Cleveland (AP) — President Carter and Ronald Reagan argued war and peace in a climactic campaign debate Tuesday night, the president accusing his Republican challenger of "dangerous and belligerent" talk, Reagan retorting that the use of force should be as "always and only a last resort."

The 90-minute confrontation produced no dramatic collision; rather there was a persistent — sometimes spirited — exchange, marked by frequent disputes over policies and programs. Reagan was especially aggressive in contradicting Carter when the president characterized Reagan's proposals, Carter, as usual, was the master of detail.

At one point, Reagan was discussing world troubles and he likened Carter to a "witch doctor," who grows anxious when a real doctor appears with the right prescription. Carter also wielded a tart tongue on several occasions. "I respect President Reagan's right to disagree with me," Carter said, "but I hope he doesn't deride my proposals." Reagan, on the other hand, had cut his teeth in the Senate, where he often had to fight for the right to introduce amendments which he considered "ridiculous."

Carter said that during the eight years before he became president, U.S. military strength declined. He said the Democratic administration has reversed that. Reagan scoffed at this, saying the Republican administrations of these years had to try to get defense spending through from Democratic Congresses, which often cut appropriations. He also said the Carter administration has cut by 38 percent a five-year defense spending blueprint left by former President Gerald R. Ford.

The second question turned on what the candidates would do about inflation and the responses brought a spirited give and take. Carter called Reagan's 10 percent income tax cut proposal in each of the next three years one of the "most highly inflationary proposals ever submitted to the American people" and "highly ridiculous."

He also quoted his Republican opponent as having said that the minimum wage was a major cause of unemployment. Reagan said "we don't have inflation because the American people are living too well, we have inflation because the government is living too well."

Reagan cited his experience as governor of California which prompted Carter to say during his eight years as governor, Reagan submitted three of the highest tax increases ever enacted in the state.

The 90-minute confrontation produced no dramatic collision; rather there was a persistent — sometimes spirited — exchange, marked by frequent disputes over policies and programs. Reagan was especially aggressive in contradicting Carter when the president characterized Reagan's proposals, Carter, as usual, was the master of detail.

At one point, Reagan was discussing world troubles and he likened Carter to a "witch doctor," who grows anxious when a real doctor appears with the right prescription. Carter also wielded a tart tongue on several occasions. "I respect President Reagan's right to disagree with me," Carter said, "but I hope he doesn't deride my proposals." Reagan, on the other hand, had cut his teeth in the Senate, where he often had to fight for the right to introduce amendments which he considered "ridiculous."

Carter said that during the eight years before he became president, U.S. military strength declined. He said the Democratic administration has reversed that. Reagan scoffed at this, saying the Republican administrations of these years had to try to get defense spending through from Democratic Congresses, which often cut appropriations. He also said the Carter administration has cut by 38 percent a five-year defense spending blueprint left by former President Gerald R. Ford.

The second question turned on what the candidates would do about inflation and the responses brought a spirited give and take. Carter called Reagan's 10 percent income tax cut proposal in each of the next three years one of the "most highly inflationary proposals ever submitted to the American people" and "highly ridiculous."

He also quoted his Republican opponent as having said that the minimum wage was a major cause of unemployment. Reagan said "we don't have inflation because the American people are living too well, we have inflation because the government is living too well."

Reagan cited his experience as governor of California which prompted Carter to say during his eight years as governor, Reagan submitted three of the highest tax increases ever enacted in the state.

The 90-minute confrontation produced no dramatic collision; rather there was a persistent — sometimes spirited — exchange, marked by frequent disputes over policies and programs. Reagan was especially aggressive in contradicting Carter when the president characterized Reagan's proposals, Carter, as usual, was the master of detail.

At one point, Reagan was discussing world troubles and he likened Carter to a "witch doctor," who grows anxious when a real doctor appears with the right prescription. Carter also wielded a tart tongue on several occasions. "I respect President Reagan's right to disagree with me," Carter said, "but I hope he doesn't deride my proposals." Reagan, on the other hand, had cut his teeth in the Senate, where he often had to fight for the right to introduce amendments which he considered "ridiculous."

Carter said that during the eight years before he became president, U.S. military strength declined. He said the Democratic administration has reversed that. Reagan scoffed at this, saying the Republican administrations of these years had to try to get defense spending through from Democratic Congresses, which often cut appropriations. He also said the Carter administration has cut by 38 percent a five-year defense spending blueprint left by former President Gerald R. Ford.

The second question turned on what the candidates would do about inflation and the responses brought a spirited give and take. Carter called Reagan's 10 percent income tax cut proposal in each of the next three years one of the "most highly inflationary proposals ever submitted to the American people" and "highly ridiculous."

He also quoted his Republican opponent as having said that the minimum wage was a major cause of unemployment. Reagan said "we don't have inflation because the American people are living too well, we have inflation because the government is living too well."

Reagan cited his experience as governor of California which prompted Carter to say during his eight years as governor, Reagan submitted three of the highest tax increases ever enacted in the state.

The 90-minute confrontation produced no dramatic collision; rather there was a persistent — sometimes spirited — exchange, marked by frequent disputes over policies and programs. Reagan was especially aggressive in contradicting Carter when the president characterized Reagan's proposals, Carter, as usual, was the master of detail.

At one point, Reagan was discussing world troubles and he likened Carter to a "witch doctor," who grows anxious when a real doctor appears with the right prescription. Carter also wielded a tart tongue on several occasions. "I respect President Reagan's right to disagree with me," Carter said, "but I hope he doesn't deride my proposals." Reagan, on the other hand, had cut his teeth in the Senate, where he often had to fight for the right to introduce amendments which he considered "ridiculous."

Carter said that during the eight years before he became president, U.S. military strength declined. He said the Democratic administration has reversed that. Reagan scoffed at this, saying the Republican administrations of these years had to try to get defense spending through from Democratic Congresses, which often cut appropriations. He also said the Carter administration has cut by 38 percent a five-year defense spending blueprint left by former President Gerald R. Ford.

The second question turned on what the candidates would do about inflation and the responses brought a spirited give and take. Carter called Reagan's 10 percent income tax cut proposal in each of the next three years one of the "most highly inflationary proposals ever submitted to the American people" and "highly ridiculous."

He also quoted his Republican opponent as having said that the minimum wage was a major cause of unemployment. Reagan said "we don't have inflation because the American people are living too well, we have inflation because the government is living too well."

Reagan cited his experience as governor of California which prompted Carter to say during his eight years as governor, Reagan submitted three of the highest tax increases ever enacted in the state.

The 90-minute confrontation produced no dramatic collision; rather there was a persistent — sometimes spirited — exchange, marked by frequent disputes over policies and programs. Reagan was especially aggressive in contradicting Carter when the president characterized Reagan's proposals, Carter, as usual, was the master of detail.

At one point, Reagan was discussing world troubles and he likened Carter to a "witch doctor," who grows anxious when a real doctor appears with the right prescription. Carter also wielded a tart tongue on several occasions. "I respect President Reagan's right to disagree with me," Carter said, "but I hope he doesn't deride my proposals." Reagan, on the other hand, had cut his teeth in the Senate, where he often had to fight for the right to introduce amendments which he considered "ridiculous."

Carter said that during the eight years before he became president, U.S. military strength declined. He said the Democratic administration has reversed that. Reagan scoffed at this, saying the Republican administrations of these years had to try to get defense spending through from Democratic Congresses, which often cut appropriations. He also said the Carter administration has cut by 38 percent a five-year defense spending blueprint left by former President Gerald R. Ford.

The second question turned on what the candidates would do about inflation and the responses brought a spirited give and take. Carter called Reagan's 10 percent income tax cut proposal in each of the next three years one of the "most highly inflationary proposals ever submitted to the American people" and "highly ridiculous."

He also quoted his Republican opponent as having said that the minimum wage was a major cause of unemployment. Reagan said "we don't have inflation because the American people are living too well, we have inflation because the government is living too well."

Reagan cited his experience as governor of California which prompted Carter to say during his eight years as governor, Reagan submitted three of the highest tax increases ever enacted in the state.
Saudia Arabia severed ties with Libya yesterday in a dispute over Western-producing giants over the Gulf. The government of four special American radar planes to monitor the Iran-Iraq war. Exxon Corp., which receives oil from them, is New York inえた that neither had any losses if any changes in the oil company's operations as a result of the rift. A statement broadcast by the Saudi oil state radio said the decision was taken after Libyan attacks "exceeded all limits, extending to the Moham cash tied itself." The statement carried by Radio Riyadh said: "This is no longer the tolerated. We cannot remain silent." While cutting off relations with the Libyan regime, Saudia Arabia would like to bring "brotherly relations between the Saudi and Libyan peoples," the announcement added. On Oct. 19, Libyan leader Col. Muammar Khaddafy, who supports Iran in the war, charged that the U.S. planes destroyed Moham holy places in Mecca, Islam's holiest city, and called for a holy war to liberate them. — AP

The growing anticipation of Americans that U.S.-backed Saudia Arabia may not be released has not raised the public's judgement of how President Carter has handled the year-end confrontation, an Associated Press-Newsweek ABC News poll showed yesterday. The poll, which has, in fact, been more entrenched in the presidential election in recent weeks, as an increasing number of people say Carter's handling of the crisis has been designed to advance his re-election campaign. In addition, Americans do not favor any deal that would trade space of military equipment to Iran in exchange for the release of the 52 hostages. The recent swirl of rumors and speculations on the outcome of the hostages case has generated a substantial public expectation that they will indeed be freed. Thirty-eight percent of those interviewed Oct. 22-24 said they expected or would not be released by the end of the year. Twenty-five percent said the release will come later this year and 21 percent expected they would still be held next year. Sixteen percent of those interviewed on Oct. 17 had said by telephone were not sure. By a 53-36 margin, the public disapproved of the way Carter has handled the year-long crisis. Ten percent were not sure and one percent had not heard of the situation. Thus, Carter has not yet benefited from the expectation of a peaceful end to the crisis. Public reaction to the hostages' release will depend on how Carter's handling of the crisis is perceived. — AP

Inside Wednesday

Papers grow obsolete

Newspapers and magazines will be obsolete within the next seven years, Sound frightening? Shockingly for these changes, two of the millions in this country who loves to tear apart the Sunday sports section or devour Time magazine each week, that statement should make you stop and think about the direction of print journalism. The words for the future are going to be "cable communication." The print media will be absorbed by tiny ten-cent disks that can be placed into your television set. You will be able to flip a switch press a button and the world of news is yours. Literally. The bottom line of this little invention is that you would be able to read a "hot-off-the-press" copy of The New York Times, Chicago Tribune or even The Dallas Star right in the privacy of your own living room, never having to venture again to the neighborhood news stand. Sounds good in theory but will it work, you ask? Read on.

On my return flight back to school, I had the distinct pleasure of sitting next to a reporter from the Wall Street Journal who was enroute to California on vacation. Having grown up in Jersey and having a business executive for a father, the WSJ was always a constant fixture on our newspapers. On my return flight, I was tickled pink that we the opportunity to talk about the future of journalism. Most large city newspapers are already preparing for the time when they will revolutionize the industry by uniting it with the cable TV industry, he explained. The big shots in the business are ready to risk a major part of the little people like reporters, production crews and staff personnel are becoming a bit worried about their jobs. And should they be.

"Okay," I said, "I sort of understand that this turn-around would place a lot of people on the unemployment line but would save millions of dollars in the process. Think of all the paper the industry can save! Wouldn't it be better in the long run?"

He looked at me out of the corner of his eye and simply said, "No. Not really. The American people will never accept it. Generation after generation has grown up reading a newspaper with their morning coffee or thumbing through a magazine on their way to work. We are not ready," he continued.

"But it's progress and progress is inevitable," I said. "Look at our society, everything is being geared to and programmed for an overall takeover by computers. Why shouldn't this just be another link in this chain of events?"

"You don't understand," he mumbled angrily, "to adopt the cable TV system would result in a tremendous loss of society. Cable TV would center around the buttons on the keyboard. We would never have to leave our living rooms because the "button" would flash in front of our eyes in living color."

The growing anticipation of Americans that U.S.-backed Saudia Arabia may not be released has not raised the public's judgement of how President Carter has handled the year-end confrontation, an Associated Press-Newsweek ABC News poll showed yesterday. The poll, which has, in fact, been more entrenched in the presidential election in recent weeks, as an increasing number of people say Carter's handling of the crisis has been designed to advance his re-election campaign. In addition, Americans do not favor any deal that would trade space of military equipment to Iran in exchange for the release of the 52 hostages. The recent swirl of rumors and speculations on the outcome of the hostages case has generated a substantial public expectation that they will indeed be freed. Thirty-eight percent of those interviewed Oct. 22-24 said they expected or would not be released by the end of the year. Twenty-five percent said the release will come later this year and 21 percent expected they would still be held next year. Sixteen percent of the 2,405 adults interviewed nation-wide by telephone were not sure. By a 53-36 margin, the public disapproved of the way Carter has handled the year-long crisis. Ten percent were not sure and one percent had not heard of the situation. Thus, Carter has not yet benefited from the expectation of a peaceful end to the crisis. Public reaction to the hostages' release will depend on how Carter's handling of the crisis is perceived. — AP

The Observer

Mostly sunny and very cool today with highs in the mid 40s. Mostly clear tonight and Thursday with lows in the mid 20s. A little warmer Thursday with highs in the 50s. — AP

Observer-public service

As a public service, The Observer publishes short press releases, better known as blurbs, submitted by campus and local organizations. All blurbs must be turned in no later than 1 p.m. of the afternoon prior to publication, and they must be typed double-spaced for a better format. They will not be accepted. Blurs, unfortunately, are not guaranteed publication, and are run only on a space available, priority service as designated by the news editors. We remind that The Observer alone should not be relied upon to publicize events to ensure some mention of your event, submit a separate entry to the On Campus Today section of the paper.
University hosts Chautauqua

by Sue Kelleher

Chicago journalists Kenan Heise and Norman Mark spoke on "Chicago Journalism: Then and Now" in the American Studies sponsored Chautauqua Series. Last night's chautauqua, the first of three was held in the Library Auditorium.

The chairman of the series, Professor Thomas Schlereth opened the session and presented the speakers before an audience of 36 persons.

Kenan Heise spoke on journalism in the windy city from an historical view point. He instructed his audience to "remember what you think tonight, not what I say or facts or dates." Ideas and questions, he insisted, are important.

The first Chicago papers, appearing in 1833, were primarily questions, he insisted, are important. "Penny journalism", journalism that was intellectually and economically accessible to the mass characterized papers which cost a few cents and served the people's needs. The greatest of these, The Chicago Daily News, had the largest circulation among Chicagoans in 1876.

By the early 1900's, the Associated Press had grown tremendously and was selling franchise. During the 1940's, Heise said, many smaller papers, due to their size were forced to merge forming larger publications, namely, The Chicago Tribune and Chicago Sun-Times.

The impact of the Associated Press was that it standardized and limited the scope, style, and subject matter of papers. Heise hailed the New York Times as individualistic, but bemoaned the fact that its literary style is so intellectual that "it doesn't really reach out to many people who could appreciate it."

"Heise said that people want the provocative writing or "escape journalism" of tabloids such as the Enquirer, but need solid news as well.

Why can't one paper, he asked, have both?

Norman Mark, radio personality, author and host of NBC's "Today in Chicago" commented on Heise's talk.

Mark cited mercenary editorial management as a primary restricting factor in terms of a reporter's tack, style discretion in covering news. The result is "corporate journalism" in which a paper's profit has priority over the quality and accuracy of its reporting.

Conversely, "individual journalism" allows reporters unlimited freedom and journalists can truly serve the needs of their readers.

In illustrating the contrast between individual and corporate journalism, Mark told several humorous tales of individual

(continued on page 10)
A whole lot more. In fact, we’re the largest bank in the tri-state area of Michigan, Indiana and Ohio. So our expertise meets the diversified financial needs of the chemical, agricultural, retailing, electronics and transportation industries. Plus many other businesses located throughout the entire Great Lakes region.

Nationally, we serve a substantial number of the Fortune 500 companies in the U.S., including 22 of the top 25.

National Bank of Detroit understands that business and industry require financial flexibility to operate successfully. And because we’re creative and have the necessary resources, we have been able to help more businesses grow over the past 47 years than any other bank in the area.

NBD is the lead bank of National Detroit Corporation, a bank holding company, with assets in excess of ten billion dollars. Over the years, our reputation for liquidity has been excellent. Just as it is today. Which means NBD can consistently accommodate banking needs through economic ups and downs.

There’s a lot more to be said, but we think our record speaks for itself.

The Kemp-Roth Bill has been calculated by some economists to cost the Treasury $16.1 billion the first year, $42.4 billion the second and $77.5 billion the third. When Reagan is asked how he plans to balance the budget, he explains that “some of the best” economists in this country have supported him and also that President Kennedy used the device and it “worked fine.”

However, the author of that early 1960’s plan, Walter Heller, scoffs at Reagan’s program. In fact, he has referred to Reagan as the “conservatives” economic guru” and the “Republican Santa Claus.” The reality, according to Heller, is that this is a completely different time than Kennedy’s; there was no recession then, though they suffered serious unemployment. Conditions are utterly different today. One respected conservative, former Nixon adviser Herbert Stein, has likened the probability of the program’s success to “human life on Mars.” He added, “I would not invest much in a McDonald’s franchise on Mars.”

On the other hand, Prof. Claude Renshaw of the Business/Economics Department at Saint Mary’s, supports the Kemp-Roth Bill completely, he finds it “very much in order as a form of indexing, which keeps people from being pushed into higher tax brackets.” He also believes taxes should be made simpler, more straightforward so there is less incentive for people to find ways around the tax. Renshaw disagrees with the “government hand-aid approach.” He finds it amazing how the government has tinkered with the economy more in the last two years than ever before,” and he finds it “scary how the government, with Carter’s massive economy program as evidence, is going to use the tax laws and the Federal Reserve Board to regulate the economy.”

In opposition to Renshaw is Prof. Michael Francis of the Government Department, who decries Reagan’s plan as an “utterly simplistic pipe dream.” According to TRB of The New Republic magazine, “He (Reagan) makes everything simple. The economy? Balance the budget, slash expenditures, cut taxes.”

“Deflation.” John Anderson recently noted, “not only robs the American consumer of purchasing power, it also saps the health of the economy, leading ultimately to recession and economic stagnation.” In recognizing inflation as the nation’s number one problem, Anderson, unlike Carter (who lays the blame on business and labor), believes the responsibility for inflation “rests on the doorstep of the Federal Government.”

Anderson’s major stand calls for the elimination of unnecessary federal spending. He is the only presidential candidate who is not calling for a tax cut, because he feels that balancing the budget is the first priority. Toward this end, Anderson introduced legislation in Congress to revamped the Congressional budget-making process and require the President to submit a balanced budget to Congress. Anderson also supports new tax Riehle promotes 'power base'

by Earl Rix

At the HPC meeting in Flanner last night Student Body President Paul Riehle announced that elections for the new Student Senate will be held on Monday, November 10th. An informational meeting will be held at 8:00 p.m. Thursday in the student government offices in La Fortun for persons wishing to run for the Senate. A mandatory meeting for those seeking election will take place at 8:00 p.m. Monday, November 3rd at the same location. The Senate's first meeting is planned for November 17.

As dictated by the Board of Trustees, the Student Senate will make recommendations to the CLC which in turn makes recommendations to the Vice-President of Student Affairs. Although Riehle had hoped the new Senate could bypass the CLC, he said, "I think we can still do a lot of things and we will have to use the new Senate as a power base."

Riehle said that one of the first issues to confront the new Senate will be the restructuring of the CLC. "I think we will see a CLC different from what we saw in the past," Riehle said.

Other topics of conversion included the announcement of a Masquerade party to be held at 9:00 Friday in the north dining hall. Food, drink and music will be provided free of charge. The Swolver Trophy, awarded for best ball activities, was awarded to Alumni for the month of September.

WINE TASTING!

For The Benefit Of The Mentally Handicapped!

November 13, 1980 At The Notre Dame ACC, 5 To 9:30 P.M.!
Northern Indiana's Largest Selection
5CT70 U.S. 31 North — 3 miles north of campus

Friday, November 14 • 6:00 p.m.
Notre Dame ACC

Tickets: $8.50 reserved seats still available at the ACC Box Office and River City Records.

AN EVENING WITH FRANK ZAPPA

Thursday, November 6 • 6 p.m.
Notre Dame ACC

Tickets: $8.50 reserved seats still available at the ACC Box Office and River City Records, 50970 U.S. 31 North — 3 miles north of campus.

Letter to the DOE manager of the Nevada Test Site, has requested "all data and reports pertaining to the Sept. 25 gas release." She also stressed the need for "appropriate notification mechanisms so that we can effectively respond to future radiation releases from the Nevada Test Site." Said Myers, in an interview, "These weapon tests have presented a health hazard in the past, and we're concerned that they might again in the future.

Utah Environmental Health Director Alvin Rickers took much the same attitude. "I think notification has got to be improved," he said.

In addition to the controversy over the delay in notification, some experts have also expressed concern that radioactive gases other than Xenon-133, which is less hazardous than other radioactive gases, was the only substance from the blast picked up by off-site monitors when they finally turned on. It was monitored at 44 picocuries per cubic meter of air at Lathrop Wells—about 20 times the normal background radiation level, but not enough to represent a health hazard, according to federal officials.

Dr. Karl Z. Morgan, professor of nuclear engineering at the Georgia Institute of Technology and a leading expert on radiation effects, said that the failure to promptly monitor the release may account for the apparent absence of other radioactive gases. "The first few hours are the most important," he said. "If you don't make measures when the cloud is going over, it's too late.

Morgan said that he believes "there's no question that there was a release of other noble gases," as well as possibly other radioactive isotopes such as Iodine-131 which is extremely dangerous.

A chemical cemetery and government consultant, with over 20 years experience of monitoring nuclear fallout, went beyond Morgan's conclusion, but requested anonymity. He reiterated the DOE account of the incident "absolutely ridiculous. If you have one fission product, like the Xenon-133 they've admitted to," he said, "you have all the others, including Iodine-131, which is most dangerous in this situation."

THE PEOPLE OF ANHEUSER-BUSCH...
...HAVE A MESSAGE FOR YOU!

We're energetic people with hands in many different industries. The people of Anheuser-Busch come from a wide variety of backgrounds and bring all sorts of skills to bringing projects and diversification. We're yeast and corn, familiar with the manufacturing, metal recycling, real estate development and rail transportation, trucking and baseball. Of course, we're also the largest brewer in the world and producers of Budweiser, Michelob, Michelob Light, Busch, Natural and Warsteiner Hofbrau.

Right now the people of Anheuser-Busch are looking for more enthusiastic, friendly people to add to our talent mix. We're particularly interested in qualified engineers who have a sense of adventure about work and careers.

CENTRAL ENGINEERING
B.S.M.E. - M.E.'s will gain experience in such diverse fields as material handling, equipment layout, piping visualization, ventilation, heating and air conditioning, and high-speed bottle and can packaging. M.S.E. - E.E.'s will be working in such areas as electronics machines, software, application, power distribution, sub-station layout, as well as industrial and commercial lighting, electrical control systems, and systems control.

These positions are project oriented and allow you the opportunity to work on a project from conception to completion.

INDUSTRIAL ENGINEERING

Our Corporate Industrial Engineering Department presently has openings for Industrial Engineering Trainees at the B.S. and M.S. degree levels. These positions will be project oriented and will include assignments in operations control and improvement, facilities revision, plant design and layout, and evaluation of major capital expenditure opportunities and alternatives.

CORPORATE MANAGEMENT TRAINING PROGRAM

Opportunities exist in our Corporate Management Training Program for individuals with moderate responsibility and engineering background. Under this one-year program, college graduates are exposed to all aspects of Anheuser-Busch Companies functions and management. Time is spent in a "home" department, as well as in staff and line organizations to learn through observation and on-the-job practice. At the end of the year-long course, trainees are assigned to a management or professional position.

The Corporate Management Training Program includes classroom instruction in management techniques, and emphasizes on-the-job training. During the course of the program, trainees are evaluated through their own written reports, individual interviews and operational performance evaluations.

Let us tell you more about the people of Anheuser-Busch. We'll be visiting your campus on Wednesday, November 14, at 5:00 p.m. at the Van Andel Auditorium of Hope College. Talk to us by talking to your placement officer, or write to the people of Anheuser-Busch at:

ANHEUSER-BUSCH COMPANIES, INC.
Corporate Employment
301 Industrial Drive
721 Peastalize • St. Louis, Missouri 63118
An Equal Opportunity Employer M/F
Return Brademas

The Observer recommends that incumbent Third District Congressman John Brademas be returned to the House of Representatives for a twelfth term. Bayh has been involved in a primary battle with Congressman Dan Quayle. Quayle is backed by big-money conservative coalitions and big business. Quayle is in favor of increased defense spending and reduced federal spending. He also favors a balanced budget and a tax cut.

Bayh has voted against Republican tax plans and has shown moderation in defense spending. He is a supporter of ERA, a believer that an individual has the right to decide for herself on the abortion issue, and a leading proponent of peace.

Ultimately this race, like so many others this year, is a contest between conflicting political philosophies. Quayle represents the conservative approach which hopes to halt inflation, unemployment and other economic worries through a balanced budget, tax cuts, and incentives to big business. Bayh represents the moderate approach which relies on the reduction of the federal deficit, the expansion of the welfare state and other reforms of the past in order to achieve a balanced economy. From his many years in the Senate Bayh knows that broad, little-known provisions of legislation are systematically removed, somewhat contradictory and risky.

Quayle contends that when Bayh was elected 18 years ago times were different and, consequently, Bayh has outlived his usefulness. Many years in the Senate Bayh knows that broad, little-known provisions of legislation are systematically removed, somewhat contradictory and risky. Quayle contends that when Bayh was elected 18 years ago times were different and, consequently, Bayh has outlived his usefulness. Many years in the Senate Bayh knows that broad, little-known provisions of legislation are systematically removed, somewhat contradictory and risky.
Today
Wednesday, October 29, 1980 — page 8

Campus
- 11:15 a.m. — dance program, ballet folklorico mexicana, sponsor: dept. of modern languages, o'laughlin auditor.
- 12:15 p.m. — dept. of microbiology seminar, "metabolic effects of vitamin B6 & its antagonist, 4'-deoxypyridoxine," dr. stephen p. coburn, ft. wayne st. hospital & training center, 274 galvin.
- 4:30 p.m. — physics dept. colloquium, "superconducting magnets," dr. roger boom, u. of wisc. 118 nieuwland.
- 4:30 p.m. — relly lecture in chemistry - "the role requiring enzymes involved in de novo purine biosynthesis," dr. stephen j. benkovic, 128 nieuwland.
- 6 p.m. — campus scout meeting in the breen phillips puzzle room.
- 7:30 p.m. — interview meeting in the breen phillips puzzle room.
- 9 p.m. — nazz open stage.

Molarity
I DON'T SEE WHY EVERYONE COMPLAINS ABOUT THERE BEING NOTHING BUT JUNK ON TV
I FIND MOST OF THIS CHALLENGING AND INTRIGUING
HELP ME, MR. WIZARD
AND JUST THINK, TENNESSEE TUXEDO IS ON AT 2:30

Beaux Arts clue
Today's Beaux Arts Ball clue for the hidden case of beer: "Sit down, but don't get comfortable."

Band pictures
Band Members:
Please pay for all pictures by Thursday at noon. For more information, please read the bulletin board in the band room.

The Daily Crossword

S.U. VAN LINES
is running weekends again
Restaurant Discounts offered on the route:
(with Student ID)
Pizza Hut (10%)
Brown's Chicken (10%)
Ponderosa (10%)
and Movie Theaters on the route offer discount tickets:
- available through the Ticket Office, 2nd Floor LaFortune
Ride VAN LINES: $1.00/semester — ticket office
Services Commission

Halloween Day Sale
JUST FOR THE RECORD
Buy 3 — Get 1 Free
Get your 4th single, LP or tape selection for free
Friday, Oct. 31, 1980
10 a.m.-10:00 p.m.
JUST FOR THE RECORD
100 CENTER, MISHAWAKA
(3 off coupons not good on sale items)
Joyce has decided that the time has come for Notre Dame head coaching job. Since the August edition of the Dan "I'm-Ready-for-Prime-Time" Devine Show on ABC, dozens of names have been mentioned. However, the Bottom Ten has learned, from a highly placed, secret source known only as "The Devil in Miss Jones," that everyone has been on the wrong track. Reportedly, Fr. Ed Jones has decided that the time has come for Notre Dame to take a step toward Bottom Ten supremacy.

Accordingly, a whole new list of candidates has arisen. These are the men that the Bottom Ten voters consider most qualified to turn Notre Dame's program around.

Topping all lists is Colorado's Chuck Fairbanks. After Fairbanks took over, a mediocre Colorado program quickly became the nation's worst. Voters agree that Chuck could do the same under the Golden Dome.

There are a couple of coaches who would like to follow in the footsteps of their predecessors, and into the Notre Dame job. Ara Parseghian moved from Northwestern to legend, and Rick Venturi would like to do the same thing. Last week he led the Wildcats to their seventeenth straight loss, so he has the credentials. Dan Devine went from the pads to their seventeenth straight loss, so he proved he can lead a loser in Notre Dame.

A Chicago Cubs man, Joey Amalfitano, says that he'll take the job, but only on an interim basis. Ronald Reagan is a candidate and may be out of a job. He proved he can lead a loser in "Bedtime for Bonzo." By the way, here are the rankings:

1) Colorado (0-7) — have given up 49 points per game.
2) Northwestern (0-8) — even the San Diego Chicken couldn't help this week.
3) Vanderbilt (0-6) — have lost 28 consecutive SEC contests.
4) Cincinnati (0-7) — looking forward to this week's Richmond Spider game.
5) Oregon State (0-6) — we didn't know Long Beach St. had a football team — but the Beavers managed a 31-21 loss.
6) TCU (0-6) — Horned Frogs held hostage: Week Six.
7) Oklahoma State (0-5, 1) — scored 14 points the hard way: a TD, an FG, and two safeties to tie Kansas.
8) Penn (1-5) — disappointed a homecoming crowd of 6800 and lost 8-0 to Yale.
9) Columbus (1-5) — were brushed aside by Colgate, 15-22.
10) New Orleans Saints (0-8) — more than the Mississippi River dumps on New Orleans. Also receiving votes: Michigan State (1-6).

Topping all lists is Colorado's Chuck Fairbanks. After Fairbanks took over, a mediocre Colorado program quickly became the nation's worst. Voters agree that Chuck could do the same under the Golden Dome.

There are a couple of coaches who would like to follow in the footsteps of their predecessors, and into the Notre Dame job. Ara Parseghian moved from Northwestern to legend, and Rick Venturi would like to do the same thing. Last week he led the Wildcats to their seventeenth straight loss, so he has the credentials. Dan Devine went from the pads to their seventeenth straight loss, so he proved he can lead a loser in Notre Dame.

A Chicago Cubs man, Joey Amalfitano, says that he'll take the job, but only on an interim basis. Ronald Reagan is a candidate and may be out of a job. He proved he can lead a loser in "Bedtime for Bonzo." By the way, here are the rankings:

1) Colorado (0-7) — have given up 49 points per game.
2) Northwestern (0-8) — even the San Diego Chicken couldn't help this week.
3) Vanderbilt (0-6) — have lost 28 consecutive SEC contests.
4) Cincinnati (0-7) — looking forward to this week's Richmond Spider game.
5) Oregon State (0-6) — we didn't know Long Beach St. had a football team — but the Beavers managed a 31-21 loss.
6) TCU (0-6) — Horned Frogs held hostage: Week Six.
7) Oklahoma State (0-5, 1) — scored 14 points the hard way: a TD, an FG, and two safeties to tie Kansas.
8) Penn (1-5) — disappointed a homecoming crowd of 6800 and lost 8-0 to Yale.
9) Columbus (1-5) — were brushed aside by Colgate, 15-22.
10) New Orleans Saints (0-8) — more than the Mississippi River dumps on New Orleans. Also receiving votes: Michigan State (1-6).

Topping all lists is Colorado's Chuck Fairbanks. After Fairbanks took over, a mediocre Colorado program quickly became the nation's worst. Voters agree that Chuck could do the same under the Golden Dome.

There are a couple of coaches who would like to follow in the footsteps of their predecessors, and into the Notre Dame job. Ara Parseghian moved from Northwestern to legend, and Rick Venturi would like to do the same thing. Last week he led the Wildcats to their seventeenth straight loss, so he has the credentials. Dan Devine went from the pads to their seventeenth straight loss, so he proved he can lead a loser in Notre Dame.

A Chicago Cubs man, Joey Amalfitano, says that he'll take the job, but only on an interim basis. Ronald Reagan is a candidate and may be out of a job. He proved he can lead a loser in "Bedtime for Bonzo." By the way, here are the rankings:

1) Colorado (0-7) — have given up 49 points per game.
2) Northwestern (0-8) — even the San Diego Chicken couldn't help this week.
3) Vanderbilt (0-6) — have lost 28 consecutive SEC contests.
4) Cincinnati (0-7) — looking forward to this week's Richmond Spider game.
5) Oregon State (0-6) — we didn't know Long Beach St. had a football team — but the Beavers managed a 31-21 loss.
6) TCU (0-6) — Horned Frogs held hostage: Week Six.
7) Oklahoma State (0-5, 1) — scored 14 points the hard way: a TD, an FG, and two safeties to tie Kansas.
8) Penn (1-5) — disappointed a homecoming crowd of 6800 and lost 8-0 to Yale.
9) Columbus (1-5) — were brushed aside by Colgate, 15-22.
10) New Orleans Saints (0-8) — more than the Mississippi River dumps on New Orleans. Also receiving votes: Michigan State (1-6).

New MUSI C BOX
120 W. Mishawaka Ave. Mich., IN (256-5440)

Lots to see at the best new club in town, with the best entertainment around:

Oct. 31, Nov. 1 — South Shore with Straight Flush
Nov. 6 — Alex DeGrassi with Rick Walters
Nov. 7 & 8 — The 3rd Street Sliders
Nov. 12 — Free Spirit
Nov. 13 — Jeff Lorber Fusion with Free Spirit
Nov. 14 — New grass Revival with Pink and the Naturals
(continued from page 12):

(FLA). Underwood reports the vast Japanese interest in American football, an interest which cost Tele Planning Tokyo Sony or Osaka Panasonic, just as the Mirage Bowl was animals or birds or factory workers, but after sponsors, e.g. Tokyo Sony or Osaka Panasonic, just as the Mirage Bowl was named after an automobile.

What happened to sports for pleasure?

HAIR STYLING FOR DISCRIMINATING MEN & WOMEN
161/ Lincoln Way West - South Bend, Indiana 46628
The gift of music-
..Items

The Windjammer
...a service for discriminating men & women
1837 Lincoln Way West - South Bend, Indiana 46628
MAIL ORDERS FOR THE SERIES
232-6622

Irish victory in Boston

Women rowers win regatta

by Steve O'Brien

Boston, Mass. — With almost two and half months of training behind them, the Notre Dame Rowing club ventured to Beanstown for the annual Head of the Charles regatta. The Irish women conquered the field to receive first place golds.

The Head of the Charles is the biggest one day regatta in the world and the largest head race in North America. It was truly an event worth watching that Sunday as nearly eighty thousand spectators crowded the banks of the Charles to watch approximately seven hundred and twenty boats race. The competition ranged from local high school teams to college teams, rowing clubs and the U.S. and West German teams.

Preparation for the "Head" is especially difficult since it is a three mile race, and essentially a race against the clock. Besides the countless miles run by the members of the team and coach, Cleve Graham, the team practices six days a week at 5:15 a.m. and rows up to fourteen miles a day on the St. Joe River.

Many different types of boats competed in the "Head." The Irish sent a men's eight man boat, one women's eight, one lightweight four-man boat where the average weight must be one hundred sixty five pounds per person and one mixed boat (four men, four women). With up to forty boats in each division the competition was fierce. I witnessed one team ecstatic at their finish of thirteenth. For the members of the team and coach, it was their first race as women's coach.

Following proper rowing custom the Irish women tossed coxswain Rodriguez into the river after their victory. As Pauline Rodriguez emerged from the water, a local TV reporter asked her how it felt to win, soaking wet. Pauline Rodriguez rowed an excellent race. As they waited nervously for the results they had no idea how well they had actually done. When they found out they had won the women's club eights they were ecstatic.

One unidentified member of the team said, "Boy, am I going to get drunk tonight!" This was an especially sweet victory for the women's coach Jill DeLucia, as it was her first race as women's coach.

Irish victory in Boston

...AMST

(continued from page 3)

Pauline replied, "It feels great," and added, "It was really great."" As they waited for the results they had no idea how well they had actually done.

One unidentified member of the team said, "Boy, am I going to get drunk tonight!" This was an especially sweet victory for the women's coach Jill DeLucia, as it was her first race as women's coach.

Following proper rowing custom the Irish women tossed coxswain Rodriguez into the river after their victory. As Pauline Rodriguez emerged from the water, a local TV reporter asked her how it felt to win, soaking wet. Pauline Rodriguez rowed an excellent race. As they waited nervously for the results they had no idea how well they had actually done. When they found out they had won the women's club eights they were ecstatic.

One unidentified member of the team said, "Boy, am I going to get drunk tonight!" This was an especially sweet victory for the women's coach Jill DeLucia, as it was her first race as women's coach.

Women rowers win regatta

University honors director

Rev. Robert J. Austgen, C.S.C., director of graduate admissions and the summer session of the University of Notre Dame, has been elected president of the Association of University Summer Sessions at the October conference in Boulder, Colo.

A member of the University administration since 1970, he has been the recipient of degrees at Fribourg University in Switzerland, Gregorian University in Rome and Notre Dame.
The Top Twenty Teams in The Associated Press college football poll, with the points in parentheses, are listed below with final standings:

1. Alabama (22-0-0) - 2,900
2. Texas (22-0-0) - 2,300
3. Penn State (22-0-0) - 1,800
4. Ohio State (22-0-0) - 1,400
5. Florida State (22-0-0) - 1,200
6. Notre Dame (22-0-0) - 1,000
7. Georgia (22-0-0) - 800
8. Nebraska (22-0-0) - 600
9. Miami (22-0-0) - 500
10. Michigan (22-0-0) - 400
11. Oklahoma (22-0-0) - 300
12. Texas A&M (21-1-0) - 200
13. Penn State (21-1-0) - 100
14. Michigan State (21-1-0) - 100
15. Georgia Tech (21-1-0) - 70
16. Oklahoma State (21-1-0) - 70
17. Ole Miss (20-2-0) - 50
18. Miami (19-3-0) - 40
19. Nebraska (19-3-0) - 40
20. Arizona State (19-3-0) - 30
21. Boston College (19-3-0) - 30
22. Maryland (19-3-0) - 20
23. Connecticut (19-3-0) - 20
24. West Virginia (19-3-0) - 20
25. Georgia Tech (18-4-0) - 20
26. Kansas State (18-4-0) - 20
27. South Carolina (18-4-0) - 20
28. North Carolina (18-4-0) - 20
29. Oklahoma State (18-4-0) - 20
30. Texas A&M (18-4-0) - 20

The Associated Press
The Notre Dame hockey team suffered an extreme case of the sophomore jinx as the Irish squad bowed to Bowling Green 4-3 on home ice. The Falcons now boast a 1-1 slate while the Irish drop to 1-2 on the season. Putting on one face, Notre Dame was able to control the puck and sporadically threaten to score. But putting on another face, they had the puck fall apart and turn to a darker, less effective side.

"I thought we played sluggish in the first period," said coach Lefty Smith. "We didn't start to pick up until the third period." Bewildered himself as to the sudden face-lift, Smith claimed his squad seemed ready during pre-game rituals. It's nothing you can put your finger on," said Smith. "We seemed like we were ready to play in the locker room prior to the game and they were doing well in warm-ups.

Smith specified back checking and inconsistency as the major defensive criteria that the Irish must improve on in addition to the transition from offense to defense on the ice. "It's nothing you can put your finger on," said Smith. "We seemed like we were ready to play in the locker room prior to the game and they were doing well in warm-ups."

Ferragamo has been the top-ranked passer in the NFL, completing 64.1 percent of his throws for 1,601 yards and 14 touchdowns. As a result, he's on the threshold of a probable $1 million-plus, multi-year contract with the Rams or another team. But a serious injury in the meantime could leave Ferragamo with nothing.

The problem is that it's real expensive for short-term policies," he said of his interest in insuring his strong right arm. "Lloyds of London is the only company I know that makes up policies like that for professional athletes." Ferragamo told the Los Angeles Herald Examiner.

"The more I play without a contract, the hotter things get all the time," said Ferragamo. But he also has a warm spot when he thinks about what he would have accepted from the Rams just a few months ago.

"I'm lucky I wasn't signed," he added. "Things worked out a lot better for me this way. What I would have signed for then and now is quite a contract."

Ferragamo recently took personal charge of his negotiations with Rams' General Manager Ron Klotskerman. Ferragamo won't say what he seeks, but he concedes little progress toward an agreement has been made in his four meetings with Klotskerman in recent weeks. A debate over who should play quarterback ended suddenly in the season opener. Pat Haden, No. 1 with the Rams since 1976 with a contract for about $200,000 a year, suffered a broken index finger late in a loss to Detroit.

Ferragamo's first start also was a loss, at Tampa Bay. Since then Ferragamo led the Rams to five straight victories before succumbing to the blasting tactics of the Atlanta Falcons in a 3-13 loss Sunday. Atlanta and Los Angeles are tied for first place in the Western Division of the National Football Conference — where the Rams remain, seeking to write eighth-divisional title.