Moscow Olympic games may be cancelled, says IOC

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) - The Olympic Games in Moscow could be cancelled if the United States and Canada vote to boycott the July games, the IOC's executive committee said Saturday in a meeting at Colorado Springs to discuss the boycott.

The 82-year-old Roby, who is to retire from the committee this year, said he believed now that an effective boycott will emerge. The Australian Olympic Committee will vote on the matter next month.

Moscow Olympic games have been cool to a boycott, but has not yet made a decision. The 50 nations slated to go to Moscow will go along with the boycott if the United States can get enough of them to sign on.

The new Zealand government has announced it is against a boycott of the games to be canceled, Roby said.

At the urging of the Carter administration, the U.S. Olympic Committee voted Saturday in a meeting at Colorado Springs to boycott the July games. The boycott is a protest against the Soviet military presence in Afghanistan.

The Carter Administration has predicted that 50 of the 142 nations slated to go to Moscow will go along with the boycott. The United States has decided to go to Moscow, France generally has been cool to a boycott, but has not yet made a decision.

West Germany will decide May 15. The weekend, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt said that country's Olympic Committee should vote against going if Soviet troops were not out of Afghanistan by late next month.

In Australia, Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser said yesterday, "I believe now that an effective boycott will emerge."

The Australian Olympic Committee will vote on the matter next month.

The New Zealand government has announced it is against a boycott. In Canada, the government is to decide in two weeks whether to send a team to the games.

The 82-year-old Roby, who is to retire from the committee this summer, said he doubted any cancellation decision would be made by the IOC Executive Committee at a meeting in Caunanne, Switzerland, April 21-23.

"That's only a little more than a week away," said Roby. "The general session will meet a week before the Games, so there will be time to act."

54 die as Brazilian jetliner crashes during severe storm

FLORIANOPOLIS, Brazil (AP) - A Brazilian jetliner approaching this island-city in a rainstorm crashed and exploded in flames, killing 54 of the persons aboard, authorities reported yesterday. They said four passengers survived. The Transbrasil Airlines Boeing 727 was carrying 50 passengers and eight crew members, all Brazilians, when it crashed on this island off the southern Brazilian coast Saturday night, the airline said. Rescuers operations were called off at dusk yesterday, and authorities said "There are no more survivors up there."

State troopers leave town as racial problems subside

WRIGHTSVILLE, Ga. (AP) - Most state troopers left the downtown area of this racially divided town yesterday as quiet returned after civil rights and white power demonstrators dispersed. But local blacks vowed to continue their struggle against a powerful county sheriff.

The march is not over. The march is just begun," said John Martin, local president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. "On Tuesday, we're going to march to the sheriff's office and suggest he come out and talk."

Nearly 200 protest marchers, most of them black, marched to the downtown courthouse Saturday in protest of alleged economic discrimination and other grievances that many say Johnson County blacks blame on Sheriff Roland Ataway.

Influx of U.S. physicians forseen by the year 1990

WASHINGTON (AP) - The number of physicians in the United States is growing at such a rapid rate that the nation may have more doctors by 1990 than it needs, a newly released government report asserted yesterday. In a report to President Carter and Congress, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare predicted that physician requirements for the century's final decade will range between 553,000 and 596,000. The number of doctors in 1990 "could bring about an unprecedented ability to balance supply and demand for health services," the report said.

Role of religion

Business symposium begins today

by Michael Maeder
Staff Reporter

Political activists, future business executives and religious individuuals interested in good dehares should attend the "Christian Vision and the Modern Business Corporation" symposium beginning today at 2 p.m. in the main Auditorium of the Center for Continuing Education. Fifteen speakers will discuss the role of businessmen in a religious society.

The speakers will consist of businessmen and professionals from nationally recognized universites as well as Notre Dame faculty members. The speakers have a wide variety of backgrounds including management, philosophy, government, law, and theology.

Some of the more interesting sessions should be held by Dr. Burton Leiser, speaking on Human and Religious Values and the Corporation, and by Catherine Cleary, a businesswoman speaking on Understanding the Corporation.

Other speakers include Dr. Denis Goulet, a Notre Dame faculty member speaking on the Future Role of the Corporation and writer Michael Novak discussing Dimensions of the Challenge.

Leiser is presently a professor of philosophy at Drake University. From 1969-72 Leiser was an associate professor of Judaic Studies and Philosophy at Concordia University in Montreal and much of his work has dealt with Judaism.

Cleary, called by some the highest ranking businesswoman in the country, is presently an adjunct business professor at the University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee. At the symposium, Cleary will respond to the ability of the corporation to reform and change itself, using the role of women in business as an example.

Rebels behead son of ex-president

By the Associated Press

The rebels who seized power in Liberia beheaded the son of assassinated President William R. Tolbert Jr. and killed two of Tolbert's senior aides, including his son-in-law, Liberian diplomatic sources said yesterday.

The West African nation's new leader, an obscure 28-year-old army master sergeant named Samuel R. Doe, appointed a cabinet of soldiers and civilians, including the leader of Liberia's banned leftist opposition party.

Doe quickly set up a six-member military tribunal to prosecute an unspecified number of senior officials of the Tolbert government on charges of "ripped corruption and gross violation of human rights," said the state-run Liberian radio, monitored in London.

The new head of state declared Sunday that "everything is under control" and urged Liberians to go about their normal businesses, the radio announced.

Liberia, a country of 1.7 million people founded in 1847 by freed American slaves, has long maintained close ties with the United States. The State Department said Saturday that Washington would continue normal diplomatic relations with the new regime.

Saturday's early-morning coup came as a surprise to most of the world, but British legislator Steve Stone, who is owed the country before the coup, sold reporters he had "seen the army were all over the place." A nation member reported members I spoke to hinted things were not well.

Doe and his soldier followers, the backing of army generals, stormed the presidential palace in the capital city of Monrovia at 2 a.m., and bodyguard were killed in an exchange of gunfire in the city hours after the coup Saturday, but it could not be determined whether any resistance continued. The coup leaders ordered a dusk-to-dawn curfew, closed the airport and all borders, and blockaded streets in the capital.

The slain president's wife, Victoria, and Liberian Chief Justice James A. Pierre were among those reported in detention.

Tolbert had been president since 1971, carrying on a 100-year tradition of one-party rule in the capital.

"Every thing was not well." said the state-run radio.

"I am apprehensive about returning to Monrovia. I think I'd have to think twice about it. I think life is too important to put at risk with it. I want to make sure I get clearance from the present government," Warner, a Methodist bishop, was in Indianapolis for the United Methodist Church General Conference of the United Methodist Church which begins tomorrow. He said in a telephone interview with the Associated Press that he recognizes "the fact of a new regime in Liberia." and would want assurances of his safety before returning to Monrovia.

"I want to appeal to my fellow countrymen to spare the lives of those now up for execution," he said. "Those who are charged with any crimes should be brought to justice, and the courts can decide what the penalty should be." Warner said he would continue his visit in the United States abroad.

"I am apprehensive about returning to Monrovia. I think I'd have to think twice about it. I think life is too important to put at risk with it. I want to make sure I get clearance from the present government," he said.

In an earlier telephone interview with the AP on Sunday, from Nashville, Ind., where he attended another meeting of Methodist Bishops, Warner said his plans in this country were unchanged.

"I will follow through on the assignment to which I have committed. I do plan to return home. My original plans were to return home in May. Now I don't know. I won't be able to make any telephone call because I can't get through."

Militiamen clash with UN troops

TELEVISION - Israel (AP)- U.N. peacekeeping troops went on full alert in southern Lebanon yesterday after a bloody clash with Christian militiamen in a disputed village and a “havoc” bombardment of U.N. headquarters, U.N. officials reported.

Israel declared it had withdraw the last of its soldiers from southern Lebanon. A spokesman for the military command said, “The forces have completed their tasks and have left the area of south Lebanon.”

The troops, estimated by U.N. spokesmen to total about 350, first entered Wednesday in retaliation for a Palestinian guerrilla attack on an Israeli border settlement in which three Israelis and five raiders were killed. But Israeli television said the number of troops was considerably lower.

Top officers from the U.N. force, from the Lebanese Christian militia and from Israel, which backs the militiamen, met at the northern Israeli town of Naasrith in an attempt to defuse the explosive situation. No new talks were given after the meeting, but Israeli television reported the commanders agreed to confer again later in the week.

In New York, members of the U.N. Security Council met at Lebanon’s request. Most of the hour-long session was behind closed doors, but it was opened to the public to hear Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim’s report.

Waldheim warned the Leba­nese militia-men had fired first on the U.N. troops. His report said the U.N. force had been subjected to “extreme difficulties and dangers” and had “exercised maximum restraint.”

“However, soldiers cannot be expected indefinitely to put up with harassment, abuse and violence in carrying out the duties entrusted to them by the Security Council of the United Nations,” the report said.

The Israelis and Lebanese Christians countered the U.N. peacekeepers, supposedly a buffer between Palestinian guerrillas and the Israeli border, had failed to stop guerrilla infiltration.

Saturday’s U.N. militia clash occurred at Tiri, a U.N. controlled village five miles north of the Israeli border where Christian militia leader Maj. Saad Haddad has been trying to station some of his irregulars.

In Moscow, Meanwhile, the Soviet news agency Tass bitterly denounced the Carter administration and the USOC.

“To work its will, the White House acted in the spirit of the worst era of McCarthyism,” Tass said.

Athletes and sports officials who favored going to Moscow were “openly accused of betraying national interests,” Tass said.

In Lausanne, Lord Killanin, President of the IOC, said in a brief statement Sunday that the executive committee would “review the situation” at its meeting next week.

Anita DeFrantz of Princeton, N.J., a rower who has acted as spokeswoman for the U.S. athletes since Carter called for the boycott in January, said some athletes still were considering a lawsuit against the USOC for preventing them from competing in Moscow.

Vogt to speak on Holocaust

by Mary Fran Callahan Senior Staff Reporter

Dr. Hannah Vogt, a political scientist who resides in West Germany, will open this year’s ISO festival with her lecture tonight entitled “The Holocaust and Modern German Democracy.” Vogt authored the book The Burden of Guilt which generated controversy when it was released in 1960.

Although she is a Christian, Vogt took a stand against the Holocaust when she saw her Jewish friends undergoing persecution. German authorities then placed her in “protective custody” at Moringen, a Nazi concentration camp.

After convincing authorities that she wanted to complete her studies she was released from Moringen and went on to earn a doctorate in political science.

A reminiscence of Vogt’s life was the rapprochement as the first director of West Germany’s voluntary welfare program. After resigning that job, Vogt’s next goal was to educate German children about the Holocaust in an effort to teach them how German “democracy” failed. Vogt then spent time in England studying the democratic system.

Mark Pasquerilla, ISO chairman, explained that Holocaust education has always been an awkward issue in Germany.

“You can imagine what it would be like if a student’s father was a Nazi,” he said. Pasquerilla cited a letter in her book’s introduction which explained Vogt’s philosophy. A German high school student disturbed by the horror wrote to a friend about how emotionally affected he was when he heard the reciting of Hitler’s speeches. The intensity of the letter indicates how ashamed the student was of this part of his heritage.

Also in the letter, Vogt furthers her view of the importance of the Holocaust by exposing the student’s feelings of frustration at not being able to overlook history.

...Earth Week

There will be an “Irish Evening” presented by a group of graduate students on Thursday in the Rathskeller at 7:30 p.m. The presentation will include a folk-dancing extravaganza and song.

“If a student graduates from here and doesn’t have an international perspective, he’ll be a dinosaur. That person is extremely Parochial,” ISO chairman commented. He explained that the primary goal of the week’s festivities is to enlighten students of international issues which are emerging in the news.

“The sale will include handicrafts from a variety of Third World nations including Mexico, the Philippines, and African countries,” Macia stated.

“The products were obtained directly from the producers so students can expect some real bargains at the sale,” Macia continued. The hours for the marketplace are from noon to 3 p.m.

Much of the funding for the Third World Concern week will be offset by the One-Earth Festival, which will run from today through Thursday in the main lounge of LaFortune.

The conference will culminate with an International Festival on Saturday in Washington Hall. The festival will feature singing, dancing and acting by both international and American students.

“Following the show there will be a wine and cheese reception in the Rathskeller where entertainment will be provided by a group of Puerto Rican and Cuban students,” Macia said.

The goal of the conference is to create an awareness of the needs and problems of developing countries, “a number of students here have a very narrow cultural perspective,” Macia commented. According to Macia, the conference will also aid in the cultural development and adaption of the international students. “The activities facilitate the participation of the international students in the social aspect of the American culture,” he said.

According to Houck, the conference will be attended by corporate executives, representatives of organized religions, activists, reporters of widely-distributed newspapers and professors from leading universities. All local residents are invited to attend.

The goal of the symposium is to “come up with an agenda of issues or concerns that will come from the religious side,” Houck said. The corporation is then expected to respond affirmatively to the concerns but warns “not to expect perfection, Houck continued. Insure Houck listed as relevant include the humanization of work, the woman’s role in business and an ethical code of conduct in the third world.

Five speakers will give talks on Understanding the Corporation beginning at 2 p.m. today. Three of the speakers, Wm. Sexton, Edward Tubalac, and Fr. John Donahoe, are Notre Dame faculty members. S. Pavlick, a member of the University of Texas at Dallas and Clearay will be the other two featured speakers.

The symposium will end on Wednesday with three talks which will speculate on the future role of the corporation. Richard Fells, a professor of Business at Columbia University will argue that organized religious communities will grow together to stop the centralized state in business. Charles and Kenneth Janman, both of the Economics department at Dartmouth will discuss economic development and the need for brotherhood between business and the religious.

Houck does not know if the conference members will be ready to set in writing what they have learned in the symposium. However, they hope to breed a spirit of ‘collaboration and goodwill between religion and business.” —o— summarized O'Sullivan changed the format in 1989 for the Irish to compete at the lowest competitive average. It was only through a bit of luck that the Notre Dame team was able to play at this exclusion.

Upon their return from the spring break trip to Florida, the Irish golf team made its annual trip to South Bend. According to the Observer's Sports Editor, O'Sullivan said, "his reactions to this first event of the season, O'Sullivan said, "will be a major stroke toward defining and developing the individual skills and their self-confidence in golf."

In a little more than a week, the Irish golfers reeled it up on seven of Florida's finest courses (Mel Reise, Bimloke, Fontainebleau, Indian Creek, Coral Ridge, Key Biscayne, and Jupiter Hills). The Jupiter Hills course, which many golf experts rank in the top 25 courses in the country, provided the most challenging test. It was played through a bit of luck that the Notre Dame team was able to play at this exclusion.

The golf team made its annual trip to Florida over spring break, but the excursion was quite different than those of past years. During his first six years as head golf coach, O'Sullivan had taken his teams down to Florida to play in tournaments with other schools. But in this (his 7th) season, O'Sullivan changed the format of the trip.

The purpose of this year's trip was to play in more challenging golf courses we normally would have faced. O'Sullivan explains, "In golf the course is the real opponent. So I felt it was only through a bit of luck that the Notre Dame team was able to play at this exclusion."

The minor injuries aside, head coach Dan Devine was all smiles after sending his squad through six practices Saturday afternoon..."And you better be there--with bells on!" he warned.

For Bookstore Basketball, that is. You see, one of the unwritten rules of this tournament is that you shouldn't play when the sun is shining. The rain and the cold and the puddles and the manhole on the wrong wing of Bookstore Court Turn 9, turn regular men into ironmen and the obstacles assure that only the best survive.

Bookstore's here 'Weather' you like it or not Norte Dame... The temperature was 35 degrees. "Sweetpants!! Who wears sweetpants to Play Bookstore?"

No raincoats either although the Butcher Brothers could have used them in an octagonal game played last year. It was the longest game in recent tournament history, lasting two hours and 35 minutes, and it was played in a thunderstorm that made everyone playing or watching the game wonder what the hell they were doing playing or watching, or anything short of building an ark.

But everyone played and everyone stayed. "That umbrella's in my face again!"

First there was last year's final game between the Butcher Brothers and the Chumps. The Butchers had lost Dave Huffman to an injury, and the Chumps were without Bill Hanlik because of some NCAA idiocy. The two survivors fought tooth and nail to the last Chumps bucket that gave capin Tom 'Old Guy' Sudkamp his first Bookstore title after five attempts. Afterwards Sudkamp was asked if the weather, a constant flood of cold, bone-chilling rain, made any difference.

"The weather?" he smiled mischievously, pushing an umbrella out of his face. "The weather was never better!"

For Bookstore Basketball, that is.
