Due to insufficient business

E&L in financial trouble

by Don Belmer

The E&L Supermarket is in financial trouble that could force it to close within three to four months, according to owner-manager Earl Kemper. According to Kemper, the supermarket, which replaced the A&P before it closed, opened here in 1946. The area around the supermarket to find the reason for the lack of business. "We are in trouble," said Kemper. "But business seems to be returning. We are taking in about $5,000 a week and we'd be over the hump."

In September, the store took in only 60 percent of its anticipated number of business. Howard has also talked with Kemper and Notre Dame student government officials in an attempt to get more students involved in the store.

Kemper noted that people still know about it (E&L) and they are assuming you don't qualify, we'll sit you up, you're going somewhere else," Lally said. "Don't just sit up in your room assuming you don't qualify, we'll decide that," he continued.

Lally directed most of his comments to the new financial requirement this year for RA application. "In the past Financial Aid has been worried about the unequal distribution of funds," Lally added. "We want to make sure people who are struggling get aid. However, this does not immediately eliminate other qualified people."

Lally predicted that about 80 percent of those who fill out a Parents' Confidential Statement (PCS) will qualify under University financial requirements. The few who don't qualify aren't necessarily disqualified. Other criteria such as GPA, extra-curricular activities, recommendations, and the students statement of philosophy weigh heavily.

nation not apathetic

The experts predicted that Americans were too apathetic to vote this year. But the experts reckoned with the determination of the public.

"There was so much darn talk about apathy, that people decided not to be apathetic," said one politician in Washington, recognizing the heavy turnout in his state.

On a nationwide basis, the turnout was about 53% of the voting age population - above the level predicted by many experts, but lower than any year since 1948.

The percentage of the voting age population balloting in presidential elections has declined steadily since a record 65.6% turned out for the 1960 race between Richard M. Nixon and John F. Kennedy.

"For the fourth consecutive election, voting as a percentage of eligible population declined," said Curtis Gans of the Committee for the Study of the American Election.

The committee said in July that its poll showed voter turnout might be less than 50% of those eligible. That would have been the lowest turnout since the 31.1% casting in the 1946 race between Harry S. Truman and Thomas E. Dewey. The half-time record low for 43.5% of the voting age population was in 1952 when universal suffrage was in effect for the first time.

Gans said yesterday that the committee had cited three factors that could boost the turnout: the presidential debates, a race that appeared close and Carter's appeal to the South.

He said the debates had little effect on the turnout, but said that the number of people voting in the South was larger than normal. The narrowing of the gap between Jimmy Carter and President Ford also brought out more people, Gans said.

As of midafternoon, the News Election Service reported 79.388, 843 votes cast for Ford, Carter, Independent Eugene J. McCarthy and American Independent party candidate Lester Maddox. Totals for minor party candidates were not immediately available.

That figure, based on only complete voting reports in most areas, represented 52.9% of the voting age population, estimated at 150 million person. And the number of people who voted as complete returns were tallied.

Lally encourages students to file application for RA jobs

by Chris Dateman

Fr. Terrence Lally, assistant vice-president of student affairs, has been concerned about the process of resident assistant (RA) selection. Addressing a crowd of about 50 prospective RA's jammed in Farley's Pop Farley room, Lally stressed the importance of student aptitude applying despite the fact that they may themselves ineligible for financial reasons.

"No matter what your financial situation is," Lally said. "Don't just sit up in your room assuming you don't qualify, we'll decide that," he continued.

Lally directed most of his comments to the new financial requirement this year for RA application. "In the past Financial Aid has been worried about the unequal distribution of funds," Lally added. "We want to make sure people who are struggling get aid. However, this does not immediately eliminate other qualified people."

Lally predicted that about 80 percent of those who fill out a Parents' Confidential Statement (PCS) will qualify under University financial requirements. The few who don't qualify aren't necessarily disqualified. Other criteria such as GPA, extra-curricular activities, recommendations, and the students statement of philosophy weigh heavily.

Another new aspect in selection this year urged students to prepare letters of recommendation; two from family or friends (minors are not immediately potential customaters), one from a previous employer, Lally added that this too can be amended so that a student may have two letters from employers and one from the hall staff.

In these recommendations, the resident staff is evaluating the letter from a student's peer to one from an employer is simple," Lally continued. "We would receive recommendations with straight lines telling what a wonderful person the student was. It was not really all that helpful or objective, he said.

In a lengthy question and answer session, most students were concerned about the financial requirement eliminating them and the difficulty in getting a recommendation from employers or staff members who don't know them.

Again reassured teachers that provisions can be made in these cases. Letters can be submitted by heads of volunteer organizations or perhaps three letters can be from hall staffs. These cases should be discussed in advance with Lally.

Sr. Jean Lenz, rector of Farley, proposed a solution for those students who don't have their hall staff. "If your assistant rector is new or you just don't know them, then try to get to know them. Just go and introduce yourself and talk to them," she said.

An important factor for RA application is the necessity of completing a PCS form: If a student does not fill one out, he will not be considered. Students who already have one on file still need to submit a new one.

Lally recognized the reluctance of many parents to complete this form because they are not sure who to send their letters to. "You can assume that your parents are strictly confidential," said Lally. "The University does not show them to the IRS or anyone else."

The only person who will see them is Mrs. McCan on in financial aid."

Republican majority

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - As his television advertisements promoted, Richard Lugar's day has come. The 44-year-old Indianapolis mayor, already touted as a prospective Republican presidential candidate, swept three-term Sen. Vance Hartke on Tuesday night, capturing almost 60 percent of the vote in winning the Senate seat that eluded him two years ago.

At that time, the former Rhodes scholar and present-day college professor was defeated by Birch Bayh.

Several positions open for women in business

by Sue Lechleider
Staff Reporter

The biggest resource yet untapped in the business world is women, according to Carol Collins and Greg Weismantel, who spoke at the women's In Sales Management, sponsored by the St. Mary's Career Development Center last night.

Collins, a 1975 St. Mary's graduate and Weismantel, a 1962 Notre Dame graduate, are currently employed at General Foods in New Buffalo, Ill. Both shared their views based on personal experience, particularly regarding the role of women in today's business world.

Working as a sales representative, Collins described her job as, "a real concoction of objectives. It's important to know yourself and to know the thresholds of what you can and can't take," she stated. She has found that arguing a point based on logic with people whose education is generally lower than college level is to be a problem.

Weismantel stressed the need for women in the sales field, especially those with a liberal arts background. A business degree does not necessarily enable one to be a salesperson. "Sales is there, it's an opportunity, a one-on-one pressure packed field," stated Weismantel. He also differentiated between "smartness" and "intelligence" on the part of a salesperson. There's a difference that is most evident in this regard, he stated.

Collins related details of her own career development. Describing herself as reasonably extroverted, Collins stressed that one can run the risk of being seriously unhappy in a job. "You have to strike a balance," she stated. "It is most important that you be happy. According to Collins, a corporation wants to make sure that their personnel is tried and true before advancing them. "You have to be willing to accept facts that it is going to take some time where you want to go," stated Collins. She admitted that a position in sales management is very competitive.

In response to a question concerning what he looks for in a potential sales representative, Weismantel stated, "I look for something that shows that an individual is a self starter, someone with a high energy level. This could be anything, according to Weismantel, from something said in an interview to an award won.

Both Collins and Weismantel agree that there are few women with liberal arts educations to approach this field and consider it seriously when selecting a career.

Collins was an education major, and recipient of the Lumen Christi award while at St. Mary's. Collins feels that her present position is a step in the right direction towards her future goals.

America took a risk Tuesday but there is a good chance that it will pay off. Jimmy Carter, who will become the nation's thirty-ninth president, is more of an unknown than the solid, safe President Ford. Carter's first attempt to guess the future and pick the man best able to meet it. The risks are always bigger when you pick the challenger, especially one who "came from nowhere" to the White House.

But America has not gotten as far as it has without taking chances. In this race these are good reasons to go with Carter. With the support of the strong Democratic Congress, Carter offers the hope of getting America's ownership from the Holy Cross order to the lay Board of Trustees. The Observer has also progressed since those early days. Notre Dame has since seen the University of Notre Dame and St. Mary's College. Its has not necessarily reflect the policies of either institution. The Observer is an independent student newspaper. Its views are those of its Editorial Board. Columns space is available to all members of the community, and letters are encouraged to provide the free expression of varying opinions on campus.

Ten years ago The Observer was founded with the credo to "observe, remark, notice, comment and adhere." Ten years to the day of its foundation, The Observer published the results of the HPC student poll on our general success in those goals. The poll showed that a majority of students believed this publication to be a "good" one.

These poll results come to us, then, as something of a birthday gift. Ten years ago yesterday, The Observer was founded by a handful of students who believed they were founding a "promise and a purpose" as well. Much has changed since those early days. Notre Dame has since seen the successful introduction of coeducation, the abolition of some student disciplinary procedures, and the transfer of Notre Dame's ownership from the Holy Cross Order to the lay Board of Trustees. The Observer has also progressed since those early days. Today it is a daily publication put out by the students of both Notre Dame and St. Mary's. ND-SMC is probably the smallest college newspaper in the nation to publish a daily newspaper. Surely, it is the only one to do so without a school of journalism. Our attempts being ran by professional newspaper occasionally fall short of our hopes and expectations, but we are nonetheless relentless in our efforts to improve our coverage and ourselves.

H. L. Mencken once remarked about newspapers: "The average newspaper has the intelligence of a hillbilly evangelist, the courage of a rat, the fairness of a prohibitory blob-jumper, the information of a high school janitor, the taste of a designer of celluloid valentines and the honor of a police station lawyer." Considering how we fared in the recent HPC poll our track record could generally be regarded as high. We would like to wish ourselves a happy birthday.

Being cynical today is the fashionable thing. As an observer, I would agree. According to Webster, it is "One who attributes all actions to selfish motives, no matter how often before, cynicism pervades our world towards all levels of government, business, our society, and even towards our contacts with one another."

Most have heard the saying, "A healthy cynicism." This is one of the few things people to believe that cynicism is good in some cases. Cynicism is not good. True, it is good to reevaluate, to scrutinize, to start fresh against goals, particularly after a period of slack-off, but cynicism does not accomplish any of these things. Cynicism makes people too pessimistic to reevaluate, too resigned to shackle things up, too used from the world to start fresh again. The cynical's original goals remain unachieved. somewhere neglected, lost. Cynical thought and questions is simply a person who no longer believes in the possibility of another person or anything is good or important. Anything that is not selfish is not worth much, inconsequential. But if we have ever drunk a bottle of food color that has no color to it, the color the water a little. Making one's world small is the ultimate. But just knowing that there are people knowing the fact that there are no one who does not wish to do and who did not wish to do this. Usually, it takes another person who reaches out to the cynic. This person's existence is so small, it can be used only to shrink the world. Cynics are the ones who keep on growing despite the fact that society, we all live as if their own impact seems humbly small. Cynics can break the only actuator and U.S. who want to and knowing the type of people who they are. It is very important to remember that there are people doing good work. People are always small, it is how important.

Some say that one act of kindness is worth much, inconsequential. But if there is a place for the world to act, does it will serve to do good and does it will serve to do well. We are down until we decide it is no longer worth filling the roles of faith, and most importantly, about him. In the world, sincere, honest, open, and sharing, of others happy make the actor happy. Some cynics know that making others happy makes you happy. Therefore, to be able to know how to do this, it is self-esteem which is so important now that others can do better than themselves.

Soph Lit Festival plans underway
by Joe Gill
Staff Reporter

Although the Sophomore Literary Festival is scheduled for the same week as Mardi Gras (Feb. 13-19), John Santos, Festival chairman, "doesn't feel that's an issue to be a conflict."

"I'm glad we were excited about literature, they're going to come," he said. "I don't feel as if it's going to hurt our attendance." The reason for the simultaneous schedule, said Santos, is "because the week before is too early in the semester, and the week after conflict with midterms."

Since its inception in 1968, the Literary Festival has provided a chance for students to associate with contemporary authors through readings and informal seminars during one week in the spring. According to Santos, "The Sophomore Literary Festival is one of the few events the University has. It has a national importance, it's an honor to have the students sponsor it."

In the same breath, however, Santos expressed his displeasure at "the limiting pressures put upon the Student Union for the Festival. The budget was cut last year from $14,000 to $11,000. Santos noted that author Edward Albee expressed his desire to attend the festival, but Santos said, "it was an honor to have the students sponsor it."

Santos said that his committee is "putting out a real effort to make this a festival of people of the University." The theme of the festival is "maps," and "what is meant by this is a look at the geographical consciousness," he said.

"Poetry is the authors featured this year) conjures images, lands that we all live and build our worlds in. Everything the poet feels is something that is universally felt," said Santos. "The poet then attempts to map these feelings in his 36th floor office."

The authors this year include: William Stafford a poet, critic and writer of personal experiences, who is "a poet of the outdoors, and a very self-searching author," said Santos. He has taught at numerous colleges, including Lewis and Clark College and Manchester. He was in a conscientious objector in World War II, and the two books he includes Allegiance (1970) and The Weather (1975). In 1962, he won the Pulitzer National Book Award for Travels With My Dear Body.

Michael Benedikt is the author of The Paris View. He is a poet, editor playwright and translator of anthropology of French and German poetry, and is "the most respected surrealist in the country," said Santos. "He is a jack of all-trades and has been everywhere. He is just brilliant," he said.

He is also noted for his work with avant-garde plays and his major projects include Made No Title (1970), Sky (1971) and The Body (1980).

David Ignatow is a poet, writer of short stories, and autobiographer. He is Editor-at-large for the American Poetry Review and is currently teaching at Columbia University. He "writes about every man's experiences, and especially about urban themes in which he incorporates images, such as dreams," said Santos. His major works include Selected Poems (1975), Say Pardon (1962) and Rescue The Dead (1960).

Denis Levertov is the "premier woman poet in the country right now," according to Santos. She is a poet, essayist, and translator. She taught at MIT and currently teaches at Tufts University, Mass. She writes "a poetry of the unconscious, and has a unique style called organic form," said Santos. Her major works include The Freeing of Dust (1975), The Sorrowing House (1968) and We Learning the Alphabet (1970).

William Goyen is a novelist and short story writer. He writes "short stories set in a small town in Texas, with a style reminiscent of Faulkner and Joyce in exposing the bizarre and disturbing influences on life," said Santos. A collection of his works was published in 1974 entitled Selected Works, which featured stories from the last two decades. Goyen's works include The House of Breath (1950) and Ghost in Flesh (1956).

There is also a possibility that Hortense Calisher and Lara (irving) Silberstein, who have "a poetry of the unconscious, and has a unique style called organic form," will be included. Her major works include The Unmaking of Man (1940), The Unmaking of Man (1945) and The Unmaking of Man (1950).

Santos noted that "it's understandable that people that people don't recognize these names. But it would be a shame to let these people pass and not be able to meet them. Lack of familiarity is not a sign of obscenity; it's a sign that we're not reading contemporary poetry.

And persistent rumors that the governments of Japan and Russia have agreed to suspend all whaling operations worldwide have not been confirmed.

Yet in the wake of these breakthroughs, cracks have appeared in the Save the Whale from over the various tactics pursued by the organizations responsible for the progress.

The most controversial tactic - a boycott of Japanese and Russian products - has produced recent charges of "vicious racism" by some Japanese and Japanese Americans.

The Financial Aid Office and RA applications are in the Student Affairs Office. Completed forms and letters of recommendation should be returned to Student Affairs by Jan. 1. P.C. forms should also be returned by Jan. 1 to the Financial Aid Office.

The list of University approved study abroad agencies as of March 1 are approved by the University and their names will be sent to the appropriate rectors.

Students should indicate the three halls they would like to apply for and their names will be automatically sent there in March. Indivi­duals may request appointments for interviews and use these methods for selection.

Lally's closing remarks to all students were simply, "Please respond to this after the meeting. Let's go."

"I hope you have 100 juniors and I think all - and be RA's for next year..."
Engineering addition underway

Architectural plans for the addition to the Cushing Hall of Engineering at Notre Dame are nearly complete and bids for construction will be requested in December, according to Dr. Joseph A. Flanagan, dean of the College of Engineering. Construction of the addition will start at January and the addition will be ready for occupancy by fall, '78.

Plans for the site call for a five-story addition of 135,000 square feet. The three stories above ground will extend 90 feet south of the present building and along the entire 300-foot-length.

Depending on construction costs, the two levels below ground probably will include a subterranean addition extending south and east beyond the main structure. At least 110,000 square feet will be built during the initial construction, more than doubling the size of the present building, which has 90,000 square feet.

The building was designed to be compatible with the 43-year-old Cushing Hall, and the brick, limestone and slate roof on the exterior will match the older building as closely as possible.

One of the College's problems has been that its physical facilities are dispersed on campus. When the addition is completed, the departments of Chemical, Civil, Metallurgical, Electrical and Aerospace and Mechanical Engineering as well as the Colleges administrative offices will be housed in one building. The wind tunnels and fire research facilities will be located in the Aerospace and Mechanical Engineering Laboratory (currently the Mechanical Engineering Laboratory).

The administrative, departmental and faculty offices will all be moved to the new part of the building. The addition also will contain the new College library, board room, faculty lounge, audiovisual learning center, computing centers and some laboratories.

The building was designed so that all facilities needed by students during the evening will be in one first-floor area that can remain open while the rest of the building is secured.

Construction costs will be partially met with funds raised during the recent engineering building campaign. To date, more than $5 million in cash gifts and pledges has been raised from alumni and friends of the College of Engineering.

The total fund for the project is more than $4.5 million, including $1.5 million already accumulated by the University for engineering facilities. Most of the money will go into new construction, according to Hogen, and remodeling of Cushing Hall will be done later.

Plans for the expansion are being handled by Elberle Architects/Planners/Engineers of Bloomington, Ind.

JONES NAMED NL CY YOUNG WINNER

NEW YORK (AP) — Randy Jones, the left-hander who won 22 games for the San Diego Padres last season and was the National League's Cy Young Award winner, is the new president of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Jones, who narrowly lost last year's award — emblematic of pitching supremacy — to Tom Seaver of the New York Mets, and who tied for 19 of the 24 first-place votes in balloting by a committee composed of two baseball writers from each of the National League cities...
Improved coaching aids women's IH

by Eileen O'Grady
NDU, Thursday, November 4, 1976

Now that the exciting women's interhall football season has ended, many coaches believe there are some more tried and tested techniques that may be of interest to patrons of women's IH. Why this year? How did the caliber of the game itself seem to improve? Why was the race for the championship more competitive? Although there are many answers to these questions, one is often overlooked: better coaches.

Unknown to many, nine of the sixteen teams in interhall had at least one woman's IH coach, while Lewis had three, and Frank had one. Not all the coaches of the women's IH were made.

In most professional sports, an obvious question comes to mind here: Why would guys take such an enormous financial risk? In pulling some of the 100 or so women's IH players, they were responding: "for the fun of it." But when they then took it seriously.

Don Byrne, Badin's coach for two years and Lewis' head coach for two years, stuck with it because "I think it's exciting for girls to have this sport, and for players and sports and not have the social stigma often attached to it." So, this year's second biggest factor in his enthusiasm was the girls themselves. "They're really starting to really want an education," he added.

Don Tweeten, Lally's first, took it up mainly for relaxation from his administrative duties. He stressed how "bright" the girls: "They're good, they're from the beginning," he stated. "I think my main discipline and ability to play football.

Lally's philosophy was never to "over-coach." Specifically he'd tell the girls, "Go out there and play, and if you start realizing you're good there and have some fun." Generally, Lally thought the girls started to be more meaningful than the "men's"—they're more emotional, more the "quarterbacks," he remarked. You played the double passes, pass out to the corner, and long passes on fourth and long yardage, instead of just hurling up and down the middle," Lally continued.

But the asthetist loss will probably exceed the monetary loss. There was no change in rule this season. That is, the ability to "harass" offensive linemen have been playing in a sea of yellow penalty flags. Most of the penalty occurs in the first thrusters. Two Sundays ago, the Oakland Raiders of the American Football League faced the Bay Packers and officials called 34 penalties.

"There were more flags than at the National Night," cracked Raiders' coach Don Shula. "The girls have picked up my command, I can't wait till next year." Thomas specifically noted things about the girls as compared to many of the men's teams he's coached on: "The girls were much smarter in their "learning," played hard, and made many opponents, so they were less "animalistic." Their general attitude was more enthusiastic and more hard working.

Lally found a real identity while working with the team. He looked forward to all their practices and actually put on sweats and ran the plays with them in practice. He also enjoyed eating with the team after each practice and game. He called a game "in the style of a game," he claims. "Already I'm excited for next year."

The coaches all agreed the caliber of the game has improved, even since the beginning of the season. They lost our first game on Lewis to Joe nine yards. Thomas coached for all the men of the year, we beat them not by any long play but just by successive drivers.

Byrne noticed a drastic shift from the other years according to his form and his "former club."

"He looks like a college kid," he added.

In any case all these coaches really found women's interhall a real sport. And it has to be a pastime. Interhall is a real sport, and I think I'm used to fans would question

Better coaching was a major reason for the improved performance in women's interhall this fall.

"We're constantly screams about being held," he said. "They're really searching and looking more than in the past."

Then Hanifan suggested that the problems in the defenses, "men who don't do their job and don't do their part is because the offense is holding.

Speaking for the defense, Chica­go's Wally Chambers said, "I think the defense is better this year because of illegal use of the hands. Because the offensive linemen are better at putting their hands away from the body now, I slap and they don't get a free shot on the side, it's illegal. If they take them down they take away too often at the defensive charge.

Lacrosse Club Club deutscht

The Notre Dame Lacrosse Club travelled to and battled against the Notre Dame University lacrosse team, winning 17-9. The Irish defeated the windshield in a close decision, improving 1-1 for the season. The women's lacrosse team is far from finished. The season has just begun. The girls plan to go on to the next fall international, since 7 out of these 10 women lacrosse players are seniors.

The Notre Dame Lacrosse Club placed 13th and 26th respectively at the World Cup. The players are the Notre Dame Lacrosse Club. The game will be at 7 p.m. at Stearns Field.

NFL evaluates holding penalties

The regulation is simply and clearly in the National Football League rule book. Two hands may ward off opponents with his hands and arms in the act of blocking. Use hands or arms to obstruct an opponent by grasping with hands.

For the players, the almighty dollar sign is flashing. Stars like Reggie Jackson, Brian Elpers. Al­though Elpers was not as ex­perienced as the quarterback, he remarkd. "But the asthetist loss will probably exceed the monetary loss. There was no change in rule this season. Irish crew members return from major Boston regatta

by Dan Prehl

Irish men's and women's crews placed 13th and 26th respectively in a major national regatta on October 17th. The Head of the Charles Regatta in Boston, Massa­chusetts. attracts both quality and quantity. Over 500 crews partici­pated in the various events, includ­ing some of the top competition in the country.

The "Head" is a distance race, covering a three-mile course upstream on the Charles River. Men's races usually cover a 2000-meter course, about 1 1/2 miles and women's 100 meters. The men's varsity heavyweight eight weighted steel was clocked at 16:33 to make the top third in the field forty headland by the Coast Guard Academy. Boats were started at ten seconds intervals, and were individually computer-timed. This "race against the clock" feature, along with the difficult trail of the coxswain's ability to steer as well as the oarsman's ability to row.

The varsity lightweight eight turned a better than expected 16th place finish last year, but still placed only 26th. Women's rowing is improving fast, and crews had to row a full minute better than last year to make the top ten. The Irish have one of the top women's crews in the Midwest, having captured the Midwest Sprints title at Madi­son, Wisconsin, two of the last three years. They also captured a second place finish at the Eastern Sprints in Worcester, Massachu­setts last year.

Both crews will begin workouts in January in preparation for the spring season. They will be on the water six days a week at 5 a.m., as soon as the ice clears from the St. Croix River. The Notre Dame will be invitational under the Dad Vail Regatta at Philadel­phia this week.

Schedules include Purdue, Neb­raska, and the Midwest Sprints at Marietta, Ohio. The Irish men will be facing the Dad Vail Regatta at Philadel­phia and hope to send a crew to the Intracollegiate Rowing Association championships. The women, meanwhile, are planning strong finishes at the Midwest and East­ern Sprints.
