Police workers reach agreement

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Nine coal miners in southwest Poland reached a tentative agreement last night with government negotiators, virtually ending the widespread labor disputes that had paralyzed Poland, the official Polish news agency PAP reported.

Shipyards, factories and transportation systems had run into a virtual standstill in Poland a few days a day after the historic settlements of the coal miners on the first day of the dispute. The government also freed nearly all political prisoners.

The coal miners reportedly were demanding improved safety conditions, and PAP, shortly before it announced the tentative agreement, reported eight miners killed and 18 injured at a mine near the Upper Silesian city of Katowice. That mine was among many that had not been struck.

PAP said loaded wagons in an underwater shaft went out of control, "devastating the workplace where the miners were working."

Iran to discuss hostages

Iran's prime minister will discuss publicly request for U.S. Secretary of State Edmunds. Muskie for the early and safe release of the 72 American hostages, the Iranian news agency Pars said yesterday as Parliament began discussing its response to a similar request by U.S. congressmen.

Pars said a letter from Muskie to Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai was delivered the Swiss charge d'affaires in Tehran yesterday and added that the prime minister would "discuss the letter at his next public interview." It did not say when that would be.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Sondra McCarty said Muskie sent the message Rajai "on the occasion of the new prime minister's appointment, calling his attention to the hostage issue and urging the hostages' early and safe release."

Other State Department sources said the Muskie letter also congratulated Rajai on his appointment and wished him well in selecting his Cabinet.

The Swiss Embassy in Tehran handed the Muskie letter to Rajai with the Iranian revolutionary regime's President Carter broke diplomatic relations with Iran in April. Yesterday was the hostages' 363rd day in captivity.

Iran's Parliament took up a draft response to a letter written in July by about 200 U.S. congressmen appealing "fervently" for the hostages' release.

City attorney prepares anti-Corby's petition

The South Bend City Attorney's office is preparing a petition residents opposing the renewal of Corby's Tavern's liquor license. If the drive is successful, it could result in the revocation of the license.

Assistant City Attorney James Masters announced during hearings before the Indiana Alcoholic Beverage Commission that his office was in the process of gathering signatures of registered voters residing in the same precinct where Corby's is located who oppose renewal of Corby's liquor license.

Under Indiana law, if a bar is convicted of a violation of liquor laws and if 66 percent of the registered voters residing in the same precinct in which the bar is located "demonstrate against" the license held by the bar, the ABC must revoke the license.

Corby's bartender was convicted last spring of distributing alcohol to minors; therefore, in the case of Corby's the law applies.

"At last count we had over half the signatures we need," Masters said Monday. "I don't think we'll have any problems getting the rest."

According to Masters, if the proper number of signatures gathered and verified, the Commission has no recourse but to revoke the license. However, he also has some doubts whether or not the Commission will act on the petition. "We have considered what we would do if the state were to face with that petition and did not respond (continued on page 5)
Contract talks between representatives of actors and the film and TV industry resumed this morning, following a 16-hour recess, as the strike became the longest one in the Screen Actors Guild's history. There was no indication of progress.

As the strike entered its 43rd day, no one would say whether the negotiations were any closer to a settlement. The strike began July 21.

In the current strike, actors had asked for 6 percent of the gross revenue on pay TV, cable, video tapes, and videocassette rentals and sales. They were asking for a $10,000 advance per actor. Producers had countered with an offer of 2.5 percent on pay TV dollars, comedies and variety shows, and 2 percent on talk and game shows after the programs had run for two years on pay TV or sold 100,000 cassettes or discs.

For Senate seats

Republicans shell out big bucks

Republicans are spending millions of dollars for the sake of breaking the generation-long Democratic control of the U. S. Senate. With 24 Democratic seats at stake in November, it could happen, but GOP strategists quietly are pinning most of their hopes on 1982.

Democrats, in the majority since 1954, say the conservative challenge is backfiring and predict Senate Democrats will hold or increase their 59-41 margin.

"Just by virtue of the numbers, we are going into an uphill fight," says Sen. Wendell Ford of Kentucky, chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee. "But it is a vote situation."

Without doubt, the numbers provide the GOP with a dramatic opportunity. Of the 34 seats up in the Nov. 4 election, 24 are held by Democrats.

Sen. John Heinz of Pennsylvania, chairman of the National Republican Senatorial Committee, says the GOP could pick up the nine or 10 seats they need for control, but concede a gain of three to six is "most probable."

"I will bet them that," says Ford.

Regardless of what happens in November, says Heinz, "almost any political bookie will give you even odds that Republicans will be in the Senate majority by 1982.

Ford conceded the Republicans will be in striking distance of control in 1982 if they make gains this year, but both he and Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va., said they don't expect such gains.

"I think we are going to pick up some seats that will offset any losses that might occur," Byrd said.

The Republican committee is giving $3.5 million directly to candidates, putting up another $1.5 million indirect support and pumping $500,000 into television commercials aimed at congressional control.

Ford said the Democratic panel has funneled approximately $500,000 into Senate races.

Independently of the candidates and parties, the National Political Conservative Action Committee has mounted an aggressive media campaign with six prominent Democratic liberals as its prime targets.

The six are George McGovern of South Dakota, Frank Church of Idaho, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee; Assistant Majority Leader Alan Cranston of California, John Culver of Iowa, Birch Bayh of Indiana and Thomas Eagleton of Missouri.

Defunct college rises from dead

Philadelphia—Tiny Wilson College, given up for dead a year ago, is more alive than ever as it prepares for its 112th year with the biggest class of new students since 1973.

"What we've done is remarkable," said-political science professor Donald Bletz, who took over as president 15 months ago.

That's when Franklin County Judge John Keller bowed to increasing deficits. The total on campus in 1952 Wilson graduate and 1953, says Richard H. K. Victor, an associate professor at the Harvard University business school who has studied the industry's market to petroleum and gas, "the coal industry had lost nearly half its coal producers. The present rate of production exists right now."

The college has no intention of pruning bushes, reupholstering dormitories, made curtains, painted their alma mater and painted their history and finances of synthetic fuels, "the coal industry had lost nearly half its market to petroleum and gas, and was fairly characterized as sick."

Ralph E. Bailey, chairman of Conoco, Inc., the large oil and coal producer, says, "the market to petroleum and gas, and was fairly characterized as sick."

Eager to compete in the marketplace.

The present hearings stemmed from a recommendation by the local ABC last April that Corby's liquor license not be renewed because of several arrests of minors inside Corby's and the arrest and conviction of a Corby's bartender. Another hearing has been scheduled for September 30.

Competition Chairma James Sims said at the hearing that this was new issue and that perhaps it should be treated separately, but nevertheless decided to consolidate the petition issue within the ongoing hearings on the revocation of Corby's license.

Former domer embezzles millions

Mary Fran Callahan
Senior Staff Reporter

A former Notre Dame student, Herbert DeGreve, has been charged with embezzling $3.6 million from General Foods. DeGreve, who attended the University from 1940-42, never graduated. According to the Registrar's Office, "He was in Commerce while he was here."

The Tribune article yesterday said she did have a reason, why DeGreve left the University but could not release that reason without the permission of the Department of Education.

Antiquated records do show that DeGreve was a part-time student who also attended Notre Dame summer school.

Charged with embezzlement in his West Haven, Florida, office by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents, DeGreve now faces serious consequences.

He was arrested under an alias — which he assumed after he left the Marine Corps in the late forties — Michael O'Shea. A front page story in Sunday's Chicago Tribune detailed the clouded life of Michael O'Shea or Herbert DeGreve.

His small Florida community held no thoughts or suspicions about him; his boss at General Foods considered him "dedicated and loyal." DeGreve was described by one West Haven resident as a little league coach, Catholic church usher, ex-FBI agent, retired Detroit Lions lineman and Notre Dame football hero — in general, a solid community pillar.

DeGreve always wore, according to the article, a Notre Dame class ring, which had no year inscribed on it, and also boasted of football days at the University.

Known for his extreme generosity, DeGreve would donate large chunks of money to his church and also shower secretaries with lavish gifts — ranging from car tires to automobiles themselves.

Recently, auditors from General Foods' New York corporate headquarters discovered something was wrong while they were performing a routine audit on the Florida office. After tracking down discrepancies to DeGreve's office, they thendid some personal research on the respected accountant.

According to the Tribune article, DeGreve possessed quite a record for crime. Auto theft, embezzlement and interstate carrying of stolen goods all appeared as part a past which never would have been suspected.

DeGreve also spent, the auditors learned, 93 months behind bars in an federal facility.

Apart from his secret business "career," DeGreve, the accountant/personal history also illuminated a Jackyl & Hyde existence. DeGreve had four wives, two of which he abandoned. He married his fourth wife, who was 28, at the age of 58. She was not aware of his previous marriages nor of the children he had fathered during them.

Though DeGreve earned what the Tribune called "a modest salary," he lived like a prince in a country-club house. He also owned a Mexican hacienda along with a country house in North Carolina. He cited various reasons for his affluence depending on who he was talking to. The office was under the impression that he had received an enormous tax-assessment inheritance from his wife's father; his wife was under the impression that he had become financially lucrative as an accountant.

The Tribune article said that when DeGreve was arrested by the FBI agents, he held all his earthly possessions in a brown paper bag. Eleven suitcases are now deep and wading through all the embezzlement's complex paperwork scheme.

Meanwhile, DeGreve waits for a court date in Florida's Polk County Jail — with his brown paper bag.
Carter campaigns at picnic

TUSCUMBIA, Ala. (AP) — President Carter, saying the Democratic party "offers the brightest economic future," told a Labor Day picnic today that an economic renewal will mean "jobs and stable prices for everyone."

The president appeared at the picnic in his native South after attending a $1,000-a-head fund-raiser at a local restaurant.

Sticking to his campaign theme that the best future for America lies with his re-election, the president said that "the Democratic Party has always been the party of progress. And Democratic leadership together with American ingenuity and American dedication offers the brightest economic future for all the people of the United States."

In remarks prepared for delivery, Carter said the nation has laid a good energy foundation. "Now we can renew our entire economy... Across the board, we are going to make our free-enterprise system more productive, more efficient, more competitive. And that's going to mean jobs and stable prices for everyone." Carter also took credit for rebuilding the nation's military strength "after years of decline before I took office." He declared, "As long as I am your president, we will stay strong, and America will work for peace."

In an indirect reference to Republican Ronald Reagan's statement that the U.S. is engaged in an arms race with the Soviet Union, the president said he is working for arms control "to calms nuclear arms race before it destroys us all."

He added. "That is why we have opened full diplomatic relations with the largest nation on earth, China. That is why we have fought for peace and justice in Africa. That is even why we struggle to make our nation energy self-reliant, so that we won't be tempted to risk the peace by trying to blackmail us."

On hand at the annual tri-state picnic were elected officials from Alabama, Tennessee and Mississippi, areas of the South which are traditional Democratic strongholds.

Carter won almost all of the South four years ago, but it is not so safe against Reagan as it was against Gerald R. Ford.

—they'll pick the player who deserves to be number one. If it's not fine, if not, that's fine, too.

Kiel isn't afraid to admit that his biggest hurdle a freshman hasn't been on the playing field but in the meeting room, just getting in and learning a new system and everything, but what makes it tougher is being away from home.

Home for Kiel is Columbus, Ind., where he grew up cheering for Notre Dame.

"Ever since I was really young I followed Notre Dame and I've always wanted to come here. I remember when I got my first letter from Notre Dame it was a dream come true. The first thing I noticed was the gold helmet on the envelope."

But there might not have set too well with his parents, both of whom attended Purdue. But Blair promises they'll both be cheering for the Irish Saturday. And regardless of who wins, "I think Notre Dame's off season is over and they'll have an opportunity to trot out their best talent."

Ksiegrzewski now was at Notre Dame's offensive huddle, he'll have an opportunity to trot out his best talent."

But there's a growing feeling around Notre Dame that Kiel, who has been playing baseball, may have an edge in the coming season. Kiel's biggest hurdle as a freshman will be getting used to playing in the Big Ten with some of the country's best teams.

"He's been here four years and they know the system," he says. "So that's a big advantage for them. But they've all gone out of their way to help me, which shows what kind of guys we have on this team."

"I'm just trying to do my best," Kiel says. "The coaches will make up their minds, and they'll pick the player who deserves to be number one. If it's not fine, if not, that's fine, too."
Riggins is a disgrace to sports

Michael Ortman

After that, he says he'll call it quits. Isn't that nice of him? It's funny that in 1977, when Riggins's spent most of the year recovering from an early-season knee injury, he didn't bother to refund any of Jack Kent Cook's investment. That year, Riggins returned on his knees. They'd like nothing more than to win it all without him.

It's funny that in 1977, when Riggins was an option year if you want, and we'll give you 100,000 each year. And by the way, if you get hurt and can't help one year (like he did early in the 1977 season), don't worry. The money's still yours.

Kiel is competing against the lovable All-American from Kansas who not only broke all of Gale Sayers's records but who managed a game or a practice in college?

Right now, the Redskins must make do without him. They can't give in to his demands because if they do, why shouldn't Joe Theismann and Ken Haupt also do the same? Washington sent two second round draft picks to San Francisco two weeks ago in exchange for Wilbur Jackson, an adequate replacement for the AWOL Riggins.

On Sunday, "the Sky's so blue. I moved him from the roster, placing him on the "left camp - retied" list, whatever that is.

Redskin fans are making no bones about it. They would like to have him back but only if he returns on his knees. They'd like nothing more than to win it all without him.

Since the Redskins close the regular season in St. Louis, Riggins has had the teamATES from Lawrence, Kan., hermitage to "Meet Me In St. Louis."

Mont Washington partisans are telling John Riggins to "Watch Us (on TV) In New Orleans."

Cool Kiel learning the ropes

Ernie Hughes

Last four months ago, San Francisco had five Notre Dame gradation the roster. In addition to Montana, Leopold, and Hughes, the 49ers had exchanged the services of defensive end Willie Faison and Pittsburgh's Ordman had also had plans for former All-American tight end Ken MacAfee.

But after Fry failed his physical, he was returned to the Steelers, and MacAfee failed to live up to expectations and was cut two weeks ago. The 24-year old tight end was soon picked up by the Buffalo Bills and later released.

San Francisco head coach Bill Walsh appears to have big plans for both remaining Notre Dame alums. A team spokesmen yesterday that Montana's impressive pre-season performance had earned him a solid hold on the backup spot to team captain Mike Siple, a sense of security he has lacked since the 49ers drafted him in the third round in 1979.

During pre-season games this summer, Montana completed 45 of 53 passes covering 396 yards. He had also connected on a pair of touchdown passes and did not throw a single interception.

The spokesman also said that Leopold had impressed the coaching staff this summer and would see considerable action in the middle this season, although he would probably not start.
