Between administration and faculty

Cushing cites drop-off in two-way communication

by Kathy Mills
Staff Reporter

Prof. James Cushing, chairman of the Faculty Senate, noted a decrease in "two-way communication" between administration and faculty, attributing it to a lack of response to Faculty Senate issues by the administration.

"The administration has not shown any interest; they have not even acknowledged the receipt of any reports on governance we sent them," Cushing stated.

The Executive Committee of the Faculty Senate has invited Fr. Theodore Hesburgh, University President, and some members of the administration to informally discuss several issues of university governance raised by the Senate during the last semester, according to Cushing.

Cushing explained that such a discussion was proposed "to try to avoid a confrontation at a later time." The Faculty senate chairman emphasized that Father Hesburgh responded to the invitation by saying that it was not clear what the committee wanted to discuss. Cushing then referred Father Hesburgh to the reports which the Senate sent him. As yet, the committee has received no further indication from the University president.

Cushing termed the situation "unsatisfactory" and remarked that the administration has "backed the faculty into a corner." He noted a decrease in "two-way communication" between the faculty and administration.

"What is left except perhaps some rigid and formal procedure like collective bargaining," Cushing added.

This semester, the Faculty Senate hopes to conduct a referendum during the latter part of February on University government. "Most of the referendum would ask the faculty at large to agree or disagree with issues raised by the Faculty Senate," Cushing explained. "The rest of it would ask the faculty what they would like to do about certain issues," the Faculty Senate chairman said. Cushing added that the referendum would contain about a dozen items, including appointments and promotion procedures, the salary issue, Hesburgh's $600 cost of living bonus and a Budget Priorities Committee recommendation. The referendum would also attempt to ascertain faculty reaction on "a Catholic-only type hiring policy," collective bargaining and the evaluation of the administration by the faculty, according to Cushing.

Indicating that the Faculty Senate is finished with the referendum, Cushing added, "Now it is up to the faculty to respond."

Cushing outlined a probable course, if the faculty should agree with the Faculty Senate on appointments and promotion procedures. "The Faculty Senate would put that item before the Academic Council," he explained, "in order to try to get the regulations changed." Cushing noted that many of the items on the referendum would probably go to the Academic Council, which has the power to make and change rules.

"I thought we might be finished with the referendum last semester," Cushing said, "but it was extended into this semester. Otherwise we accomplished what we wanted to last semester." Cushing noted that the main work of the Senate over the last six months preparing reports and articulating positions on University issues.

Cushing explained that such a discussion was necessary because the Faculty Senate believes that the $600 cost of living bonus paid to the faculty by Father Hesburgh last Christmas did not meet last semester's request for a permanent increase of $1200. The administration never responded to that request," he pointed out.

Cushing also stated that the story in the December issue of Notre Dame Magazine, which reported a $600 salary increase, was erroneous. "They gave us zero per cent, nothing," Cushing declared.

Cushing explained that the referendum would contain both objective and subjective questions. "Alumni Board member Edward Alumni Board member alumni-student liaison Edward Braden said. "The survey will be conducted in conjunction with the Sociology Department. The scheduling of Universal Notre Dame Night was relaxed to extend to any part of the year which seems most desirable. On this night each of the 90 alumni clubs across the nation meet to discuss business matters and items of interest pertinent to the University. Traditionally, this night was always held in the spring. The Alumni Board decided to extend the choice of the night of any part of the year which seems most suitable."

Traditionally, this night was always held in the spring. The Alumni Board decided to extend the choice of the night of any part of the year which seems most suitable.

Cushing noted that the Alumni Board meets in two ways, with the organizing meeting held immediately after a meeting of the Board of Trustees. "The Alumni Board has been doing its job," Cushing emphasized, "as indicated by the success of the Universal Notre Dame Night." Cushing added, "The Alumni Board is doing an outstanding job.

Alumni Board meets

The Alumni Board, convening on campus this weekend for the first time this year, yesterday passed resolutions to improve internal organization and the Alumni Association. Among the actions taken were presentation of nominations for Alumni posts, the planning of a survey of alumni attitudes and revision in procedure of such alumni activities as the Universal Notre Dame nights and the Alumni Annual Reunion.

Issues of particular concern to students noted a decrease in "two-way communication" between administration and faculty, attributing it to a lack of response to Faculty Senate issues by the administration.

"The administration has not shown any interest; they have not even acknowledged the receipt of any reports on governance we sent them," Cushing stated.

State Senator Robert Kovach, here with representative John Brademas yesterday expressed his support of the bill to lower the drinking age to 18.

Kovach, DuComb for drinking bill

by Mary Reber
Staff Reporter

State Senator Robert Kovach and State Representative Robert DuComb in favor of proposed state legislation to lower the drinking age to 18 yesterday.

"The issue has not been discussed on the Senate side yet and I do not want to project the outcome," stated Kovach, "but as I see the bill in the House, after having talked to some of the representatives, I do see some enthusiasm in favor of lowering the drinking age to 18," the State Senator noted.

"I myself would prefer a bill lowering the age to 19 instead of 18, because men and women are employed in the military forces and students would be in college at that age or working, this would eliminate the problem of high school drinking," Kovach said. "However, without that alternative, I might very well favor the proposal to lower the drinking age to 18," he added.

DuComb is in favor of the 18 year old drinking bill, but he said, "It is hard to say if it will pass," I would say that right now it has about a 50-50 chance to pass.

"We had a bill a week or so ago about the sale of alcoholic beverages on Sundays which passed the legislature by about 25 or 30 votes," he noted, "but it would be tough to get that same number of votes on this issue."

Both the representative and his colleague in the state senate concurred.

Kovach stated, "In the southern part of Indiana, the attitude toward any alcohol bill would be viewed differently than in the northern part because of the different make-up of the communities. From my observation, there will be more opposition to the bill in the south than in the north."

Both Kovach and DuComb feel that the chances of a bill to free colleges and universities from the responsibility for underage student drinking to pass seem to be very good. Kovach noted that Senate Pro Tempore Tupman also favors this bill.

In reference to the effectiveness of student lobbying, Kovach said, "All lobbies are good if they are conducted in the proper manner. As of yet, I have not seen any students on the drinking issue, but an organized lobby would have some effect," he said.

"The major impetus would come from state supported schools such as Indiana State University or Ball University," Kovach noted.

Kovach also added, "From what I have heard from other senators and representatives about the massive student lobbying for the Equal Rights Bill, the lobbying for the drinking age to be lowered is quite small in comparison."

"I have received letters from students in regards to the drinking age," said DuComb, "but as of yet I have not heard from anyone in person."

In reference to the Indiana Student Association, Kovach said that the students were effective in successfully lobbying to pass a bill allowing the governor to appoint a student representative to the Board of Trustees of certain state supported schools.

"Around December 18 of last year, I was on the Education Committee," said Kovach, "And the students gave a presentation favoring their bill to have a student on the Board of Trustees. I was very impressed with their presentation at that time." State Senator Kovach stated.

JUNIOR PARENTS WEEKEND RESERVATIONS DUE FEB. 1

Reservations for the Junior Parents Weekend should be handled by the turner in the Registrar's Office or in the Registrar's Office, 103 LaSalle St.

"Everyone should have received their invitations and ticket applications over semester break," Boyle stated. He noted that some candidates may have been lost in the mail and that juniors should check with their parents to determine if they have received their invitations.

There is still plenty of time to forward information to these parents," Boyle stressed.

Boyle added that the February 1 deadline is necessary to allow the weekend committee to mail the tickets and hotel confirmation to the parents by February 5.

The weekend activities take place Friday, February 2 through March 2.

"I observed that early application returns have been impressive," Boyle said. "There seems to be a great amount of interest in the weekend this year," he said. "I know enthusiasm is building among the Weekend Committee members, and seems to be shared by the juniors that I have spoken to."
Lecturers criticize apartheid

by Mike Sarahan

Staff Reporter

Critiquing the religious denominations in South Africa for their “submission” to the government’s policies of apartheid (segregation), Fr. Victor Kotze and a group of visiting lecturers from the Christian Institute of South Africa, called for the churches to undertake a strategy of “conflict” rather than “confrontation” and align themselves with the interests of the black majority in seeking the abolition of segregation.

Speaking before a small audience at the Institute of International Studies office, Kotze, a Roman Catholic priest from Johannesburg, called the Catholic Church “a bureaucratic machine” for adapting pro-segregationist government policies. Kotze went on to give examples of instances in which the Church had gone beyond mere adaptation in its support of segregation, among these the differences in pay between black and whites in equivalent Church positions and a Church law prohibiting interracial marriages.

“We have reflected the very worst of our own society in the lifestyle of the Catholic Church,” Kotze concluded. As communications officer for the South African institute, Kotze encouraged students and collegues to voice their own criticism to the churches in the country.

Shapiro went on to explain the rise of segregation in South Africa’s history. In 1948, after the Dutch Afrikaner Nationalist Party won power in a critical election, the official mandate of apartheid was first introduced as a defense of the white minority against the black majority.

Kotze did see a degree of hope in the recent developments in the “confrontation” between church and state in South Africa. In an 1973 meeting of the South African Council of Churches, a proposal in supporting conscientious objection to the involvement of the military in the suppression of the black liberation movement passed unanimously.

When the government followed up with legislation making the “inspiration of conscientious objection” illegal, the Catholic bishops issued a statement that they would, as a matter of conscience, disobey that law.

Kotze and Shapiro urged further church action. “God was in His heaven, but not in touch with the people’s lives at the grass roots,” Kotze added.

Shapiro, in a closing comment, suggested that one should not look to the churches but to the black nationalists as the “avatists” for social reform and the demise of apartheid.

Hesburgh supports Anti-Hunger Day

University President Theodore Hesburgh yesterday urged support for the Anti-Hunger Day, sponsored by the Notre Dame Hunger Coalition February 2. Hesburgh, who will celebrate a mass for the hungry in the ACC on Anti-Hunger Day, praised the efforts of the Coalition.

“During the recent months I have had the opportunity to talk on national TV programs and contact members of our government,” Hesburgh said. “It encourages me to know that faculty, students and administration at Notre Dame and St. Mary’s are participating in activities sponsored by the hunger coalition such as the Anti-Hunger Day.”

Hesburgh’s mass will highlight the day’s activities which will include a meal of tea and rice for the entire Notre Dame-St. Mary’s community.

Senator Richard Clarke (D-Ohio) will be the featured speaker after the Mass. Clarke is a freshman senator and has been an outspoken leader on the world food crisis.

Tea and rice sign-up

To show concern for the world hunger situation on Anti-Hunger Day, all members of the Notre Dame community can share a meal of tea and rice, the typical meal for the poor in underdeveloped countries.

Each student can sign up for the tea and rice meal by pledging to foreign the Dining Hall dinner February 2. For each student opting for the tea and rice meal, the University has agreed to pay 75 cents to the Christian Organization for Relief and Rehabilitation, a relief organization based in Bangladesh.

Members of the Coalition have distributed forms to students in the residence halls to sign up for the dinner. Community Service directors in each hall will collect the forms by Wednesday. Students will be able to register for the meal at the Dining Halls Sunday through Tuesday.

Ford requests additional funds for Southeast Asian military aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford will ask Congress to appropriate between $200 million and $250 million more for urgent new military aid to Cambodia, White House sources said Thursday.

The sources said Ford plans to submit the request within a week and that it might accompany another one for an additional $300 million for South Vietnam.

Both requests are certain to face stiff opposition in Congress.

The President was said to have decided to seek the extra Cambodian aid on an urgent basis because of stepped up Communist attacks that has severely cut the flow of weapons and other supplies into the capital city of Phnom Penh.

Congress already has appropriated $200 million in military assistance for Cambodia in the current fiscal year, but that was less than half the $450 million which the administration sought.

Ford said a news conference Tuesday that he would request the additional $300 million aid for South Vietnam, calling it "a proper action" to help the Saigon government defend itself against Communist violations of the Paris peace accords.

However, Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield predicted Thursday Ford will have difficulty convincing Congress to provide extra emergency military aid. "It will be difficult to get further aid for Cambodia and South Vietnam," he told newsmen before the Senate convened.
N.D. alumni present Sorin Award to Haley

The selection of J. Arthur Haley as the recipient of the 1975 Father Edward Frederick Sorin Award and the presentation of the first copies of a Notre Dame Alumni Association history authored by the late Jim Armstrong were highlights of a University of Notre Dame Alumni Association dinner tonight in the Doner’s Room of the Morris Inn.

Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C., president of the University, announced the selection of Haley for the award, which is named for Notre Dame’s founder and presented annually to an alumnus who has contributed distinguished service to the school. Haley, who retired in 1970 after serving 44 years as director of publications and earlier, as business manager of athletics, was graduated in 1926.

First copies of the Armstrong book entitled “Onward to Victory” were presented to his widow, the late Marion Armstrong, and members of the family. Armstrong, who died a year ago, was director of the Notre Dame Alumni Association for 41 years and saw it grow from 2,600 members in 1926 to more than 50,000 in 1967, his year of retirement. A foreword by Father Hesburgh notes that the book is “a pageant and often witty account of the role alumni have played in the development of Notre Dame from an obscure frontier school to an internationally celebrated university.”

Father Hesburgh, also the principal speaker of the evening, told directors of the national Notre Dame Alumni Association of the gratitude the institution owes such persons as the Haleys and Armstrongs whose entire careers have been devoted to advancing the University.

Dear Editor:

Your issue of December 4 announced a Brussels address to which mail should be sent to Notre Dame and St. Mary’s students in Angers, despite the strike of the French postal service which had cut off normal mail communication with France. This Belgian operation was a success. It was in mid-November, at a moment when the postal strike took turn for the worse, that I made the decision to try to restore some measure of two-way communication with the U.S. by renting a postal box in Belgium. Had that measure not worked, I was ready to try carrier pigeons. The box number assigned to me seemed a good one – 1403 – the date of Rocroi, famous victory in French military history. I made three trips to box 1403, and yielded hundreds of letters for our students here, all avid for mail from home and friends. Merci beaucoup.

A few haggard letters will oblige me to make one more trip to this Brussels box. Consequently I’d like to let your readers know that the recent Battle of Rocroi is over and box 1403 is closing. Mail service to France, though still a little slow and erratic, is returning to normal. And letters to friends in Paris may be sent to: S.U.N.D.E.F., B.P. 838, 69001 Lyon Cedex, France (Cedex, Latin for address).

Dear Editor:

As impressive as the demonstration by the “Right to Life” group was today, it still strikes me as a bit of narrowly focused action. It seems to me that the corollary of “pro-life” is not simply “anti-abortion” but anti-death; that includes wars, capital punishment, the thoughtless use of violence, and the outmoded and stifling penal system. There is a certain sentimental basis to the abortion issue, but the very same anti-death stance ought to be taken, ought to have been taken with regard to Vietnam, the civil rights struggles, and many other situations in which persons were deprived of the right to life. Where is our outcry over the starving peoples of Africa, Asia and Europe? Where are our letters to Congressional representatives? Where is the creative effort summoned from us by Dr. F. Husbarg at Thanksgiving? To strike a balance between the non-selective, to put our money where our mouth is on all life-oriented issues. Yet, and this is the hardest thing to accept, we cannot force the individual Christian to make his or her decision. He or she, on appropriate approach of “My opinion or else” Jesus Christ did not pass the world the Christian world by force. Israel did make the decision on behalf of the Chosen People by force. To possess a truth is great, but to force others to speak the truth is a perversion.

I send my friends at Notre Dame to follow through in your individual Christian decision on the life issue, without regard to politics or states actions. Let the actions of our individual Christians speak for life, all the time.

Sincerely,
Barbara A. Cullison

Dear Editor:

I read the discussion of the American battle of Rocroi on November 23rd with much interest. The article by Mr. R. P. Van der Stoey was full of useful information, but I feel there is a need for some more context.

Rocroi was a battle that took place in 1643 between the armies of France and the Spanish Netherlands. The French army, led by Marshal de Rospole, was outnumbered and outgunned but managed to defeat the Spanish forces led by the Duke of Alba. The battle was a significant victory for the French and helped to turn the tide of the Thirty Years’ War.

The French victory at Rocroi was a turning point in the war and led to the signing of the Treaty of Münster in 1648, which brought about the end of the war. The treaty was considered to be a victory for France and marked the beginning of the modern French nation.

However, the battle also had significant consequences for the future of Europe. The French victory at Rocroi contributed to the decline of Spanish power and the rise of French influence in Europe. It also marked the beginning of the modern French army and the development of a professional military force.

I believe it is important to remember the significance of Rocroi and its impact on European history. It is a battle that should not be forgotten and one that should be studied and learned from.

Sincerely,

Re: Right to Life Demonstration

Dear Editor,

The Right to Life demonstration that took place on the steps of the Capitol Building today was a powerful and moving event. It was a demonstration of the strength and determination of the pro-life movement, and a reminder of the importance of protecting the sanctity of life.

The demonstration was well organized and peaceful, with thousands of participants holding signs and chanting slogans. The messages were clear and compelling, and it was heartening to see such a large group of people come together to stand up for what they believe in.

I was particularly moved by the testimonies of individuals who had felt the impact of abortion firsthand. Their stories were raw and real, and served as a reminder of the human cost of abortion.

I hope that this demonstration will serve as a catalyst for change, and that it will inspire others to take action and stand up for the right to life. Let us continue to work towards a world where every life is cherished and valued.

Sincerely,

Kevin is a gay student at Notre Dame but unlike Tom, he lives on campus and is an undergraduate. He is a junior and came to Notre Dame form the Midwest. Kevin looked for help from a number of places on campus, some being helpful and some not so. "My encounter with the Notre Dame Psychological Services Center really backfired," he said. He admitted that he was not exactly sure what they were up to. "I went there asking for help returning to the straight life but got the feeling I was being manipulated," he said.

According to Kevin, they inferred that he go out and force himself to acquire some sexual interest in girls. "I'll be using people if I did that and that's not right," he noted. Kevin was quite clear that he encountered them but he said

"I was afraid that it would be similar to last year's group," he said. He explained that the atmosphere of last year's group was too giddy and he didn't sense the seriousness with which they dealt with the group with we have this year," he recalled.

Kevin also had a definite opinion about the gay bars in South Bend. "It's an easy way to meet guys but there's no chance of going relationships," said Kevin. He viewed the forceful hunters as monsters. He felt that the bars were no different than a gay bars in any other city.

Mont of Kevin's friends are straight, although relatively few. "How many times I pointed out, however, that honesty is necessary with his really close friends. "I wasn't going to be somebody who was papering a hole in the closet," he said. "I'm the type of person who is known in campus, in the center, and I like to work with the people, not let you be honest with yourself; you need to talk," he says.

Referring to the "masculine image" at Notre Dame, he noted that his sexuality was promoted and he doesn't feel sure if people know engaged in moments, he said. "I didn't want to be that way, it will tell you their liberty," he said.

"The Notre Dame way for homosexuals sometimes resembles that of the closeted sexual experience, and then live in guilt, which creates a feeling of年的," he said. "I'm not the type of person who will not let you be honest with yourself; you need to talk," he says.

Kevin explained that one of the fears of gay guys on campus is that their rector will be unsympathetic to their situation. "There's a lot of truth in the rumor that she will not let you be honest with yourself; you need to talk," he says.

He felt that because of inspectors and administrators, students are forced into the South bend scene where all they can do is grill and cut away. "They're not going to be like the others," he said.

Kevin pointed out that of the rectors and administrators, students are preventing, gays from revealing themselves.

Kevin again asserted his thankfulness for the Gay Students of Notre Dame. "The group is a lot of sensitive, decent human beings who can help each other with their problems," he said.

"The word gay as used in this situation is a separate reality, a distinct problem," said Kevin. He noted that homosexuals can be as exploitive as any other group. "I don't think we're the only ones who are misunderstood," he said.

The Rainbow comes and goes, And lovely is the Rain, The Moon with delight Look round her when the heavens are bare, Waters on a starry night ARE beautiful and fair, The sunshine is a glorious birth; But yet I know, wher'e e'er I go, That there is no rest and no story from the earth... in a season of calm weather Though inland far we, Our souls have sight of that immortal sea Which brought us hither, Can in a moment travel thither And the games of illusion.

When the affair is ended by a phone call - really, there was no affair at all, so close was Art to the Final Curtain, and neither one of you wanted to have an affair, anyway - there is always the goodbye note. "Up to now, the New Yorker and I loved so much was an innately citified, in my thoughts it was always associated with typography, with suburban stations. It was a world of sophistication, big cities, and the games of illusion."
DEPRESSION ART "FOUND"

Art Prints

A series of rare coincidences has led to the historic discovery of several thousand sets of full color antique art prints that were "lost since 1937." They are now being offered to the American public.

Eleanor Roosevelt

Back in 1937, immediately following the depression years, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and a select group of a dozen nationally prominent people formed a voluntary national committee for art appreciation to create an art program that would give the public a well-needed cultural lift. It was the committee's decision to select the works of most famous paintings from the 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th and 20th centuries -- the best paintings of Matisse, Van Gogh, Gaughain, Picasso, Gauguin, Titian, etc., and to reproduce them in full color as perfectly as humanly possible and make them available to the public at a price within the reach of nearly everyone.

Abandoned In 1937

For some unknown reason, after a quantity of these beautiful reproductions were made, the entire project was abandoned and this collection of perfect reproductions was stored in a Brooklyn warehouse, where they remained undisturbed since 1937.

Available to Public

The lost collection was rediscovered by antique book dealers and art critics agree that these authentic original 1937 engravings, faithfully reproduced in full color, bear paint marks in the process. So come in and see for yourself the Pe 3012 automatic turntable and the PE 3012 automatic turntable and the system. Christian Athletes to sponsor world hunger booth in ACC

by Janet Carney

Once more, the rising concern of the Notre Dame community towards the current food crisis will be demonstrated this Saturday at the UCLA basketball game.

The Notre Dame chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes will sponsor a collection booth at the game to promote awareness of the hunger situation, according to Jim Early, president of the FCA.

The group is a non-denominational organization designed to foster Christian ideals throughout the world, and the need for help in alleviating this problem.

The proceeds will be allocated in equal proportions among seven funds: CARE, UNICEF, Catholic Relief Services, Church of World Service, Oxford Committee on Famine, Co-Workers of Sister Theresia, and the International Federation of Community Organizations.

The idea for the booth was originated and organized by Early. "It's to serve as a reminder to all those attending the game. The current world food situation and the need for help in alleviating this problem.

Committee to watch CIA, FBI movements

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Displaying a catalogue of assassination tools, two Republican senators Thursday introduced a measure to create a House-Senate committee to watch over the CIA and FBI as safeguards against miscalculated covert actions.

Sens. Howard Baker of Tennessee and Lowell Weicker of Connecticut, members of the old Senate Watergate committee which would create a 14-member panel of House and Senate members.

It presumably would implement recommendations that will be made by a newly created special Senate committee which will investigate the CIA and issue a report by Sept. 10.

The proposal in the Baker-Weicker measure also would be charged with overseeing the Secret Service, the Defense Intelligence Agency and the National Security Agency.

In introducing the measure, Weicker displayed a catalog of booby-trapped cigarette cases, tear gas dispensers and flashlights offered for sale to the U.S. government for use abroad and which could be timed to explode in the user's hands.

The "assassination catalogue," as Weicker called it, was prepared by a laboratory in suburban Arlington, Va., and presented to an unidentified government agency for its inspection.

Weicker said he was astounded that such equipment could be offered a U.S. agency "and can be taken as a matter of course."

"This shows," he said, "what happens when we have been derelict in our duties."

Baker said he was not engaged in a vendetta against the CIA but felt the agency had massively intruded in the political activities of U.S. citizens. He said he wanted to "produce neither a 'whitewash nor a witch hunt'" and would carefully protect the confidentiality of highly sensitive CIA operations.

He said the Senate committee on Atomic Energy had proved that congressmen and their staffs were capable of keeping secrets because it had not leaked any classified information.

Tax assistance program slated

A training session for those volunteers interested in helping with the Tax Assistance Program will be held Tuesday, January 29th at 7 p.m. in room 101 of the Law building.

No previous experience is required. The program will consist of an overview on how to prepare Indiana State tax forms. Volunteers will help the TAP members in downtown South Bend, depending on each individual's schedule.

The TAP is sponsored by the Accounting Department of the College of Business Administration and under the auspices of Professor Ken Milano and Professor Jim Wittenbach. Its purpose is to provide aid to South Bend residents in the preparation of State and Federal income tax reports.

The Tax Assistance Program begins February 8th and runs through April 15th.

SMC coffeehouse reopens

Carrigan. "Arrangements are also being made for a substitute for the mural which has hung on the wall for the last nine years. A decision on this was reached by Dr. Cellia Ann, of the Art Dept., Jim Raymo, of photography, Maggie Traugut, Curator, and Diane Davis, Alumni Director," she said. "The new mural, presently being designed by SMC alumnae Sue Friedman and Cathy Shell, will be a photo silk-screen using scenes representative of St. Mary's campus life. The relief will be done on canvas and covered with paint." Carrigan explained.

Also being offered this semester is an entertainment preview. One night per month, the coffeehouse will sponsor dinner-time entertainment from upcoming performers.

Responding to inquiries about competition with the Nazz, Carrigan cited mutual cooperation and talent exchanges between both coffeehouses. "The Nazz has a definite place at Notre Dame and the Coffeehouse has a definite place at St. Mary's. That's because there is a need on both campuses," she added.

Anyone interested in performing at the SMC Coffeehouse or any girls interested in the hostess group should contact Kathy Carrigan at 4949.

When you’re welcomed home by two ovations, and then you win two and twenty more minutes into a two and a half hour fiesta, things can only get better right?”

Wrong. At least not if your next visitor is the usually-nagging John Wooden and his UCLA Bruins. Not that Wooden and Co. are consciously hostile to their hosts; they’re just making you wish that you had cruised them off your guest list long ago.

Coming off eight tough games on the road, it was not exactly a sweet home for Coach Digger Phelps and his players as they struggled to overcome both the road and Holy Cross for a narrow 96-91 victory. The Irish performance, however, was as good as less than outstanding. It will take considerably more to send the Bruins home convinced that South Bend is not even a nice place to visit.

Last year UCLA entered the ACC owning a 1-0 record and an 88 game winning streak. They left with only the redshirts, the streak broken by Notre Dame’s exciting upset victory. The Bruins brought more gratitude to their hosts then, declining to score over the last 30 seconds of the game so that the Irish could enjoy the last twelve points and a 71-9 victory.

The redhead, all-American center Bill Walton, is gone now and so are the等 three All-Americans Keith Wilkins and two other starters. But coach John Wooden still has all the tools. He had enough at hand to handle the Irish last December 21 in Los Angeles, handing them an 85-72 defeat. ND played impossibly for most of the game, taking leads of 19 and 26 before they were able to retain their poise and compose themselves, and UCLA’s second-half onslaught.

“I think we’d be able to stay with UCLA by playing as well as we did in Los Angeles last month,” said Digger. “I’m feeling better now than we were then, and we’re ready to move on to the next game.”

UCLA enters the game with a 14 record, having suffered only their one defeat at the hands of a surprising Stanford team last weekend. They are ranked second in the Coaches Poll and fourth in the A.P. Poll. Their coach, the “Wizard of Westwood” John Wooden, has built a college basketball dynasty during the 60’s and early 70’s, his string of eight national championships being broken last year by Kentucky coach Joe B. Hall.

Leading the Bruins is senior forward Dave Meyers, UCLA’s top scorer and only returning starter. Meyers paced the Bruins first-half effort in last month’s battle with the Irish. Phelps and his players will give them an added boost. At the other end, the Irish, particularly so for an inexperienced team, have nine of the last 12 at home and don’t expect any letdown.

With a little help from their friends, the Irish could well make their home just that much sweeter.

Trackmen travel to Illinois for season opener

by Pat Holleran

After over four months of preparation Coach Tom Foley’s track team opens its indoor season January 20th at the University of Illinois. Nine trackmen participate in the invitational affair with host Illinois and many other teams expected in a field of over 100 athletes.

The Irish appear to be weak overall this year with but a few bright spots, judging from last week’s indoor meet run before Christmas. The team scored only 71 while Illinois, particularly in the flat events from the 60 through 800 meter events, is threatening national qualifying standards or is expected to place in top 15.

Best of the sprint group is probably 100 and 220 yard man Anthony Seabrook. He stepped off a 23.2, 390 before Christmas. The 60 yard dash is still significantly stronger in the hands of Chuck Willis who is more than capable of holding pull-offs.

Unfortunately for the Irish, the 800 and 1600 meter throws will probably be an area of weak spots. Notre Dame may not even field competitors in these events.

Irish hopes this year rest in two areas—the pole vault and the middle distances. In the pole vaults the Irish are led by school record holder Kevin Kline with a mark of 14’-9.”
