No changes seen

Duggan discusses future

by Mary Jauca
St. Mary's Editor

Duggan would "like to see an expanded social life" on the St. Mary's campus, and pointed to the senior picnic held in the SMC Clubhouse last Friday as an example of the type of social activities which should be encouraged here.

While noting that he still would like to find out more about St. Mary's, Duggan commented that he had already met with many students, and to know students. "He outlined his plan to meet every student on the SMC campus. By sponsorship freshmen teas and wine and cheese parties at his house for seniors, this year and next year, he hopes to have himself with as many students as possible.

Duggan believes that to get to know the students is part of his responsibility as chief administrator, because five years, Duggan, exists for students.

The head of the historic setting of into his new position slows down, he hopes also "to get out and around more on the campus, and to go into the dining hall have a cup of coffee with students," and chat.

Length of Term

While discussing the five presidents—three permanent and two interim—that St. Mary's has had within the past five years, Duggan was asked how long his term of office would be.

"It evolved as a job of public life and service which society had denied to all but a few women is increasingly more difficult to find areas where women are still denied," he said.

Burtchaell comments

Role of women changing

by Mary Mungovan
Staff Reporter

Fr. James T. Burtchaell, Provost, discussed the changing role of women in the church, the family and society in his opening Mass on Sunday in Sacred Heart Church.

In his sermon, Burtchaell said, "The position of women in the church, the family and society in his opening Mass on Sunday in Sacred Heart Church.

In his sermon, Burtchaell said, "I have no intention to re-direct St. Mary's, or to do a 90 degree turn around. I am here because I believe in the agreed-upon goals of the college, but will make changes to turn those goals as it becomes necessary."

A large endowment to increase scholarship funds, higher faculty salaries, the construction of proposed residence faculty, and the renovation or construction of a new library, are among the changes the new president expects, and has already begun to make.

In addition, Burtchaell would "like to see an expanded social life" on the St. Mary's campus, and pointed to the senior picnic held in the SMC Clubhouse last Friday as an example of the type of social activities which should be encouraged here.

While noting that he would still like to find out more about St. Mary's, Burtchaell commented that he had already met with many students, and to know students. "He outlined his plan to meet every student on the SMC campus. By sponsorship freshmen teas and wine and cheese parties at his house for seniors, this year and next year, he hopes to have himself with as many students as possible.

Burtchaell believes that to get to know the students is part of his responsibility as chief administrator, because five years, Burtchaell, exists for students.

The head of the historic setting of into his new position slows down, he hopes also "to get out and around more on the campus, and to go into the dining hall have a cup of coffee with students," and chat.

The new president is "all in favor" of the recent extension of male visitation hours from 10 p.m. to midnight, on Friday evenings. Prior to this semester's extension, partial hours were from 8 p.m.-10 p.m. on Fridays, 1 p.m. - 8 p.m. on Saturdays, and 8 p.m. - 10 p.m. on Sunday evenings.

Duggan stated that the 10 p.m. deadline was "unreasonable." However, he believed that any extension beyond midnight, or conducting visitation hours during the weekday evenings would change the nature of St. Mary's as a women's college.

Relations between St. Mary's and Notre Dame

Regarding the relationship between St. Mary's and Notre Dame, the president said, "We SMC have no intention of moving away from Notre Dame."

"I have had several conversations with Fr. Denugh, University of Notre Dame president, and Fr. Burtchaell, University provost, and am convinced that we (Notre Dame and St. Mary's) are both interested in exploring every way in which we can co-operate to our mutual advantage," he noted.

Duggan described the type of relationship he feels that St. Mary's should enjoy with Notre Dame as an "arm's length cordiality." He believes that SMC has an important role to play as a small, Catholic, women's liberal arts college; it must not lose its identity.

Although there will be no reconsideration of merger of the two churches, Duggan commented that he is "delighted that Notre Dame is across the street" from St. Mary's. "We (Notre Dame and St. Mary's) would be fools not to take advantage of our juxtaposition."

The new chief administrator pointed out that he is also "delighted that our women have the opportunity to test their intellectual abilities in the classroom situation with men," referring to the co-exchange of classes between Notre Dame and St. Mary's students.

He continued, noting that he is equally pleased that cultural and social programs at Notre Dame are available to St. Mary's students, and programs at St. Mary's are likewise open to Notre Dame students.

Above all, the new president is "committed to enhancing the tremendous sense of community that is here." With this in mind, the administration and faculty families associated with interest of female students differs from the faculty families associated with Notre Dame's (and not expecting to stay here for at least five years, is not doing that job justice," he continued.

"It takes at least that long to sort your ideas and implement projects," he said.

After the fifth year as College president, the decision was made that one administrator be individual, made between the particular institution, and the particular administrator involved.

"I didn't come to St. Mary's to use it as a stepping stone," he said, because I find that what is here to be congenial to me and my style.

(continued on page 6)

Burtchaell also commented on the co-exchange of classes between Notre Dame and St. Mary's (and not expecting to stay here for at least five years, is not doing that job justice," he continued.

"It takes at least that long to sort your ideas and implement projects," he said.

After the fifth year as College president, the decision was made that one administrator be individual, made between the particular institution, and the particular administrator involved.

"I didn't come to St. Mary's to use it as a stepping stone," he said, because I find that what is here to be congenial to me and my style.

(continued on page 6)

Burtchaell sees the "liberation of women eliciting the renegotiation of roles within the family. Many marriages are going to be created by husbands and wives both of whom welcome their children and both of whom wish to individuate their lives to challenging jobs."

Burtchaell claims coeducation at Notre Dame provides an example of "liberation for women and liberation for men." He noted the patterns of academic and career interests of female students differs from those of male students.

He later commented that many of the courses connected with the university are an example of "women's roles in church and in career and family.

In the numbers and positions of faculty members, Burtchaell believes Notre Dame provides a good example of equal opportunity. He cited June McCuscatone, director of financial aid; Sr. John Miriam Jones, assistant to the provost; Sr. Isabel Charles, acting dean of the College of Arts and Letters and the five women rectors as significant administrators. He explained the low numbers of women in senior faculty positions is the result of faculty positions are the result of limited opportunities for women on the faculty.

In response to Burtchaell's sermon, Carole Moore, asst. professor of history and chairman of the Committee of Women, said, "This is a wonderful opportunity. We have lost ground in the last year in a row." Moore commented, "It's marvelous that someone in a high position of leadership as Fr. Burtchaell sees the "liberation of women eliciting the renegotiation of roles within the family. Many marriages are going to be created by husbands and wives both of whom welcome their children and both of whom wish to individuate their lives to challenging jobs."

Burtchaell, the administration believes Notre Dame provides a good example of equal opportunity. He cited June McCuscatone, director of financial aid; Sr. John Miriam Jones, assistant to the provost; Sr. Isabel Charles, acting dean of the College of Arts and Letters and the five women rectors as significant administrators. He explained the low numbers of women in senior faculty positions is the result of limited opportunities for women on the faculty.

In response to Burtchaell's sermon, Carole Moore, asst. professor of history and chairman of the Committee of Women, said, "This is a wonderful opportunity. We have lost ground in the last year in a row." Moore commented, "It's marvelous that someone in a high position of leadership as Fr. Burtchaell sees the "liberation of women eliciting the renegotiation of roles within the family. Many marriages are going to be created by husbands and wives both of whom welcome their children and both of whom wish to individuate their lives to challenging jobs."

Burtchaell, the administration believes Notre Dame provides a good example of equal opportunity. He cited June McCuscatone, director of financial aid; Sr. John Miriam Jones, assistant to the provost; Sr. Isabel Charles, acting dean of the College of Arts and Letters and the five women rectors as significant administrators. He explained the low numbers of women in senior faculty positions is the result of limited opportunities for women on the faculty.

In response to Burtchaell's sermon, Carole Moore, asst. professor of history and chairman of the Committee of Women, said, "This is a wonderful opportunity. We have lost ground in the last year in a row." Moore commented, "It's marvelous that someone in a high position of leadership as Fr. Burtchaell, the administration believes Notre Dame provides a good example of equal opportunity. He cited June McCuscatone, director of financial aid; Sr. John Miriam Jones, assistant to the provost; Sr. Isabel Charles, acting dean of the College of Arts and Letters and the five women rectors as significant administrators. He explained the low numbers of women in senior faculty positions is the result of limited opportunities for women on the faculty.

In response to Burtchaell's sermon, Carole Moore, asst. professor of history and chairman of the Committee of Women, said, "This is a wonderful opportunity. We have lost ground in the last year in a row." Moore commented, "It's marvelous that someone in a high position of leadership as Discussion group formed to honor Prof. O'Malley

by Sue Carey

The Wranglers, an informal discussion group which was begun by Fr. William Goerner, S.J., met for the first time this week, Wednesday, September 17, at 7:30 p.m. O'Malley in the 1940's has been revisited by Professor E.A. Goerner of the Government Department.

Goerner himself a member of the Wranglers as a student, has set up a schedule of bi-weekly meetings to discuss and question topics of interest. The course provides both formal and informal education for anyone wanting to work with the campus liturgical program.

The instructor, Patrick Pritchard, is presently teaching music at Brandywine High School and has an M.A. in Liturgical Music from the University of Notre Dame. The course is designed to provide both formal and informal education for anyone interested in working with the campus liturgical program.

The courses meet one every three weeks.
No class rank relieves pressure

by Patrick Cole
Staff Reporter

To rank or not to rank. Although many law schools try to rank their students, the Notre Dame Law School does not compute class rank.

The Law Faculty abolished ranking in 1969 because of the harmful effects. "I would guess that most law schools," said Professor David T. Link, Dean of the Notre Dame Law School, "do not explain to people the importance of progress in specific courses."

Consequently, this policy toward class rank is that the grade-point average computations. The Law School does not provide statistics to compute rank. Likewise, the Law School does not endorse anyone who makes them. As policy, it is considered dishonest for a student to tally, orally or in writing, that the school keeps class rank or class-grade average.

"We do not give class rank here," said Professor Link. "I believe the students here are capable of work anywhere."

Employment opportunities have been affected by this policy. "A lot of employers favor the use of a class rank," said Link. "However, some employers just want law review members. Fortunately, there are other ac-

Observer

Most people received jobs as well as job offers through the services of the Law School. According to a survey conducted by the Law School Placement Bureau, one percent of 68 students had job offers as of April 28, 1975. The Law School attributes this success to their policy because recruiters become acquainted with the students instead of categorizing them based on class rank. Dean Link and a fair amount of students are not considered if they don't rank in the top ten percent of the entire record.

Furthermore, the Law School has placed students in Metropolitan law firms and key government offices. Recent statistics of the American Bar Foundation reveal Notre Dame has one of the highest percentages of graduates on the bench. Ten to fifteen percent of the graduates are awarded judicial clerkships. "Not having a class rank causes a student to get a job," said Dean Link. "I believe the students here are capable of work anywhere."

Just compare how we well we have placed students."

Other students consent to the class rank policy. Tom Yanucci, a third-year law student and editor of the Notre Dame Lawyer, said, "I believe absence of a class rank takes away the cutthroat atmosphere present in other law schools.

"Anyhow the policy emphasizes the person, not just a number. It takes personality into account."

Yanucci acknowledged some employers favor the use of a class rank. "A lot of employers and recruiters have strong and impressive criticisms of the policy. For example, an employer will know definitely if he is getting the third best or fifth best student from the class of a school that computes class rank. But at Notre Dame, they can't tell exactly."

The absence of grade-point average computations has an important benefit. The policy creates a relaxed atmosphere amongst the students. Dean Link said the students are not as grade conscious. Instead of extreme competitiveness, the students cooperate more. "The climate is healthier than at other law schools," stated Hagan.

GRAND OPENING!

SPECIAL

Beer Prices You Won't Believe

& GOOD PIZZA TOO!

THE BACK DOOR

(behind the April LIQUOR STORE)
At Placement Night

Interviews emphasized

by Kathy Mills
Staff Reporter

Richard D. Willem in, director of the Notre Dame Placement Bureau, introduced graduate students and seniors in business administration to the importance and methods of interviews with campus representatives of prospective employers last night.

This meeting in the Engineering Auditorium was the first of three annual Placement Nights sponsored by the Placement Bureau.

The purpose of these meetings is to alert all seniors and graduate students to the different employers and graduate schools coming to campus in the near future.

Two representatives of Haskins and Sells, one of the "big eight" public accounting firms in the nation, assisted Willem in during the program by conducting interviews with two senior accounting majors. The representatives then evaluated the interviews. A general question and answer period followed the evaluations.

"Interviews are very important. They may be the starting point of your career," Willem in told the business administration students.

Willem in added, "Employers invest a great deal of money in coming to campus. They think it is a good way to get top-notch people. Take it seriously."

He stressed the necessity of preparing for interviews with employers. Willem in observed that no preparation is necessary for interviews with graduate schools since the purpose of these is simply to talk with the representatives and ask questions.

A representative of IBM will speak to students in engineering and science about his firm and the job potential in these fields, Wednesday night. A slide show on different types of interviews and methods of preparation for them will be given. A demonstration of a "typical" interview and a critique will follow the slide show.

An official from Sears, Roebuck, and Co. will present Thursday evening to talk to students in the College of Arts and Letters. Two interviews will be conducted, followed by evaluations and a discussion.

These two remaining Placement Nights will be held at 7 p.m. in the Engineering Auditorium.

Each student who attends a Placement Night will receive a placement manual, as business administration students did last night. This manual lists the dates of the interviews scheduled by each employer and includes a profile form. This profile form, which is similar to a resume, is required of all students planning to use the services of the Placement Bureau.

At present, 411 businesses and industries and 27 branches of government have scheduled interviews at Notre Dame, as have up to 63 grad schools and 64 law schools. Students must sign up for these interviews at least one week in advance. Last night, Willem in stated the number of employers who have scheduled interviews presents a good picture. "We did not have that number last year at this time," he remarked.

However, Willem in also pointed out that the economic and employment situations are not that strong.

"I do not think employers are looking for as many applicants as in recent years. Employment does not seem to be up," he explained.

Willem in told the students that they are in effect faced with more competition now than students in past years.

All graduate students and seniors seeking employment or entrance into graduate school are urged to attend the Placement Nights.

If a student should find it impossible to attend the night assigned to his college, he may attend a different meeting. However, it is strongly recommended that he attend the proper discussion night.

Faculty reacts to sermon

(continued from page 1)

Burtchael can state these views on woman's changing roles. But let's see some work in our own backyard," Moore called for "more coeducation in the areas of housing and athletics."

"Instead of continually pointing to differences between men and women, we should emphasize their sameness. Across the board, Moore stated, "Notre Dame is just beginning to desegregate, which might delay it," Gorski explained. "It can also be a way for women to fulfill what they believe to be their Christian vocation. At Notre Dame there are serious attempts to increase the importance and roles of women," he stated.

So . . . We're Having a Contest!!

We're Giving You the Chance to Give SMC a Long Awaited Team Name and/or Mascot

Submit your Entries (Slogan and/or Emblem)

To: Cathy Coyne
Student Development Comm.
429 Lemans Box 1034

WINNER RECEIVES $25.00 FOR THEIR ENTRY AND THE HONOR OF HAVING YOUR ENTRY REPRESENT SMC.

VITAMIN C 500MG. TABLETS
$1.19 / 100 tablets
LIMIT 5 BOTTLES PER COUPON
AMERICA'S BEST BRAND AT SOUTH BEND'S LOWEST PRICE

ATTENTION SMC STUDENTS
NOTRE DAME HAS ITS FIGHTING IRISH NICKNAME AND ITS LEPRECHAN MASCOT
ST. MARY'S IS REPRESENTED SOLELY BY THE SEAL
WE NEED THIS NECESSARY REPRESENTATION FOR OUR TEAMS:

basketball, volleyball, tennis, golf, swimming and gymnastics

SO . . . WE'RE HAVING A CONTEST!!
WE'RE GIVING YOU THE CHANCE TO GIVE SMC A LONG AWAITED TEAM NAME AND/OR MASCOT

Submit Your Entries (Slogan and/or Emblem)

To: Kathy Coyne
Student Development Comm.
429 Lemans Box 1034

Meeting Tonight 7:30 Top Floor LaFortune

Reviews, articles not classified as news stories, and . . . (see page 5)
Isabel Charles:
'Running the place'

an interview by maureen flynn

Editor's Note: Isabel Charles, assistant dean of the College of Arts and Letters, was appointed acting dean of the college by University President Fr. Theodore Hesburgh for the 1975-76 academic year. She serves as temporary replacement for Dean Frederick Crosson, who retired at the end of last year.

Dr. Charles did her undergraduate work at Manhattan College, Riverdale, N.Y. and received her M.A. and Ph.D. in English from Notre Dame. After a year at post-doctoral study in 1975 at the Center for the Study of Higher Education at the University of Michigan, she served as executive vice-president and academic dean of Ohio Dominican College in Columbus, where she has previously taught for three years on the English faculty. When she came to the University in 1973 as assistant dean she was the first woman to hold that position at Notre Dame. Dr. Charles also holds a concurrent appointment as associate professor of English.

Last year Dr. Charles chaired the Search Committee which reviewed over 300 applications for the position of Dean of the College of Arts and Letters. At the time of Dr. Charles' appointment, Fr. Hesburgh announced that the committee would continue its search for a successor to Dean Crosson.

Isabel Charles, in her office on the first floor of O'Shaughnessy, discussed her role in the College of Arts and Letters and at Notre Dame in general.

Q: What are your duties as acting dean? Do you plan to make any changes in the coming year?

A: Basically, my job is to keep the place running. Of course, we're not going to tread lightly on the campus, or I, at any rate, wouldn't want to.

Q: What about the Search Committee—was it disappointing to work for a year and fail to find a candidate acceptable to the university?

A: It was a very difficult and a very exhaustive task. We reviewed between 300 and 400 applications, and chose three names to submit to the president and the provost. The recommendations, however, took place in the context of a dilemma the committee understood the action of the president and the provost regarding the candidates.

Q: Why is it so difficult to find qualified candidates for the position of Dean?

A: It's difficult to find someone to meet the special needs of the dean's office at Notre Dame. Notre Dame is the only Catholic university in the nation. Its faculty have high academic standards. Here calls for a scholar, a teacher, and an administrator. Religion also plays a part—this is the Catholic university's religious sense. We didn't eliminate non-Catholic's from consideration.

Q: Would you yourself consider applying for the position?

A: I have not applied so far. It's a possibility, but I really don't know yet. I would have to resign my position as assistant dean.

Q: Notre Dame has run into legal difficulties lately over its low percentage of women in responsible positions. What has your experience been as one of the first women administrators here?

A: Well, the situation is clearly unbalanced, but that's natural for a university that has only been co-ed for four years and has only had an "integrated" faculty for about seven. This is my third year here and I think the University administration has made a consistent effort to encourage the hiring of women. Of course, the University has a responsibility to other minority groups, too. The tight job market makes things even more difficult by reducing the number of openings available. Faculty members are moving around less.

Q: Have you had any trouble with the attitude of your co-workers?

A: I have honestly never had problems with the men not taking me seriously. Some of the women, perhaps, admire what I did, but I don't think they think I am the individual they'd always have around. I've never had anything but very fine cooperation.

Q: Notre Dame has been a male-dominated institution for over 100 years and there are some inherent attitudes which are slow to break down and difficult to get rid of. Do you have any idea of what the academic profession as a whole has been dominated by men and I really don't find any more of a problem here than at other universities.

Q: Last year ten per cent of the faculty of the College of Arts and Letters were women. How does a degree in education? How does a degree in an area of special interest prepare one for a career in business or medicine?

A: I have honestly never had problems with the men not taking me seriously. Some of the women, perhaps, admire what I did, but I don't think they think I am the individual they'd always have around. I've never had anything but very fine cooperation.

Q: Notre Dame has been a male-dominated institution for over 100 years and there are some inherent attitudes which are slow to break down and difficult to get rid of. Do you have any idea of what the academic profession as a whole has been dominated by men and I really don't find any more of a problem here than at other universities.

Q: Have you had any trouble with the attitude of your co-workers?

A: I have honestly never had problems with the men not taking me seriously. Some of the women, perhaps, admire what I did, but I don't think they think I am the individual they'd always have around. I've never had anything but very fine cooperation.

Q: Notre Dame has been a male-dominated institution for over 100 years and there are some inherent attitudes which are slow to break down and difficult to get rid of. Do you have any idea of what the academic profession as a whole has been dominated by men and I really don't find any more of a problem here than at other universities.

Q: Have you had any trouble with the attitude of your co-workers?

A: I have honestly never had problems with the men not taking me seriously. Some of the women, perhaps, admire what I did, but I don't think they think I am the individual they'd always have around. I've never had anything but very fine cooperation.

Q: Notre Dame has been a male-dominated institution for over 100 years and there are some inherent attitudes which are slow to break down and difficult to get rid of. Do you have any idea of what the academic profession as a whole has been dominated by men and I really don't find any more of a problem here than at other universities.

Q: Have you had any trouble with the attitude of your co-workers?

A: I have honestly never had problems with the men not taking me seriously. Some of the women, perhaps, admire what I did, but I don't think they think I am the individual they'd always have around. I've never had anything but very fine cooperation.
HAMPTRON, Va. (AP) - The administration of Lt. Col. Leonard P. Matlovich, an admitted gay, told the government Tuesday that the military's historic ban on homosexuals violates their constitutional right to privacy.

The Air Force regulation calling for automatic discharge of gay servicemen is unlawful because it imposes "the morality of the majority on its employees," said attorney Susan Newman.

Ms. Newman is one of two American Civil Liberties Union lawyers who are representing Matlovich, 32, who has been decorated with 12 citations in the Air Force, in the hearing that began Tuesday.

Matlovich himself prompted the hearing at Langley Air Force Base, where he serves as an intelligence specialist in race relations, when he wrote the secretary of the Air Force in March to admit his homosexuality.

His admission was designed to produce a test of the military regulations that prohibit the retention of homosexuals by the military once their sex deviation is discovered.

The government contends that the presence of homosexuals in military ranks would hamper recruitment, destroy morale and offer foreign agents a chance for blackmail.

Ms. Newman asked the discharge board of two majors, two lieutenant colonels and a colonel at the outset of the hearing Tuesday specifically to overturn the Air Force ban on homosexuals.

Her motion was quickly denied by the board's legal adviser, Col. Robert E. Shank, 52, who serves the board in the capacity of a civil court judge.

Each of the five officers on the board was closely questioned as to his opinions in the case. Each said he had not.

Matlovich, son of an Air Force sergeant, showed little emotion as the hearing—which the Air Force said might last a week—often bogged down on technical issues in its opening hours.

Now and then, the slender, dark-haired, admitted gay glanced around the room at the tiny crowd. At the lunch break he dashed quickly to his car, declining to answer more questions.

Asked by one newswoman whether he thought all homosexuals in the military should make themselves known as he did, he replied: "That's an individual question they must answer themselves."

Matlovich has said he isn't interested in becoming a symbol of gay liberation. Most of all, he has stay in the Air Force.

The Air Force put homosexual Sargeant on trial

"That's an individual question they must answer themselves."

Matlovich served three tours in Vietnam and received the Purple Heart when he was wounded.

---

Mishawaka, IN 46544
Phone: 219/259-5213
Browner brothers: two here, four more on the way by Chip Scarlato

Some people are able to find success without being a load on the rock," but Notre Dame fans will get a great satisfaction out of knowing that they’ve got as well as quite a few more. The Browner brothers. Right now the are two of the six brothers attending Notre Dame. The sport enthusiasts can only hope that they will prove to be as valuable to Warren Ohio’s leading sports family.

Join Ross Browner debuted with the Irish he achieved immediate recognition by blocking a Northwestern punt for a safety in the first few minutes of his career. Ross Browner. Right now he is being upstaged by his older brother, Michael. Ross. Ross played with 15 yards in rushing as well as finding six on points on the board with a tie yard run. Boston College had to struggle with Ross, but Ross took up soccer instead of football as every time they were around they were being harassed by either Jim or Ross. Ross, Chevrolet’s defensive player of the game, had seven solo tackles, a pass broke up and a key fumble recovery when BC was starting to press in the third quarter.

Jim, a holder of Black Belt in karate, brought impressive high school statistics with him when he reported for fall practice, including 129 yards rushing in his senior year. But when Jim took the field against Boston College he didn’t worry about his past accomplishments, his brother Ross, or even the record crowd on hand at Schaeffer Stadium. “It was existing playing in front of all of those people,” the younger Browner remarked, “but I went out there, tried my best and played for myself.”

He said that it can’t be worrying about his brothers game, but has to concentrate on his own role. The same could be said of his 95 yards rushing “I didn’t even know I had that much until after the game.”

Tom Krueckel

Extra Points

Questions and answers

Going into Monday night’s game against Boston College, there were questions that needed to be answered. Two days after the game, we can dive ourselves from the emotions of the moment and try to see what kind of answers were given.

First and probably the most important question on people’s minds was the coaching situation. Dan Devine faced this head on in his debut, considering that the first game was on the road. Devine proved that he has the guts to handle the position. Devine is the man to answer these questions. In this business and I wouldn’t have taken this job if I thought I was going to die from pressure before the first game... But I damn near did in the past week.”

The second most pressing question was the performance of the team. Devine brought in a new coaching staff, and defensive player of the game while making seven unassisted tackles from his end spot and showed all of the quickness of a year ago. The Fry likewise proved that the year didn’t off hurt him. Al Wuell, who said afterward that he feels real right off in the game, scored one of the Irish scores, a 34 yard sweep, part of his 34 total yards in five carries. Luther Bradley made some excellent tackles from his spot in the defense to stop Boston’s second half damage to go for it on a fourth down play on the ND 49. He proved that he was willing to suffer to win the game, sticking with a “That other guy,” but as he said of his 95 yards rushing “I didn’t even know I had that much until after the game.”

As big an asset as the Browner are to Notre Dame, the remaining brothers, Willard, Joey, Keith and Gerald may be on an even bigger plan to future Irish teams. Willard, a senior at Western Reserve in Warren, Ohio, rushed for 102 yards last year in twelve games along side his brother Jim. He attributes his running success to being able to talk with Irish running backs on visits to the ND campus. “Being able to talk with great players like Eric Penick and Al Hunter has helped us a lot too,” said Willard, “Eric Penick gave me a few tips on running and adjusting my shoulder that helped this year.”

Back a few years are Joey and Keith, ages 14 and 13, whose performances at quarterback and halfback enabled their team to go undefeated in 10 games. Another brother, brother Gerry is too heavy at 188 pounds to engage other ten year olds on the grid. But, he has been biding his time breaking the existing home run records in both football and track.

With the great contributions Jim and Ross bring to Notre Dame, athletics, one can only hope that they will prove to be as valuable to Warren Ohio’s leading sports family.

Women’s tennis squad selected by Eileen O’Grady

Try-outs for the Notre Dame’s Women’s Tennis Team were held last Saturday and Sunday. A 14 women team was selected following a double elimination tournament. Competing for the 14 women team will be, Dam Amato, Sue Bailey, Elaine Callahan, Mary Jo Dushay, Betty Fallon, Debbie Grady, Anne Kelly, Laurie Shillingburg, Carol Simmons, Mary Shanks, and Sharon Sullivan. Of those selected, Dam Amato, Betty Fallon, Debbie Grady, Anne Kelly, Carol Simmons and Sharon Sullivan also return to the team after a year abroad.

Women’s Tennis Team were held last Saturday and Sunday. A 14 women team was selected following a double elimination tournament.

Culveryhouse captures ND Open with 274

By Tom Krueckel

Behind four sub-par rounds, Jim Culveryhouse fired a ten-under par 274 to win the Notre Dame Open. The total at the Burke Memorial Course broke the old record of 280 held for 31 years by Jack Merrittville, Ind. carded 55 pars, 14 birdies and just 3 bogeys.

Culveryhouse displayed remarkable consistency throughout the four rounds, by turning scores of 66, 66, 66 and 70. In the 72 hours, the senior from Merrillville, Ind., carded 363 pars, 14 birdies and just 3 bogeys.

Following in second place was John Delaney with a one-under par 283, followed by Paul Koprowski with 288 and Rich Knee a distant fourth with 294. Freshman Tim Sours led the first-year players with 291, with Mike Donnelly right behind at 292.

Merrillville, Ind. carded 55 pars, 14 birdies and just 3 bogeys.

I’m very ecstatic to have someone like Culveryhouse come into the event and shoot four sub-par rounds. Yes, I’d have to say I am somewhat stunned by the score. It’s a great week for the season.

The regular season will start for Notre Dame this weekend when they will face Duke and the North Carolina Tar Heels.

REMEMBER THE FOOD YOU USED TO GET AT FRANKIE’S?  THAT’S THE SAME FOOD YOU GET HERE (Dorothy, the cuisine artist with 19 years of gourmet cooking at Frankie’s is now at Valerie’s cooking the same delicious food)

ITALIAN SPECIALTIES:

SPAGHETTI  MOSTACIOLI  CASA\GA
RAVIOLI  PASTA FAGIOLI (Italian bean soup)

(Dinners inc. Italian bread & salad)

OPEN 5 am to 9 pm

BREKFAST SERVED ANYTIME

VALERIE’S RESTAURANT
801 S. MICHIGAN. SO. BEND

(NEXT TO GILBERTS) 289 - 0861