Drivers sigh relief; gas strike averted

IndianaDip (AP) - The Indiana Service Station Dealers Association handed motorists a 115-hour break when it called off a four-day shutdown of stations a day before it was to begin.

But Curtis H. Robertson, the Association's Executive Director, cautioned that although the petrol shortage was relieved, it is still in short supply and conservation is essential.

"We could face some very serious problems by the end of the week," he said.

The Association decided the shutdown was unnecessary after the Federal Energy Department promised to review the gasoline market allowed service stations.

The markup, the difference between the wholesale price and the amount a motorist pays at the pump, excluding taxes, covers a station's overhead, such as rent and salaries. It also provides the owner with a profit.

As all of you know, we've been trying to get the attention of the Department of Energy, and I'm happy to report that we've got it," Robertson said at a news conference.

New regulations on price margins will be proposed by June 1, and will take effect July 1, according to information obtained by Sen. Birch Bayh, Rep. Ronald Dellums, both Indiana Democrats.

Present regulations stipulate that the dealer's markup is to be no more than it was in May 1974 plus three cents. Dealers say that doesn't take inflation into account.

Califano to speak at commencement

Michael Lewis
Executive News Editor

Joseph A. Califano Jr., Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, will speak Sunday at Notre Dame's 15th annual commencement exercises. Califano is one of the most outspoken and controversial secretaries in HEW's history, taking strong public stands on smoking, alcohol, and abuse, and equal opportunity in inter-collegiate athletics.

As the head of HEW, the largest department of the federal government, Califano is responsible for some of the government's annual budget of $62.2 billion, and overviews programs ranging in concern from welfare to civil rights.

After President Jimmy Carter's election in 1976, he nominated Califano for the HEW post. Califano, a Roman Catholic, was well received by the Senate during his nomination hearings, but faced stiff questioning on the abortion issue.

Califano claimed that he strongly opposed abortion and federal funding of abortions, but promised to obey the ruling of the Supreme Court on the issue. On Jan. 24, 1977, his nomination was approved by the Senate by a 95 to 1 vote.

The son of an Italian immigrant, Califano was born in Brooklyn, NY on May 13, 1931. He attended Roman Catholic schools, and earned a B.A. from Holy Cross College, in 1952. He attended Harvard Law School, where he was one of the editors of the Harvard Law Review, and graduated magna cum laude in 1955.

Califano served in the navy for three years, and then joined the New York law firm of Dewey, Ballantine, Bushby, Palmer and Wood.

In April, 1961, Califano became special assistant to the General Counsel of the Department of Defense. He served in a variety of positions in the Defense Department, and was awarded the Distinguished Civil Service Medal, the highest civil award of the Army, for his efforts as General Counsel of the Department of the Army.

On July 26, 1967, Califano was appointed Special Assistant to the then-President Lyndon B. Johnson. He worked in developing Johnson's legislative program and coordinating its presentation to the Congress. He also worked on a variety of domestic problems.

Califano left this position in early 1969, and began a worldwide tour on a study of the youth and establishment problem under a Ford Foundation grant.

After this study, Califano was a member of two Washington law firms before his appointment as Secretary of HEW.

Califano will be presented with an honorary doctorate of law degree by University President Fr. Theodore Hesburgh at Sunday's ceremonies.

Professor calls war vets 'disaster survivors'

Chicago (AP) - Vietnam War veterans and survivors of catastrophic events share many similarities, says a Purdue University professor who served in Vietnam. "We should begin to view the Vietnam veteran as a disaster survivor," Charles Figley, assistant professor and director of Purdue's Family Research Institute said yesterday. He made his comments in an address to the annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association Here. Figley compared Vietnam veterans to the survivors of a disastrous flood in Buffalo Creek. WV in which 125 persons were killed. "The survivors (of Buffalo Creek) were afflicted with dissociation, schizophrenia, in thinking and decision-making, hallucination and sleep disturbances and nightmares," said Figley, who is also director of Purdue's Consortium on Veteran Studies. He said the same stresses have been observed in combat veterans.

Gas shortage

Robertson said that he hopes stations will be allowed to sell up to 30 percent less fuel than the price of gasoline at the outset, which could be up to 5 cents a gallon.

SMC Seniors receive honors

University officials attribute overcrowding on-campus to a number of factors. Among these factors, a significant increase in the number of students across the country is one major reason. Residence hall occupancy figures from the Housing Office support the claims that more students are electing to live on campus.

Residence hall occupancy figures from the Housing Office support the claims that more students are electing to live on campus. The total number of students who turned in housing contracts in 1974 was 5,552, and in 1978, the number increased to 4,116 while total enrollment decreased by 213.

"The problem doesn't arise from the admission of more students," Mason explained. One of the major reasons for overcrowding is that living off-campus can be a problem, as it is cheaper to live on-campus.

Since housing does not know how many students will request on-campus housing each year, they must be conservative in the construction of dorm space, because if more students in a given year choose to live off-campus, it will result in overcrowding.

Mason noted that except for eight or nine halls, there are no more students living in halls at present than buildings were originally designed to accommodate.

Student receives Danforth

Jackson R. Shaver, a Notre Dame student completing work on a Ph.D. degree, has been awarded a Danforth Graduate Fellowship for advanced study in preparation for a career in college teaching.

Over 3,000 students competed for the 100 fellowships awarded this year. Notre Dame was honored with two, with Xavier Garcia, an undergraduate in the College of Arts and Letters, was previously honored.

Shaver received an undergraduate degree at Southern California College at Costa Mesa and a master's degree at Notre Dame earlier this year. The title of his thesis in the field of theology is "Toward the New American Religious Culture."

Danforth fellowships provide tuition costs, fees and an annual stipend for worthy students. The foundation is dedicated to enhancing the humane aspects of life. The foundation's activities have tradition- ally emphasized the theme of improving the quality of teaching and learning.

Residence hall plans proceed on schedule

by Michael Lewis
Executive News Editor

Plans for a new residence hall are "going very smoothly," according to University Provost Timothy O'Meara. "Everything is on schedule, and if no problems develop we expect the dorm to go up in the very near future," he said yesterday.

The dormitory will probably not be completed, he said, until the fall of 1980, when the money is available. "It is a virtual certainty that the money will be available for one dorm in the near future," O'Meara said.

Each hall will hold 250 students.

The space that is created by the dorm will be used to increase the undergraduate enrollment of women. O'Meara added, however, that it is not certain whether men or women will live in the new structure.

The planned dormitory complex will probably be located between the towers and Memorial Library. The new hall will offer a variety of room options and will not be a high-rise structure like Flanner and Grace halls.

"We've consulted with students and recrutors, and we've learned that it is important to offer a variety of room types in the dorm itself," O'Meara commented.

He said that the administration could either build a large dorm for approximately 500 people or two "mini-dorms."

The second option was chosen, he said, because the plan offers greater intimacy and interaction between students within the dorm. O'Meara added that the University is still seeking a loan from the Department of Housing and Urban Development to help finance the construction. That process should be completed sometime in the month of June, he estimated.

University holds Family Hall activities

Notre Dame Alumni are invited to participate in Family Hall activities to be held on the University campus June 10 to August 4. More than 3,000 persons have been accommodated during the last three summers in the Lewis residence- nal facility.

Former students and their families may tour the campus, attend concerts and lectures or engage in various activities such as swimming, tennis, and golf. Super- slow weekends will be pro- vided for small children and summer sports camps programs are available for older children. Participants must ad- dress tickets to the register for the summer sports camp.

Families may choose to spend evenings together at a week on campus. Fees range from $10 for parents and $3 for two children in an adjoining room to $60 for a family of four over seven nights. Laundry and lim- ited kitchen facilities are avail-
The Crunch of '79
by art bucbwald

'They're not going to tell me I'm wrong.'

President Carter replied, "But, you know, we have to raise our oil prices, because we have to make more money."

The Ayatollah Khomanyi is now back in Qum, oblivious to the fact that he originated the "Gas Crunch of '79." One of the main reasons is that he doesn't own a car.

President Carter then went on the air and said that, becatise of the expected gasoline shortages brought about by a lack of conservation, he was decontrolling the price of oil in order to discourage Americans from wasting it. He promised that any excessive profits the oil companies made from de- control would go to poor people.

The oil companies reacted strongly to this proposal, saying they would rather take the windfall profits and look for more oil which they were certain they could find if the price was right.

President Carter replied, "It's not enough."

Strange enough, this did not resolve the situation.

By this time, the media was playing its usual helpful role in connection to the crisis. Gas stations all over the country sent out mobile crews to fill gas stations that were closed on Sunday.

The public was suddenly thrown into a panic and everybody got in their cars and drove to the nearest pump to fill up their tanks. People who used to be happy with a quarter or half a tank of gas weren't satisfied until they had a full tank.

The price of fuel did not deter people from buying it. The higher it got, the more desperate car owners became to find it. Husbands came home at night and berated their wives if they didn't find a full tank in their cars. Unleaded gas sold at a premium because Detroit had forgotten to tell Houston how many new cars with catalytic converters would be on the road.

Gas station owners discovered that their previous allotments would not last for more than three weeks. Long lines formed at stations and while people waited anxiously to get to the pumps, they burned up more gasoline than the entire Iranian shutdown had cut off.

The Department of Energy was not on fire. It set up a hotline that consumers could call when they thought they were being gouged. Twenty-two gas stations were caught and severely punished.

In the meantime, the DOE announced that major oil companies had overcharged their customers and estimated $1.7 billion. The DOE said that there was nothing criminal about this, but it would be nice if the oil companies gave back the money to their consumers.

This made many Americans mad, and they decided that the oil companies had created the crisis to make money.

They drove onto the highways, rolled down their windows and shouted, "We're damn mad and we're not going to take it any more."

The Ayatollah Khomanyi is now back in Qum, oblivious to the fact that he originated the "Gas Crunch of '79." One of the main reasons is that he doesn't own a car.

A Graduation Speech

Ron Haynes

Each year a distinguished speaker gives a stirring oration to the University of Notre Dame graduating class. The students are supposed to sit properly and in one way. The speaker not only draws standing ovations but in standing ovation. That should be the case this year, as reliable sources and can make more, especially for those who believe the reputation the University has because of sports is a big part of being the best at everything. It must be more, I am not saying that every team wins. But something must be so special that it transcends the conflicts which arise between

T.S. "Bulla Shed."

I've learned what it is to belong to Notre Dame. Dad, a member of the class of 1913, once told me he had never seen me with no television when I was three years old (I didn't sing the fight song throughout my life, and that I was known for it since I was two). But when the TV switched on, the atmosphere making me "shake down the thunder", "I wasn't going to come as well, and I was rather surprised to him when I would apply for the Sugar Bowl game. From that moment, I was a part of this place.

During my first year here, I learned what it is to belong to the Notre Dame student body. I cheered and yelled watching the Sugar Bowl game in 1974, and when we stopped the UCLA 88-game winning streak, I almost cried when Ara left in 1973. When I was a freshman and Michigan State beat us for my first loss as a student, I almost cried. When we beat USC on the way to the National Champions, I never felt better. It was the same thing. We won. It was something for me he thought everyone should read, and I think too. So, especially for those who think that nothing good can ever come from Notre Dame, and also for the Seniors of 1979, there is another view of Number One.

One of the things I've learned is that if you get caught in man's words, you can lose your mind. Living, fighting, and giving a right for Her, She's been by my side. Though feeling rotten, suffering, by the Lady from Lourdes I've done very little for Her, and I've only been a little right. But She never left me, and She takes me Number One.

Top Ten Campus Stories

1. Housing shortage
   A lottery to move a number of juniors off-campus next year was announced by Housing Director Edmund Price as a virtual certainty last November. In the final analysis, no lottery was held because of the number of students who answered Price's requests to move off before the lottery was held. However, prior to the final announcement of no lottery, a number of demonstrations were staged and meetings held with University officials held to protest the action and discuss possible alternatives.

2. Alcohol directive
   When Dean of Students, James Roemer, issued a directive last fall banning the use of alcohol everywhere on campus except private rooms, a furor was raised concerning student rights. A students rights forum was held in Washington Hall, where much discussion but little action resulted. An Ad Hoc committee of the Hall Presidents Council prepared a statement listing issues they believed students were most concerned with. The list was discussed by the Campus Life Council, however when the directive was not stringently enforced the issue died.

3. Abolition of parietals
   After the disappointment of the students rights issue, residents of Carroll Hall decided to take matters into their own hands by abolishing parietals in their residence. In a somewhat anathetic response, other halls agreed to join the effort. What resulted was a proposal by Judicial Coordinator Jayne Rizzo to reduce the parietals violation to a hall offense. In a final appeal to University President Fr. Theodore Hesburgh, the proposal was rejected.

4. Record Store
   After a denial from Vice-president for Student Affairs, Fr. John Van Wolvlear, to open a student run record store in LaFortune Student Center, Student Union held a record sale which handled over $10,000 worth of business. Following the tremendous response, Student Union director Bill Roche presented another proposal, calling for a non-inventory operation which continually takes and fills orders. The new record store is scheduled to begin operation next fall.

5. Fires
   A series of five fires on the Notre Dame campus over October break cost the University thousands of dollars and resulted in the resignation of two ND Security officers who reported four of the five fires. The blazes claimed the boat house and other old buildings, none of which were occupied. The University ran a series of public relations stunts, one of which was to的颜色 the name of the alleged suspects. The two officers who resigned did not take the exams. No charges were pressed in the incidents.

6. Camarda shooting
   Notre Dame senior Joseph Camarda was shot and severely wounded on Monday, Dec. 11, at his Corby Street residence. He was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital for treatment of internal injuries, where he remained for several weeks before returning to his home in Virginia. A suspect was apprehended in the shooting, but the incident fitted student's protests about a housing lottery.

7. Nestles boycott
   On Tuesday, Feb 27, the Notre Dame student body voted to boycott Nestles and its subsidiaries' products to protest alleged unethical marketing practices by Nestles, S.A. in underdeveloped countries. The boycott is the result of a year-long effort by the ND/SMC World Hunger Coalition, which sponsored the boycott. The Coalition published articles against the company and invited Nestles to come and make the charges in forums and in print. Approximately 72 percent of the student body voted in favor of the boycott.

8. Title IX
   Three hundred National Collegiate Athletic Association Schools have hired a Washington lobbying firm to fight the regulations of Title IX. The action follows the release of an interpretation of Title IX by Joseph Califano, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare. Title IX was contained in an educational amendment which was issued in 1972.

9. Danehy case
   In ruling against Notre Dame professor James Danehy, Starke County Circuit Court Judge Marvin McLaughlin decided that the University "has a uniform policy for ending its contracts but has no uniform policy regarding retirement." Danehy had filed suit against the University charging that Notre Dame has an arbitrary policy regarding retirement. At the end of the semester, Danehy had not, yet made a decision concerning possible appeal of the decision.

10. Groundskeepers
   On Oct. 10, 1977, 21 groundskeepers attempted to unionize with Teamsters Local 364. The University announced its intentions to fire the groundskeepers. University action resulted in charges of unfair labor practices and a hearing before the National Labor Relations Board. During the 17 month debate, two additional charges were levied against the University. Finally the NLRB ruled to dismiss the Teamsters' petition to represent the groundskeepers as a separate bargaining unit.

Board allocates funds for Freshmen orientation

by Rosemary Mills
Editor-in-Chief

The Board of Commissioners met on May 7 to review An Tostal and discuss appropriations of funds requested by the Off-Campus Committee and the Freshman Orientation Committee.

A budget of $9,094 was approved for the Freshman and Transfer Orientation Committees. The committee's total budget equals $27,934 with Student Activities contributing $15,000 of these funds. An additional $150 was appropriated for the cost of a picnic for transfer students.

The funds were recapitulated by the Freshman and Transfer Orientation programs. Each year the committees sponsor dances and picnics for the new students.

In addition, the Freshman Committee is responsible for the planning of Carney, the orientation programs. Each year the committees sponsor dances and picnics for the new students.

The committee's budget is allocated to pay for printing and mailing orientation guides and letters of information for incoming freshmen.

The Board also approved a request for funds totaling $200 from the Off-Campus Council. The Council plans to use these funds to print a handbook for off-campus students.

In reviewing the 1979 An Tostal, the Board found that the committee had spent $2,000 over their budget. An Tostal chairman Paul Callahan attributed the deficit to losses incurred by the carnival. On two nights, the carnival, an important source of income during the 1978 An Tostal, was forced to close due to inclement weather.

In other business, the Board nominated members of the faculty and staff to be placed on the Judicial Review Board.

The six faculty nominees are Angela R. Chambrei (Freshman Year of Studies), Kenneth E. Goodpaster (Philosophy), Richard J. Hunter (Business Admin.

ND Commencement info

INFORMATION CENTER: The Bus Shelter will be staffed to serve as an Information Center from 5 pm to 9 pm, Friday May 18, from 8 am to 9 pm on Saturday, May 19; from 8 am to 5 pm on Sunday, May 20. General information, location of dormitories, housing directory, lost and found, maps, copies of the Commencement Programs, as well as additional copies of the General Program will be available.

ROOM INFORMATION SERVICE FOR CAMPUS RESIDENTS: This is located in the Center for Continuing Education. It will be open during the same hours as the Information Center. Telephone number is 283-7640.

OFF-CAMPUS BUS SERVICES: Buses leave for downtown every 30 minutes from the circle at the library and the circle at the main entrance to the campus. More detailed information will be available at the Information Center at the Bus Shelter.

PARKING: If you are going to be a resident on campus during the Commencement weekend, we request that you use the parking lots designated below. Because of the increase in the number of vehicles, our parking facilities are very limited near the dormitories. We ask that you unload your vehicle and move it to one of the perimeter lots which are north of Panner and Grace Halls, known as St. Pater Center parking lot, south of the Engineering Building, east of Memorial Library, south of the Athletic and Recreation Center; and the entire area around the Notre Dame stadium.

There is also parking east of the Center for Continuing Education and the large field south of the University Club.

The solar parking area, known as the Green Field, may be entered at the intersection of Notre Dame avenue and Angela Boulevard.

Survey ranks

Hesburgh first

University President Fr. Theodore M. Hesburgh was ranked the most influential person in religion and the second most influential in education in the U.S. News and World Report's sixth annual survey of the nation's leadership.

Hesburgh, in his 27th year as president of Notre Dame, headed a ranking of influential persons in the field of religion that included Billy Graham, William P. Thompson, head of the national Council of Churches, Terence Cardinal Cooke of New York City, and University of Chicago Divinity Professor Martin Marty. Hesburgh was ranked second to Graham in last year's survey.

Thompson, on the other hand, was ranked third in religious circles. He is well known for his work in education and the arts.

six seconds in one freshman game, and the reason he didn't play wasn't because he was hurt. That's very unusual when you have a guy on a full scholarship and don't play him. It has to be other reasons, so I tried to shut my mind completely to what anyone had done before and start fresh, and I am glad I did, because we ended up playing some kids like Joe that, at that point, hadn't given any indication of fitting in future plans.

A. - Do you think ND changed you at all?

A. - Only for the better. Yes, I think it's made a better man out of me, I hope it has. My associations with the players and coaches and the student body have been great.

Much has been said about me being a sensitive person, and I really don't think in all fairness that I'm that sensitive about myself. I'm very sensitive to other people's feelings. I have always been sensitive as a coach, but this is that first time as a coach that I've ever had anything to do with minority groups. As an Irish Catholic, I had always been the minority. When I became coach I started working with other minorities. I was always sensitive as a coach to black players, much more than people realize. In 1958 they wouldn't feed our black players after a game with Texas A&M, and I wasn't aware of this, and I sat on the bus and cried. Then a great thing happened, our white players came out without eating.

I think since being here at Notre Dame I've become more socially conscious of a lot of things. I'm reevaluating all the things that I was taught. I don't know if it wouldn't have been better when I was in school if we were taught less about diagramming sentences and more about "Love Thy Neighbor," which I never seemed to taught enough. Today I look back and feel I wasn't taught enough about social awareness.

Q. - Do you like the most about Notre Dame?

A. - It is very difficult to put one thing ahead of another. I don't want to leave. I would feel a very deep, deep loss if I had to leave the campus or not coach this team next year. It would be a real emptiness. I like to walk across campus and speak to kids. They're really proud of the team and this school. I talk to seniors who thank me and I remind them there's been some disappointments, and they say I shouldn't remember them, and maybe they are right. That type of interaction, I don't think it exists on many other campuses. It's hard to describe all these little things you find here you would not find on a campus of 45,000.

Q. - Do you feel more secure and relaxed now, and has there been a change in your personality?

A. - I don't notice it, but it must be that I'm more relaxed. When that many people notice, it must be true. People tell me I'm more like I used to be before Green Bay. The change occurred without me noticing it. I became very guarded about what I said because a lot of what I said was misunderstood, not necessarily misquoted. I answered questions slowly, made friends slower. I think that carried over to here. Working with these kids in this situation allowed me to return to normal. I didn't know I was going through this, but looking back it becomes obvious.

I was always very serious about my job and always very intense. I'm a little bit of a worry-wart, but only because I see a team like Penn State lose a game because they have twelve guys on the field. I see a team lose a game on a fumble. Part of being an intense person is being a fundamentalist, so that hasn't changed, but I had a guard up a period of years, and I guess I dropped it.

Q. - Notre Dame's student body is often referred to as the best in the world. But vocal fans can yell when things go good or bad. Have the fans ever disappointed you?

A. - No, I don't think so. Fans are a little like newspaper people. I can like a newspaper guy even though I don't like what he writes. I still can respect that person and be friends, and fans are the same way. I can still love them and like them and respect them even though they don't always react the way you'd like them to.

I think kids are changing a little, but I don't think the spirit is changing. When we played Tennessee and took the field, it seemed like they were the home team in our stadium, but we eventually got the support we needed when the game started.

Q. - Someone once said Notre Dame fans are spoiled. Notre Dame fans range from the subway alumni to students on campus. How do you react to that statement?

A. - I think the fans in Hoboken, New Jersey, is spoiled but the ones on campus recognize that our program is changing. Our record is improved and that is going to effect your won and lost record. The subway fans don't know that we recruit with eight coaches, while most schools work around the rules and recruit with ten. That effects your won and lost record. All of this is recognized by the Administration and permeates to the student body, but the fans in Hoboken don't know all that.

The people here see that the kids are overachieving at times and achieving at other times.

season," said Devine. "But we'll really be tested those first three weeks.

By playing Michigan, Michigan, we'll be at a disadvantage. They open a week earlier than we do, so they won't only have their 29 allotted pre-season practices, but they'll have one more week of practice - just one actual game of experience.

"We open with probably the best two schools in the Big Ten," adds Devine. "Both would like to think we'll be ready for the start of those teams.

Irish fans would like to think the same.

Naples. Our record against top competition proves we are human here. We've lost and we've lost some big games and lost by big scores. All of you and I don't think our fans could be any better after being accustomed to such success.

"Would you say that the adjustment to Notre Dame has been tough for you?"

A.- Yes, the early part was. That's the time I would sometimes rather forget. It's hard to explain to people what that first year was like, because you can't really understand if you weren't there.

I haven't been here long enough to say that any particular game we played bothered me. I don't bear fan reaction often because I am so darn low. I remember saying after playing a poor game in Green Bay that if I was Jim I would have booed louder. Sometimes I react to fan criticism as I did the season we finished 5-6-1. But I like it to come for a legitimate reason.

Irish gridders look strong in annual Blue-Gold game

by Paul Madaney
Assistant Sports Editor

While most Notre Dame spring football games severely lack the one element that might make them entertaining, this spring's Blue-Gold game took a change from the norm, as the 15-70 cheers overwhelmed theخص.

But more importantly to Irish coaches, who witnessed the May 5th contest featured good hitting, good execution and high-quality all-around performances—enough to temporarily ease the most severe Irish critics.

"I don't think that in my 20 years of coaching I have seen such intensity and hitting in a spring game," smiled Irish coach Dan Devine after the Green squad had recorded a 30-0 victory over the White team in the 49th annual affair.

"The final score doesn't indicate the effort these kids put all the way through the final quarter," Devine added. "I felt that we would have a better football team than people expect in the fall—and the play today did nothing to change that feeling."

Spring practice was especially vital this year, according to the coaches, since 12 positions had to be filled that were vacated by 12 graduated seniors, plus the seven-ranked squad which closed the season by edging Purdue and Michigan State, 34-34, in the Cotton Bowl.

The first three Irish options on this fall demand that Devine's squad be at top form come the fall-and the play today did nothing to change that feeling.

"We have two superb quarterbacks in Lisch and Koegel—and two superb wide receivers (Greg) Knafelc have both proven they can play, noted Devine.

"Rusty still has the edge in experience, which I think really helps him. But we still wait until next fall to see what development Devine will also have to wait until fall to see what develops with backfield duo of Dan and Burke. The senior from Phoenix, AZ., suffered a knee injury which required surgery three days ago."

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Major league baseball clubs have won substantial salary increases, in-season vacations and a bonus in per diem and travel expenses which should end their spring stoppage as early as Saturday, the Associated Press learned Wednesday.

The 52 umpires, who have refused to work since before spring training, will meet here Friday to announce an agreement expected to be signed Thursday in New York by their representative, Ritchie Phillips, is scheduled to meet with American League President Lee MacPhail and National League President Club Fee- ney.

A source told The Associated Press the umpires have been directed to bring their equipment and their travel baggage here for the Friday meeting when they will go over the settlement.

It is expected they will receive their first assignments of the season, and perhaps be on the field the next day.

Jim Evans, and American League umpire, said in Beaumont, Texas, that he and his colleagues had been summoned to the Friday meeting at Philadelphia. Ron Luciano of the American League, president of the Major Leagues Umpires devine reflects on four years at ND

Editor's note—Included in this story are opinions and comments of the players, who are the first football players ever interviewed by Dan Devine as Notre Dame head coach. This interview appeared with Sports Editor Emeritus Ray Bionic in the May 3, 1978 edition of the South Bend Tribune.

Q. Does the four-year mark in a college coach's career mean anything special since all the players on the team have been recruited by you?

A. (Ed)Devine: Not particularly, no, because I came in with a talented bunch already here. Fred Akers and Lou Holtz had great successes in their first year, but they got away fast. I don't think I'll ever be a good coach, I was told by Ed Bauer. 'I didn't recruit Ed,' but I don't think you could be a closer to a player, and we still are. I don't see Ed often, but there's a mutual respect.

So normally no, but in this case, yes, because of the tremendous experience these kids have gone through four years and I think they've prepared for life because they've done a lot of ups and downs. When they see some of them contributed to the two comebacks against North Carolina and Air Force, which were back to back. Quite a number of them started as freshmen, only seventeen to eighteen years old. Because of the tremendous experience this group of kids has been exposed to, I think there's a little bit of significance in the idea that they are going out with the greatest comeback in Notre Dame history. And I think they deserve it because of the four years of effort they put in.

Q. Has coaching at Notre Dame been pretty much what you expected?

A. I'd say no, but the next question you would ask is why hasn't it been? It hasn't been exactly what I expected, but in some respects it has. I didn't expect some of the problems that came up in my first year primarily, and I think I would relate it to a little bit to my disappointment at Green Bay.

When I talk about the '75 team and I say 'some of them,' I mean some of them. The first squad meeting I had I was very disappointed with the appearance of some of the players.

Some whose names were familiar showed up with holes in their jeans. I expected a little more pride than that from some of them. Ed Bauer would show up dressed fine, but I was disappointed in some of the films I looked at. When I talk to Green Bay, I looked at one of their last films up there, and they've been badly by the Chicago Bears, just an average ball club. I looked at the film and didn't believe what I saw. Some very old football players quit. I thought they had more pride than what they showed me. At Green Bay, nobody would give me the ball to me and it was a little bit that way that I looked at the film of the Southern Cal game in 1974. We got the most out of the very hard, and again I was a little bit shocked.

I was a little surprised that some of them blamed the coaches for their inability to make the team, but that's just completely normal for any football player to do. Since the introduction of the game, nobody ever went off to college and didn't make it. Because they weren't good enough. Thous­and and thousands of high school football players have gone off to college and not made it, but it's always been that the coach didn't use them right or they got hurt and for some reason never made it back.

In my approach to the squad, I tried to in my own mind start from scratch. If I hadn't, Lou Holtz probably would not have been as successful as he was, because I gave him for first string, because he certainly wasn't one of the players that the coaches I retained recommended highly. He only played second half, and some of the guys didn't play very well or very hard, and again I was a little bit shocked."

Golfers await word on NCAA bid

by Bill McCormick
The Notre Dame golf team accumulated some impressive figures during their 1979 campaign. A strong finish at the Spartan Invitational Tournament in East Lansing on May 5 helped the Irish close with a 392 win, 30 losses and three, a 697 winning percentage for the season.

It should be pointed out that a "win" in golf signifies that a team finishes ahead of another team in a particular tournament. If a team comes in first place in a ten team tourney, that team is credited with nine wins.

It is important to note that Notre Dame achieved their excellent record against the best competition in the Midwest (Big Ten and Mid-American schools and the major independents) on some of the toughest courses in the country. The Irish ended their season with a third place finish at the twenty-five team Spartan Invitational Tournament.
