VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II has whipsawed up a storm by bidding men not to look lustfully at women not their wives.

Italian feminists and writers are calling him a male chauvinist because of his latest declaration on sex.

"Every day he (the pope) is taking a step backward to the Dark Ages," author Lucia Drud Demb's told the Rome daily Messaggero. "This pope is turning the Catholic faith into a backward to the Dark Ages," author Lucia Drud Demb's told the Rome daily Messaggero. "This pope is turning the Catholic faith into a" women with lustful desires but not a word about women doing the same," she said.

Many Italian newspapers on Friday carried critical analyses of the papal statement under such headlines as "The Sin of Looking" and "Do Not Desire Your Wife."

Marco Politi, an Il Messaggero's religion writer, said the pontiff is pushing "a medieval concept of marriage," which views sexual desire "as something dirty and profane."

"Krause indicated that he will remain somewhat active as athletic director emeritus," he said. "In other words, I'm not leaving entirely. I won't be doing those sports that I'm interested in. In fact, right now we're talking about tuition and other problem areas related to marriage.

Krause emphasized the negative over the positive "all my gifts are gifts, and the national campaign.

The leadership division aimed its appeal at people with a gift potential of over $100,000. In a series of 20 weekends over an 18-month period, 112 couples were flown to the campus for an intensive exposure to the Notre Dame community. Most of the couples had some affiliation with the University as trustees, parents, alumni, etc.

"Especially remarkable is the fact that, of these alumni, 80 percent have degrees that were obtained in previous ND fundraising efforts have been significantly less. In the 1960-1963 Challenge I Campaign, the average alumni gift was $1998.

The Campaign for Notre Dame, the University's most recent development program, has already raised $167,500,000, well over the original projection of $130,000,000. The campaign will continue through the month of December.

The program, whose initial stages began in January, 1976, was primarily an effort to increase Notre Dame's endowments.

The Campaign was directed toward foundations, primarily to obtain support for academic programs. The John and Helen Kellogg Foundation of Chicago, for example, donated $10 million earmarked for government and political science.

The special gifts program, third segment of the Campaign, was held in 80 to 85 cities nationwide.

The Campaign is now in its fourth and final stage, the national campaign, which is aimed at alumni and parents. A network of 4,000 volunteers organized in every major U.S. city to visit fellow alumni to solicit donations. Of the living

Irish jets pounded [Iraqi] cities

Friday's apparent retaliation for Iraq's use of missiles against Israeli mosques in the North, which hit Kirkuk, Mosul and Sulaimaniyah in northern Iraq and there were three air raid alerts in the Iraqi capital of Baghdad, but no planes were sighted. Iran claimed that Iraq had targeted its jet fighters at the Red Crescent headquarters in Baghdad. The Red Crescent is the Moslem equivalent of the Red Cross.

With no sign of a de-escalation of hostilities in Iraq, the U.S. military has launched a major offensive against the Iraqi military's elite. American forces have not yet been able to determine how many of the Iranian militants in Iraq are in fact Iranian. The United Nations Security Council has not yet been able to agree on a resolution that would force Iraq to withdraw its forces from Kuwait.

A bold proposal...

There's a problem at Notre Dame with social life.

Yes, yes, you've heard that so many times before you're sick of it. So I am -- mostly because there's nothing of interest going on at all.

Well, here's an idea that's been brewing in my head for two years -- and it might just turn out to be a workable solution to the nagging social problem.

The most ironic thing about my idea is that it's also one of the most cost-efficient, and the structure itself has already a large history of students.

I'm talking about the conversion of the Old Fieldhouse into a first-class student center.

In the late 1980s, when the Fieldhouse was first built, the idea was to create an all-purpose facility that could be used for a variety of purposes including basketball, volleyball, and tennis courts.

It is now a cold and abandoned structure that is not being used for any purpose.

I propose that the Old Fieldhouse be converted into a first-class student center, complete with a large gymnasium, a large restaurant and coffee shop, a bar, and a full-service hair salon.

This would be the perfect solution to the problem of student life at Notre Dame.

The area now occupied by the old south bleachers would be expanded to accommodate the gymnasium.

A large room would be located there. A large seating area would also be located.

The old south bleachers would be preserved — one for more students and the other for students who want to watch games from the stands.

Up to three floors of office space could be added adjacent to the multi-purpose area. The old bleachers would be preserved — one for more students and the other for students who want to watch games from the stands.

Five or six bowling lanes could be placed in the large area big enough to accommodate basketball, volleyball, or tennis courts interchangeably.

A large room would be located there. A large seating area would also be located.

Two sections of bowling alleys, a 350 to 500 seat movie theatre, a full-service coffeehouse, and space for a Huddle-style restaurant in the front of the Fieldhouse as possible. For example two sections of bowling alleys, a 350 to 500 seat movie theatre, and space for a Huddle-style restaurant in the front of the Fieldhouse might be just the answer.

Looking at the third floor window here at The Observer office down at the Fieldhouse, three things immediately come to mind — it's enormous size, its central location on campus, and its rich history. Each of these three things would be important in a good student center; the third would make for a great one.

With the help of Notre Dame architecture major Deirdre Murphy, I've come up with some rough ideas about the possible uses of the building and a set of very tentative floor plans possibilities.

The first thing I've done is to look at the drawing in the right of the old Fieldhouse. It is a very old drawing, but reports that whole apartment buildings had collapsed. Old and prefabricated buildings on the outskirts of the city had shuddered and fell, causing more casualties, the officials said. — AP

Plans are being considered for a new faculty office, dormitory and student center at Notre Dame University. The plans include a large area that would be converted to serve a new purpose.

The Fieldhouse might be just the answer.

SMC Alumnae Board revises group bylaws

by Mary J. Beckman and Margie Brasil

The Saint Mary's Alumnae Board met this weekend and approved a revision of their by-laws. They also discussed the development of an Alumnae Placement Service and the possibilities for raising funds for the college.

The board consists of twelve members who meet twice a year and are elected by the Alumnae Association at large for three year terms. With the revision of the by-laws the board will be increased to 18 to allow for a larger representation as the number of alumnae grow.

The purpose of the board is to coordinate alumnae throughout the country. Each board member is a liaison to a club. We have sixty or so clubs throughout the U.S.," explained president of the board Maryjeanne Ryan Burke.

"Alumnae are the largest support system of the college," she said. "They are trying to work on all levels to support the school, clubs sending scholarship money to the school, continuing education from the college to the alumnae, for instance."

Lawyer discusses ABSCAM role

by Edie Murphy

William Geoghehan, former Chief Counsel to the House Ethics Committee, shared his insights into the legal and political intricacies of congressional ethics with an attentive audience Friday at the Notre Dame Law School.

Geoghehan cited several examples to illustrate situations where Congress has asserted its constitutional power to punish violation of ethics by its members, including the investigations concerning Adam Clayton Powell, Bob Sikes and Charles Diggs. The counselor pointed out, "Human imperfection in that body is nothing new," sanctions for ethics violations can be found as early as the beginning of the 1860s.

During the Abscam scandal, one of the major topics discussed in the lecture, Geoghehan served an important role in the case against Charles Diggs—who is now serving sentence in a federal penitentiary after resigning from his position in the House.

He spoke about the expulsion of Ozzie Myers, another Abscam victim who is the first member of the House to be expelled since the time of the Civil War, and projected that since it is "quite possible that he will be re-elected," it is also possible that he will be re-expelled when he tries to claim his seat on November 12.

With respect to the integrity of the 96th Congress, Geoghehan said that it was a "rather sad Congress with a large percentage of people with troubles," referring to problems with Abscam and alcoholism.

And, citing the case of Senator Joseph McCarthy as an example, Geoghehan attempted to under-line the grave nature of any expulsion proceeding and described it as "a very severe penalty for any member to undergo which more often than

All three presidential candidates line up in support of Social Security system

by the Associated Press

Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan and John B. Anderson took turns Friday boasting who could do most to protect the monthly Social Security check relied on by millions of elderly Americans.

While the three candidates discussed the same issue on the same day, apparently by coincidence, Carter also appeared to break his own promise to avoid personal attacks on Reagan. The G.O.P. candidate's election "would be a bad thing for our country," the president declared in Florida.

On retirement benefits, Carter said in a state with millions of retirees, "We have kept Social Security sound and it's going to stay sound as long as you have a Democrat in the White House." Reagan, working the same state, declared, "It is Mr. Carter who has endangered the economic security of senior citizens."

And Anderson, in New York, said the Social Security retirement age should be raised gradually from 65 to 68 to safeguard the stability of the system. He advocated changes to reduce the cost of living adjustment applied to benefits to retirees.

"...Reagan's election would be a bad thing for our country..."

If the changes aren't made, he said, the Social Security system will face worsening financial pressure as the size of the work force decreases in relation to the number of retirees receiving benefits.

The president gave a demonstration in the powers of incumbency, using his Florida campaign stop to sign legislation distributing $100 million to that state and others for money spent on Cuban refugees.

Later, in a television interview, he said Reagan's opposition to the SALT II arms treaty with the Soviet Union and other positions "indicate to me that he would not be a good president or a good man to trust with the affairs of this nation in the future."

Carter said that on at least four occasions in the past, Reagan has advocated making Social Security voluntary, a step that he said would "cripple and destroy" the system.

But Reagan, who says he never advocated a voluntary federal pension system, criticized Carter for a 1979 advisory commission that advocated making Social Security benefits subject to taxation. "I would veto any attempt to tax Social Security benefits," he said.

Carter administration officials discovered that 1979 commission report, and its recommendations were never implemented.

Reagan proposed elimination of the current $5,000 annual earnings limitation on those receiving Social Security benefits. He said the limitation "forces retirees to give up one dollar in benefits for every two dollars they earn above $5,000."

Baltimore, Md., who donated $4 million.

The largest segment of the endowment portion of the Campaign, $32 million, has been designated for chaired professorships. Only 14 chairs are filled at present; the Campaign funds the University.

Contributions will be used to upgrade the Memorial Library and a variety of other programs.

Other parts of the endowment contributions will be used to upgrade the Memorial Library collections and for student financial aid, campus ministry and a variety of other programs.

The permanent endowment of the University will stand at $250-300 million after the Campaign, placing it 15th to 15th in the nation.

At present, Notre Dame ranks 18th nationally in amount of permanent endowment. It is behind Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Cornell, Rice, Northwestern and Princeton, to name a few.

The physical facilities component of the Campaign funds has been used for the Fitzpatrick Hall of Engineering, the Stepan Chemical Research Building, the Snite Art Gallery, the O'Hara-Grace graduate residence and the O'Hara Chemical Research Building, the Hall of Engineering, the Stepan Chemical Research Building, Chemical Research Building, the Hall of Engineering, the Stepan Chemical Research Building.

After 31 long years, Krause calls it quits

Krause was planning to retire sometime before the end of this football season. It was no big secret. In fact, all you had to do was ask the right people and you could get a pretty straight answer. The only real questions were when, and when and how much will tickets for his testimonial be?

But yesterday, when the whole thing became “official” — when Moose himself spoke the magic words — it was no less shocking than it would have been had the story been kept under heavy wraps.

“I’ve been thinking about this for over three years,” he admitted. “I returned to Notre Dame in 1942 and I’ve been athletic director since ’49. It’s been a long career and I just feel it’s time for me to step down and let a younger fellow take his turn.

(We will now pause for a moment to let all of that sink in.)

Retire?

Step down?

Moose Krause is retiring!!!

Hold on a second. Moose Krause can’t retire, or step down, or call it quits, or hang it up, or any such thing of the sort! I mean — he’s part of the deal here, isn’t he? You know, two lakes, the Golden Dome, football weekends and Moose Krause.

If you think Aunt Jemima’s pancakes are bad without her syrup, try a Notre Dame halftime presentation without Moose Krause! After all, that’s what this guy was made for. Giving trophies (and getting them). Pep rallies and gill outings and all those alumni dinners where you’re bound to hear a couple of his favorite stories — stories you’ve undoubtedly heard before. Stories you can’t wait to hear again.

Hey Moose! Tell the one about Timbuktu again! Please, Moose! Just one more time!

And he’ll wave his hand, shake his head, then tell the story one more time. Just like everyone knew he would. And everyone

There’s not quite anything like a good game of golf,结合 with a cigar in your mouth. Just ask Moose.

Krause was well known for his efforts on the basketball court and helped establish the three-second rule.

Is he really going to leave?

Frank LaGrotta

laughs. One more time. Maybe because it’s funny...

Or maybe because it’s Moose.

Hey, let’s face it, the guy’s a legend. A real, live, honest-to-goodness, living, breathing, cigar smoking legend.

But don’t tell him that.

“Oh, I don’t think so,” he laughed when after reciting his personal personal list of Notre Dame legends — Rockne, Leahy, Parseghan — he was asked if Moose Krause just might not be the biggest legend of them all.

“It’s just that a lot of people identify me with Notre Dame,” he suggested. “Maybe it’s because I’ve been here too damn long!”

Then again, maybe he’s just being modest.

Or maybe he’s just being Moose.

“Who retired?” asked the disinterested voice at ABC radio when I called to tell him the news.

“No, we’re not retiring. OK, thanks for — What? Moose is retiring!!?”

All of a sudden he was very interested. And he wanted all the details.

“So, he’s gonna be athletic director emeritus, huh?” the guy asked me. “That means he’ll be around a lot, right?”

“Right,” I assured him.

“And he’ll still go to football games and speak at banquets and stuff like that, right?” “I guess so.”

Then he paused.

“But it’ll still be different,” he said finally. “Moose Krause is retiring... somehow Notre Dame just won’t be the same.”

And as I hung up, I realized that, in these next few months, none of the words written or spoken in his honor, will say it any better than that.

Moose Krause is retiring.

Somehow Notre Dame just won’t be the same.

The Royal men didn't go down quietly, however. They mounted a major threat against Quisenberry in the eighth.

Bob Watson, who had three hits in the game, opened with a triple up the gap in left-center field. Then Jackson and Oscar Gamble drew walks from the submarining right-hander.

Now, with the bases loaded and none out, the Yankee Stadium crowd of 56,584 rared on every pitch as Quisenberry faced Rick Cerone. The Yankee right-hander, who pleased the crowd with a 1-1 pitch that seemed to be a sure base hit. But Washington, the Royals' shortstop, grabbed the liner and turned it into a nifty killing double play, trapping Jackson off second base.

Pitcher-hitter Jim Spencer then rolled out, ending the inning.

Yankees ousted

NEW YORK (AP) - George Brett wrote another chapter in his fairy tale season last night, hammering a monstrous three-run homer that carried the Kansas City Royals into their first World Series with a 4-2 victory that completed a three-game playoff sweep over the New York Yankees.

The Royals ended a string of three playoff frustrations against the Yankees and became only the second expansion team to qualify for a shot at baseball's world championship. They will meet the winner of the Houston-Philadelphia National League playoff in the World Series, beginning Tuesday night.

Brett had been a member of the Royal teams that lost to New York in 1976, 1977 and 1978. Twice those playoffs went down to the ninth inning of the fifth game before the Yankees won and left Kansas City with the bitter defeats.

This time, the Royals got the jump on New York by sweeping the first two runs in the sixth at a rally triggered by a Reggie Jackson double.

Most of the damage came against Kansas City bullpen ace Dan Quisenbery, who has relieved starter Paul Splittorff after Jackson's two-run hit. Quisenbery angered angrily that his team would reverse the trend and win three straight at home.

A feat that has not been accomplished in league Championship Series history. But Brett and the Royals put a damper on the Yankees in the ninth inning and set the stage for their first World Series berth.

New York stirred for the first time when it erased an early 1-0 Kansas City lead with two runs in the sixth in a rally triggered by a Reggie Jackson double.

If the Royals were thinking about Steinbrenner's pledge, they were thinking twice when it erased an early 1-0 Kansas City lead with two runs in the sixth in a rally triggered by a Reggie Jackson double.

The injury list is long on the Royals, so it wasn't any surprise to the injury-depleted roster already looks like a hurricane blew through the team to move the ball against the nation's best defense against the run.

Morgan, Astros nip Phillies

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston second baseman Jose Morgan, the inspirational leader throughout the season, tripped off the right field wall in the 11th inning and Denny Walling delivered a sacrifice fly, giving the Astros a 1-0 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies yesterday afternoon in the third game of the National League playoffs.

The dramatic triumph gave Houston a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five series and put them within one game of being in the first World Series in the team's 19 years history.

Morgan, given credit for keeping the Astros together this season, led off the 11th inning with a triple off lefty Tug McGraw. Morgan, hobbled by a knee injury, then gave way to pinch runner Rafael Landestoy, who trotted home on Walling's fly ball to left fielder Greg Luzinski.

The run completed the second straight extra-inning playoff game and set a National League record for the most scoreless innings in playoff competition. Following Morgan's triple, Philadelphia Manager Dallas Green elected to intentionally walk Jose Cruz and pinch hitter Art Howe in order to face the left-handed hitting Walling.

For Nieckro, the hero of Houston's division-clinching playoff victory over Los Angeles on Monday, kept the Phils at bay through most of the game, except for the third inning when the Phillies put runners on second and third with one out.

With Pete Rose at third base and Bake McBride at second, major league record batters in leader Mike Schmidt bounced a hopper to Einos Cabell at third base and Cabell's throw caught Rose at the plate. Bowa was ejected at third, flinging into deep left field, ending the inning.

Nieckro, 2-0 during the regular season, allowed six hits during 8 2/3 innings of work but suffered from the futile run production that has plagued the Astros all season. He was replaced in the 11th by Dave Smith.

Smith, one of Houston's top relievers, had been limited to the challenge in the 11th inning when he struck out Luzinski to open the inning. Then, after Manny Trillo flied out, Maddox was intentionally walked by Larry Bowa was walked intentionally. Smith, the winning pitcher, ended the game by fanning pinch hitter Del Unser.

The stingy Hurricane defense has allowed just 15.3 yards per game on the ground in four games, and ranks third nationally in total defense (167.6 y.p.g.).

Our biggest single task (today) will be to nullify all the momentummiami has built up the first month of the season," said Devine. "Their defense has been just tremendous so far, and they're off to a great start (4-0).

"There's no question they'll be fired up this week, because they know a victory over Notre Dame is all they need to gain a little more national attention. We're not going to do everything we can to prevent that from happening."

That will be no small order for the Irish, who will have six injured starters watching from the sidelines. Atop that list will be sophomore Phil Carter, the all-everything backfield last week's brutal 254-yard, 40-carry performance at Miami State. Carter sustained a severely bruised thigh in the fourth quarter of the victory over the Spartans.

Senior Jim Stune should start in his place, and senior Ty Basich will see action as the backup, junior tailback Bernie Arellano suffered a knee injury last Saturday and is questionable for this afternoon.

Tight end Dan Mazatk, who had been a member of the 1980 Irish schedule six weeks ago, is still ranked behind both of them.

The seventh-ranked Irish, whose defense seems to be one of the best in the country between two top-twenty teams.
