Gassman reviews ‘successful’ regime

The Gassman-Casey platform contained seven points of view, all dealing with overcrowding in the College Hall. Gassman said he is confident and optimistic about continuing to work on the issue.

Gassman said he felt headway was made in that awareness was gained on both sides. Gassman felt he was enlightened on how things are run and also commented that the college’s administration now realizes students are unhappy.

In regard to Gassman’s second objective, the Committee on Undergraduate Admissions (COUL) was evaluated at the beginning of this year. At that time, “coatings” were given.

Until recently, it looked as though Gassman’s third proposal would pay off. Jerry Klingenberger, who was a senior and student lobbyist, spent a lot of time in touch with the newspaper and the student body.

Kathy Mills filled the position of Executive Editor. She will be in charge of production, and will be assisted by Associate Managing Editor Bob Brink. The new board will take over after spring break.

Gassman had tried to deal with the problem last year through the Academic Council. This year he has taken personal interest in the problem, he said.

The Observer

Hogan announces Editorial Board

Editor’s Note: This is one in a three-part series on the wide problem of “redlining” in mortgage lending. The series will focus on how particular emphasis in the practice in the South Bend area. The first article introduces the problem and some of the arguments advanced by each side - the lenders and their potential clients. The second article will deal with the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act of 1975, discussing the effect it has had and some of the weaknesses of the law. The final article will outline some of the solutions that have been proposed or already instituted in some sections of the U.S.

When the Clarks talked to a local realtor, they were told that would be a problem: the banks and savings institutions were not lending money in that neighborhood. They went to the South Bend Federal Savings & Loan Association, where they had an account and an excellent credit rating. South Bend Federal refused to make a loan or under $15,000.

Another leading institutions in the city either turned them down or loan for less than $10,000. “One did agree to do so, but a rate of 12 percent was charged,” Dolores said, “They wouldn’t commit themselves.” Dolores fumed. “They just beat around the bush, wouldn’t give a reason, and that’s why I got so upset.”

The Clarks finally went to a Mishawaka bank where they stated they had no problem getting a loan. But they and their neighbors now fear that the north-west side may be “redlined.”

“Redlining” is a term that was little known four years ago. It is the arbitrary practice of some banks and savings institutions to invest mortgage money in other urban neighborhoods. According to a recent report published jointly by the National Center for Urban Ethnic Affairs in Washington D.C., and the National Training and Research Center in Chicago...
Amin seeks good relations

Sophomore survey reveals similarities in three classes

The more students seem to change, the more they remain the same, according to a survey of three different groups of sophomores over the last 15 years at the University. The surveys of the 1961 sophomores and their counterparts 10 years later or the 1971 sophomores and their counterparts five years later. The 1961 sophomores were surveyed about the inauguration of President John F. Kennedy. The 1971 research coincided with the beginning of non-violent and less severe protests on campuses, and 1976 data were collected after the election of Jimmy Carter.

Sections of the research instrument included family relations, on life and the future, evaluation of education in general and Notre Dame in particular, and attitudes toward the economic and legal systems.

The research questions about the University, 1976 sophomores gave a more favorable assessment from all three groups, and the influence of education, which was high in 1976, could be seen in the turn-around in evaluation of educational and recreational activities between the sophomores of 1971 and 1976.

Erratum

In the last edition of this paper on Mar. 16, it was incorrectly reported that The Observer and the University will co-sponsor a last of $1,210 for the year commencing this fall. The correct amount of the loan is $15,000.

Placement Bureau changes date

Students wishing to sign up for interviews with the Placement Bureau for the week of Mar. 28, can do so on Tuesday, Mar. 22. For this week, there will be no Monday sign-ups.

Spring semester enrollment peaks

Spring semester enrollment figures at the University have reached 83,556, the highest number for any comparable period in the school's history. A total of 8,057 were registered a year ago and 8,540 in the previous record semester of 1975.

Enrollment in the College of Arts and Letters went from 4,082 down from last year's 1,917, down to 3,197 in the College of Business Administration from last year's 1,800, up to 1,962 at the College of Engineering from 1,802 in the Science College. There are 1,788 incoming postgraduate students, 1,761 undergraduate students, and 1,761 enrolled in graduate studies, up 65 from last year.

The Observer is published Mondays through Fridays and Saturday during the academic term. The Observer is the student newspaper of the University of Notre Dame and St. Mary's College. Subscriptions may be purchased for $20 per year ($10 per semester) from The Observer, Box Q, Notre Dame, Indiana 46616. Second class postage paid at Notre Dame, Indiana 46616.
TOWER CITY, Pa. (AP) - Ronald Adley, a bespectacled coal miner trapped deep in a Pennsylvania mine for the longest five days of his life, has awakened to find himself in good health.

Several hours later the bodies of two more coal miners were located, bringing to 14 the number killed by the underground flood that trapped Adley last Thursday.

Five more miners remained missing. Efforts to locate them continued but no new signs of life were reported.

"Pass that jackhammer over to me," Adley commanded as his rescuers dug through a five-foot-wide tunnel and tugged the five-foot-seven frame through. He thanked his rescuers with slaps on the back and a few jokes.

He then took them 108 hours to reach him. He cut some of the broken coal off to allow workers trapped by coal dust to recover. When he had clear air and light to recover. When he had clear air and light to reach him. He cut some of the broken coal off to allow workers trapped by coal dust to recover. When he had clear air and light to reach him.

Yeandell, assistant dean of the School of Administrative Services for both undergraduate and graduate students, was looking for a total operation. There will be a major shift within the areas of business not just in business, not just in business.

The College of Business is deem an "overall success" by Duffy, rector of Lewis Hall, who noted that the girls for the week end's activities included happy hours at Kubik's, the student bar and The Heidelberg Bar in Altoona.

Aberdeen, professor of marketing and former acting dean of Business Administration, said administrative changes are due to personnel and administrative services for both undergraduate and graduate students.

Dean Raymond, associate dean of the College of Business Administration will lead the changes. The role of department head is being reorganized due to personnel and administrative services for both undergraduate and graduate students.

Accrington, who is graduating this year, is looking for a total operation. There will be a major shift within the areas of business not just in business, not just in business.

The College of Business is now looking for a total operation. profiler must be interested in the study of business in society. There are presently large sections with satisfac-

The College of Business is now looking for a total operation. The College of Business is now looking for a total operation. profiler must be interested in the study of business in society. There are presently large sections with satisfac-

"I am told it's the only way to do it," Ryan said, adding that the happy hours were very successful and that the computer center received a good response.

Although there were many other events on campus last weekend, Saddler did not see them as being competitive. "We hope to integrate our activities with the other events on campus," he stated. "We want to present a lot of different activities, but we could have done more with more student involvement." He also stated that Adley was closed down early in the evening because of lack of student attendance.

"Heaven-Heil" weekend draws great response

By Michael Lewis

Angelo Donetto and his friends were two of the 300 students on June 1, 1977.

The event's activities included happy hours at Kubik's Bar and The Heidelberg Bar in Altoona, a computer dating service, a dance in the Lafayette ballroom and a disco party at the Nazz.

"We had to close down The Nazz on Saturday," Saddler said. "The police were there, so I decided to close the dance." Saddler said that the happy hours were very successful and that the computer center received a good response.

Although there were many other events on campus last weekend, Saddler did not see them as being competitive. "We hope to integrate our activities with the other events on campus," he stated. "We want to present a lot of different activities, but we could have done more with more student involvement." He also stated that Adley was closed down early in the evening because of lack of student attendance.

"Heaven-Heil" weekend draws great response

By Michael Lewis

Pennsylvania coal miner escapes death trap

"We had to close down The Nazz on Saturday," Saddler said. "The police were there, so I decided to close the dance." Saddler said that the happy hours were very successful and that the computer center received a good response.

Although there were many other events on campus last weekend, Saddler did not see them as being competitive. "We hope to integrate our activities with the other events on campus," he stated. "We want to present a lot of different activities, but we could have done more with more student involvement." He also stated that Adley was closed down early in the evening because of lack of student attendance.

"Heaven-Heil" weekend draws great response

By Michael Lewis

Pennsylvania coal miner escapes death trap

"We had to close down The Nazz on Saturday," Saddler said. "The police were there, so I decided to close the dance." Saddler said that the happy hours were very successful and that the computer center received a good response.

Although there were many other events on campus last weekend, Saddler did not see them as being competitive. "We hope to integrate our activities with the other events on campus," he stated. "We want to present a lot of different activities, but we could have done more with more student involvement." He also stated that Adley was closed down early in the evening because of lack of student attendance.

"Heaven-Heil" weekend draws great response

By Michael Lewis

Pennsylvania coal miner escapes death trap

"We had to close down The Nazz on Saturday," Saddler said. "The police were there, so I decided to close the dance." Saddler said that the happy hours were very successful and that the computer center received a good response.

Although there were many other events on campus last weekend, Saddler did not see them as being competitive. "We hope to integrate our activities with the other events on campus," he stated. "We want to present a lot of different activities, but we could have done more with more student involvement." He also stated that Adley was closed down early in the evening because of lack of student attendance.

"Heaven-Heil" weekend draws great response

By Michael Lewis

Pennsylvania coal miner escapes death trap

"We had to close down The Nazz on Saturday," Saddler said. "The police were there, so I decided to close the dance." Saddler said that the happy hours were very successful and that the computer center received a good response.

Although there were many other events on campus last weekend, Saddler did not see them as being competitive. "We hope to integrate our activities with the other events on campus," he stated. "We want to present a lot of different activities, but we could have done more with more student involvement." He also stated that Adley was closed down early in the evening because of lack of student attendance.

"Heaven-Heil" weekend draws great response

By Michael Lewis

Pennsylvania coal miner escapes death trap

"We had to close down The Nazz on Saturday," Saddler said. "The police were there, so I decided to close the dance." Saddler said that the happy hours were very successful and that the computer center received a good response.

Although there were many other events on campus last weekend, Saddler did not see them as being competitive. "We hope to integrate our activities with the other events on campus," he stated. "We want to present a lot of different activities, but we could have done more with more student involvement." He also stated that Adley was closed down early in the evening because of lack of student attendance.

"Heaven-Heil" weekend draws great response

By Michael Lewis

Pennsylvania coal miner escapes death trap

"We had to close down The Nazz on Saturday," Saddler said. "The police were there, so I decided to close the dance." Saddler said that the happy hours were very successful and that the computer center received a good response.

Although there were many other events on campus last weekend, Saddler did not see them as being competitive. "We hope to integrate our activities with the other events on campus," he stated. "We want to present a lot of different activities, but we could have done more with more student involvement." He also stated that Adley was closed down early in the evening because of lack of student attendance.

"Heaven-Heil" weekend draws great response

By Michael Lewis

Pennsylvania coal miner escapes death trap

"We had to close down The Nazz on Saturday," Saddler said. "The police were there, so I decided to close the dance." Saddler said that the happy hours were very successful and that the computer center received a good response.

Although there were many other events on campus last weekend, Saddler did not see them as being competitive. "We hope to integrate our activities with the other events on campus," he stated. "We want to present a lot of different activities, but we could have done more with more student involvement." He also stated that Adley was closed down early in the evening because of lack of student attendance.

"Heaven-Heil" weekend draws great response

By Michael Lewis

Pennsylvania coal miner escapes death trap

"We had to close down The Nazz on Saturday," Saddler said. "The police were there, so I decided to close the dance." Saddler said that the happy hours were very successful and that the computer center received a good response.

Although there were many other events on campus last weekend, Saddler did not see them as being competitive. "We hope to integrate our activities with the other events on campus," he stated. "We want to present a lot of different activities, but we could have done more with more student involvement." He also stated that Adley was closed down early in the evening because of lack of student attendance.
Prompted by the University's retirement of Prof. James P. Danehy, we examined, in Friday's editorial, the possibility of a major revision of tenure. Our conclusions, opinions and letters are the views of their authors. Column space is limited, and letters are encouraged to promote the free expression of views on campus.

desire to retire by the Church once said, "A vigorous man, who was forced to forced retirement: The former which is an ideal course, which (ideal course) most certainly a rigorous course student who wants to become an M. D. Dame's pre-med and science students.

We concluded that the current system may not last much longer, in view of the antimony that exists between Notre Dame and its administration.

In this editorial, we turn to the individual cases and the general retirement rules, he deserves individual case of Prof. Danehy. Whatever some of our administrators suffer, "... your brain's dry up." Apparent-vigorously, the church. A remarkable number of people care within this election: less than one percent separated my naming main. Leopold and myself from the winning ticket.

Certainly this was one of the most memorable elections in times. The slim margin of victory affirmed the judgment that characterized the campus for several days previously. For a special group however, this election was only culminated by the balloting. The entire process of organization, planning and strategy took hundreds of man-hours even five weeks after election day.

We would like to thank all of the voters who had the confidence in us to trust us with their votes. We cannot repay all of the individuals who pledged their loyalty and time to our belief, nor can our hall coordinators or campaign managers Brian Clancy, Chad Tiedemann and Jeff Kohler be repaid.

Perhaps Mark E. of the third place, if the effort to the students would be "unfair to Mr. Bender."

Unfortunately, as members of the political process, the SLC should remain a dynamic force in the university. The SLC as an organization and the individual students who comprise it are just as important as ever. The SLC can and should support the political process in its role as an independent student newspaper.

Danehy is, in a very real sense, a "tragic" dealer in history. Such was demonstrated by the political process. At any rate, the editorial staff were uncomfortable with the election results. In this way an attempt to enlighten the campus with a sense of the genuine nature of the elections. The overwhelming turnout there not only demonstrated a mandate for action, but it also demonstrated the competence and respect of the Hanner residents toward Mark E.

This error may have cost a very narrow margin of victory. Such a well-rounded professor is an asset to any school, specializes particularly Notre Dame, a university that stresses liberal education. Such a man, who is willing to devote consultation, and is always available for consultation, always available for consultation, does not..."...merely their "regret" about this error. Such was demonstrated by the political process. This is a fact that all students should be aware of.

The only real challenge to the SLC is the fact that in recent times, the SLC has grown to be more influential and given more respect in the student body.

Only with the support of the entire student body in the world can Notre Dame's Student Government represent the concerns of its students. We pledge our total support to Dave Bender and Tom Somma to continue to do just that.
Redlining problem examined production of the book," Mader said.

"Sometimes small mistakes don't matter in paper or yearbook or something of that sort," Mader continued, "but in a book everything has to be as perfect as we can make it."

Since the book will soon be on the market the class has turned its attention to marketing and publicizing the book.

The class is considering many different ways of publicizing the book, including many on- and off-campus channels. Current possibilities include ads in The Observer, iron-on transfers, and, hopefully, autograph parties at some local bookstores. Mader said one member of Juniper Press might go as far as walking around a campus in a dodo costume to inform the Notre Dame community of the book.

Mader stated, "We would like to see the book published in some educational magazines or the educational sections of some other magazines. Our goal is to get this book published and widely read." The class is considering the possibility of a book tour, which could include a visit to the city of South Bend.

The class is also considering a plan to send the book to influential people in the area, such as the mayor, city council members, and local business leaders. The class hopes to use the book as a tool to raise awareness about the problems of redlining and to encourage action to address these issues.

Mader said the class is willing to work with local organizations and government officials to promote the book and to ensure that its message is heard.

The class is also considering the possibility of a book tour, which could include a visit to the city of South Bend.

The class is also considering a plan to send the book to influential people in the area, such as the mayor, city council members, and local business leaders. The class hopes to use the book as a tool to raise awareness about the problems of redlining and to encourage action to address these issues.

The class is willing to work with local organizations and government officials to promote the book and to ensure that its message is heard.

The class is also considering the possibility of a book tour, which could include a visit to the city of South Bend.

The class is also considering a plan to send the book to influential people in the area, such as the mayor, city council members, and local business leaders. The class hopes to use the book as a tool to raise awareness about the problems of redlining and to encourage action to address these issues.

The class is willing to work with local organizations and government officials to promote the book and to ensure that its message is heard.

The class is also considering the possibility of a book tour, which could include a visit to the city of South Bend.

The class is also considering a plan to send the book to influential people in the area, such as the mayor, city council members, and local business leaders. The class hopes to use the book as a tool to raise awareness about the problems of redlining and to encourage action to address these issues.

The class is willing to work with local organizations and government officials to promote the book and to ensure that its message is heard.

The class is also considering the possibility of a book tour, which could include a visit to the city of South Bend.

The class is also considering a plan to send the book to influential people in the area, such as the mayor, city council members, and local business leaders. The class hopes to use the book as a tool to raise awareness about the problems of redlining and to encourage action to address these issues.

The class is willing to work with local organizations and government officials to promote the book and to ensure that its message is heard.

The class is also considering the possibility of a book tour, which could include a visit to the city of South Bend.

The class is also considering a plan to send the book to influential people in the area, such as the mayor, city council members, and local business leaders. The class hopes to use the book as a tool to raise awareness about the problems of redlining and to encourage action to address these issues.

The class is willing to work with local organizations and government officials to promote the book and to ensure that its message is heard.

The class is also considering the possibility of a book tour, which could include a visit to the city of South Bend.

The class is also considering a plan to send the book to influential people in the area, such as the mayor, city council members, and local business leaders. The class hopes to use the book as a tool to raise awareness about the problems of redlining and to encourage action to address these issues.

The class is willing to work with local organizations and government officials to promote the book and to ensure that its message is heard.

The class is also considering the possibility of a book tour, which could include a visit to the city of South Bend.

The class is also considering a plan to send the book to influential people in the area, such as the mayor, city council members, and local business leaders. The class hopes to use the book as a tool to raise awareness about the problems of redlining and to encourage action to address these issues.

The class is willing to work with local organizations and government officials to promote the book and to ensure that its message is heard.
Jody Powell told reporters the air: "It was a thrill. It was... callers, said after the show went off for it we would certainly consider... again in the future... The two hours they're interested in. Very good for me to understand... the two-hour session. "The radio talk show carried by CBS. Lavish. It came from aides, the 58, of Ulanova, Pa., said her talk... sworn questions Saturday from 42 and people who didn't. Carter became dean two years ago, Ryan hopes that by now, and Ryan became dean two years ago, 44, and Ryan hopes that by 1977, Dean Ryan stated some more new business courses will be opened to non-business major.
Purdue heads popcorn research

\[ \text{Purdue heads popcorn research} \]
John Irvin is the third...
by Frank LaGrotta
Sports Writer

Saturday was supposed to have been the day, the day that the San Francisco Dons silenced all critics and proved them wrong. Indeed, worthy of the number-one tag they had worn all season.

However, things didn’t quite work out that way. What was, in fact, most preposterous was the deafening roar of 11,345 excitedly partisan fans. It was a thing that those following the Notre Dame basketball team all season already knew. Unger Phillips has a darn good basketball team. And at the end of it all, it was Notre Dame coach Bob Gaillard. "They’re good," sighed Gaillard who saw his hopes for an undefeated season diminish with every buck Williams took. "Definitely the best we’ve seen all season."

From the tip-off to the final buzzer, which found the Irish on the winning side of a scoreboard reading 93-82, Phelps’ cagers were impressive in virtually every aspect of their game. In a first half marked with turnovers, the lead changed hands a number of times before San Francisco jumped to a 27-21 advantage, their widest margin of the day, on a Marlon Redmond lay-up with 8:35 remaining.

Then senior forward Bill Paterno took over, playing with confidence and providing ten of Notre Dame’s 19 points in the final minutes of the half to bring the Irish within two. Rich Branning sank two from the field, with 3:20 on the clock. Dave Batton connected on a turnaround jumper, and Paterno gave the Irish a 44-42 edge going into the second half.

San Francisco came out of the locker room and quickly regained the momentum of quick shots by Redmond before Toby Knight’s slam dunk gave the Irish a 57-56 lead and provided the inspiration that sent them on a scoring spree which proved to be the decisive factor in the game’s outcome.

After two fast-break baskets, Phelps sent his team into a four-corner offense. The move allowed Dick Williams to exploit a weak San Francisco middle defense, as the Irish out-defensed, out-shot, and out-scored the Dons 24-10 and grabbed a 61-70 lead. Williams, commenting on the fourth-quarter spread, remarked, "I knew I was quicker than my opponent and the spread allowed me to take advantage of that. When we spread it out, we see it as a stall, but really it’s a "

Williams certainly took advantage of the situation, burning San Francisco guards Winfred Boyines and Chubby Cox for 14 points in an eight-minute span. Phelps cited his confidence in guards Branning and Williams as his reason for going with the spread. The flow was going back and forth between San Francisco and ourselves and we felt that we could beat them with the spread. I felt that Dick and Rich could handle it so we went to it."

Statistically, it was Notre Dame on top in every category except shooting percentage where the Dons held a 50 to 49 percent edge. Off the boards the Irish were flawless grabbing 42 caroms to San Francisco’s 33. Toby Knight grabbed 14 for the victors while Williams, Dave Batton and Bruce Flowers pulled down five apiece.

Marlon Redmond retrieved 13 rebounds for the Dons while Winfred Boyines gathered eight and James Hardy seven. Seven foot All-American center, Bill Cartwright could manage only two rebounds.

Williams garnered the game’s high scoring honors with 25 points. Following the night of glory from the field and seven of eight from the foul line, Toby Knight finished with 19 points followed by Paterno with 16, Branning with 14, and Batton shots as the Irish ended with five players in the double figures category except San Francisco, Boyines, displaying exceptional accuracy from the field, hit on 11 of 16 attempts for 23 points. Redmond added 18, Cartwright with 10, and Williams with 10 tallies. Commenting on the game, Gaillard cited the play of Paterno as a decisive factor in the outcome, "He is a great ball player. He’s a senior and this was his last game here so I just want to went out in style." Paterno made good on five of seven attempts from the field and was perfect from the charity stripe in six attempts.

Awards the "Most Valuable Player" award by WSN member Billy Packer and Dick Enberg, the Notre Dame student body in the words of Dick Williams, terrific. "We pulled us through a number of times this year. I am really glad they got the award they deserved it."

A jubilent Phelps talked about the Notre Dame spirit evident throughout the contest: "If we play like we did tonight we go back to Knute. The last three weeks St. Jude has been good to me and I’m not ashamed to admit it either."

The Irish prevented San Francisco from becoming the ninth team in NCAA history to finish the year unbeaten. San Francisco closes its season tonight at DePaul.

by Gregory Solman Sports Writer

Even normally mild-mannered Jack Brownchilde was provoked into the roughness that characterized last weekend’s hockey series. [Photo by Tony Chifari]

Bill Paterno, Duck Williams and Toby Knight were outstanding in Saturday’s 93-82 defeat of the No. 1 Dons. [Photo by Tony Chifari]

|continued on page 7|