The foundation was formed from the Anjomark Research Company, a non-profit organization headed by Jack De- line, who originated the idea of cardboard housing. Habicon was a three-year project connected with Anjomark which wanted to set up a village of cardboard boxes on campus. The project was turned down by the Board of Trustees last Tuesday, March 23, 1976.

Fiberboard housing tested during Guatemala fieldwork

by Phil Cackley

Notre Dame architecture students and two ND alumni travel- led to Guatemala over the spring break to build temporary shelters made of cardboard for victims of the recent Guatemala earthquake. This is the first practical test of the cardboard housing which is being researched on campus by the Anjomark Habicon Foundation. The foundation was formed last December with the merger of the Anjomark Research Company and Habicon, a campus organization.

Steve Plesa and Davis Leonard, 1975 graduates of Notre Dame, went to Guatemala City two years ago to present the idea of low-cost cardboard emergency shelters to the government. They were joined over the weekend by architecture students Chuck Canavan, Hans Miller and Alland Ward. The five members of the Anj-

_Dance-a-thon begins March 26_

Any frustrated dancer who has ever dreamed of being another Fred Astaire or Ginger Rogers will have the chance to display his talents this weekend at the South Bend Multiple Sclerosis Dance-a-thon. It will be held in the LaFortune Ballroom beginning Friday, March 26, at 8 p.m., continuing until 6 a.m., Sunday, March 28.

The Dance-a-thon is open to all Notre Dame and St. Mary’s students as well as anyone in the South Bend area. All couples must be sponsored by an organization such as a school or club. An organization may sponsor more than one couple.

The registration fee per couple is $5.00. The sponsoring organization may contribute by making a straight donation or by pledging a certain amount of money per hour. Meals for the couples have been donated by various restaurants in the St. Joseph area, including: The Irish Pub, pasta house, LaFortune Ballroom, Burger King and McDonald’s. The food will be served to the couples on the dance floor. Couples are expected to continue dancing while they eat and drink.

Music will be provided by several bands. According to Social Commissioner Charlie Moran, the commission has already obtained three bands and hopes to have at least four or five perform throughout the weekend. WSNL will also be on hand to broadcast portions of the dance and to provide records.

A prize will be awarded to the winning couple. The prize has not yet been determined, but will probably be a gift certificate. "The whole purpose of the dance-a-thon is to raise money for multiple sclerosis," Moran stated. The couple who has collected the most money and is still dancing at 6 a.m. on Sunday will be designated the winner.

The participants must observe several rules. The couples must remain on the dance floor during exams and vacation periods. The couples must observe all campus rules. The observers must not be more than 20 feet from the dance floor. Babysitters will be provided for the couples when they are allowed a 20-minute break after the three-hour dancing period.

Christians step down

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese politicians agreed on a face-saving resignation formula for the defiant Christian president Monday as Christian and Muslim gunsmen fought the heaviest artillery, rocket and mortar fire.

President-elect Michel Aoun, whose resignation is demanded by leaders of a Muslim army coup and more than two-thirds of the members of parliament, participated in the compromise negotiations but gave no public promise to abide by the formula.

Informed Lebanese sources said however, he pledged to President Hafez Assad of Syria to give up his struggle to remain in office after a delay designed to make it appear he was stepping down of his own accord.

Beirut radio said Franjieh, a Maronite Christian, gave his account to the resignation scenario at an emergency cabinet meeting with Moclem Premier Rashid Karami at the Baabda presidential palace east of Beirut.

Leftist Moslems fought fiercely to regain Beirut’s shell-pocked Holiday Inn hotel, partially reoccupied by Christian militiamen behind a murderous hail of rocket, mortar and artillery fire.

OK given for Frosh cars

Notre Dame freshmen are allowed to bring their automobiles back to campus after the Spring break, announced James A. Roemer, dean of students.

To receive the permission, freshmen must have attained a 2.0 grade point average for the first semester. Also he must have no midsemester deficiencies this semester.

The cars must be registered with the Security Department within 48 hours after they are brought to the campus. Proof of ownership and insurance are required of the students.

The Security Department is located in the Fire Station, opposite the Pool House on the North Quad.

King Sr. to speak on campus

Rev. Martin Luther King Sr. will participate in a memorial program for his late son, a noted black rights leader, at the University of Notre Dame on Sunday, March 28. Sponsored by Black American Law Students Association (BALSAS), the program begins at 7 p.m. in Sacred Heart Church.

A feature of the memorial program will be the appearance of several lawyers who were associated with Martin Luther King, Jr., before his assassination in Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1968.

A Great Convention

Dear Editor:
I would like to take this opportunity to publicly thank Vinette Minchella, Nancy Brenner, and the entire Executive Committee for bringing to the Notre Dame campus the recently concluded Notre Dame Mock Political Convention. I found this four-day event to be one of the most educational, enjoyable, and enriching experiences I have had in my three years at Notre Dame.

Since the Mock Convention occurs only once every four years, the convention organizers had virtually no experience hands to rely on for guidance in setting up such a large-scale project. However, through their ingenuity, perseverance, and endless hours of hard work, the convention was a huge success.

In conclusion, I would once again like to express my sincerest thanks to this small dedicated group of individuals, and only wish Notre Dame had more events and student of this kind.

Michael Pesce

Hubie's the Best

Dear Editor:
What happened at the Mock Political Convention last Friday night has been recounted many times. Hubert Humphrey was nominated at a last hour as a compromise candidate. Well, I am one person who voted for HHH, and not merely because he is electable, and he has a solid background in the political world.

No one knows how many people moved away from the Humphrey vote when it became apparent on the first ballots that he didn't have sufficient appeal to capture the nomination, but I for one think that the convention acted wisely in nominating him.

The reason may indeed have been the spontaneous hour, but I think that Humphrey is more than a compromise candidate, he is the best possible candidate for the job and I sincerely hope that the Democratic Party realizes this when it holds its nominating convention.

It Isn't Our Fault

WASHINGTON—Just when I got my latent male chauvinist pig feelings under control the new fashions come out and I'm back to where I started. Last week's cover of Time magazine of a girl in a black bathing suit made me forget the intensive consciousness-raising sessions I attended to try and stop thin thinking of women as sex objects stand?

It is a terrible dilemma and one I don't think the Women's Lib people are facing up to. For example, the other night I went to dinner party in Washington prepared to behave as the perfect liberated male. I was going to treat my dinner partners as human beings who had minds of their own and opinions on the subjects of the day that should be listened to.

Unfortunately, on the person on my right wearing a black net pajama top with a neckline that plunged down to heavens knows where. The blouse was held up by two tiny straps that looked as if they would break at any moment. The person on my left was wearing what appeared to be a sheer scarf wrapped in such a way that her bosom was pushed up and out halfway across her soup plate.

Now you have to admit it's pretty difficult to discuss President Ford's tax-cut plans when you're faced with this kind of situation. My heart said, "These women have more important things to be thinking." But my eyes kept wandering down to other areas than their heads.

I wanted to talk about Jimmy Carter's chances in California, and Scoop Jackson's hopes for New York with the person on my right, but all I kept thinking was, "I wonder what would happen if one of those thin straps broke while she was reaching for a piece of roast lamb from the tray."

Then I turned to the person on my left to get such evil thoughts out of my head. I was going to ask her if she thought we should send wheat to Russia but I noticed that the scarf she was wearing had shifted and there was even more cleavage showing than when she sat down. I was so ashamed of myself, because I forget all about Russian wheat which I'm sure she would have been delighted to talk to me about.

I turned back to the person with the two itty-bitty straps. She had her back to me which was bare all the way down to her lower spine. It just didn't seem to be the right time to talk about food stamps.

"Now," I pondered, "can I show these people that I am interested in their minds when I have to little to work with?" I would have given anything to have Gloria Steinem at my table to tell me what to think, to whistle.

As I looked around the room I noticed all the other men were having the same trouble. We were trying to make up for years of injustice and ignorance in our male attitudes toward the opposite sex, and they were doing everything to thwart us.

God knows we've all ben sinners and most men are trying to change their attitudes toward women. But when you have nothing but bare backs and cleavage to stare at during dinner, how on earth can any man keep his mind on Henry Kissinger?

A Rum and Swizzle party welcomed the 250 Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s seniors who made this year’s trip to the Bahamas. It was a festive start for what turned out to be a very fine week-long vacation. The $285 package included round-trip transportation and hotel accommodations on the island.

Many of the seniors took advantage of motorbike tours, which came to be one of the most popular activities on the island. Popular too were sailing, snorkelling and horseback riding, while the week’s constant sunshine provided perfect weather for sunbathing and swimming.

Night life proved to be all the seniors had expected it to be: “Sultan’s Tent” and “Casino” were two of the most visited night spots.

Most said they spent between $30 and $200 during their stay. Much of this money changed hands at the International Bazaar, where a large number of imports were sold, and where the most purchased item for visiting Domers was the straw hat.

The senior contingent celebrated St. Patrick’s Day in typical Irish fashion by throwing a party at a hotel poolside, where a band played from 9 o’clock ‘til midnight.

Seniors agreed at vacation’s end that the trip had been well worth the expense, and not simply because they had spent it in the Bahamas. “You could have put us all in the Sahara Desert,” said one enthusiastic senior, “and we still would have had a fantastic trip.”

Does a two-week session of intensive art work after spring finals sound like a fun start to your summer vacation? It will be for the 40 students and four instructors from St. Mary’s College who will attend the Second Annual Red Bud Workshop near Buchanan, Michigan from May 17-29.

Jim Raymo of St. Mary’s art department describes Red Bud as an "art workshop in a camp setting" with "students and faculty living and working together in close harmony with nature." This year’s approach offers an alternative to the classroom learning situations he adds.

Raymo detailed the format of Red Bud. "There were four areas of concentration: raku ceramics, nature photography, drawing and painting and fibre and natural dyeing."

"Each year students choose an area and spend two weeks involved in it. Last summer’s workshop allowed only one area," Raymo said. "This summer, there won't be the real stiff categories," Raymo stated. "We'll open up to combine the areas and offer intermediary work."

Field trips, films and visiting artists provide a variety of topics for the group discussions included in the workshop. At the end of the session, the participants will hold an exhibit in the camp.

According to Jim Paradis, associate professor of art at St. Mary’s, Raymo is responsible for originating the Red Bud Workshop. Kate McDonnell, Moreau Art Gallery director, is this year’s program leader.

"This year’s program leaders are the most productive," Paradis said.

Raymo added. "When the artists are not at work, they're hard at play. Various sports and activities are a part of the camp."

"It's primitive, but adequate," Raymo added. "When the artists are not at work, they're hard at play. Various sports and activities are a part of the camp."

"Through the Red Bud Workshop, students learn three credits. Tuition, room and board cost $270. The work is intensive and Raymo said students can be found working at all hours. "We found that people worked much more than the required hours," he said.

Irish cagers suffer semi-final blues

Win thriller over Cincinnati on last second tip; edged by Michigan, 80-76, in Louisville

by Bill Brink

Notre Dame in the regional semi-final. It’s like putting Damascus’ sword on one’s neck. Only 3 of the Irish skip the second game of the NCAA tournament, and play two regional final games, or something like that. Archery.

For ND coach Digger Phelps and his team it gets more frustrating every year, because for the third straight year they have won their first NCAA tournament contest only to be ousted in the regional semi-finals. And if you mention the word Michigan around the ACC you really strike a nerve because for the second time in three years the Michigan Wolverines have sent the Irish home.

This time by a score of 80-76 last Thursday night in the Midwest Regional semi-final game to Louisville, Kentucky.

Two years ago Notre Dame secured destined for the final four when the Wolves upset John Shumate, Gary Brokaw and Bill Brink in Tuscaloosa, Alabama. This year’s game was not an upset, it was a heartbreaker for the Irish. It was perhaps the closest game since ND had won such a thrilling opening game, edging Cincinnati 79-78 on Toby Knight’s tip-in with 2-seconds left in the game.

“Michigan played well," said a subdued Phelps after the game. "They had two great comebacks. We shot 50 per cent, which is good for us, controlled the boards and still lost. That’s a tribute to Michigan and their aggressiveness. They had a job to do and they did it well.”

Not without some help from the Irish though. The story of the game was turnovers. Notre Dame finished with 21 turnovers, more errors than freshman calculus test. Errant passes, traveling violations and errant passes killed ND when it counted. In the last several minutes when the Irish were scrambling for the lead it was miscues which doomed their cause.

“Outturnovers really hurt us,” admitted Phelps. “And we defense broke down. You just can’t hold a good team like Michigan out of the game for four quarters. The have the ball and use them well.”

“Those have never quit,” said Wolf coach Johnny Orr of his players. “The key things in the game were they played aggressively and we were off the second half and held our own on rebounds—that’s pretty good for a bunch of little guys.

It looked like there were very fast little guys. Several times late in the game they streaked in front of our coaches and fans. The Irish did not get the court for scores. After Adrian Dantley’s spinning layup had given the Irish a 115-11 lead in the game. Notre Dame came back with four straight points on a Phil Hubard turnaround and a steal and score by Tom Stanis. ND’s Don Williams, otherwise known as Second-half Duck, began to turn in his late-game heroics again. He hit a driving layup to bring the Irish within two, 73-72, with 2:20 to go. But ND’s John Robinson stole another pass, and though his breakaway layup attempt was blocked, he put up a fast break man Steve Gove to notch a three-point play, making it 76-72 with 1:07 left.

Duck came right back for the Irish, making it 76-74, ND’s Dave Martin then stole the half from Stanis. It was fouled on his attempt at the basket, but the missed foul shot and Michigan’s Steve Gove converted on two free throws to put the Wolves up by four, 78-74 with 27 remaining. Dependable Duck came through again six seconds later, and ND’s fierce pressure caused the Wolves to throw the in-bounds pass to Dave Batton. Notre Dame called time out with sixteen seconds left down two.

Then came the play which Irish players, coaches and fans must still see in their nightmares. And it came from all of people. Duck. Duck took the in-bounds pass and beat his man down the right side. But as he went up the ball slipped out of his hands, bounced off his chest and rolled out of bounds. Dragging Notre Dame’s chances of an NCAA championship along with it. Michigan’s Ricky Green added two free throws to set the final score at 80-76. The Irish had appeared to take command in the first half, going up by as much as 11 points, but Michigan sped up its defense and raced back to within one, 41-40 at halftime.

“I’ve been to three straight regionals and four overall and haven’t gotten out one of them,” lamented Phelps. “I’m always trying to think of ways to improve. You only hope you can find something for the future.”

Part of Notre Dame’s future depends on what Adrian Dantley’s future is. But the All-American forward says he still hasn’t made up his mind that it’s “stil 50/50.”

The Irish finish the season with a 23-8 record, their best record since 1973-74.
