SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - President Ford is making a new effort to pare down the United States' foreign policy, and to move it closer to the Paris negotiations. The president said that he has made a decision to reduce the number of nuclear weapons that will be deployed, and to reduce the number of military personnel stationed overseas.

The president's decision comes as the United States and the Soviet Union are meeting in Paris to negotiate an agreement on nuclear arms limitation. The president said that he believes that the agreement should be based on a principle of mutual limitation, and that the United States should limit its forces to levels that are comparable to those of the Soviet Union.

The president also said that he has decided to reduce the size of the United States' military forces in Europe, and to reduce the number of military personnel stationed in the Middle East.

The president said that he believes that these measures are necessary to make it possible for the United States to focus on the国内 security situation, and to concentrate on the problems of the economy and the budget.

The president also said that he believes that these measures are necessary to make it possible for the United States to focus on the domestic security situation, and to concentrate on the problems of the economy and the budget.

The president also said that he believes that these measures are necessary to make it possible for the United States to focus on the domestic security situation, and to concentrate on the problems of the economy and the budget.
Vaccinations will be given

by Kathleen Morgan
Staff Reporter

Dates for swine flu vaccination shots to be given at St. Mary’s and Notre Dame will probably be announced early next week. The olds that seem to be going around SMC/ND campuses are said to have no relation to the swine flu.

Officials hope to have the inoculation program completed by mid-November, well before the onset of the flu season. Officials also stated that they anticipate problems with persons suffering side effects from the shots.

In an article in the South Bend Tribune, Dr. William McCrory of the county Health Department said he is particularly worried about the 16-25 age group and the persons allergic to eggs. Most of the reactions to the shots in a preliminary test run were in the 16-25 age group, he explained. Also, the 200 unit vaccine dose sometimes is not sufficient for the younger age group.

Epidemic may never materialize

Dr. McCrory admitted that a swine flu epidemic may never materialize but he indicated that he favored the program anyway. He said the illness could be widespread overnight. People have no natural protection from this particular strain.

Swine flu is a highly infectious strain of flu virus and potentially threat to millions of Americans. A study showed that swine flu has an attack rate of 100 percent. It is thought to be similar to the strain that killed 500,000 Americans in 1918-19. Dr. Jonas Salk, developer of the Salk Polio Vaccine recently said in San Diego that public fears over swine flu shots are groundless. Symptoms of swine flu are basically the same as other types of flu. The swine flu vaccination shots are said to give milder side effects than flu shots of the past. Of the thousands of people who volunteered for the shots in field tests, less than two percent had side effects. The only side effects expected at this point are a sore arm for a few days and in some cases a slight fever.

Alcohol and impotence

BOSTON - Medical researchers say they have found the first direct evidence in non-alcoholic males that drinking alcohol reduces the production of testosterone - the hormone that gives men masculine characteristics. It has long been known that men may be relatively impotent after drinking, and alcoholics completely impotent - even after they stop drinking.

Women forming rugby team

The Women's Rugby team is now forming. Anyone interested in becoming a member of the team or receiving information, call Rhonda Newsome at 277-3114.

THE EMOTIONS

Starts Friday

Picture Gallery E-122

ENDS THURSDAY-“JAWS” 7:00-9:35

FREE HAIR ANALYSIS

Take the Quickie to

Earth Wind & Fire

We invite you to try our delicious pizza, hot sandwiches and tasty salads.

BEER Special Monday nights.

Pitchers of Budweiser $1.50
Michelob $1.75

Tues. nite after 4pm - $1.00 off

on all large pizzas.

130 Dickeyway North 272-6017

SUNSHINE PROMOTIONS & BILLY SPARKS PRESENTS:

Vivian King

We invite you to try our delicious pizza, hot sandwiches and tasty salads.

BEER Special Monday nights.

Pitchers of Budweiser $1.50
Michelob $1.75

Tues. nite after 4pm - $1.00 off

on all large pizzas.

130 Dickeyway North 272-6017

SUNSHINE PROMOTIONS & BILLY SPARKS PRESENTS:

Earth

Wind & Fire

and Special guest THE EMOTIONS

Friday Oct. 15 8:00 PM

Notre Dame ACC

Tickets $6.50 Main floor and all padded seats

5.50 Bleachers

On Sale now at: ACC Box office, Robertson's, St. Joseph Bank and Bank One (Main Branch only). The Elkhart Truth, Just For The Record (100 Center), Suspended Cord (Elkhart), The Record Joint (Niles), Boogie Records (Mishawaka), and Notre Dame Student Union

SPECIALS

Pizza King

Swine flu

Utah State, 1976
The Radiation Building is undergoing expansion to house additional equipment from the dispersed CMU Lab in Pittsburgh.
Faculty favors Carter, forms support group

by Katie Kerwin
Senior Staff Reporter

Sixty-four ND-SCMC faculty members and administrators have formed the Jimmy Carter Club within the Notre Dame, a spokesman for the group announced Tuesday.

Former Law Dean Thomas L. Shafer, chairman of the organization, stated that it is "committed to the election of Jimmy Carter and Walter F. Mondale as the next President and Vice President."

"We assert that their policies and the principles they stand for are for our students and their families, for our University and College and for our country," he said.

The membership list includes: Fr. David Barrett, C.S.C., chair of the Theology Department; Dr. Phillip Facenda, University Vice President and General Counsel; Dean of the Law School; Sr. Elena Malts C.S.S.C., Director of the Department of Religious Studies at St. Mary’s College; and Dr. James A. Roemer, Dean of Students.

Also endorsing Carter are: Prof. Edward Varela, chair of the English Department; Fr. Francis Quinnivan, C.S.C., director of the Justice and Peace Commission; and Dean Fernand N. Dulle, Assistant Dean of Students.

Shafer said that membership has increased to about 80 persons since last printed. He added that they are receiving support from Independents and Republicans, as well as traditional Democrats.

The group called for support for the Notre Dame—St. Mary’s academic community. Membership is open to all faculty, students, staff, and administrators.

Shafer emphasized that the emphasis of Carter does not imply an official position by the University, but added that he felt it be "representative of the majorities."

The committee hopes to meet with Carter while he is on campus this Sunday.

Faculty endorsement of a presidential candidate is not a new thing in Notre Dame’s history, Shafer noted. Such support groups date back to the Edwin Stevenson campaigns in the ’50s.

Shafer said that when he sought members of the committee: "some declined to sign because they were indifferent to the candidates or other issues, but I didn’t have a single one decline because of the abortion issue," according to an Associated Press story.

"Gov. Carter’s position on abortion is quite consistent with my own," he said. He added that although he had formerly favored a constitutional amendment to restrict abortion, he now thinks the possibility is a "dead issue."

"I do feel that he did run into a ‘Catholic problem’ with Carter while organizing the campaign because that about 90 percent of traditional Catholic teachings are represented by Carter and about 20 percent by Ford. Shafer said he based this statement on a report from the U.S. Catholic Conference (USCC) which compares Democratic and Republican party platforms with USCC positions submitted to both parties at convention time.

"I have the Carter’s stand to be in accordance with the U.S. Catholic Conference position on matters including health care, employment, income policy, housing, education, human rights, and the Panama Canal.

"The committee looks to Carter to ‘resist to our government the course of evil, foreign policy which we have badly missed under our two most recent Republican presidents’ statement said.

"It appears evident that Gerald Ford has failed to redirect our nation away from the self-inflicted moral malaise."

Art group to advocate funding

Dr. Thomas P. Berger, dean of continuing education at Notre Dame, will present the State of Indiana on the newly organized Advocates for the Arts Committee.

The new organization concentrates its efforts on securing a higher level of funding for the arts in the State and Federal Endowment for the Arts. Berger is president of the newly organized Advocates of the Arts, headquartered in New York City. Advocates will produce information and program coordination for men and women volunteers who wish to support federal legislation affecting the arts. Its chairman is Louis Hornts of the Harris polling organization.

Berger also serves as national chairman of the Artists in Schools Committee of the National Endowment for the Arts.

Springsteen tix are still available

Good tickets are still available for the Springsteen concert, Student Union Concert Commission Coordinator Spiter announced yesterday.

The show is Saturday, Oct. 9 at 8 p.m. Because all tickets are pre-printed, the sale of the stag sale ticket buyers will not be disapponted with the location of their face value seats, Spiter said.

The show will be played by Springsteen and the E Street Band and will be one of Springsteen’s few appearances in the Midwest. Student Union feels that as the first University in the concert of the semester it will be a classic production of the unique entertain- ment that Springsteen is noted for. Spiter added, "This concert is a must retail remedy for those who will be sick from Saturday classes."

According to Mintar, people were not receiving adequate health care under the and the new Mozambique government.

Mintar said under Fretilimo, the leadership in Mozambique health care had actually improved.

"Before independence," he noted, "there were 400 doctors in Mozambique, 300 in the capital. They served up to 140,000 people, who could pay the most for medical services.S

"Now," Mintar said, "doctors are distributed around the country in terms of need rather than in terms of where they would get the most income." He added, "in some districts more people have been vaccinated than the Portuguese thought the entire population of the district was.

Mintar said the Mozambique the Portuguese left behind was "an extremely underdeveloped country." He also said the Fretilimo government was still in a transition period.

Mintar added the new government "gives a high priority to basic production of foodstuffs. Everyone grows food for themselves. Armies grow food, schools grow food."

Mintar has written several books about the development of African nations. He is also a correspondent for the African News Service. His lecture was the third part of the African Symposia sponsored by the Program in African Studies and the Program in Black Studies. In the issue symposium will include two films on the South African situation and a lecture about African literature.

Grotto Mass
by Katie Kerwin

The observer
Thursday, October 7, 1976

Grotto Mass, will celebrate a mass at the Grotto on Thursday, Oct. 7, at 10:30 a.m.

Grotto is saying the mass in honor of the Feast of the Holy Rosary. The Glee Club will perform at the evening celebration.

Dr. William Mintar, a former teacher in Mozambique, discussed the nation’s underdeveloped state last night in the library.

Photo by Paul Cleveringer

Americans should be more skep- tical of news releases from South Africa, according to the University’s Mintar, a former teacher in a Mozambique university.

Mintar last night addressed 30 reporters at the American Reading Room of the Library. In a lecture entitled "The Mozambique Revolution: Challenges and Possibilities," he said news sources under the white regimes in Rhodesia and South Africa had not given Americans a true picture of Mozambique.

Mozambique, on the southeast coast of Africa, borders both Rhodesia and South Africa. When Portuguese colonized their area, Mozambique became independent on June 25, 1975. At independence, Mozambique was a white population, including technicians and farmers, left the country.

Rhodesian news sources, according to Mintar, said people were not receiving adequate health care under the new Mozambique government.

Mintar said under Fretilimo, the leadership in Mozambique health care had actually improved.

"Before independence," he noted, "there were 400 doctors in Mozambique, 300 in the capital. They served up to 140,000 people, who could pay the most for medical services.S

"Now," Mintar said, "doctors are distributed around the country in terms of need rather than in terms of where they would get the most income." He added, "in some districts more people have been vaccinated than the Portuguese thought the entire population of the district was.

Mintar said the Mozambique the Portuguese left behind was "an extremely underdeveloped country." He also said the Fretilimo government was still in a transition period.

Mintar added the new government "gives a high priority to basic production of foodstuffs. Everyone grows food for themselves. Armies grow food, schools grow food."

Mintar has written several books about the development of African nations. He is also a correspondent for the African News Service. His lecture was the third part of the African Symposia sponsored by the Program in African Studies and the Program in Black Studies. In the issue symposium will include two films on the South African situation and a lecture about African literature.

\n
Former teacher: media reports about South Africa inaccurate
by Bob Varencourt
Staff Reporter

Americans should be more skeptical of news releases from South Africa, according to the University’s Mintar, a former teacher in a Mozambique university.

Mintar last night addressed 30 reporters at the American Reading Room of the Library. In a lecture entitled "The Mozambique Revolution: Challenges and Possibilities," he said news sources under the white regimes in Rhodesia and South Africa had not given Americans a true picture of Mozambique.

Mozambique, on the southeast coast of Africa, borders both Rhodesia and South Africa. When Portuguese colonized their area, Mozambique became independent on June 25, 1975. At independence, Mozambique was a white population, including technicians and farmers, left the country. Rhodesian news sources, according to Mintar, said people were not receiving adequate health care under the new Mozambique government.

Mintar said under Fretilimo, the leadership in Mozambique health care had actually improved. "Before independence," he noted, "there were 400 doctors in Mozambique, 300 in the capital. They served up to 140,000 people, who could pay the most for medical services."" Now," Mintar said, "doctors are distributed around the country in terms of need rather than in terms of where they would get the most income." He added, "in some districts more people have been vaccinated than the Portuguese thought the entire population of the district was.

Mintar said the Mozambique the Portuguese left behind was "an extremely underdeveloped country." He also said the Fretilimo government was still in a transition period.

Mintar added the new government "gives a high priority to basic production of foodstuffs. Everyone grows food for themselves. Armies grow food, schools grow food."

Mintar has written several books about the development of African nations. He is also a correspondent for the African News Service. His lecture was the third part of the African Symposia sponsored by the Program in African Studies and the Program in Black Studies. In the issue symposium will include two films on the South African situation and a lecture about African literature.
O'Callaghan: The Sinn Féin name means "Weourselves." It is a name that implies self-reliance, because we believe that the problems of Ireland will ultimately be solved by the Irish people themselves coming to grips with those problems, and that we can do it by ourselves in the future, rather than waiting for some external Messiah or Saviour to come to Ireland from anywhere outside Ireland, namely Britain.

O'Callaghan: The British and the Republican press today see ourselves in two ways: first of all, as the latest link in the atavistic resistance to British interference in Irish affairs, but also Republicanism today is more than just a political movement. We have a very definite ideas about what Ireland would like to be in the future, and how the Irish people should shape their own destiny. This is consistent with a political tradition in Ireland of which the problems of Ireland should be solved, solved from within.

Observer: What is the role of Sinn Féin in the IRA?

O'Callaghan: Since the Sinn Féin was founded and the Democratic Unionist Party political organization. After the 1916 rising and the civil war, many men went into the IRA. The Sinn Féin, together with the Irish party, was the official arm of the 32-county republic, which had been established by the democratic will of all the people. The Sinn Féin remained the political wing of the IRA. It is a fact in Ireland that although many of its members are imprisoned, they continue their secret and military organization. Sinn Féin is the only part of the Irish Republican movement that has a problem in talking about it. If one is a member of the IRA, he doesn't go about broadcasting it.

Observer: You were advertised as a gtir in the films of the late 1920s. How did you come about?

O'Callaghan: The British Army has the idea that anyone prominent in the political leadership of Sinn Féin is a neutral, like the IRA, as well. That's partly the reason. Also, I was living in London at the time of the Rising. I wasn't a leader in the Sinn Féin during that time. We used to talk about political prisoners in Ireland as being a hunger strike. They seated out the British in Ireland as being a way of holding a rally, but we managed to stop that.

Observer: Do you work out of Belfast?

O'Callaghan: It is all around the Emerald Isle. I have been dealing with Irish people in other parts of the world for many years and, of course, is registered with the Treasury Department in Washington for raising money to support the families of prisoners in Ireland, such as Irish and British. The point I am making is that we believe that the Irish people are the only people who can solve the problems of Ireland, and should be doing it themselves. Anywhere there is conflict exists in the world, I believe that it is the duty of the people of all nations to try to understand the problems of Ireland, and we would like to solve it for ourselves.

Observer: What constructive role can an IRA contingent play in any political movement?

O'Callaghan: I don't believe that the violence is constructive in any way, it's destructive. When the British decided to go to war against Hitler, it was a destructive force to the British strikes. It is not the case that violence is constructive. We believe that the IRA should be doing more to support the political movements of the Irish people, as we are doing ourselves.

Observer: On what basis do you think the British government has failed to achieve an independent Republic of Ireland?

O'Callaghan: I believe that the problem of the British government has failed to solve the problem of the Irish people, and it is being forced to accept the Irish people, it is in a state of war. There is a great class distinction in the British government, and I am an awareness of these economic factors, plus the political factors I already mentioned, that makes me believe only a total revolution in Ireland could change things.

Observer: What is the ultimate goal for which your movement has been struggling for so long?

O'Callaghan: We believe that Ireland has tremendous potential—economically, politically, and in many other ways. One of the tremendous tragedies of partition has been the tremendous concentration of the symbols of freedom—flag, the national anthem, while the British public has paid little attention to what we call the bread and butter issues—housing, education for the poor, the question generally of the well-being of the people being ploughed back into the economy, rather than siphoned off into Swiss or British banks. We want to see Ireland held and vested in Irish hands in Ireland. There is more land hungry barrister in Ireland than there is in any part of all in the six counties of the North, and we want to see this land developed for agriculture. We believe that real problems of the island of Ireland are the economic problems, so that the people can trust the economy. As long as the basic injustices continue, it will be hard to secure the strength of the people to solve these issues. When the British leave, we hope to solve the political and social problems, the economic problems, the problems of the Irish people being ploughed back into the economy, rather than siphoned off into Swiss or British banks.

Observer: Upon British withdrawal, what would happen to the Protestant in the North?

O'Callaghan: There is a problem in the Irish Republican Movement of 1916, which began the Revolution that led to independence from Britain.

O'Callaghan: That is really a very impossible question. Somehow the people could stomach the violence, if they could see that it was leading somewhere. But in the U.S., one gets the feeling that we aren't going anywhere. The reason for this is that, in this case, it is presented to you as one of the worst of the British people, it is presented to you as one of the worst of the British people.

Observer: What is the ultimate goal for which your movement has been struggling for so long?

O'Callaghan: We believe that Ireland has tremendous potential—economically, politically, and in many other ways. One of the tremendous tragedies of partition has been the tremendous concentration of the symbols of freedom—flag, the national anthem, while the British public has paid little attention to what we call the bread and butter issues—housing, education for the poor, the question generally of the well-being of the people being ploughed back into the economy, rather than siphoned off into Swiss or British banks. We want to see Ireland held and vested in Irish hands in Ireland. There is more land hungry barrister in Ireland than there is in any part of all in the six counties of the North, and we want to see this land developed for agriculture. We believe that real problems of the island of Ireland are the economic problems, so that the people can trust the economy. As long as the basic injustices continue, it will be hard to secure the strength of the people to solve these issues. When the British leave, we hope to solve the political and social problems, the economic problems, the problems of the Irish people being ploughed back into the economy, rather than siphoned off into Swiss or British banks.
The St. Mary's College Republicans are currently taking a telephone poll of all St. Mary's students, in order to determine how they will vote in the upcoming presidential election. The students are first asked if they are registered to vote, and if so for whom they will be voting. "We're hoping to have the results tallied by Thursday night," stated Suzanne Ames, who is in charge of the poll, along with Amy Kersten. "The purpose of the poll is to see how many students are registered, and how they look at the election."

ND welcomes back Carter

Notre Dame, Ind. - Jimmy Carter, Democratic Candidate for President, will speak Sunday, Oct. 11 at 12:15 p.m. at Notre Dame in the Center for Continuing Education. Carter's talk is sponsored by the University's Center for Civil Rights and Law School. Carter, who will be accompanied by Third District congressman John Brademas, will be introduced by Fr. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame and former head of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights.

Due to the sponsorship of Carter's Address, the University will give preferential seating opportunity to the staff of the Center for Civil Rights and the faculty and students of the Law School and the Department of Government and International Studies.

From 10 a.m. Thursday to noon on Friday, tickets in the talk will be available for faculty and undergraduate and graduate majors in the Department of Government and International Studies in the office of that department's chairman to the faculty and students of the Law School in the office of its dean. The director of the Center for civil rights, Dr. Donald Kommer, will distribute the tickets.

These tickets will guarantee seating within the auditorium. Tickets will be available on a first-come, first-served basis, and any unclaimed by noon Friday will be turned over to the Information Desk.

explained Beth Cutter, Chairman of St. Mary's College Republicans. "We also all like to see what kind of Republican support there is on campus, as we've been out here campaigning.

"The main thing is to get students thinking seriously about the campaign," Cutter said.

"The Student Telephone Directory is being used for names and phone numbers, with each of two volunteers taking a page, which is about 150 names. "We're trying to call everybody," Ames explained, "but the directory isn't always accurate. Many students' numbers have changed since the directory came out, so we've had to get those from housing."

An effort has been made to try at least twice to contact each student, but it is expected that a certain number of students will not be reached. "This is supposed to be a blitz," Ames emphasized. This means as many students as possible are contacted within a short time, in this case between Monday night and Thursday, when results of the poll will be tallied.

Although the St. Mary's and Notre Dame groups have always had different charters under the Indiana Federation of College Republican Clubs, this is the first year that the St. Mary's group has acted independently of Notre Dame.

"The meetings were always held at Notre Dame, and girls never found out about them," Cutter explained. "Many girls didn't even know we (St. Mary's College Republicans) existed."

This year, however, the group is working separately from the Notre Dame Republicans. There are currently about twenty active members in the group, and at least twice that many are listed as members, which Cutter views as very good. "We never had enough support before now," she noted.

Cutter would like to see the St. Mary's group continue, and not fall apart after the elections are over. "Now that we're organized we must keep it going," she said. She would also like to see the group become more involved in local politics, especially since many students are registered in Indiana. "But," she pointed out, "our main interest is in national politics, since that's what the students here are most concerned with."

Cutter viewed the Jack Ford reception held last week with mixed feelings. "The price was really too high," she agreed, but Young Republicans set it and she was unable to persuade them to lower it.

Additional information may call the Department of Education, Saint Mary's College, Notre Dame, 284-4120.

Oct. 15 deadline nears for student teaching forms

Seniors at Saint Mary and Notre Dame who plan to teach in the spring semester of the 1977-78 academic year must apply for student teaching forms and complete them before the deadline, October 15.

Forms may be obtained at the office of the Department of Education, Saint Mary's College, Rm. 300. At this time, Sister Maria C. McCarthy, new chairman of the Department of Education, will review with each prospective student teacher the requirements for certification before signing the application.

The information is necessary so that Mrs. Grace McGuire, supervisor of student teaching, may begin to place each student according to his major in an appropriate secondary school in the Michiana area. No student will be guarantee- placed for student teaching who has not completed registration by October 15.

Those who have questions concerning their status or have need of additional information may call the Department of Education, Saint Mary's College, Notre Dame, 284-4120.

The American Series: Satire... naughtiness... foot stomping... and some tantalizing toe dancing.

The American Series, Monday & Tuesday Beer Specials
10 pm - Midnight $1.25 Pitcher
3 Stooges on TV
here everyday at 3:30
Hockey team to host Expo

Thursday, Oct. 7 at 7 pm head coach Lefty Smith, assistant coach Rick Schaffer and Notre Dame hockey team will demonstrate the rudiments of hockey, hold a scrimmage and group pictures at the first annual "Hockey Fun Day Exposition." "What we hope to do," comments Smith, "is to extend fans to the game of hockey. Although it may appear complicated to a spectator viewing a hockey game for the first time, once you grasp certain basic situations the game is very easy to understand." Beginning at 7 o'clock Smith and Schaffer will be describing the basic hockey skills and fundamental strategies as they are demonstrated by the Irish skaters. These fundamentals will include the correct skating technique, position play, penalty and power-play strategies and common infractions.

ND tennis team to host tourney.

The fourth annual Notre Dame Fall Invitational tennis tournament will be held on the campus through Sunday. Six schools will take part in the round robin tournament which will be held on the newly constructed Tennis Center behind the ACC. The schools include: Ann Arbor, Northwestern, Indiana State, Purdue, Illinois State, and the host Irish.

Notre Dame, defending Eastern College tennis champion, has not won a title in the fall classic, including its victory in 1975. Irish Coach Tom Fallon anticipates a strong balance down the line of his singles players. Senior captain Randy Stehlik will hold down the number one position while Junior Brian Has- fing is the favorite for the second spot against the remainder of positions up for grabs in the battle for these berths are Seniors Marty Horan and Bill Stoughton. Sophomore Mark Trueblood and a pair of Freshmen in Chris Falenton and David Ricciardi.

Wanted is also quite optimistic about the doubles teams that will represent Notre Dame. The pairs will include Stehlik and Hainting, Fallon and Harris and the Fenton-Ricciardi duo.

Competition among the six schools is expected to be fierce. A team that dominates the consolation will be a high school product and current city championship holder South Bend.

Conventional scoring methods will be replaced by eight pro doubles in the near simultaneous conclusion of all matches. When all seven matches have been completed it will automatically decide the winning team.
Imagine our Notre Dame basketball team suddenly missing two of the starting five. Think of the consequences to the rest of the starting players were suddenly absent. On Wednesday night, Patrice Pollard, Brian Rood, and Scotty Thomas were three of the starting players who were suddenly absent. Hence, our Notre Dame basketball team may not have performed as well as expected. However, the team still managed to win the game, which is a testament to their resilience and teamwork.

The Notre Dame cross-country team, despite injuries to key players, has performed respectably to excellent team morale. The team has been able to cope with the loss of key players and has continued to perform at a high level. The team has used their resilience and determination to overcome the challenges posed by the injuries.

For those of you who enjoy basketball games that end with both teams scoring in the 140's, and football games that end with both teams scoring over 1000 yards in total offense, the National League Phantom Flyers are a team you should look out for this season. The team has a strong offense and defense, and they have the potential to compete in the NFL.

The Phillies and the Reds are the teams we are looking forward to see this season. The Phillies have a strong offense and defense, and they have the potential to compete in the NL. The Reds have a strong offense and defense, and they have the potential to compete in the NL.

PITCHING: A strong pitching staff can make the difference in a game. The pitchers on our team have been working hard to improve their skills and are looking forward to a successful season. The pitching staff will be crucial in determining the outcome of games.

INTENSITY: Our team has a high level of intensity and competitiveness. This year, we have been working hard to improve our intensity levels and are looking forward to a successful season. The intensity of our team will be a key factor in determining the outcome of games.

OUTFIELD: Our outfielders have been working hard to improve their skills and are looking forward to a successful season. The outfielders will be crucial in determining the outcome of games, especially with the speed and power of the opposing team's batters.

The team is looking forward to an exciting season, and they are ready to compete.

For more information on the team, please visit our website at phillies.com.