Ford discusses world poverty and peace

by Terry Keene
Observer Editor

The ultimate solution to world peace will depend on the ultimate resolution of the world poverty problem. President Gerald R. Ford said yesterday in an address to the Special Academic Convocation.

"Ford, speaking to an enthusiastic crowd of about 10,000 in the University's morning about the need for interdependence among nations to foster both solutions to world poverty and peace. "People have a natural right to realize that no structure of world peace can endure unless the poverty question is answered," Ford said. "There is no safety for any nation in a world in which the haves and the have-nots are not together." For Ford, the world food crisis is a non-conformist in government and his efforts in the areas of amnesty and world hunger.

"The answers to the world food problem are to be found in the developing countries of the world," Ford said. "We can and will help other nations, but simplistic paternalism may do more harm than good." Ford proposed that nations help one another help themselves.

Premeire Hesburgh

Ford's speech followed the presentation to the President of an honorary doctor of laws degree by Fr. Theodore Hesburgh, University president. Ford cited Hesburgh's role as a non-conformist in government and his efforts in the areas of amnesty and world hunger.

"The answers to the world food problem are to be found in the developing countries of the world," Ford said. "We can and will help other nations, but simplistic paternalism may do more harm than good." Ford proposed that nations help one another help themselves.

Premeire Hesburgh

President Ford conducted four informal meetings that were closed to the public during his stay on campus yesterday.

Following the Special Academic Convocation in the ACC, Ford met with about 100 faculty and students in private from Notre Dame's Academic Council. Afterwards the President and his top advisors had lunch with and briefed some 40 news media executives from the Midwest.

Ford later met informally with about 30 college and university presidents who were invited by the University to attend a luncheon with Fr. Hesburgh and U.S. Attorney General Edward H. Levi. The President concluded his visit to Notre Dame with a working dinner with six regional governors.

Academic reception

At the academic reception following the Convocation, Ford said, "I am grateful for the opportunity to meet with a governing body that is so broad based. I am sure that there are more understanding and cooperative than the Congress has been a respect.

The faculty present were the elected members of the Academic Council. Students invited were members of U.S. Academic Council and members of the Student Council. Student Body President Pat McCaughan and SBP-elect Ed Byrne were invited to attend with St. Mary's Legislative Commissioner Joanne Garrett. McCaughan and Byrne said they were not able to attend the reception because they had to attend a meeting of the Student Senate.

"The answers to the world food problem are to be found in the developing countries of the world," Ford said. "We can and will help other nations, but simplistic paternalism may do more harm than good." Ford proposed that nations help one another help themselves.

Premeire Hesburgh

President Ford conducted four informal meetings that were closed to the public during his stay on campus yesterday.

Following the Special Academic Convocation in the ACC, Ford met with about 100 faculty and students in private from Notre Dame's Academic Council. Afterwards the President and his top advisors had lunch with and briefed some 40 news media executives from the Midwest.

Ford later met informally with about 30 college and university presidents who were invited by the University to attend a luncheon with Fr. Hesburgh and U.S. Attorney General Edward H. Levi. The President concluded his visit to Notre Dame with a working dinner with six regional governors.

Academic reception

At the academic reception following the Convocation, Ford said, "I am grateful for the opportunity to meet with a governing body that is so broad based. I am sure that there are more understanding and cooperative than the Congress has been a respect.

The faculty present were the elected members of the Academic Council. Students invited were members of U.S. Academic Council and members of the Student Council. Student Body President Pat McCaughan and SBP-elect Ed Byrne were invited to attend with St. Mary's Legislative Commissioner Joanne Garrett. McCaughan and Byrne said they were not able to attend the reception because they had to attend a meeting of the Student Senate.

"The answers to the world food problem are to be found in the developing countries of the world," Ford said. "We can and will help other nations, but simplistic paternalism may do more harm than good." Ford proposed that nations help one another help themselves.

Premeire Hesburgh

President Ford conducted four informal meetings that were closed to the public during his stay on campus yesterday.

Following the Special Academic Convocation in the ACC, Ford met with about 100 faculty and students in private from Notre Dame's Academic Council. Afterwards the President and his top advisors had lunch with and briefed some 40 news media executives from the Midwest.

Ford later met informally with about 30 college and university presidents who were invited by the University to attend a luncheon with Fr. Hesburgh and U.S. Attorney General Edward H. Levi. The President concluded his visit to Notre Dame with a working dinner with six regional governors.

Academic reception

At the academic reception following the Convocation, Ford said, "I am grateful for the opportunity to meet with a governing body that is so broad based. I am sure that there are more understanding and cooperative than the Congress has been a respect.

The faculty present were the elected members of the Academic Council. Students invited were members of U.S. Academic Council and members of the Student Council. Student Body President Pat McCaughan and SBP-elect Ed Byrne were invited to attend with St. Mary's Legislative Commissioner Joanne Garrett. McCaughan and Byrne said they were not able to attend the reception because they had to attend a meeting of the Student Senate.

"The answers to the world food problem are to be found in the developing countries of the world," Ford said. "We can and will help other nations, but simplistic paternalism may do more harm than good." Ford proposed that nations help one another help themselves.

Premeire Hesburgh

President Ford conducted four informal meetings that were closed to the public during his stay on campus yesterday.

Following the Special Academic Convocation in the ACC, Ford met with about 100 faculty and students in private from Notre Dame's Academic Council. Afterwards the President and his top advisors had lunch with and briefed some 40 news media executives from the Midwest.

Ford later met informally with about 30 college and university presidents who were invited by the University to attend a luncheon with Fr. Hesburgh and U.S. Attorney General Edward H. Levi. The President concluded his visit to Notre Dame with a working dinner with six regional governors.

Academic reception

At the academic reception following the Convocation, Ford said, "I am grateful for the opportunity to meet with a governing body that is so broad based. I am sure that there are more understanding and cooperative than the Congress has been a respect.

The faculty present were the elected members of the Academic Council. Students invited were members of U.S. Academic Council and members of the Student Council. Student Body President Pat McCaughan and SBP-elect Ed Byrne were invited to attend with St. Mary's Legislative Commissioner Joanne Garrett. McCaughan and Byrne said they were not able to attend the reception because they had to attend a meeting of the Student Senate.

"The answers to the world food problem are to be found in the developing countries of the world," Ford said. "We can and will help other nations, but simplistic paternalism may do more harm than good." Ford proposed that nations help one another help themselves.
One ticket running

St. Mary's SBP elections set today

by Mary Janca
St. Mary's Editor

St. Mary's student body president and vice presidential elections will be held today in the LeMans Hall lobby from 6 to 8 p.m. All students are urged to vote.

One complete ticket composed of SBP hopefuls Joan McDermott and Mary Ann Bleik, candidates for vice presidents of academic affairs and student affairs, respectively, is running for the election. The election is uncontested.

According to election rulings, when such an election occurs, students have the option to vote for the ticket, or to place a check in the "no" box on the ballot. A simple majority of 50 percent plus one of those ballots cast is required to win the election.

In its platform, the ticket proposes to "work as a cohesive unit to increase the efficiency of student government." This can be achieved through close cooperation and coordination among ourselves as well as with the administration and faculty.

The ticket also noted that as St. Mary's is in a period of transition, "it is important that student concerns are not lost in the shuffle."

Classroom robberies are 'under control' at SMC

by Kathy Skiba
Staff Reporter

Anthony Kovatch, director of security at Saint Mary's College, announced yesterday that the situation involving a series of small thefts in Madeleva Memorial is "under control."

The thefts, which occurred in the large classroom and office facility, usually involved money but occasionally personal property. Kovatch stated that they had been occurring off and on during the school year.

Although Kovatch was not able to discuss the specifics of the breaksdown on the floor, he noted, "In most cases the thefts occurred when doors to offices were inadvertently left open."

Kovatch stressed the importance of the faculty keeping their office doors locked, and suggested that women faculty carry their purses with them, and lock their purses in their file cabinets when this is not possible.

Kovatch said that he was "reluctant to say that a student was responsible," explaining that in addition to Saint Mary's and Notre Dame students and faculty, people from South Bend can also gain access to the building. He also stated that regular and frequent security patrols are conducted in Madeleva.

Re-emphasizing that faculty should keep their doors locked, Kovatch cited that typewriters, calculators, and radios that are contained in offices often entice a potential thief.

Cambodian aid refused; $21.5 million available

Ron Nessen told newswoman in South Bend, Ind., that President Ford announced that the United States will not give Cambodia $21.5 million which Ford requested. But Cambodia, for less than the $222 million which Ford requested.

The announcement came as the Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted to act on a proposal for $122 million in additional funds for Cambodia, for less than the $222 million which Ford requested. But even the smaller amount was doubtful to be approved.

The Observer is published daily during the academic semester except vacations by the students of the University of Notre Dame and St. Mary's College. Subscriptions may be purchased for $10 per semester ($6 per semester) from The Observer box 2, Notre Dame, Indiana 46556. Second-class postage paid, Notre Dame, Ind. 46556.

The Observer is published daily during the academic semester except vacations by the students of the University of Notre Dame and St. Mary's College. Subscriptions may be purchased for $10 per semester ($6 per semester) from The Observer box 2, Notre Dame, Indiana 46556. Second-class postage paid, Notre Dame, Ind. 46556.
Ford, governors discuss policies

(continued from page 1)

governors discuss policies

President Ford, governors discuss policies

Reversing prior stance

Byrne meets with President

Tuesday, March 18, 1975
Student poll indicates Ford's speech labelled 'safe'

by Katie Kerwin Staff Reporter

There are probably as many different student reactions to President Ford's speech as there are students, but a random survey of Notre Dame undergraduates showed a general consensus that Ford had made a safe, non-controversial and somewhat predictable speech.

"He didn't say anything controversial. But then it wasn't supposed to be political, so I guess he put it safe," said Linda Huberty, an Arts and Letters freshman.

"His speech wasn't extremely bad or extremely good. He could have been more personal," said an Architecture student. "I really couldn't tell you what he said—he lost my interest."

An American Studies junior simply described it as "a speech. There was no major announcement, but I didn't expect any. He didn't say anything. I wasn't surprised, though—I came to accept a degree and that's what he did. He did what was called for."

A number of students went so far as to say that the President said nothing at all.

"He said exactly what I expected—nothing," stated Suzanne LeBlanc, an economics student.

"The speech was dry and uninspiring. He avoided all issues, except what people wanted to hear. He didn't want to say anything. I wasn't surprised, though—he came to accept a degree and that's what he did. He did what was called for."

Michelle Batacan said she felt let down. "I was disappointed. We all looked forward to The President's coming. And he came. It was kind of sad."

"Some people were falling asleep. The President was up on the podium saying nothing," she stated.

"It was a good speech, but it didn't say too much. It was a safe speech," she concluded. "I got the feeling I was back in the '60s—only you knew, 'The Good Old Days.'"

A student who took part in the walk-out, but said that he heard part of the speech on television, stated, "I'm of the opinion that he's a mental nothing. His speech showed that."

"Everybody went just to see him," said a sophomore government major. "His speech was worthless. He didn't say anything for the students. He made the address to the public, not us."

Another sophomore disagreed. "I think the speech had a lot to do with what was going on here at school. He brought up the hunger crisis, which ties in with our hunger Coalition. I think it was kind of relevant. He came around pretty well to the students in the beginning. It was boring later, though."

A freshman Government-intent student expressed similar feelings. "I thought it was pretty good. There was a lot more information than most people gave credit for. Mainly, he showed that the United States isn't going to remain isolationist."

One student said that he felt that the speech was "inspiring."

"Ford emphasized the ideals of youth—how we should aspire to high ideals. He was very encouraging. He did a good job of bridging the gap between government and college students. The President tried to gear his speech to us. I felt he was interested in us. He said that we can and will change things," she said.

"I thought it was a good pep rally," said another student. "It was a good speech, but it didn't contain any information. I knew what he was going to say before he said it. I had a good time and I made our school look good."

The President's "quickie quip," however, praising Notre Dame's great advances in the field of transportation, was undoubtedly the highlight of his speech, according to all those polled.

Irish honor St. Pat's Day

DUBLIN (UPI) - Thousands of shamrock-wearing and waving Irishmen paraded through flag festooned towns and villages in the Irish Republic Monday in traditional celebrations honoring St. Patrick, the patron saint of Ireland.

Police security served as a grim reminder of the violence across the border in Northern Ireland, where residents were warned to beware of bombs in shamrock greeting cards. Bomb squads Saturday detained six booby-trapped green greeting boxes mailed to Roman Catholic churches.

In hundreds of bars and private homes across the country, Irishmen toasted the shamrock in song, dance, stout and whisky. Corks popped and the cash box jingled as they swept their economic woes under the mat and forgot about spiraling prices that put the little shamrock at 20 cents, twice last year's price.

It was a public holiday. Everything closed down except the essential services—and among the most essential on St. Patrick's day were the bars and the ceremony of "wetting" the shamrock.

But if Irishmen were ready to forget economic problems for the day, a giant industrial pageant in Dublin brought back reality.

The pageant, official highlight of the celebrations, took as its central theme "buy Irish—protect your job," a reminder that soaring inflation and high costs have shut down many firms and put 100,000 out of work, the highest total in 30 years.

The Dublin parade, featuring the economic growth of the Irish Republic in more than half a century of self-government, included 120 floats depicting traditional Irish products--Guinness stout, Irish whisky, tweeds, lace and Waterford glass.

Economics

"Meet your Major"

Night

Wednesday, March 19
Room 104
O'Shaughnessy Hall

"After we beat Kansas on Saturday, we'll come back here to Stepan on Tuesday night and we'll have another rally, and I want to see this place packed! We can do it, we can go all the way, but without your spirit and support!"

Digger Phelps, 3/13/75

PSYCH-UP PEP RALLY TONIGHT

SPEAKERS:
ADRIAN DANTLEY
BILLY PATERNO
DIGGER PHELPS

STEPAN - 8:15
A commemoration in photos. President Gerald R. Ford, the 38th President of the United States, came to the University of Notre Dame on a brilliant St. Patrick's Day at the invitation of Fr. Theodore M. Hesburgh, University President. On these three pages, the Observer cameras captured and recorded the historic day.
Get Out The Vote

Today elections for St. Mary's student body president and vice presidents for academic affairs and student affairs are being conducted. The polls are open from 10 in the morning until 8 this evening in the lobby of LeMans Hall.

Casting a ballot takes no more than two minutes, and requires no extra steps, since the polling place is located along the most heavily-used hallway on campus.

Your vote in this election is important. Despite the fact that the ticket is running uncontested, it is your vote by a simple majority that will put them in office or fail to do so.

By casting a ballot, another purpose, more far-reaching, will be achieved. In past year elections at St. Mary's have been plagued with poor student turnout.

At the same time, evidence of apathy within student government, such as the failure to raise a quorum at Student Assembly meetings, has become increasingly apparent. The mere fact that only one ticket is running for office is a further witness to this apathy.

However, student government cannot be expected to act effectively or responsibly if it fails to receive any support from its constituency. The most basic way for the student body to demonstrate this support is by voting, particularly in today's election.

Get out and vote today--it's your choice to vote either for or against the ticket, and your choice to support an effective student government, or not to vote and condone apathy in student government.

Mary Janea

DOONESBURY

DON'T TELL ME WHAT I'M REMINDED OF
WHEN YOU ASK HEART KISSERS TO BEHAVE, INdochina! I'M MAD AT THOSE WHO BROUGHT ME BACK TO THE
ART OF KISSING!

ANN, I'M REMINDED OF THE MANY CHILDREN
WHO WERE VIOLENT AND KILLED DURING THE CHRISTMAS
BOMBINGS IN VIETNAM!

...AFA RET  1975...

WORD COUNT: 28

P.O. Box 0

An Abrupt About Face

Dear Editor:

In last Friday's issue, The Observer reported that Student Body President Pat McLaughlin and SBP-elect Ed Byrne had declined to take part in yesterday's meeting between President Gerald Ford and various representatives from Notre Dame and St. Mary's. Mr. McLaughlin and Byrne cited personal, not political reasons for refusing the invitation, a point which left me genuinely impressed.

In an atmosphere in which supporters and dissenters alike seemed caught up in making the most out of this historical occasion, these two student leaders elected to pass up a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity because of their distinction with the manner in which the students who were to meet the President were selected.

On Monday, the scheduled meeting with the President took place and McLaughlin, true to his word, did not attend. Byrne, however, not only attended the meeting, but presented President Ford with a sweater on behalf of the ski team. This emphatic about-face in position on his part calls for some explanation.

Was he misguided in The Observer? If so, why did he let the story stand uncontested? And if indeed last week's statement was reported accurately, what made Byrne change his mind? Were pressures brought to bear on him from some higher source? Did a burning bush instruct him to take the sweater and bestow it on the President? Or did he simply give in to the temptation to make a little piece of history and do something he could talk about years from now.

I am neither belittling Ed Byrne, nor passing judgment on him for his decision; a person is entitled to a change of mind. But when that person is also the president-elect of this student body, perhaps he owes an explanation to those who brought him to that office. Pat McLaughlin and Byrne cited personal, not political reasons for refusing the invitation, a point which left me genuinely impressed.

Unfortunately though, due to a number of reasons, the effects of their protest were not nearly as evident as many of them had hoped. Doonesbury, and even disgust, they cursed the apathy of the rest of the student body. At least they could pride themselves of taking a personal stand against wrong.

But, did those same people decide to continue in their struggle? Did they even decide to write Mr. Ford a letter, telling him about their feelings?

No. By most of them were content to let the matter rest. How cheap the price of protest has become. To me, the idea of a fair weather protestor is a contradiction in terms. Looking around, I haven't only found them in this past little escapade. "I've found them all over this campus; we're all fair weather protesters, myself included, and that makes me sick!"

Theodore Gustowski

Depthless Speeches

Dear Editor:

President Ford had a purpose in his speech, to join academia with the world of politics. He did this with a barrage of shallow rhetoric about "peace with justice," which is about as meaningful as "peace with honor."

We need to see these trite phrases put into action before their meaning is understood, before we can applaud or criticize them. The speeches of both President Ford and Fr. Hesburgh only skimmed the surface of the world problem of hunger.

I felt the President's drift was in the right direction, toward a food program, but he never went below the surface, expecting his audience to accept his depthless speeches. Judging from the applause, the audience did accept it. The President and Fr. Hesburgh gave the students plenty of opportunity to applaud themselves--Hesburgh tells us we are "the greatest student body" and Ford tells us that we will act in the future on what he was talking about, whatever that was.

Ford maintained his Doonesbury image, telling friendly, carry jokes, but he found an audience susceptible to such corn and also, unfortunately, to shallow rhetoric.

Gary M. Shippy

by Garry Trudeau

students found it within their vocations to participate. The time of the conferral came, and these dedicated students followed their commitment, and walked

Unfortunately though, due to a number of reasons, the effects of their protest were not nearly as evident as many of them had hoped. Doonesbury, and even disgust, they cursed the apathy of the rest of the student body. At least they could pride themselves of taking a personal stand against wrong.

But, did those same people decide to continue in their struggle? Did they even decide to write Mr. Ford a letter, telling him about their feelings?

No. By most of them were content to let the matter rest. How cheap the price of protest has become. To me, the idea of a fair weather protestor is a contradiction in terms. Looking around, I haven't only found them in this past little escapade. "I've found them all over this campus; we're all fair weather protesters, myself included, and that makes me sick!"

Theodore Gustowski

Depthless Speeches

Dear Editor:

President Ford had a purpose in his speech, to join academia with the world of politics. He did this with a barrage of shallow rhetoric about "peace with justice," which is about as meaningful as "peace with honor."

We need to see these trite phrases put into action before their meaning is understood, before we can applaud or criticize them. The speeches of both President Ford and Fr. Hesburgh only skimmed the surface of the world problem of hunger.

I felt the President's drift was in the right direction, toward a food program, but he never went below the surface, expecting his audience to accept his depthless speeches. Judging from the applause, the audience did accept it. The President and Fr. Hesburgh gave the students plenty of opportunity to applaud themselves--Hesburgh tells us we are "the greatest student body" and Ford tells us that we will act in the future on what he was talking about, whatever that was.

Ford maintained his Doonesbury image, telli
InPIRG directors to elect officers

by Jeffrey M. Povey
Staff Reporter

The InPIRG board of directors will meet with the retiring board Wednesday night at 8.30 in the InPIRG offices to elect the officers for next year's group.

Tom Hake, Dave Carlyle, Julie Engelhart, Maureen Power, Tom Martin, Frank Munica and Lisa Molidor were elected to the board.

The March 19 meeting will be to distribute the offices among the board members.

ND students charged

Shoplifting increases security

by Kevin Dickerson
Staff Reporter

Recently, South Bend area merchants have been complaining about the number of students from Notre Dame that have been shoplifting, and all merchants have agreed to step up preventive security measures. Claims from large chain stores such as K-Mart on Mishawaka Avenue cite that security measures. Claims from large chain stores such as K-Mart on Mishawaka Avenue cite that security measures.

A recent statement released by Notre Dame Information Services, Dean of Students John Macheca stated that "the current policy of South Bend merchants and the St. Joe County Aid and Defender Association of the Law School on campus stated that "we can be of very little help to students accused of shoplifting."

Molidor, one of the new board members, called this a "transition period" for the Indiana consumer group. "We've spent a large part of this year just getting organized, but next year should be a really good one," Molidor said.

We're organizing InPIRG groups at HUSH and hopefully at St. Mary's, as well as at Valparaiso. Where's never been three InPIRG's in South Bend before and with all of this manpower, we should be able to get a lot done," she said.

Molidor also expressed the need for a non-student InPIRG director that could remain in the office at all times to answer the phone and handle the mail. "This would leave the students a lot free to work on projects. If we receive the same funds as last year, we should be able to afford it," Molidor commented.

Other InPIRG goals for next year include a community representative on the board of directors and more faculty contact. "We'd like to have different faculty members oversee our projects in areas in which they specialize. With these kinds of new ideas and the good cross-section of graduate and undergraduate students we have on the new board, our possibilities for next year are unlimited," Molidor concluded.

Recently, InPIRG released a survey of the different checking accounts offered by banks in South Bend and Mishawaka. The report includes the American National Bank, St. Joseph Bank and Trust and First National Bank of Mishawaka, and gives information about such items as cost of accounts, minimum balance required, monthly service charges and the availability of free checks and student loans.

Mark Clark, a member of the old board of directors, said that the survey was based on a similar one taken at Indiana University by InPIRG and in California by CALPIRG. Clark commented that the purpose of the survey is to provide students with knowledge of all of the alternatives available to them. "We're not trying to rank banks," he added.

InPIRG has made two other studies recently the first concerning the strength and durability of different brands of bicycle chains and cables. The other report talks about discrepancies in the help that different Internal Revenue service offices in South Bend give in filling out income tax forms.

All InPIRG reports can be obtained at the InPIRG office on the second floor of LaFortune. An information booth about InPIRG will be set up in the Memorial Library lobby this Wednesday afternoon and night for all those students and faculty interested in finding out about the organization.
Energy bill proposed in House to limit gasoline consumption

by Howard Fields

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Chairman Ullman of the House Ways and Means Committee introduced Monday a complex energy proposal centered on heavy taxes for inefficient or excessive gasoline consumption.

The Oregon Democrat's bill would increase the tax on a gallon of gasoline by 27 cents up to April 1, 1980, offer an income tax rebate on 50 percent of the tax applied to the 9 gallons consumed each week by each adult and assess gas-guzzlers by as much as $1000 per car in 1980.

Suing Secretary William Simon, testifying on the final day of hearings before the panel begins writing its counter-proposal to President Ford's energy package, called for a compromise and criticized as insufficient the reliance on taxing automotive gasoline.

The key to solving the nation's energy problems, Simon said, is to make the United States independent of foreign oil sources. "We cannot be independent unless we have a program to limit the growth of all forms of petroleum products, not just gasoline," he said.

Ford's plan, delayed by efforts to compromise with Congress, was to tax all oil imports, forcing an across-the-board increase in all petroleum products at the same time the ceilings on the price of domestically produced oil were lifted.

Ullman said his bill was the result of seven committee task forces which worked on various aspects of the energy problems over the past two weeks. He said he hoped the committee would finish writing an energy bill in time for a House vote following Congress' Easter recess.

The idea behind the higher tax on excessive gas consumption is to penalize those who use more than their basic weekly need, but to guarantee that those confining themselves to their basic need would not be punished.

Gas guzzlers would be penalized by imposing a tax of up to $230 on 1977 model cars getting less than 12 miles per gallon. Those getting 21 miles per gallon would be assessed $40. This would increase under Ullman's plan to $1000 on 1981 models getting less than 16 miles per gallon.

MICHIGAN STREET ADULT THEATRES

★ 2 FILMS

★ BOOKSTORE

★ LIVE FLOOR SHOW

1316 SOUTH MICHIGAN STREET
CALL 282-1206 FOR INFORMATION
NCAA to re-evaluate St. Mary's next year

by Marjorie Ir

St. Mary's College will be subject to reaccreditation evaluation by the North Central Accreditation Association (NCAA) in the spring (continued from page 1).

North Central appoints a three man Site Visitation Committee to make an on-the-spot evaluation of accreditation and the procedure by which the college is preparing for it.

Horning explained that the NCAA appoints a three man Site Visitation Committee to make such evaluations and recommendations for re-accreditation. Evaluations are based on reports submitted and evaluated by every department of the college, prior to the committee's visit. Self-evaluative evaluations made during the campus visit. A recommendation is then made to the NCAA by the Site Visitation Committee and a final decision is thereby made.

All materials for evaluation must be submitted by December, 1974. The Site Visitation Committee will make its report to the NCAA by March 1, 1975. The recommendations of the NCAA to St. Mary's, which is currently considering a proposal for reaccreditation, will be final and the college evidence for the purpose of preparing for reaccreditation.

The President concluded his remarks with a reference to the recommendation of the Re-accreditation Committee. "The re-accreditation is a dynamic process, it is a work in progress toward continually improving the quality of educational services," he said.

"We are showing an increase in the number of students, and the number of faculty members, and in the number of courses offered, and in the number of buildings and classroom facilities. We are showing an increase in the number of students, and the number of faculty members, and in the number of courses offered, and in the number of buildings and classroom facilities. We are showing an increase in the number of students, and the number of faculty members, and in the number of courses offered, and in the number of buildings and classroom facilities. We are showing an increase in the number of students, and the number of faculty members, and in the number of courses offered, and in the number of buildings and classroom facilities.

Ford acknowledged the Thorough businessmen who have been a part of this year's Re-accreditation process and the Thorough businessmen who have been a part of this year's Re-accreditation process and the Thorough businessmen who have been a part of this year's Re-accreditation process and the Thorough businessmen who have been a part of this year's Re-accreditation process. He then expressed his appreciation for the contributions of the Thorough businessmen who have been a part of this year's Re-accreditation process and the Thorough businessmen who have been a part of this year's Re-accreditation process.

"We are most grateful to the businesses who have helped us in our re-accreditation efforts," Ford said. "We appreciate the support and cooperation of our businesses, and we look forward to continuing our relationship with them in the future."
A.D. of D.C. — best since Elgin?

by Greg Corigan
Sports Editor

The February 19, 1973 edition of Newsweek featured a high school senior whom it labeled "the most sought after prep basketball player in the country." His name was Adrian Delorean Dantley, sought by popular demand, shortened to A.D., and while he was leading Washington D.C.'s DeMatha High to new basketball heights, he was also receiving over 200 offers.

"So he's the best around here," said Elgin Baylor, player-coach at DeMatha's coach, Morgan Wooten, who had taught basketball and had every senior basketball player on his squad accept a college scholarship.

Just recently the Washington D.C. sportswriters and sportscasters voted for the five greatest basketball players to ever come out of the D.C. area. Along with Elgin Baylor, Austin Carr, Doyle Ring, and Jack George, they named Adrian Dantley.

Last year, as a freshman, Dantley averaged 18.3 points per game, and his remarkable mention on UPI's All-America team. This year, Dantley has done it all. He finished second to Richmond's Rick McCurdy as the nation's leading scorer averaging 30.8 points a game, and tone team forward on AP's, UPI's, Basketball Weekly's, Sporting News', Basketball News' and the NBA coaches poll.

All-America honors, as in other words, consensus.

College counselors that have to play against him are intimidated Pro teams who scout him drool, and then they are a little afraid. "Lawyers are constantly talking to me about taking a month off and putting pressure on her," says A.D. "It's unbelievable. When we played St. John's in Madison Square Garden, the game was canceled and the tickets were given back, but she said she wasn't interested. I don't know where all that came from, but I left. Right now, my plans are to stay here in school."

Dantley is quite close to his mother. "She's the one who admits that she runs his life." "I think I've improved a lot this year," says Dantley. "I'm playing a lot better defense, I'm more aggressive and my rebounding is improved." Last year when I was a freshman I used to get nervous before ball games.

Despite the pounding his 6'5 frame has taken, Dantley has had few problems with injuries. This season he logged 1,081 minutes of the 1980 the Irish have played, more than any other player on the squad. "My stamina is a lot better because I lost 19 pounds from last year," explained A.D.

It's tough being a superstar! "Well, in a way," says Adrian. "Everyone expects you to be perfect. When you miss a basket, everyone notices, and if you don't score 40 points a game people say you didn't play well. Like at St. John's where the Irish won 86-67 for example. I only scored 18 points, but I played one of my best games of the year, especially defensively. But people ask what happened?"

The St. John's game is a perfect example of Adrian Dantley, the team player. "He's dedicated," says Irish coach Digger Phelps. "His main concern is with the team, not with how many points he scores."

"I think I've improved a lot this year," says A.D. "I'm playing a lot better defense, I'm more aggressive and my rebounding is improved." Last year when I was a freshman I used to get nervous before ball games.

But I don't anymore. If you have confidence in yourself as a ballplayer you shouldn't ever be worried. You have to believe in yourself."

But like most superstars, Dantley is quick to give credit to his teammates. "Without the rest of those guys going out there and giving their best, I wouldn't be able to do a thing. If I've done well it's because my teammates and coaches have helped me."

Don't get to sleep until about 2:30 or 3:00 in the morning and I get up about nine. I just worry a lot about how things are going."

Someone once asked him if his goal at Notre Dame is to break Austin Carr's scoring record. "I'd rather go to the NCAA finals than break Austin's record," Dantley quickly replied. "My biggest goal here is winning a national championship."

An economics major, Dantley's other goal is to get his degree, one of the main reasons he plans on staying in school. "I'd like to play pro ball," he says, "but mostly my goal is to be successful at whatever I do. If I'm successful I want to take care of my mother, but also I'm a big brother and I like to work with kids. If I do make pro ball, I'd like to use some of the money to help out the kids."

The Observer

A.D. of D.C. — best since Elgin?

Dantley averages 18.3 points per game, and his remarkable mention on UPI's All-America team. This year, Dantley has done it all. He finished second to Richmond's Rick McCurdy as the nation's leading scorer averaging 30.8 points a game, and tone team forward on AP's, UPI's, Basketball Weekly's, Sporting News', Basketball News' and the NBA coaches poll. A.D. — best since Elgin?

Maryland rally set for tonight

Consensus All-American Adrian Dantley and Super Soph Billy Purtill, the featured speakers at tonight's Pep Rally for the upcoming basketball team. Digger Phelps, head coach, will add his own comments on the cage princes of the University of Maryland, Notre Dame's next opponent in the NCAA tournament. At Thursday's Rally, Digger stood before us and said, "If you want to see this place packed. This baby is going to be big and we can go all the way, but without your support, we can't." Tonight's Rally will begin at 185 p.m. so that over seven hundred freshmen who have a Math test this evening will be able to attend. Help keep the ball rolling by giving the Irish a cheer tonight. St. John's in Madison Square Garden, the game was canceled and the tickets were given back, but she said she wasn't interested. I don't know where all that came from, but I left. Right now, my plans are to stay here in school."