crew members also won high praise.

Krack lived through the disaster and was quoted afterwards as telling investigators "I was taking off normally ... the plane broke up and was suddenly going down. I don't know what happened."

Lufthansa headquarters in Frankfurt said the plane fell from 100 to 150 feet. They said it appeared to be a normal takeoff. We don't know what happened then."

"There is no suspicion of sabotage," a spokesman said. "At the moment, we only have mysteries."

Most of the uninjured survivors were housed at the Nairobi Hilton hotel, where manager Tom LINSEN said they were "a little grubby but in pretty good condition."

Mrs. Elbert Oppenheimer of Baltimore said 10 of the 12 Americans in a tour group survived the crash "but we don't know what happened to the others."

"As the plane started to take off, I thought it was normal," she said. "I knew, I bong. It got very big and the captain said: "We're fortunate to be in the middle of a wide area.""

The door opened and the crew was fabulous. They got the chutes and pulled them out and we ran. With that, the plane exploded. It was such a miraculous escape.

Mrs. Oppenheimer said the members of her Club Universal tour were from the Baltimore, Dallas and Los Angeles areas.

Other survivors, some of them awake from unconsciousness, went through gaping holes in the fuselage to make their escape before flames engulfed the craft.

The tail and the remains of the 747 were completely ripped off, with the left wing clinking on an awkward angle. Mandel luggage, shoes, eye glasses and other debris were strewn over a wide area. One explosion lifted a neon sign up on a nearby weathervane.

Airline spokesmen said the "black box" flight recorder had been recovered. All 45 passenger and three crew members were flying in from Frankfurt and were killed out what caused the crash.

It was the first fatal crash of a four-engined 747 jumbo jet since it was introduced into service in January, 1970.

PERSONALS

If I'm CM, I am interested. (Hint! Me! The next 15 months.)

Happy Birthday Grace! Celebrate with us on Nov. 22, 21.

Dear Library Footloose.

Sorry I acted so cold at the end of the other night. Actually I enjoyed it. Will you consider? Will you consider? Sometimes? (How about tonight?)

Hey Irish, are you seeing green?

Terry:

For fun have a Double Doob. Join, Dick. Call Mary Helen. You are the ray of sunlight that melts the clouds and brightens my blues away.

Conroy confident of young Irish

Before the current hockey season, Irish senior center Pat Conroy was naturally expected to be a steady influence on this young Notre Dame squad. He is, after all, he and defenseman Les Larson were the only returning seniors. And Conroy easily met or exceeded the expectations from Conroy, who for the past three years had been strictly known as a checking center.

Well, Conroy is providing that leadership, and has blossomed into Notre Dame's chief offensive threat. In the first six games, the St. Paul, Minn., native scored three goals and assisted on 10 others. Part of the explanation for Conroy's newfound scoring fluency is his experience in the tough Western Collegiate Hockey Association. In the past three seasons also have added an effect to "Pat's off to such a good start because he worked hard during the summer on the weights," Coach Lefty Smith says. "He's playing his best hockey here in four years.

"I didn't think the weights were helping me and being up in the difference immediately on the ice. And opposition teams saw the difference, too. Their defenses, who only three-tenths of a second from our years ago Stark had to advertise for him, have now.

"I'm trying to get up and push myself, and so far, it has paid off," he also helps to have a pair of huge wings who can demolish any interference. In Connecticut, what Conroy has is 6-foot-4, freshman right wing Kevin Nugent and 6-3 left wing Don Jackson, also newcomers.

Swimmers start on second hundred

by Pete McHugh

Yes, Notre Dame, there is an Irish swimming team. And with scholarships, championships, and home and away uniforms at all the meets, the tanker are once again meeting the bleak prerequisites of a program in making use of possible as bleak Rockne Memorial Pool in preparing for the start of backstrokes, butterflies, and ches...everything.

Under coach Dennis Stark, the Irish are coming off their best season ever with a 10-4 record last year in dual meet competition. Included in that record was the 100th win for coach Stark with a 52-50 victory over Illinois State in the year's dual meet schedule. This year Stark faces the difficult task of replacing four of the mainstays of that team: captain Ed Graham (individual medley), Kevin Meagher (breaststroke), and Joe O'Connor (100- and 200-yard backstroke). Top returnees for the four hold nearly half of Notre Dame's swimming records. Helping to offset the sting of graduation, however, is the return of freestyle record holder Jim Karkow, a senior from Owings Mill Maryland, has done everything but clean the pool in his three years of varsity competition. In the most valuable swimmer the last three seasons, he holds school records in the 50, 100, and 200-yard freestyle events along with numerous relay marks. This three-year's captain, Kane has fallen only three-tenths of a second from meeting the NCAA qualifying standards in both the 200-yard medley relay and individual medley specialties the past two years.

Along with Kane, eleven, medallion winners return for the Irish including a nucleus of three more individual record holders. Bob Thompson, a senior from North Olmsted, Ohio, will lead Irish in the backstroke competition after setting marks in the 100 and 200-yard events last season. Another senior, Jim Meagher, record setter in the 100-yard butterfly, heads Stark's candidates in both the butterfly and relay competitions. Sophomore diver Bob Ebel returns after setting a mark last season. This year's team includes thirteen freshmen including high school All-Americans Erik Fitzsimons from Mount Prospect, Illinois.
