University leaders respond to protest by ND black students

Fr. Theodore Hesburgh, University president, Bro. Just Paczesny, vice-president for student affairs, and James A. Roemer, dean of students, presented their views last week regarding the sit-in staged by black students last Thursday.

In his letter to the faculty, administration and students of Notre Dame, Hesburgh said that the specific grievances presented by the black students last week have all been dealt with. However, he expressed concern about racial attitudes perceived by the black students on campus.

Hesburgh commented that he would personally like to believe that racism is not a problem on the Notre Dame campus, but admitted that "racism and prejudice are like termites that somehow get into the house." He stated that the situation deserves attention and cannot be ignored.

Hesburgh urged members of the Notre Dame community to "be people of integrity. It is our business to be in it with all of us," and to treat everyone with respect, love and care in order to create a "very special community in the Notre Dame environment where all belong equally, where we cherish our common humanity and where love and care move us to see each other merely as "another.""

Of top priority, Paczesny said, will be the selection of a full-time Minority Student Coordinator by the Black Student Affairs Committee. Hopefully, this position will be filled by September, 1977. Second, the minority students on campus will be invited to select three students as candidates for appointment to the Student Affairs Committee of the Board of Trustees.

Paczesny said.

Also, the Office for Student Affairs will assist the Notre Dame Gospel Choir in finding after a budget has been proposed and approved.

In his statement, Paczesny outlined the commitments made by the University leaders to the black students, describing these commitments as "a sign of good will to do something and to really try to say that I am only concerned." These commitments included the following:

1. The Office of Student Affairs will present the sharing of the problems faced by the black students.
2. The University leaders will attend the Student Affairs Committee meetings.
3. The University leaders will take the following steps to address the concerns of the black students.
   a. The University leaders will work with the black students to develop a plan for the future.
   b. The University leaders will meet with the black students to discuss the problems they are facing.
   c. The University leaders will work with the black students to develop a plan for the future.

Finally, Paczesny stated that "the Office of Student Affairs will share the topics discussed and proposals suggested by the black students with the various directors under its jurisdiction." He also stated that the University leaders will continue to work with the black students to address their concerns.

Essentially, Roemer observed, the problem is ignorance and the solution is education. He suggested that blacks assume the roles of teachers and teaching others about the problems of discrimination.

Roemer stressed the importance of education.

Dear Notre Dame Faculty, Administrators, and Students:

I had a meeting with concerned black students last week. We discussed a variety of problems that they presented. In general, I think that all of the problems are now either solved or on the way to a solution.

More important than the specific problems was when they perceived themselves as black students on the Notre Dame campus, but admitted that "racism and prejudice are like termites that somehow get into the house." The fact that a relatively large number of students have felt the presence of racist attitudes on campus, Hesburgh noted, indicates that the situation deserves attention and cannot be ignored.

I have listened to the views of the black students and I have listened to the views of the University leaders. Having spent so much time listening to these realities, I have found this to be particularly true when it concerns the perception of an individual. There is no such thing as "being prejudiced," because it is a lie, because it is a lie, because it is a lie.

I often find myself correcting my judgments when prejudice lurks in the background. It is too easy to jump to conclusions when we are under the influence of fear, or when we are under the influence of prejudice.

This will be a good community if we are open to eavesdrop for each other, and if we eavesdrop for each other, it will be a good community. I think it is important that we all belong equally, where we cherish our common humanity whatever our individual differences.

For your personal help in making this ideal become ever more real here at Notre Dame, I am most grateful.

Ever devotedly in Notre Dame,

(Fr. Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.)

Oil, gas continue to spill from North Sea platform

STAYANGER, Norway (AP) — A full cleanup of the oil spill from wind and 20-foot waves yesterday blocked efforts of the three-day-old spill of oil from the Bravo rig in the North Sea and to contain the spreading slick.

The offshore oil well operated by the Phillips Petroleum Co. of Bartlesville, Okla., continued to spew out natural gas and 40,000 gallons of crude oil every hour, feeding a slick already 20 miles long and three miles wide in Norway's Ekofisk oil field.

Two experts from the Red Adair oil well, trouble fighting team of Houston, Tex., and Richard Hattenberg, had planned to start operations to cap the well early today.

But the morning calm created a hazardous mixture of explosive gas and prevented the men from mounting the Bravo platform.

They were rescheduled to try again tomorrow.

In the evening, gale force winds developed, cancelling plans by Norwegian authorities to surround the slick with booms and begin collecting the oil into tankers off the Norwegian coast, as is standard clean-up equipment.

With winds of up to 30 feet, the slick was ready to exceed 20-feet high, making the tankers with special skimming equipment.

Officials said they have decided not to use special chemicals on the slick to break it up before it spreads seriously close to shore.

But the operation today was not at any attempt to contain the spill.

The ruling saying it was unfair to blame the platform itself for the spill.

Phillips spokesman Kjetil Folme said the company had received Norwegian government approval for its plans, which, if oil continues to spill, could range up to 10,000 feet, spreading over the sea floor. He said the best, the operation would take two or three days.

The blow "busted on Friday during routine maintenance. With all precautionary measures from the Ekofisk of oil shut down, Norway is losing an estimated $300,000 a day in incomes.

Folme said Hassen and Hattenberg were on board the pipelaying barge Tuoro alongside the Bravo rig.

The two specialists from the Red Adair Oil Well Fire and Blowout Prevention Co. had mounted the platform twice on Sunday and reported that the blowout was only a partial one, and at least one safety valve along the pipe was still holding closed.

Folme said the operation will involve trying to fit a multivalve cap over the pipe to stop the flow. If it fails, workers will fit more valves so they can start pumping heavy drilling mud into the pipe to hold down the oil and gas.

In Britain, fishermen and environmentalists warned that the slick could turn large stretches of the North Sea into a dead sea. Lord Holdhill, a government marine biologist, said the oil may spread and disperse in the sea.

But the North Sea is 50 miles wide in the northern tip of Norway, with the worst conditions...

The Center for Civil Rights of Notre Dame Law School will sponsor an international symposium on human rights tomorrow through Saturday.

The purpose of the symposium, according to Donald P. Kommers, director of the center, is to bring together leading human rights scholars and elicit their thoughts on the problems concerning the international protection of human rights in the world today.

Among those invited to present papers are Robert J. Thompson, former delegate to the United Nations Commission on Human Rights, John Brademas, Majority Whip, U.S. House of Representatives, Donald Fraser, House of Representatives and Karl Vasak, director of the International Institute of Human Rights. Fr. Theodore Hesburgh, University President, will preside over the evening session on Friday.

The Civil Rights Center yearly sponsors several conferences, concentrating on a different theme each year. This year's theme, International Human Rights, is in keeping with the trend towards world-wide awareness, and in particular, with President Jimmy Carter's human rights policy.

The revived interest in human rights is a result of declining liberal democracy and continuous racial discrimination in many countries, as well as an increase in the number of political prisoners and acts of transnational violence, Kommers noted. The symposium will explore these issues and examine more deeply the source, range and meaning of human dignity in today's world.

The four day symposium will be broken down into seven sessions. Each session will feature one to three speakers who will present a summary of their papers. After the short presentation, discussions will ask questions or offer comments under the direction of a chairman-rapporteur.

Discussants will include representatives from second and third world countries and various international human rights organizations.

Featured in the symposium are the Sixth Annual Civil Rights Lectures. The two lectures, "Humankind: A Global Assessment" and "The Helsinki Agreement and Human Rights," will be delivered by A.H. Robertson from the University of Paris.

Robertson is a former director of the Human Rights Council of Strasbourg, and author of several books on international law and human rights. Included in his works are Rights in Europe, Human Rights in National and Inter-governmental Law, and Human Rights in the World.

Established in 1973 by a grant from the Ford Foundation, the center's main purposes are to build and maintain a civil-human rights research and documentation center, to analyze and suggest solutions to current human rights problems, and to serve as a resource for the educational purposes of the University.

During the past year the center has been collecting resources on international human rights and has recently published International Human Rights. 1975-1976: A Bibliography. The center's archives also include all of the published papers, almost 15,000, collected by Hesburgh during his tenure as chair of the U.S. Commission of Civil and Human Rights and records of the Presidential Clemency Board.

All Notre Dame students are invited to attend any of the sessions or lectures.

Lacrosse Club elects officers

The Notre Dame Lacrosse Club elected their new officers for the 1977-78 season. Richard Mazzi, a junior from Everett, Mass., will replace Jay Williams as the new captain. Tim Walsh was elected as the Vice-President.

This season the Irish will have tri-captains. They are Pat Clynes, Mike LaCrotta, Paul Stevenson, and Jim Searola. The new officer looks forward to a great season next year.

Blood drive held for hemophiliacs

The Office of Volunteer Services is sponsoring another blood drive for the hemophiliacs family today through Thursday at the Infirmary.

Anyone interested in donating blood may report to the Infirmary. The drive was organized to help the Beebe family who are hemophiliacs, requiring over 50,000 units of blood each year. Blood donations give to the Notre Dame-St. Mary's community at the Infirmary can be transferred to the Beebe family if the donors so requests.

To: The Notre Dame Community

I am concerned about the problem of discrimination raised by the Concerned Black Students in their statement of April 20. This concern is heightened by what appears to be widespread indifference to racial problems by the Notre Dame community as a whole. I personally confess I hardly know how to describe or how to begin dealing with the issue of what appears to be widespread indifference to racial matters. I am concerned about the problem of discrimination that comes as no surprise that the problem is essentially University priorities.

It would stand to reason that the concern of minority students and the operations of the Office of Student Affairs, I desire to solve irritating and disruptive problem. M. Jim Roemer, the first lay chairman of the University, expressed the need to further improve the library endowment. He has been on a part-time basis for several years. Five areas are included in academic support, library endowment, academic programs, computer center expansion, teacher development and University Press. One of the academic support endowment, $10 million, will go to support University libraries. The Blacks need the wisdom, patience and understanding of the education of the University... If we are to do anything about the problem of discrimination, we must start by listening to the Blacks and taking their concerns seriously.

Since Notre Dame is an educational institution, it comes as no surprise that the problem is essentially one of education. We need to be educated to the extent and measure of the racial problem in this place. Ignorance is the enemy. But who will teach us? There is no obvious or simple solution to this problem. The Blacks need the wisdom, patience and understanding of the education of the University... If we are to do anything about the problem of discrimination, we must start by listening to the Blacks and taking their concerns seriously.

It is fair to ask the Blacks to assume the good will of the majority of us in this enterprise. If such a decision is going to be made, then it will be necessary to listen and share the concerns of the students. It is not enough just to talk about solving specific problems as well as at the same time educating students. I am concerned about the issue of domestic and foreign policies, of the concern of minority students. The Blacks need the wisdom, patience and understanding of the education of the University... If we are to do anything about the problem of discrimination, we must start by listening to the Blacks and taking their concerns seriously.

The Committee on University Priorities (COUP) noted: "We must be careful to preserve and improve our collection because a temporary erosion is both difficult and expensive to repair." The University has moved to stop the deterioration of its collections by increasing the budget allocation for the libraries. Notre Dame for its part has submitted a COUP recommendation by establishing a special endowment for University libraries. However, the University needs the seed to further increase this endowment to offset rising costs of maintaining and purchasing books and related materials.

Academic programs also serve an important function in academic disciplines. Therefore, the Campaign for Notre Dame is seeking $11.5 million to support these programs. The program directly involving the Freshmen of the Freshman Year of Studies Program. This counseling program has a fourth goal to help freshmen adjust to their first year at Notre Dame. It assists freshmen in selecting academic programs best suited to their needs and interests, in guiding them through their first year in a university atmosphere, in helping them in their coursework through guidance and tutoring and in giving them from freshmen into one of the four colleges of the University. A large number of freshmen who come to Notre Dame are undecided about their career choices and approximately half will change their career choices before graduation. The Freshmen Year of Studies hopes to help students make these decisions wisely. A new Learning Resource Center has recently been added to the freshmen program that gives freshmen self-instruction in academic and career information.

At present the center is holding one or two programs because the use would overcrowd the facilities. The Galway Art Galleries, the late Archbishop Paul Galway, the first lay chairman of the University, expressed the need to further improve the library endowment. He has been on a part-time basis for several years. Dear Editor,

As everyone knows, the Memorial Library on campus attempts to offer every student an atmosphere conducive to pursuing his academic interests. As everyone also knows, the second floor lounge of the library is a great place to relax, get to know people, and break from the rigors of those pursuits. The library’s second floor lounge functions as a relaxation center, and its student-chosen name, the "twang-twang," is testimony to the idea that our large, anonymous student body is a center of the same uniqueness that characters the second floor lounge. But, however, that the second floor lounge is not a student center. Although it has been designed primarily for the students an opportunity for a study break, it is neither designed nor equipped to handle the numbers of people informally gather there at certain hours and the noise which has characterized such gatherings. It has become apparent that the noise level in the library is not the only problem of the academic atmosphere which exist should there be a problem with the students. The academic atmosphere which exist should there be a problem with the students. The academic atmosphere which exist should...

A&L cards Wed.

Sophomores who wish to obtain class cards for Arts and Letters classes may do so by beginning today and tomorrow at R-108.

Only the following departments will be represented: Art, Economics, English, General Program, Modern Languages, Music, Philosophy, Psychology, Speech and Drama and Theology.

Students who want to obtain check marked class cards for freshman level courses should report to the Freshman Year of Studies office.

Oral course

A new course in Oral English and the development of an educational media center will be introduced by the department of Communication Arts during the Summer Session beginning June 30 at Notre Dame University.

The new Oral English course taught by Frederick Syberg of the Speech and Drama department will include discussions and demonstrations of "readers' theater," improvisation, oral paragraphs and themes, and related oral practices.

Traditional courses, such as writing, design, photography, film school publications, public relations, television, understanding the news, and film studies, will be required during the session continuing through August 4. Some of the courses offered for college credit run six weeks, others two weeks, and some are evening courses.

Thomas J. Starch, professor of American Studies at Notre Dame and director of the program, said the goal of faculty mentors is to translate the growing interest in the news media into useful courses for professionals, teachers and young professionals in the field.

Clinic improves writing

Editor's note:

This is the second of a four-part series on innovative educational programs at St. Mary's. Subsequent articles will deal with the Math Department's Personalized Learning System, the tally program and tandem courses between departments.

St. Mary's Writing Clinic is now in its fifth semester of operation and business is booming. Since its creation in the spring of 1975 by a recent graduate, Mary Or, the program has more than tripled its clientele and its staff has grown to 14 tutors and a faculty advisor.

Or, a graduate student at Indiana University, noticed a serious lack of writing ability on the part of many students before the problem was widely publicized. She started last semester by trying to correct the situation. Her idea was to help each student individually with their specific writing problem.

The stated purpose of the Writing Clinic is threefold. It strives to "improve the writing of weak students (both foreign and domestic students) and to assist students seeking excellence in and already competent writing; to increase faculty interest and in knowledge of student abilities and to guide and to work in coordination with the Writing Program office.

Of special concern are foreign students who have gained little confidence in handling problems with English. At present, attendance at the clinic is voluntary and open to all students. Students are either referred by their teachers or seek appointments on their own. Once an appointment has been made, students may choose to attend on a weekly basis to work on specific assignments, or to only go occasionally when they have special problems.

The clinic worked with 56 students during the ten weeks of its existence in the spring of 1975. The clinic is now under the direction of Thomas J. Stritch, professor of English. Brogan Award goes to SMC for circus, Carter impersonator visits campus

by Barb Langhery
Copy Editor

The James E. Brogan Award for the most original and outstanding contribution to An Tostal was given to St. Mary’s for their organization of the Craftsmen Ball Thursday.

The circus, which was originally to be held at St. Mary’s, was moved to Stepan Center because of the rain and was free to ND-SMC students. This is the first year St. Mary’s has sponsored such a large event.

The Brogan Award is an annual award that was first given in 1977 when Lyons Hall, then a male dorm, entered an elephant as their team for the first-ever circus.

The An Tostal committee thought this was a neat idea and wanted to recognize that type of activity.

Brogan, the award’s namesake and a free-lance comedian in New York, is considered one of the fathers of modern clowning. He was the person who made An Tostal happen.

Brogan has been at ND for every An Tostal since his chairmanship, but was unable to attend this year’s events because of a commitment. Previous winners of the Brogan Award include Grace Hall in 1976 for a five-weeks’ display, Pell’s Ice Cream Parlor in 1975 for their donation of ice cream to Reservoir 101, and the mobilization crew in 1974 for their contribution to the organization of An Tostal.

The Brogan Award, a plaque with an elephant on it, was given at the Irish Wake on Saturday.

Two other awards were also given at the Irish Wake. Tina Suede, An Tostal Chairmaness, received an award for three years of dedication to An Tostal. Keefe Montgomery, An Tostal Chairman, received an award for his contribu­ tion as this year’s chairman.

An event not mentioned in yesterday’s Observer article on An Tostal was the visit of “President Jimmy Carter” to the Notre Dame campus just before the Mr. Campus contest.

“President Carter” arrived at about 10:15 p.m. in a six-door 1977 limousine, accompanied by Notre Dame security, a Mercedes and a Buick advance car. The limousine drove into Stepan Center surrounded by Secret Service agents. “Carter” then addressed the students present.

Carter was impersonated by Bob Waddick, a Fisher Hall resident. The Carter visit was a Fisher Hall sponsored activity, which included about 40 Fisher Hall residents.

The students rented the limousine and gained the cooperation of Notre Dame Security. They also went to Surin Hall, the proposed site of the Mr. Campus contest, two days before the event dressed as Secret Service agents to survey the hall for security. A ramp was also leaked to The Observer that Carter would be in the area on Thursday.

The Secret Service men and Carter had the same Campus crew foiled on Thursday night. As the limousine drove into Stepan Center, the authorities jumped to its feet and pressed towards the car, while Secret Service agents in three-piece suits, sunglasses, walkie-talkie earplugs, toy guns and badges fought the crowd off.

McDough, one of the spoof’s organizers, stated the residents of Fisher “did it because it was fun.”

Avant Garde Jackson MacLow to recite

Port-composer Jackson MacLow, one of the founders of the American Avant Garde, will conduct workshops in poetry and music today and tomorrow. A performance of his works is scheduled for 4:30 p.m. tomorrow in the LaFortune Student Center Ballroom.

MacLow has published several books of poems, including Light Poems and Stanzas for Iris Scriba. He has also composed scores for the Living Theatre during the 1950’s, and was one of the originals of the New York Avant Garde Festival.

Hoosier installs solar heat

NEW ALBANY, Ind. (AP) — James R. Nolan says he’s just an optimist who’s seen the light. His fuel bills are down these days, so he figures he can afford to do something he likes, like missionary talk about salvation.

“I’m not trained in electrical engineering, but if I can swing it, I don’t care,” he says.

Nolan opened his two-story office building in July. He plans to spend about $20,000 to install solar heating equipment, but he figures he’ll make it back in seven years.

He says that last winter, the region’s harshest in decades, his office was warm and comfortable — and that surprised some patients.

“I’ve been around New Albany 27-28 years, and they just figured it was a fly in my bonnet when I got around some,” Nolan says.

But he said friends of his in the engineering department at the University of Louisville have told him the motors only use $7.75-$8 worth of coal per month.

Nolan’s building, a white structure with few windows, has a storage tank in the basement to store the sun-heated water. The system has a rooftop water circulation system in which water in 12 collectors is heated by the sun, then pumped into the base­ ment tank. When heat is needed, the water gives up its warmth to air which is then blown through ducts and circulated through the building.

Nolan says his experience has convinced him that scientists and politicians are trying “to make something complicated that is real simple.”

SMC Law Society elects officers for next year

St. Mary’s Law Society President Dennis Bennett has announced the society’s newly-elected officers for the year.

Mary Pat Butler, a sophomore major from Pittsburgh, Pa., will be president.

Her vice president will be Maureen Caneey, a sophomore English and business major from Milwaukee, Wis.

Sophomore Alice Lous, a business major from Macau, will be the society’s treasurer.

Secretary will be Mary Beth Fedinks, a freshman government major from West Carrollton, Ohio.

Four other officers include Theodore McManus, a junior history major from Greensboro, N.C., and John Dwyer, a senior government major from Steubenville, Ohio.

They will work closely with the student body to sponsor and publicize student government activities at SMC.

FIRST LADIES: Sad, sad, sad

Helm Hamilton, history professor emeritus at the University of Kentucky, will present a lecture entitled “Sad, Sad, Sad: First Ladies and Presidential "Exceptions"” tomorrow at St. Mary’s. The lecture, part of the American Scene Series, is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in Carroll Hall, Madeleva Memorial Building.

Hamilton received his A.B. degree in English from Williams College in Massachusetts and his Ph.D. in history from the University of Kentucky. He holds honorary degrees from Franklin (Indiana) College, the University of Cincinnati, the University of Kentucky and Indiana University.

He is the author, co-author, or editor of several books, including "Zachary Taylor: The Soldier of the Republic," "White House Rogues and Retoldies," and "The Democratic Experience.

What is the Society for Creative Anarchism?

Misty Lackey, the representative for the society, stated their unusual purpose: to recreate the Middle Ages “not as they were, but as they should have been.” Chivalry, honor, virtue, sieges of the time are maintained within the 20th century by this conglomeration of misplaced kings, queens, knights, peasants, etc. The group was founded in August 1975 and is affiliated with the National Council which originated circa April 1966 in California. The society is currently co-sponsoring the Tolkien Lecture Series and welcomes any noble or virtuous souls who would feel more at home in a different time zone. You won’t need a Time Machine to contact Misty at 232-6798.

My roommate, the Clearstaff Campus King, is interested in the world of the Eight Man on Campus contest. Good for business resumes et al.

Misty Lackey, the representative for the society, stated with $200-550 netted. Last year $1700 was collected; 1977 is a year to make history. Our group was founded here in August 1975 and is affiliated with the National Council which originated circa April 1966 in California. The society is currently co-sponsoring the Tolkien Lecture Series and welcomes any noble or virtuous souls who would feel more at home in a different time zone. You won’t need a Time Machine to contact Misty at 232-6798.

Irish golfers shooting for NCAA bid

by Tom Desmond
Sports Writer

The jury has come in with a not guilty verdict for the youthful Notre Dame golf team. After starting the season with a third-place finish in the Indianapolis Intercollegiate two weeks ago the young Irish squad turned in a dominant 20th place finish at the Kepler Invitational last week. Such a performance would lead one to write off the rest of the season as a no-go in the Notre Dame men’s golfing experience. But, such a verdict was overturned this weekend as the green jackets improved to 7-4. "We were the top independent in both invitational and have to be considered the number one independent in the district going into this weekend's Northern Intercollegiate." Monday, a day more fit for ducks than golf, the Irish posted a 782 total for 36 holes to finish behind host Miami of Ohio (766), Indiana for the Northern Intercollegiate. "We proved to ourselves and to the rest of the country that we can tie it up with the conference teams and be competitive," the Irish linkster coach. "I’d have to say that we have the confidence now to contest the play of this past weekend and make a serious challenge for a NCAA bid."

Ireland's netters drop two decisions

by Tom Powanda
Sports Writer

Suffering two consecutive set-losses in the third set, Harris dropped to one match over .500 with a record of 12-11. The Irish had no trouble in the first set as they traveled to Columbus. With their performance this past weekend was so out of character it was a return to the old Irish.
