Campus Life Council (CLC),
As well as providing information
October 29 and 30.

Interview sessions to be held

Cruiter annually visits the Notre Dame campus. Clovia Sloan, a youth service program. "Over members, a Peace Corps rethe world.

largest volunteer aid programs in the world this program, the Peace

Diplomatic Affairs.

would make proposals dir-

Riehle said that stu-

the entire Board, which referred to the concept of the CLC preamble, the only part of the CLC's constitution that requires Board action for change. He will re-

the Board to allow substitution of the current student reresentatives (hall vice-presidents) with four representatives to be determined by the student senate. He asked the committee members to read the committee's recommendations.

John Seitz, secretary of the student senate, agreed with Riehle. He said the CLC has run its course, and it is time to make the transition. He said that the transition needs the support of the entire board.

Riehle stressed that students involved with the CLC have not received proper cooperation from faculty and staff. He said that students must work together to replace the current council to function properly.

The Student Affairs Committee will review the proposed amendments made at yesterday's meeting, and will make recommendations to the entire board, which will convene today.

Student body president Paul Riehle, presenting the results of Tuesday's referendum, which approved the new constitution and student senate bylaws. He said that the student senate be established to replace the Campus Life Council (CLC), as the main voice of student expression.

Riehle stressed that students involved with the CLC have not received proper cooperation from faculty and staff. He said that students must work together to replace the current council to function properly.

Jane C. Pfeiffer, one of the committee members, suggested that the best way to solve any CLC inefficiencies might be to fix the system rather than toss it aside.

Riehle had indicated that faculty and staff attendance was an issue, and that the council was working on this problem.

By David Sarphie

Sloan said that the organization is designed to help the poor of Asia, Africa, and Latin America in such areas as education, health care, and social work.

She noted that math and science teachers are in great demand right now. "Many of the math and science majors are high in the job market and are pressured to immediately enter a field," she remarked. "I think the Peace Corps is a good way to find a direction in life."

Sloan said that students have been working on a monthly living allowance comparable to the area in which they are living. Health coverage and paid vacations are other benefits.

As Sloan pointed out, however, there are other abstract benefits. "The Peace Corps is for anyone with a sense of adventur, who would like to experience another culture and actually have a positive impact on the lives of other people," she said.

Sloan was especially excited about her visit to the campus. "I've been to Notre Dame several times, and each time I've felt the students have taken a strong interest in the program. Anyone interested in the program may talk to Sloan in the library concourse today or sign up for an interview at the Placement Office.

President Carter said yesterday he is willing to meet with Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai to discuss the fate of the 52 American hostages "if he should be amenable." But Carter's spokesman said the president saw "no real possibility" of such a meeting.

Carter was quick to add that there is "no imminent" prospect of the hostages' release.

Rajai is travelling to New York to participate in United Nations deliberations on the subject of Iran's war with Iraq. The President was attending a charity banquet in the city yesterday evening.

When reporters asked Carter about a meeting between he and Rajai, he said, "There's always a potential. We have not made any arrangements to meet with Mr. Rajai, but if he should be amenable to a meeting we would certainly continue to follow our practice of meeting with any Iranian official who has a possibility of speaking authoritatively for his government."
The medical use of marijuana should be reconsidered by the federal government which, in the past, placed stringent controls on its use, a federal appeals court has ruled. A three-judge panel said that the Drug Enforcement Administration should take a second look at its decision to keep marijuana and its derivatives in the same drug category as heroin, which is known to have medical uses. The court's action will not immediately make marijuana any more widely available to patients seeking it to avoid nausea during chemotherapy or for glaucoma, but it opens a door for the government to reach a decision on marijuana control the last time.

Operation Yellowjacket was a successful undercover "sting" in Valhalla, New York despite some comic quirks, according to Undercover Agent Bob Ayer. Undercover agents disposed of a truck of hijacked bananas, evaded fellow policemen as they drove stolen cars, and turned down an invitation to the Chamber of Commerce. The undercover pay netted $1.25 million in stolen goods that the agents bought for a price $83,000 while posing as fences at a Pelham storefront. Dozens of people were arrested in pre-dawn raids this past week.

Daylight Time and was centered about 40 miles east of Billings, Montana.

Masses at Sacred Heart Church

Welcome to the oddest of all possible weekends.

Look at the trees. What do you see? If you see a magnificent splash of autumnal color outlining gothic ivy, I feel the thrill of fullblown academic merging into weekend football bliss, you are a parent or a visitor. If you look at the trees and see trees you are a student, a talent for poetic perception notwithstanding.

Now look at the people. See the one with black eye bags hanging down while the sun was coming up, his head full of strange memos. "Son, just how precisely can we use structur­alist criticism in such a way that we can interpret, as consciousness behind inner-office memos," and he knows the answer. A plus.

And sometimes he has these fears. He sees himself carrying a briefcase full of term papers into an interview with a man who is prepared to offer him a job working behind the wheel of a taxi. He would be an engaging conversationalist. He could be known as a humanistic cabdriver, philosopher king. He's not sure that really excites him.

His mind is full, as you can see. It happens about this time of year, and if he had a midterm in a course called "Cliche 101" he might be reminded of an applicable adage about taking time to smell the roses. Or was it trees? No, you smell roses, look at trees. He did the other day. They just looked like trees.

Don't mind the student if he doesn't see what you see. Sometimes he does, but it happens right at the very first turn of the leaves, when midterms seem so far away. In a few days they will be far away, in the other temporal direction. If he's breaktime and football weekend, and he can just imagine the highway — also going in different directions. He see a pattern there. But he always sees patterns: he's been taught that. And he wonders if that is odd.

Windy with a chance of rain today. Highs in the low 70s with evening temperatures dipping into the 60s. Partly cloudy and mild tomorrow with highs in the upper 60s.

Magazine report last week that New York state has enacted a law defining the talent of thinking as a "basic skill" for the job market. This pleased him greatly, for it proved at the same time both New York's awareness of what makes man and man's concern for literacy. He is literate, now he can get a job. Maybe he'll go to New York: they'll appreciate him there.

An earthquake measuring 4.8 on the Richter scale struck off the west coast of Japan yesterday, but there were no reports of damage, the Alaska Tsunami Warning Center reported. The quake occurred at 6:54 a.m. Alaska Daylight Time and was centered about 40 miles east of Unalaska, or about 800 miles southwest of Anchorage.

Ann Landers, marking a quarter of a century as an advice columnist, would prescribe for herself a wet noodle if she even gave a thought to retiring. "As long as I have all my marbles and the energy to do this job," the syndicated newspaper columnist says, "I have all my marbles and the energy to do this job." The 78 cars, two tractor-trailers, two computer terminals, assorted government checks, of people were arrested in pre-dawn raids this past week. Dozens of people were arrested in pre-dawn raids this past week. Among the recovered stolen items were 78 cars, two tractor-trailers, two computer terminals, assorted government checks, credit cards and television sets. "We could have opened up a major department store," one police officer commented.

Adapting to get tough attitude, Son. Bôch Bayh has launched a new wave of television and radio commercials designed to draw a lead on his Republican challenger, Dan Quayle. The campaign plans to spend over $400,000 on radio and television air time between now and election day, according to campaign aide Fred Nation. In a recent media interview, Bayh said, "I think we're going to be rather significant emphasis on some of the negatives to be reconsidered by the federal government which has, in the past, placed stringent controls on its use, a federal appeals court..."
Soviet leaders meet

Moscow — (AP) — President
Baharak Karmal of Afghanistan held face-to-face talks yesterday with his backers at the Kremlin for the first time since the Soviet military helped install him in office ten months ago.
Karmal, also the leader of the ruling People's Democratic Party and premier, was greeted at Vnukovo Airport by a full lineup of Soviet officials led by President Leonid I. Brezhnev and was driven into the city along streets lined with people, flags, streamers and banners, Soviet television reported.

Despite speculation by sources in New Delhi, India that Karmal may be in trouble with his Kremlin supporters because of continued resistance by anti-communist Moslem guerrillas in Afghanistan, the Soviets appeared to be using the visit for a strong demonstration of support for his Kabul regime.

Brezhnev hugged Karmal at the foot of his airplane's ramp.

The Soviet media had effusive accounts of the importance of the visit, claims of "successful operations for the liquidation of bands of mercenaries and terrorists" in Afghanistan and accounts of the "fraternal and selfless aid" given Afghanistan by the Soviet Union.

Karmal was quoted by the official Tass news agency as saying his visit "will become a new step in the cause of further strengthening the unshakable
fraternal unity and cohesion of the two states."

Western observers in Moscow think the major purpose of the visit is an attempt to boost Karmal's image as a national leader and to publicize the claimed benefits of Soviet friendship.

[continued from page 1]

meeting, the President said, "I don't know whether he has or not, but I don't have any information that he has."

Later, after the President boarded Air Force One following a campaign appearance, White House Press Secretary Jody
Powell told reporters that Carter gave the appearance of the visit as saying his visit "will become a new step in the cause of further
strengthening the unshakable
fraternal unity and cohesion of
the two states."

Western observers in Moscow
think the major purpose of the
visit is an attempt to boost Karmal's image as a national leader and to publicize the claimed benefits of Soviet friendship.

 Asked if any negotiation with Iran is under way, Muskie said:
"No there isn't."

A few minutes earlier, in a question-and-answer session before the Woman's National Democratic Club, Muskie re-ponded enigmatically about the reports of a possible trade, "I've seen the rumors."

State Department spokesman John Trattner said any meeting with Reaj would not be publicly announced.

"In order to get these issues between our two countries settled, it will be essential to do them privately and confidence-ly," he said, "We will not be able to discuss any such future meetings with you."

Asked about a report that Iran plans to release the hostages imminently in return for U. S.
provision of spare parts to Iran, Trattner said the account was "totally false."

Diplomatic sources in India predicted that the Kabul regime would receive wide-range technical, military and political support during the visit. The speculation was fueled by reports that the Afghan delegation included ministers of defense, foreign affairs and economic planning, as well as some military leaders.

The Soviets sent an estimated 85,000 troops into Afghanistan last December to help oust
Marxist President Hafizullah Amin and install Karmal. Most of the troops remain. The intervention is expected to come under renewed attack next month at a scheduled U. N. General Assembly debate.

Despite frequent claims of victories against the "bandits and mercenaries," reports filtering out of Afghanistan suggest that the Soviets have failed to secure most of the country's rural districts.

Kuldip Nayar, editor of the Indian Express newspaper who recently visited Afghanistan, reported that the rebels control 90 of the country's 186 administrative districts around the clock and 48 others by night. He said the Karmal regime and Soviet forces control the major cities and 48 districts.

Nayar also said the Soviets are considering establishing a new party, the Communist Party of Afghanistan, including men from the pro-Soviet hard core in both the Khalq and Parcham wings of the ruling party.

***

Local high school student, Roseanne McCabe, heads to N.D. orchestra practice. (photo by Greg Mauer)
Professor surveys to define Midwest

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Everybody knows about the Midwest. It’s where Johnny Carson grew up without developing an accent. It’s that expanse of rolling country where our food comes from.

But exactly where is it? That’s a tougher question, and a geography professor got some surprising answers from university students across the nation.

James Shortridge of the University of Kansas set out a year ago to find the Midwest. Never mind that by living in Lawrence, Kan., most people would say he’s already there.

He wanted a more scientific definition of the region for his study of its culture since white men settled there in large numbers 175 years ago. So for starters, he distributed questionnaires, to 3,000 freshmen and sophomores at state universities in 31 states.

Here’s what he found:

Students from 20 states defined the heart of the Midwest as Nebraska or Kansas states on the western fringe of the 12-state region formally called the Middle West by academics.

And 1 percent of the Washington state residents who responded said they considered their state midwestern, as did 9 percent of Californians, 2 percent Alabamians and 3 percent of West Virginians.

In Ohio, the easternmost state of the traditional region, only 47 percent of students polled claimed Midwesterners residence.

The dictionary definition of the Midwest includes Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, South Dakota and Wisconsin. But Shortridge says that definition is misleading.

“It’s a perceptual region. You have to go with the perceptions of the people,” Shortridge says.

“Maybe originally, people had the perceptual view of the Midwest with Illinois in the center, the image of a small-town rural America.”

“But time passes. Detroit, Chicago, Cleveland grow up and don’t seem to fit into the traditional definition. So what people do is keep the old definition and move the area. The definition now fits the plains more than the old area.”

Only people from Indiana and Illinois still believe they represent the Midwest’s center, he said. Elsewhere, from New York to Texas to Washington, students put the core farther west.

Tremor shakes volcano

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — After a sharp earthquake beneath Mount St. Helens and a 1,000-foot plume of steam and ash last night, scientists warned that an eruption "is a possibility in the next 24 hours."

"Due to an increase in the number of seismic events occurring around Mount St. Helens, the University of Washington has issued a warning that an eruption is possible," said Joyce Rouson of the Federal Emergency Management Agency. The 7:02 p.m. earthquake, measuring about 3.0 on the Richter scale, was centered just beneath the volcano’s crater, Rouson said.

Small "seismic bursts," or class B quakes that are too weak to be rated on the Richter scale of ground motion, have rattled the volcano throughout the week. But the 3.0 quake coupled with continuous steam yesterday changed geologists’ minds about the seriousness of the recent seismic activity, Rouson said.

Steam mixed with ash accompanied the 7:02 p.m. earthquake, and the plume extended 1,000 feet above the volcano, she said.

"Steam mixed with ash accompanied "If it’s going to go, it’s going to go in hours... or within a day," said Steve Malone, a seismologist at the University of Washington geophysics center. "Seismic activity has been building fairly rapidly. We’re watching the stuff (earthquake activity) build. If it follows the way it has in the past, true to course, we’re going to have an eruption," he said.
Illegal aliens who slip across the Mexican border into the United States will continue to do so until America decides to help Mexico create that situation with money home and then go home — not to be permanent residents," Ehrlich said.

"We're going to have to reframe our entire relationship with Mexico," he said.

"This is not a problem with the United States to work, resulting in an enormous unemployment rate drops," Ehrlich said, a population biologist at Stanford University, is best known for his book "The Population Bomb."

In that book, he warned that the planet would be hit by massive starvation of the population continued to increase unchecked.

Even with birth rates in some underdeveloped countries beginning to decline, he said, the world population could double in the next 40 years from its present 4.4 billion.

A decade after he wrote it, Ehrlich said the prognosis is even worse.

But the population probably would never reach 8 billion, he said, because the increasing death rate will counteract the population explosion.

Unemployment spurs emigration

Illegal aliens who slip across the Mexican border into the United States will continue to do so until America decides to help Mexico create more jobs for its citizens, a population expert says.

Paul Ehrlich, who spent more than two years researching illegal immigration for his 1970 book "The Golden Door," spoke at the University of Evansville on October 30.

"It looks like most of the immigrants coming in were ones who were just coming in the classic manner, to work, send money home and then go home — not to be permanent residents," Ehrlich said.

"We have, of course, helped to create that situation with Mexico. We took by force more than half of their country, have done many other things that created joblessness in Mexico, and we have used Mexicans as a labor pool of last resort for most of this century," Ehrlich said.

Illegal immigration from Mexico in 1975 probably was not much higher than it was during the 1950s. But he said the next few decades will see more and more Mexicans wanting to come to the United States to work, resulting in an enormous unemployment problem unless the U.S. government changes its policy.

"We're going to have to reframe our entire relationship with Mexico," he said.

"This is not a problem with Mexico. It's a Mexican-American problem that we're going to have to work out. The big solution is to help the Mexicans change their economy so that their new something like 40-50 percent unemployment rate drops," Ehrlich, a population biologist at Stanford University, is best known for his book "The Population Bomb."

Stephen Beattie, a Canadian politician's brother who killed his partner and two cleaning women at their fashionable Dade County health spa, and Charles W. Profitt, who stabbed a Tampa wrestling coach to learn what it felt like to kill someone.

The trouble took place less than two weeks after a judge ordered one-third of the inmates transferred to other prisons because of what he called the "intolerable" level of violence at the facility where four inmates have been stabbed to death since July.

The violence Wednesday began minutes after a memorial service for the slain guard and extended to three, 100-inmate wings of the maximum security prison. Inmates burned trash and paper, yelled, banged on their cells and broke out windows.

"We have, of course, helped to create that situation with Mexico. We took by force more than half of their country," Ehrlich said.

"We're going to have to reframe our entire relationship with Mexico," he said.

"This is not a problem with Mexico. It's a Mexican-American problem that we're going to have to work out. The big solution is to help the Mexicans change their economy so that their new something like 40-50 percent unemployment rate drops," Ehrlich, a population biologist at Stanford University, is best known for his book "The Population Bomb."

The institution is under total lockdown.

The prison's staff, is locked in their cells indefinitely, Bradford explained.

The prisoners inside the 19-year-old institution will remain locked in their cells indefinitely, Bradford said.

Officials brought in reinforcements Wednesday night and used tear gas to subdue 300 inmates when one guard was stabbed with a homemade spear and another was slashed by Death Row inmates. A guard was fatally stabbed by a Death Row inmate Sunday.

Of the 1,200 inmates at Starke, 149 are on Death Row. Among them are Theodore Bundy, killer of three young women and suspect in dozens of disappearances; any figures of cost, the Board would not be able to vote on a way for the other on the proposal.
... Trustees

(continued from page 3)

Mr. John Van Wolvlear, who chairs the Off-Campus Affairs, offers to explain about meeting for student housing. The meeting Van Wolvlear said, would bring together the necessary students and business personal to organize the efforts at obtaining the necessary funding. It was the consensus that the LaFortune renovation is a suitable one. Emphasized, however, that it be handled through the University administration rather than the Board of Trustees.

The program gave us a solid step-pup some sort of order to keep trying to get things done. Monday said, if we’re ever going to a student, we’re never going to show them the need. We think that we did that today.

Executive coordinator Frank Schneider emphasizes the commit­ tee that a matching funds program be put into the annual University budget to help fi­ nance improvements in the dormitories.

The program would enable individual residence halls to receive financial aid from the University, as long as the dorm would match the amount from its own treasury. Similar programs have been successful in recent years.

Schneider said he will recom­ mend to the Board that $25,000 be annually placed into the University’s budget for this purpose.

Off-Campus Commissioners- Mark Roemer, explained the current security and housing problems being experienced by off-campus students. He distributed handouts which detailed the crimes in the North­ west neighborhood in recent months.

Roemer suggested the Off-Campus Office be expanded, and that it become more effective. This, he said, would make the students in legal and practical areas.

Dean of Students James Roemer noted that the City of South Bend on Wednesday offered to inspect houses that the University might refer to them. This might help landlords take better care of their property.

It was suggested, however, that a crew of students inspectors might be more effective because the students may have a better idea of what the student tenant wants from an offcampus home.

No other proposals or rec­ ommendations on the off-campus situation were made.

The Student Affairs Committee serves as a link between the students and the full Board of Trustees.

The members of the Student Affairs Committee are: Schneider, Fr. Thomas E. Illazza, Anthony F. Earley, Philip J. Faccenda, Fr. John C. Gerber, Paul F. Hellmuth, Donald Kesh, Donald J. Matthews, Anthony J. F. O'Reilly, Prefett, the Honor­ able John D. Rockefeller IV, and William D. Reynolds. All were present at yesterday’s meeting except Rockefeller, O'Reilly, and Rockefeller.

Rich Harris, the author of sports violence and the law, spoke last night to a crowd at the Library. (photo by Greg Mauer)

Muskie questions hostage trade

WASHINGTON (AP) - Was this the "October surprise?"

Or was it just a day of rumor feeding on rumor, a snake of speculation swallowing its own tail, hope coinciding with hap­ penstance?

In Chicago, a television station reports, over and over, that the 52 American hostages are about to be returned to the United States. "A deal is in the works," insists news director Tio Kuwlos.

In Windsor Locks, Conn., a campaigning President Carter extends a hand to embattled Iran. He is willing to meet with Iran’s prime minister, who is making an unexpected appear­ ance at the United Nations. Iran, after months of isolation, is

(continued on page 15)
University President Fr. Theodore Hesburgh announced yesterday that Notre Dame will sponsor Formula I auto racing this spring in conjunction with An Tostal.

Hesburgh's announcement came at the Board of Trustees meeting held at the University club. The plan was the suggestion of several Board members from Chicago who have been impressed with the city's plan to hold a similar race there next year.

The race, to be run throughout the ND campus, is part of a fund-raising project designed to improve the ND endowment without another tuition increase. Earlier this semester Hesburgh announced that ND would legalize gambling on campus and convert the remains of St. Ed's Hall into a gambling casino/hotel complex.

Hesburgh also announced yesterday that the University will not be picking up an option from a prominent west coast movie house to film Urban SMC Chick at Notre Dame. Notre Dame was rumored to have been guaranteed a fifteen percent take from the film's net profits. The deal was in conjunction with nearby S acre Mary's College, which would have supplied over 500 female extras festooned in Western regalia.

"We chose the race option over the film because it offers no reason for it other than being a theological problem as well," Hesburgh said. "We claim that 'changing sexual mores' are best understood scientifically. This is absurd. Are Christians to believe that their Lord is not the Lord of culture, to whom subjects are diverse and changing customs?"

By Garry Truude

Rightly, Rust considers the problem of the cultural revolution, which he offers no reason for it other then being a theological problem as well. He claims that "changing sexual mores" are best understood scientifically. This is absurd. Are Christians to believe that their Lord is not the Lord of culture, to whom subjects are diverse and changing customs?

Contrary to his view, Pope Paul VI based the encyclical Humanae Vitae not on "partial perspectives—whether of the biological or psychological demographical or sociological orders," but instead "in light of an integral vision of man and of his vocation, not only his natural and earthly, but also his supernatural and eternal vocation." Such is the difference between sociological and authoritative interpretation of the nature of man.

But as I have alluded to earlier, the problem is a cultural one. There would certainly seem to be in our culture many elements which are directly opposed to the Christian understanding of life.

At the cultural level—the level on which Rust desires to analyze the phenomenon of "changing sexual mores"—one can only reject his claim that contraception and abortion cannot at all be linked.

At issue is a basic change in attitude towards the sexual mores—one can easily see this when we look at the phenomenon of "changing sexual mores" in our culture many elements which are directly opposed to the Christian understanding of life.

As an example, perhaps Rust considers it a "natural and eternal vocation." For example, perhaps Rust considers it a "natural and eternal vocation." But as I have alluded to earlier, the problem is a cultural one. There would certainly seem to be in our culture many elements which are directly opposed to the Christian understanding of life.
English professor right on time

Dear Editor,

A complaint has been directed against me for interrupting a math exam in Computer Science 095, scheduled for 8:30. It still didn't today.

The reason, as far as I can tell, is that a student or students thought I was being rude in some way. It's a perfectly valid question as far as I'm concerned. I have been a math teacher for the last 10 years and have never had such an incident.

I am frankly surprised that a student would take it so personally. It is clear that the student or students are not aware of the consequences of their actions.

It is the responsibility of the student to ensure that they are on time for class and to be respectful of the instructor. It is the responsibility of the instructor to ensure that the class runs smoothly and to respect the students.

I am writing in regard to my recent experience at a football game. Upon questioning him he refused to give me a ticket. He told me that I had shown him my ticket and that I was in violation of my human rights — no matter what state or country I was in.

It is important to question Officer Wolfarth, I do not believe that he is being fair. He is a stifling burden that consumes my time. I am writing to you as a last resort to protest his actions.

I do not agree with the printing of the article — just its placement on the front page. It has merited front page attention.

I have written this letter to inform the editor of the problem. I am sure that this incident has left a huge sore on the campus. I believe not only is it unfair, but it serves only to tinge the reading audience all together.

I am writing in regard to my recent experience at a football game. Upon questioning him he refused to give me a ticket. He told me that I had shown him my ticket and that I was in violation of my human rights — no matter what state or country I was in. I am not the only one who has been treated this way.

My article explained that Holocene's art is women's art because "it is born in emotions that work their way outward, thus presenting an insight that is intrinsically female". Instead, and in contradiction to this statement, the headline intro­duced the story as "The Feminist Art of Louise Pierucci Holeman."

My article explained that Holocene's art is women's art because "it is born in emotions that work their way outward, thus presenting an insight that is intrinsically female". Instead, and in contradiction to this statement, the headline intro­duced the story as "The Feminist Art of Louise Pierucci Holeman."

Women's Art

Dear Editor,

I am writing in regard to my article published on October 10, 1980, entitled with the art of Louise Pierucci Holeman. Not only was it the basis for my article, but I also reprinted it in a book I recently published. I did not realize that I had reprinted it. It is clear that the article is not a true representation of her work.

I am writing to you as a last resort to protest his actions. I do not believe that he is being fair. He is a stifling burden that consumes my time. I am writing to you as a last resort to protest his actions.

I am writing in regard to my recent experience at a football game. Upon questioning him he refused to give me a ticket. He told me that I had shown him my ticket and that I was in violation of my human rights — no matter what state or country I was in. I am not the only one who has been treated this way.

My article explained that Holocene's art is women's art because "it is born in emotions that work their way outward, thus presenting an insight that is intrinsically female". Instead, and in contradiction to this statement, the headline intro­duced the story as "The Feminist Art of Louise Pierucci Holeman."

Women's Art

Dear Editor,

I am writing in regard to my article published on October 10, 1980, entitled with the art of Louise Pierucci Holeman. Not only was it the basis for my article, but I also reprinted it in a book I recently published. I did not realize that I had reprinted it. It is clear that the article is not a true representation of her work.

I am writing to you as a last resort to protest his actions. I do not believe that he is being fair. He is a stifling burden that consumes my time. I am writing to you as a last resort to protest his actions.
Quality & Quantity At Doc Pierce's

Doc Pierce's, located some distance from campus, is well worth the twenty minute drive into downtown Mishawaka. The only way you can go wrong with Doc Pierce's is by not going there.

The quality of the entrees overshadows any limitations of the rather small menu, featuring American favorites like steak, shrimp, and sandwiches. Not only is the food superbly prepared, but the relaxed atmosphere ("casual but neat" are the bywords) enables one to fully enjoy a hearty meal without the constraining tightness of a necktie or one's best dress.

But the most prominent plus for Doc's is the reasonable cost. No restaurant is cheap these days, but this one comes very, very close, and given the extraordinary quality of food, it is without question the best dinner buy in the area.

The secret to Doc Pierce's success lies in its management. Unlike most other dining establishments in South Bend, Doc's is privately owned, and not part of a nationwide restaurant chain or company. As a result, profit is not a major consideration; rather, pride in service and food quality comes first. South Bend native Bruce Tassell, owner of Doc Pierce's, told The Observer that above all, he wants a place to be proud of, not embarrassed with. He has hired several managers throughout the four-year history of the restaurant on a profit-sharing basis and has found some superior staff to run the various phases of the business. Incidentally, most of these managers are young Notre Dame/Saint Mary's grads.

Dame/Saint Mary's grads, South Bend native Bruce Tassell, owner of Doc Pierce's, told The Observer that above all, he wants a place to be proud of, not embarrassed with. He has hired several managers throughout the four-year history of the restaurant on a profit-sharing basis and has found some superior staff to run the various phases of the business. Incidentally, most of these managers are young Notre Dame/Saint Mary's grads.

Doc Pierce's small, wood-grained atmosphere is always full, but never crowded. However, reservations are required.

Highly recommended is the New York Strip, a full inch-and-a-half of aged, marbled succulence of meat to prepare a steak, because when you ask for medium-rare, you get the full gentle flavor of that marvelous treat. Doc Pierce's has plenty of free parking and is located at 120 N. Main Street, Mishawaka. Call for reservations at 255-7737. You'll be very glad you did. In this culinary connoisseur's opinion, Doc Pierce's is the finest restaurant around.

Ice House; Old Charm, Modern Menu

Mark Ellis

It sure doesn't look like a restaurant. It comes across more as a brick warehouse, tucked away in a far corner of the rustic 100 Center. Originally part of John Wagner's 1853 brewery, "The Ice House" stored ice, malt and yeast for some 70 years until a fire forced its closing.

Not until just a few years ago was the entire brewery included in a massive conversion which left area people with the 100 Center, and specifically, The Ice House restaurant. The many levels of the Ice House have been restored and redesigned, and now boast two lounges and a beautiful two-level dining facility complete with original beamed ceilings and brick and masonry walls. Coupled with the light of the dim cast iron chandeliers placed strategically throughout the complex, we truly felt the nostalgia, the historic importance of the Ice House.

We stopped in for cocktails on the third level, in the "Eminent Victorian" lounge, just in time to catch "Silent Partner," a two-man guitar/bass band in their first set. The "Eminent Victorian" features such live music on every Friday and Saturday night. It was just what we needed to stir our appetites. After a few Crosby, Stills, & Nash, Harry Chapin and Beatles tunes, we were departed, and following a series of wooden planks and stair casings, found ourselves in a cozy little booth on the second level of the charming dining room. Service was prompt. In no time we had returned from what was easily the most exotic salad bar either of us had seen. Not only did it feature a complete variety of salad garnishes, cheese, breads and vegetables, this one also boasted dried fruits and fresh walnuts, sunflower seeds, etc. We returned to our seats to find our second drinks waiting. My date asked me to refrain from trying to get her tipsy, that it wouldn't work anyway. I agreed.

The food arrived almost at the same time we had finished our salads etc., but there was so much and it looked so good, we didn't know where to begin. I went with the house specialty — Prime Rib and Greek Saganaki — while my date helped herself to stuffed flounder and deep fried mushrooms. All of the entrees included salad bar, (as many trips as you care to make) and choice of potatoes. We ordered two rounds of stuffed potato puffs.

Needless to say, the meal was exquisite. The portions were more than generous and cooked to perfection. We could hear the guitar music vaguely in the background. We did our best to finish everything. Mr. Jeff McKuen, Sharon and the rest of the staff bent over backwards to make our visit to The Ice House as pleasant as ever. The bill, however, may have been the most pleasant part of the evening. It was surprisingly moderate, even for a poor college kid.
On Deck at Moonraker’s

Dining out at Captain Alexander’s Moonraker is like stepping out to sea. Not only is the restaurant’s decor patterned after a ship, but the seafood served tastes as if it had been freshly pulled on deck and cooked directly from a fisherman’s net.

The Moonraker, which sits on a bank of the St. Joseph’s River, is divided into three sections. On the first floor rests the elegant Singapore Room, the restaurant’s most formal. The Fisherman’s Wharf, also located on the first floor, has a less formal atmosphere complete with bar and booth. It’s decor, however, is just as appealing as the Singapore Room’s, for the authentic shiplike atmosphere pervades the entire building.

Upstairs, Davy’s Locker promises entertainment to an after-dinner crowd. It has a dance floor, and its dark atmosphere coupled with sukked seating is quite conducive to between-dance conversations. Drinks are also available.

My companion and I dined in the Singapore Room where service was unsurpassable. Drinks were served promptly. Our waitress, Janet, spoiled us with personalized, courteous service and even provided additional background on several of the menu’s dishes — those with which we were unfamiliar. Sausage requests, water glasses were refilled continually throughout the meal.

A word no less than “charming” can accurately reflect the Singapore Room’s atmosphere. The wall of the Room is glassed and looks upon the river. Since a deck (which diners can pull on deck and cooked directly from a fisherman’s net)

Mary Fran Callahan

table’s conversation. Menus in the form of miniature maps enhance the decor. Lighting is also handled beautifully, for candles sit atop every table while lanterns cast soft lights on the main floor.

Appetizers are available, and I would recommend the shrimp — which are incredibly fresh and served with a tasty sauce. The salad bar is another wonder, for it features three kinds of baked bread (kept warm), plus five dressings and an extensive assortment of toppings. A liter of wine is included with the Caesar Salad.

Served in warm butter, a side dish of sauteed mushrooms complements any entree. Entrées, by the way, are reasonable, for portions are extremely generous and quality is not lost in quantity. Price varies, however, from the Boston Scrod at $7.95 to the $12.95 Lobster Tail & Steak.

One asset of the restaurant’s menu is the Seafood Combination. A customer can sample both steak and seafood, for half the entree is meat; the other half, seafood.

Scallops were very tender and coated with just the right amount of batter. Steak was thick, juicy and simply delicious. My companion rated the lobster equally well. She was so pleased with it that she served it.

If you must choose a dessert after dinner, consider the cheesecake. Baked with a nut crust, it is especially tasty. Apple pie a la mode is greatly enhanced when accompanied by the house’s hot rum sauce.

Captain Alexander’s Moonraker merits an excellent recommendation, for its atmosphere lives up to its food, and its food, so fresh, greatly complements the shiplike atmosphere.

Steve and Ale is a contemporary restaurant with an Old English atmosphere, like an old country inn. The dark woodwork, handsome decor, and dim lighting make for a peaceful and relaxing setting.

I cannot count the times I have stopped into the cocktail lounge for “just one drink” and found myself staying for an entire “Happy Hour” and then dinner. Steak and Ale’s cocktail lounge has a habit forming.

Live entertainment is offered Tuesday through Saturday evenings. For the last few months, a soft contemporary band has supplied the lounge with soft contemporary songs of Carole King Joni Mitchell, Bread, and others.

My reservation was during peak business hours, but when I arrived I was promptly seated by a smiling hostess. Steak and Ale is one of the few restaurants in town that will accept reservations on a football weekend.

On this particular evening, I began with an appetizer to accompany my dinner. Steak, and Ale’s vegetable platter had me spellbound. There is ample seating, an infinite variety of drinks, and excellent bartenders. If the drink you desire doesn’t exist, the bartenders will create it. There is also a wide variety of specialty drinks.

The Singapore Room, the restaurant’s most formal, is divided into three sections. On the main floor rests the elegant Singapore Room, the restaurant’s most formal. The Fisherman’s Wharf, also located on the first floor, has a less formal atmosphere complete with bar and booth.

It’s decor, however, is just as appealing as the Singapore Room’s, for the authentic shiplike atmosphere pervades the entire building.

Upstairs, Davy’s Locker promises entertainment to an after-dinner crowd. It has a dance floor, and its dark atmosphere coupled with sukked seating is quite conducive to between-dance conversations. Drinks are also available.

My companion and I dined in the Singapore Room where service was unsurpassable. Drinks were served promptly. Our waitress, Janet, spoiled us with personalized, courteous service and even provided additional background on several of the menu’s dishes — those with which we were unfamiliar. Sausage requests, water glasses were refilled continually throughout the meal.

A word no less than “charming” can accurately reflect the Singapore Room’s atmosphere. The wall of the Room is glassed and looks upon the river. Since a deck (which diners can pull on deck and cooked directly from a fisherman’s net)
Faring Well on a Student Budget

Michael Onufrak's favorite South Bend eating spots for off-campus students with only five dollars after the rent is due:

1) The Commons—Without doubt your best buy and convenient to campus (located across the street from Corby's in five points district). Three bucks gets you a large bowl of chili, a hot ham and cheese sandwich, and a Drewry's (classic midwestern brew) on tap. Atmosphere unpretentious and service quick.

2) B & L Barbeque—Located on Rte. 31 in Niles, Michigan. Perhaps a bit out of the way, but worth the drive. Recommended to off-campus students not only for exquisite cuisine, but also for large portions. Onion rings and large ham and beef sandwiches your best deal. Serves schooners of beer on Sundays.

3) Sub Machine—Located on Lincolnway near the 100 Center and included because fast food is a magic fact of life. There is no outstanding sub shop west of Harrisburg from what I have seen. Nostalgic Easterners can get by here with a little imagination. Double meat turkey a good choice. Easily filled up for five bucks.

4) Shakey's Pizza—Three dollars and twenty five cents gets you all you can eat from 5 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Choice of pizza, chicken, spaghetti, and several extras. All a.c. students who have missed lunch know that bulk is important, so this deal is particularly attractive. Get there early since lines can be long. Located at 3215 E. Edison.

5) The Huddle—Another sad reality for the a.c. student. Everyone has their own approach to this establishment which has a monopoly on the noon meal. I have learned to avoid the special and concentrate on the special, but contain far less grease.

This dish can be supplemented with yogurt and milk rendering it somewhat nutritious and less bland. Also superior to the usual Huddle fare is the soup. Best bet: pack lunch yourself.

Taste & Civility at Tippecanoe Place

Taste and civility in equal balance greet you at Tippecanoe Place, perhaps South Bend's finest restaurant. But the stately ambiance does not overshadow the fare, which is exceptional.

A lover of old gothic mansions will be enchanted by Tippecanoe Place even out of an education. Try the tips with medium sauce (true aficionados know super hot hides subtle flavor), with extra hot on the fries. Disco music often overplayed, but occasional reggae break is refreshing.

4) Shirley's—Open all night. Stay away from chili and any other dish you can't see all of. Omelettes and other breakfast fare cheap and usually just right for late night or early morning scene. Located at Twyckenham and Mishawaka Aves.

Mike Onufrak

Taste & Civility at Tippecanoe Place

Mark Rust

Taste and civility in equal balance greet you at Tippecanoe Place, perhaps South Bend's finest restaurant. But the stately ambiance does not overshadow the fare, which is exceptional.

A lover of old gothic mansions will be enchanted by Tippecanoe Place even out of an education. Try the tips with medium sauce (true aficionados know super hot hides subtle flavor), with extra hot on the fries. Disco music often overplayed, but occasional reggae break is refreshing.

4) Shirley's—Open all night. Stay away from chili and any other dish you can't see all of. Omelettes and other breakfast fare cheap and usually just right for late night or early morning scene. Located at Twyckenham and Mishawaka Aves.

Mike Onufrak

Taste & Civility at Tippecanoe Place

Mark Rust

There's No Place Like Our Place!

— entertainment in the lounge 6 nights a week
— weekday lunches from 11:00 to 2:00
— dinner served from 5:00 to 10:00 (ill 11 on Friday and from 4:30 to 11 on Saturday)
— Sunday Brunch from 11:00 to 3:00
— Sunday Dinner 4:00 to 9:00
— and, most importantly, the finest food and atmosphere in Michiana!

620 West Washington, South Bend.
Reservations available. Phone: 231-9077
Jeremiah Sweeney’s; Exotically Mellow

If you are tired of theme restaurants, those polyester places of pleasure that sprawl up in the mid seventies offering loads of contrived atmosphere (often serving as a false front for mediocre food), then you will like Jeremiah Sweeney’s.

The plain, box-like exterior of the building belies the lush innovative interior. The atmosphere is derived from a multi-level design. The dining area is separated into a number of smaller, intimate areas. The overall effect is sumptuous, and definitely conducive to romance. Upon first entering, you see the lounge. It, like the dining area, is divided into many individual environs nestled amongst greenery. One area is a fireplace. On many nights, soft string music is performed in keeping with the setting. Drinks are served with a flare that makes even a mundane scotch and soda interesting. A number of exotic house specials are offered including an item called “the Moose River Hummer”.

After being seated, guests are presented with a combination wine list and appetizer menu. The appetizers are the same as those available in the lounge, and include a number of items rare to Hoosierland, like a personal lounge, and include a number of items the same as those available in the and appetizer menu. The appetizers special Mexican entree that add true diversity. Other items of particular interest are scallops, Alaskan king crab legs, and Chicken Alfredo. The range of steaks includes prime rib and porterhouse.

Included with the entree is a trip to what Sweeney’s somewhat pompously calls its United Nations Salad Bar. I wouldn’t call it international, but I would call it good. In addition to the standard iceberg lettuce, choice of dressings and raw vegetables, there are several other salads — cucumbers in cream, and marinated legumes. Despite the images the name conjures, the liver pate was delicate and moist. Other offerings included, fresh bread, herring in cream, a multitude of fresh fruits, and for the elitist, caviar. Special mention should be made of the croutons, which are the best I have ever had; they’re crispy, yet they melt in your mouth, delightful, rare combination. Also available is a heartily vegetable soup.

One must fight the temptation to gorge oneself at the salad bar, because the entrees are worth savoring every bite. I had the prime rib, which Sweeney’s prepares using a method few restaurants bother with. The care was evident in the results I received. The large slab of meat was cooked to perfection, and it’s tenderness almost made a knife unnecessary. My companion had the “Steak Neptune,” which consisted of a filet smothered in a bernaise sauce and topped with King Crab legs, and an artichoke heart. It was, in her words, “excellent.”

For those still able, a tempting diversity of desserts is offered. Featured is the renowned Haagan-daz creammess. Prices at Jeremiah Sweeney’s are what you would expect from a restaurant of its caliber. Dinners range from $7 to $12. When compared to other establishments that charge comparable loads o f contrived atmosphere (often sprang up in the mid seventies offering some supposed dressings. The lettuce was of a variety that I have never seen; it was brown in color. And, curiously, the croutons were green. Needless to say, this review can not cover the salad bar, as I was thoroughly repulsed. The lack of a “maitre de” could be described as appalling; however, I prefer to refer to it as barbaric. The seating arrangements showed an absolute lack of taste, as I was seated next to a Neanderthal who insisted upon consuming his pork with the delicacy of a starved wolf. However, he insisted that this rancorous deed was a necessity owing to the consistency of this meat. To further demonstrate his point, this savage attempted to tenderize his pork by beating it mercilessly on his plate. I haven’t anyone here heard of the “Burgundy marinade”?

On this occasion, I left my head and propelled myself towards this salad bar. Despite commenting the arduous journey, my efforts were for naught. What was referred to as the salad bar was nothing more than some simple lettuce with supposed dressings. The lettuce was of a variety that I have never seen; it was brown in color. And, curiously, the croutons were green. Needless to say, this review can not cover the salad bar, as I was thoroughly repulsed. Returning to my seat amidst this confusing, loud babble, I regrettably viewed the main course. I was fortunate enough to avoid the pork, but cursed to have chosen the casserole. Assuming that its contents were rightfully dead, I amounted my palate with this matter. Normally I expected to recover.

Supplement Design by Molly Woulfe* Mary Dumm
Ad Design by Bruce Oakley* Dave Wood

The Saga of SAGA

The immediately striking feature of the Saga Food Service dining halls is their atmosphere. Having been accustomed to a sedate and serene candle-lit dinner of veal scallopini blan with a bottle of Chateau de Rochelle, my culinary experience at Notre Dame could at best be described as an experience with a “nouvelle cuisine.”

The lack of a “maitre de” could be described as appalling; however, I prefer to refer to it as barbaric. The seating arrangements showed an absolute lack of taste, as I was seated next to a Neanderthal who insisted upon consuming his pork with the delicacy of a starved wolf. However, he insisted that this rancorous deed was a necessity owing to the consistency of this meat. To further demonstrate his point, this savage attempted to tenderize his pork by beating it mercilessly on his plate. I haven’t anyone here heard of the “Burgundy marinade”?

To equally complement the lack of a “maitre de” is the non-existence of “le garçons.” After silently fuming for two hours for a waiter to approach with the wine list, a replica of my previous Neanderthal neighbor informed me (with the gracefulness of a jackass) that I was expected to fend for my own food. Thus, I approached the service line. The details of this experience will have to be saved for a later review of the horror: “Phantom of the Opera” as my life was shortened by twenty years. Equally terrifying, but more humiliating was the ordeal of the salad bar. After getting bruised, battered, and buffeted innumerable times in my valiant efforts to reach the salad bar, I was reduced to assuming the tactics of this crowd to reach my destination. I lowered my head and propelled myself toward this salad bar. Despite commenting the arduous journey, my efforts were for naught. What was referred to as the salad bar was nothing more than some simple lettuce with supposed dressings. The lettuce was of a variety that I have never seen; it was brown in color. And, curiously, the croutons were green. Needless to say, this review can not cover the salad bar, as I was thoroughly repulsed. Returning to my seat amidst this confusing, loud babble, I regrettably viewed the main course. I was fortunate enough to avoid the pork, but cursed to have chosen the casserole. Assuming that its contents were rightfully dead, I amounted my palate with this matter. Normally I would have referred to it as food simply out of kindness, but this was an extreme case of inhumane treatment which will be reported to the United Nations. I can say no further on the main course since my doctors have advised me to avoid situations which raise my blood pressure.

In the same vein, I wish to avoid the dessert list, it is too searing to recall in gastronomic horror. The frozen custard was tolerable, but the rum cake reeked of something other than rum. I think that it had a similar odor to ... Ed’s state; sported collapsed from food poisoning before completing this review, but is expected to recover.
Ah, yes, life on a Christian campus.

Lynn, a friend, lived in a single directly across from an alcove containing several vending machines. Although Lynn is occasionally awakened at 4 a.m. by cans thumping from the Pepsi machine, she likes her room's location, as she is a junk food junkie herself.

Well, Lynn in her room's location.

One afternoon, not long ago, she was studying history notes at her desk when someone rapped at her door. A short, elderly man in workclothes peered inside. He was holding a heavy-looking box. "Scuse me, miss, but I carried this in and left my keys in my Lynn, a chocolate fiend, studied the assortment longingly, then returned to her chair and craned her neck. The box was lined with Hershey bars, Clark Bars, M & M's, and other goodies.

"Sure." The man eased the box to Lynn, who eagerly reached down and grabbed a handful of candy bars. Curious faces appeared in the doorway.

"Hey..." Lynn began. "Wow, Doublemint, too!" the other girl chorused, pawing past M & M's.

"What's going on?" someone asked.

"Free candy! The workman left it!" Carol proclaimed, stuffing candy into her mouth. "No, a workman set it down for a minute," explained Lynn. "Yeah! No kidding! Pig out!" Carol reached down and grabbed a handful of candy bars. Curious faces appeared in the doorway.

One of the girls put down her book and turned to the left. Lynn returned to her book, and life went on.

In an instant, the room was a zoo, with girls knocking over plants, stepping on albums, elbowing, and jostling, to get at the candy. A slight success. The strip is translated into 22 foreign languages for newspapers in 64 foreign countries. Note the humor or warmth is lost in the translation. Somehow, the "Peanuts" gang—Charlie Brown, Linus, Lucy, Schroeder, Woodstock, Peppermint Patty, and of course Snoopy—touch all of us. That is the unique genius of their creator, Charles "Sparky" Schulz.

DO YOU BELIEVE IT, WOODSTOCK?
PEANUTS IS 30 YEARS OLD!

"I have frequently referred to the comic strip as a sidewalk medium," says Schulz. "By this, I mean that the comic strip appeals to just plain people. However, if handled in the proper manner, the comic strip can burst these tradi tional bounds and appeal also to people who are better educated and are fortunate enough to have a more cultured background. To do this, the cartoonist himself need not be this educated or cultured, but he must possess that rarest of all commodities, which is plain common sense."

As the popularity of the "Peanuts" strip has grown, so has its success in other media. The record now seems nothing short of remarkable. The 20th animated network TV special, "Life is a Circus, Charlie Brown," will be aired in October. There have been four feature-length movies, a long-run ing stage musical, "you're a Good Man Charlie Brown," and literally hundreds of books. Additionally, the "Peanuts" characters have appeared on merchandise ranging from greeting cards to sportswear to leaves of bread. Schula personalfly has to have an 'in' somewhere. All the licensee begins marketing the product.

And, just like when he started out 30 years ago, Schulz writes and draws every strip himself.

"My main objective has always been to try to draw a good strip every day," he says. "Every emotion that you have, plus every experience and bit of knowledge which you have acquired, go into the creation of a comic strip."

"The workman stood in the doorway. Punches froze in mid-swing, and then everyone stampeded from the room, except for Lynn. Doors slammed up and down the hall, and then it was quiet.

The workman looked at the tipped plants, at the chocolate crushed into the carpet, Lynn's face. He picked up the half-empty box, reached into it, and silently handed Lynn a Mars Bar. Then he left, shaking his head.

A more-cynical-than-before Lynn keeps to herself at her desk. "The next time Carol walks into this room," she vows grimly, "I'm going to break her over her head."

Thirty years ago United Features Syndicate began distributing a new comic strip about a pint-sized sad sack with a round head and a slightly precocious dog. The original client list was just seven papers—the Washington Post, Chicago Tribune, Allentown Call-Chronicle, Bethlehem Globe-Times, Denver Post, Minneapolis Star-Trubine, and Seattle Times. The strip caught on. Its popularity grew and grew and it still hasn't stopped. Today it is read by more than 50 million people every day in 1,800 newspapers, including The Observer. Good grief, Charlie Brown! "Peanuts" is 30 this month.

The universal appeal of "Peanuts" accounts for its spectacular

OVER THE HILL? HARDLY:

Charlie Brown & Gang Hit 30, but Going Strong

Molly Woulfe
It would be difficult this week not to write about Bill Toohey's death. For over two weeks now, he has constantly been on my mind. Like everyone else, I have been praying for him, with the tears very close to the surface. He was a graceful and gifted priest; and if I say I loved him, I am not implying we were close friends, or even that I saw him often. At times, during the past ten years, I'm sure that I said things or did things that hurt him, but there were days also when I didn't think he was being kind to me.

Colleagues, in trying to define themselves, are capable of wounding each other with the minor cruelties; after the past ten years, I'm sure that I said things I saw him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish. It would be difficult this week not to see him often. At times, during the same general skirmish.
about to re-enter dialogue with the community of nations.
Secretary of State Edmund Muskie sticks a Carter-Mondale button in his lapel and goes off to address the National Woman's Democratic Club in Washington on this warm Thursday afternoon - that the United States was about to trade 52 Americans in exchange for 52 Americans. "I've heard the rumors," says Muskie enigmatically. Then he steps back and says more, for the moment.
At a crowded Pentagon briefing, spokesman Thomas Ross issues a categorical denial of everything: "the facts of the matter are that we have not loaded planes, we have not issued a signal, or if the hostages have been moved or if the president is planning some dramatic move. There are no facts."

---

Muskie

(continued from page 6)

---

The Daily Crossword

All Rights Reserved
In baseball

Irish close out fall season

by Dave Irvin
Sports Writer

Notre Dame’s baseball team concludes its fall season with a pair of single games against St. Francis beginning at 3 p.m. today and 9 a.m. Saturday. Both games are scheduled to be played on Jake Kline Field.

The Irish’s record improved to 8-1 last weekend as Notre Dame slipped past Valparaiso 2-1 while the second game, called because of darkness, tied 3-3. St. Francis will be looking to tarnish that record.

“It’s a big game for St. Francis,” Irish head coach Larry Gallo said. “They’ve been wanting to play Notre Dame for awhile.”

Gordy Gillespie is head coach for St. Francis. While at Lewis University, Gillespie won three consecutive NAIA championshipships. Besides being head baseball coach, Gillespie is also St. Francis’ athletic director and director for Joliet Catholic football.

“St. Francis plays good ball and they’re a tough club,” Gallo said. “In the spring, they schedule 106 contests and usually finish the season with 65 plus games under their belt. Their Southern trip consists of 30 games with the best competition in the South and Southwest.” Notre Dame had just nine hits in the doubleheader against Valparaiso with sophomore Rick Chryst getting two hits. Chryst was pacing the Irish regulars with a .460 batting average before the doubleheader. Senior captain Mike Jamieson also had two hits while Greore lamz stole two bases bringing his total to seven.

“We didn’t play well at all against Valparaiso,” Gallo said. “We didn’t do well at all in hitting with men on base and in scoring position. We didn’t negotiate a sacrifice bunt and missed some signs that cost us. We simply prolonged the second game,” he commented.

The Irish did not throw their top two pitchers—senior Mike Deasey and Bob Bartlett—against Valparaiso, but Gallo was impressed with those that did pitch.

“We didn’t throw our so-called top pitchers, but the pitchers that did throw did a good job as anyone this fall,” Gallo said. Steve Whitmyer pitched the first four innings, surrendering just one run (the first he has given up this fall in 10 innings), while Greg Jaun pitched three innings of shutout relief.

“We didn’t throw our so-called top pitchers, but the pitchers that did throw did a good job as anyone this fall,” Gallo said. Steve Whitmyer pitched the first four innings, surrendering just one run (the first he has given up this fall in 10 innings), while Greg Jaun pitched three innings of shutout relief.

In the second game, Bill Maret, freshman Bob Hickey and Steve Galliano combined to limit the Crusaders to three runs.

The Notre Dame baseball team closes out its fall season at home this weekend against St. Francis. (photo by Rachel Blount)
The Notre Dame water polo club recently returned from a tournament held at Loyola of Chicago. Although the team lost all four games, it played well against the other established varsity squads.

In the opening match-up, Iowa State edged past the Irish 19-17. Three other near victories eluded them as they fell to Southern Illinois, Kentucky, and national powerhouse Brown.

The Irish team's efforts did not go unnoticed by the opposing coaches and players. "After the Brown game, their coach told us how really impressed he was with our program," relates club president Mike Corbisiero. "The coach of Loyola and all the Kentucky players were also very impressed."

Why was everybody so impressed with the Irish performance? First of all, this is a first-year team. Water polo at Notre Dame was just an idea in the heads of Corbisiero and a few others, until last spring. Second, it is a club-sport competing on an even level with varsity programs. And lastly, the team has no coach.

"We had one lined up last year, but he moved," Corbisiero says. So these responsibilities were taken over by Corbisiero, and so far he has put in a good performance as player-coach. The coach of Loyola and all the Kentucky players were also very impressed.

Why was everybody so impressed with the Irish performance? First of all, this is a first-year team. Water polo at Notre Dame was just an idea in the heads of Corbisiero and a few others, until last spring. Second, it is a club-sport competing on an even level with varsity programs. And lastly, the team has no coach.

"We had one lined up last year, but he moved," Corbisiero says. So these responsibilities were taken over by Corbisiero, and so far he has put in a good performance as player-coach. The coach of Loyola and all the Kentucky players were also very impressed.

Why was everybody so impressed with the Irish performance? First of all, this is a first-year team. Water polo at Notre Dame was just an idea in the heads of Corbisiero and a few others, until last spring. Second, it is a club-sport competing on an even level with varsity programs. And lastly, the team has no coach.

"We had one lined up last year, but he moved," Corbisiero says. So these responsibilities were taken over by Corbisiero, and so far he has put in a good performance as player-coach.

The coach of Loyola and all the Kentucky players were also very impressed."

No rally

Jim Magers, chairman of the pep rally committee, announced that there will be no pep rally for the Notre Dame-Army football game due to break.

Friends wish you luck on a big exam. Good friends stick around to see how you did.
Pistol Pete calls it a day

by Tim Prister

He was certainly not an imposing figure on the basketball court. All his life he was extremely frail looking compared to the other ballplayers. Adding to his slender physique, his hair was long and shaggy and he insisted on wearing a pair of deceptively, floppy woolen socks for every game. In fact he wore the same pair all through college.

Early in his career, he even had to begin his jump shot from his right hip because the ball was simply too heavy.

"Someone said it looked like I was handling a pistol, shooting from the hip," he said, thus prompting the nickname, "Pistol."

Pete Maravich stood out from all the rest, yet it was not his appearance that separated him from the other ballplayers on the court. Rather it was his magical ability to place an inflated spherical object into a metal ring 18 inches in diameter, virtually any time he felt like it.

Of course, Maravich's ball handling ability was not inborn or learned overnight. Countless hours were spent perfecting his technique always under the watchful eye of his eventual college coach who displayed his bag of tricks for an LSU team that was not his appearance that separated him from the other ballplayers. Nothing in the game ever had so stunning a training program," said Bill Gutman biographer of Maravich's life.

The Pistol's rare ability was evidenced by his shattering of nearly every college scoring record. Maravich averaged an incredible 44.2 points per game during his LSU career, a record that has remained unscathed for over a decade.

Even more remarkably, Maravich managed to average over five assists a game while still continuing to score in droves. Meanwhile, Pete displayed his bag of tricks for an LSU team that consistently finished near the .500 mark in won-loss percentage. Thus critics of Maravich's razzle dazzle, behind-the-back pass, now you see it, now you don't style of play, labeled him a loser, certainly unable to lead an NBA team to a title.

Faced with constant adversity, including a bout with mononucleosis at training camp before his second season in the NBA, Maravich continued to play his game. He had the uncanny ability to delight the throngs of people who oftentimes attended NBA games for only one reason — to see the Pistol.

Fortunately for the pro basketball diehards, standouts like "Magic" Johnson and Larry Bird are playing pro basketball, but there will never be another Pete Maravich.

Thanks for the memories Pistol, and on behalf of the NBA, much obliged.

Sure, the Atlanta Hawks were playoff contenders for a few years but Maravich's flashy style of play disturbed angered and offended many of his teammates who many pro scouts said could play defense only if assigned to guard a statue. Maravich managed to lead the league in scoring in the 1976-77 season with 31.1 p.p.g.

But, probably Maravich's best season was the following year when he almost single-handedly led the Jazz into the playoffs. Amidst a heated dispute with general manager Lewis Schaffel, the Pistol sparked a 10-game winning streak — shortly before suffering a knee injury that later required surgery and forced him to miss 32 of the last 35 games. At the time of his injury, Maravich was leading the league in scoring.

In 1979, the Jazz replanted its roots in Salt Lake City, Utah. By this time, Maravich's struggle with his arthritic knees two months.

On January 22, 1980, Maravich signed with the Boston Celtics as a free agent. Finally, after waiting 10 years to get into a meaningful playoff, the "Of Pistol," as one writer quipped, "had nothing left but blanks."

Pete Maravich decided to call it quits this year after averaging nearly 25 points a game over a 10 year span. Pete Maravich was not a loser in fact, the Pistol was a breath of fresh air into a generally listless game — pro basketball.

Thanks for the memories Pistol, and on behalf of the NBA, much obliged.

1981 UNIVERSITY OF NOTRE DAME CALENDAR

Explore the SECOND FLOOR of the Hammes Notre Dame Bookstore

Subjects Include:

BEST SELLERS COOKBOOKS ART RELIGIOUS
SPORTS 1981 GIFT CALENDARS BLANK BOOKS CHILDREN'S BOOKS TRAVEL

THE UNIVERSITY OF NOTRE DAME, A PORTRAIT OF ITS HISTORY & CAMPUS By Professor Thomas Schlereth (A Beautifully Illustrated History of Notre Dame), Hardbound $25.00, Paperback $7.95.

THE UNIVERSITY OF NOTRE DAME ALL AMERICANS. Photos and descriptions of Notre Dame All-Americans from 1903-1978. $6.95.

WAKE UP THE ECHOS By Ken Rapoport. The story of Notre Dame football. $8.95.

Football Saturday Hours 9am-1:30pm 3pm-5:30pm

"We aren't JUST textbooks you know!"

Hammes Notre Dame Bookstore
Hockey tix pick-up today

Season hockey tickets may be picked up at the south floor ticket window in the ACC between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. today. Students who have not yet purchased season tickets may wish to do so at these times.

Band salutes classical music

This week, the Notre Dame Band's halftime show will salute the field of classical music. The band opens its halftime presentation with the march from Peter Ilyitch Tchaikovsky's 6th SYMPHONY, followed by the music of Franz Liszt. The band plays brassy, angular and impressive composition — HUNGARIAN RHAPSODY NO. 2. Much of the great treasury of classical music comes from the world of opera. The band plays a few of the great arias such as: "OVER THE RAINBOW" FROM "THE WIZARD OF OZ," "THINK ONWARD, SONG, MARCH FROM FAUST, TRIUMPHAL MARCH, AND THE THEME FROM CARMEN." The band's final presentation is the inspiring GREAT GATE OF KIEV from "pictures at an Exhibition" by Moussorgsky. The band concludes its performance with "NOTRE DAME OUR MOTHER AND THE NOTRE DAME VICTORY MARCH."
Irish to clash with Cadets

by Bob Hoffman

Sports Editor

Army, the first of the three military service academies on the east coast, this Friday will host Notre Dame for a 1:30 grid match.

Cadets, who have compiled a 2-2-1 record this fall, were followed by the remaining Commander-in-Chief's Trophy candidates later in the season.

The West Point men, who began the season relatively well by defeating Holy Cross and Bucknell, finished deadlocked at 24 points against Lehigh last Saturday under the direction of head coach Ed Cavallaro. Cavanaugh, the third Army mentor in many years, directed his squad with 32 lettermen returning from last year's 2-8-1 team.

"The Army team is a far cry, for instance, from the 1970 team that was 1-9-1 or the 1971 team that was 0-10," says Dan Devine, who boasts a 48-18-0 record as the Irish head coach. "Notre Dame fans are going to be in for a real surprise when they see how much improved the caliber of their skilled people and the whole team is.

Army, who last met Irish in 1977 and fell 24-0 in Giant Stadium, is lead offensively by split end Mike Fahnestock and back half Gerald Walker.

Walker, a 5-11, 180-pounder from Greenville, S.C., was the Cadet's second leading rusher last year and has already amassed 500-plus yards in his team's first five contests.

(continued on page 19)

Back to K C

The bounces have been going Philadelphia's way. There's no question about that. But this team, appearing in its first World Series in 30 years, is starting to feel like it's been tapped on the shoulder by destiny.

"I haven't seen this type of confidence before in my major league career," said Del Unser, who contributed a vital pinch hit (continued on page 16)

With Chicago Bears

Kris Haines finds new home

Almost two football seasons have passed since Notre Dame's great triumph at the Cotton (Freeze) Bowl of '79. Some of its principal participants have since graduated and moved on to bigger and better things. Joe Montana is now a QB for the 49ers. Vagas Ferguson is a star rookie for the Chicago Bears.

But what of the man who made the catch to preserve the miracle? Kris Haines has found a home in Chicago.

As a backup split end and special teams player extraordinaire, he has adapted to a role he is expected to play among the 45-cog team that make up the Chicago Bears. An after-practice chat with the affable 79 alum uncovered much of the enthusiasm that Haines has carried with him into the pros.

"I've really enjoyed being with the Bears," Haines noted. "This is just like a rookie year for me and I realize its going to take awhile so I try to be a valuable to the team wherever I can.

A 9th round Redskin draft pick in 1979, Kris was waived two days prior to the season opener. He caught on with the Bears in December for the final two regular season contests and helped the Monsters of the Midway achieve an NFC wild card playoff spot.

During the 1980 exhibition season, Haines received his greatest thrill to date as a pro against the Cleveland Browns. QB Mike Pluggs led go a "Hail Mary" pass toward the Chicago end zone as the half ended. Kris snared the ball in mid-air after it was tipped by another player. "I was surprised to see the ball floating toward me, but was so elated when I knew it was a touchdown."

Haines relates the fact that his coach, Neill Armstrong, has been instrumental in helping Kris establish himself as an NFL player. "Neill is firm, but extremely well liked by his players," said Haines. "He's a player's coach." Kris also mentioned that Armstrong's offensive system is not as difficult to grasp as Washington coach Jack Padden's playbook.

(continued on page 17)