Police apprehend burglars

By John M. Higgins
Staff Reporter

South Bend Police arrested two black males as they tried to enter a student house Friday night after one of the residents telephoned police while listening to the pair attempt to break through the back door.

According to Notre Dame student Jim Reynolds, he was alone in the house at 1133 Corby Street when he heard a knock on the front door at 9:30 p.m. When he didn’t hear anyone at the door, he heard someone trying to open a window at the side of the house, so he called the police.

“We’ve had some guys checking out the place earlier in the semester,” Reynolds said. “I heard them outside and figured they decided to come back. I didn’t want them to know I was home.”

Unable to open the window, the burglars then tried to break down the back door, Reynolds said. “I was talking to the (police) dispatcher when I heard the door start to come apart.

According to SBPD Sgt. Paul Just, the arresting officers observed the two men trying to break down the door and apprehended them. Jewel did not know if the pair lived in the neighborhood. He said that a third male may have eluded police.

“I was pretty impressed with the way they handled it,” Reynolds said. “People are always getting on their backs, but they got here about two minutes after I called.”

Reynolds said that he was the only student house in the neighborhood. “There were two other houses on the block,” he commented, “but after they both got robbed they moved out.”

Lame duck Congress returns

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congress is returning to town this week for the first lame-duck session in a presidential election year in 32 years, giving Democrats a chance to damage the presidency of of live the chance for a last stand.

But whether they will be able to accomplish anything before being inundated by the tide were developing Republicans in to Congress in early January is questionable.

Congress returns to town on Wednesday in the first such post-election sine die session since 1948, when Democratic President Harry S. Truman, newly elected to a full four-year term, summoned a redundant “do-nothing” GOP-controlled Congress back to town.

But Congress recessed without acting on any of the legislation Truman requested.

A test of whether the 1980 lame duck Congress will be any more productive may come on the proposed $39 billion tax cut bill being pushed by congressional Republicans—with the blessings of President-elect Ronald Reagan.

An immediate tax cut also has the support of Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia. But it is opposed by the House Democratic leadership and it appears doubtful it will get the support of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee.

Beyond this potential roadblock was the prospect of a possible veto by President Reagan to a Reagan-style tax cut—a veto that probably could be sustained by a Congress that, at least for now, remains in Democratic hands.

Lame-duck Democrats may try to push a number of pet projects, or holdover legislation supported by the Carter administration.

But Republicans have enough parliamentary devices at their disposal—especially in the Senate—to delay action on (continued on page 4)

Duggan elaborates on St. Mary’s role

Dr. John Duggan has been president of St. Mary’s College since 1975. In an interview last week with Observer staff reporter Mary Agnes Carey, Duggan discussed parietals, his time as president, the relationship of St. Mary’s, and the future of education.

Q: Students see St. Mary’s as changing this policy?
A: At first, we’ve made a lot of changes in the last two years. When I came to St. Mary’s, the parietals were 10 p.m. on Friday and Saturday night, and 6 p.m. on Sunday, and we extended those hours to midnight about the time I came. It seemed to me, after some study and consideration, that hours similar to Notre Dame’s were in the interest of our St. Mary’s students, and we changed our hours to match theirs on the weekend. I’m comfortable with the parietals we now have, and I haven’t been persuaded by any arguments that there should be some significant change.

Q: Notre Dame has the policy of visitation until midnight during the weekdays and St. Mary’s has not. What is stopping St. Mary’s from doing the same thing?
A: I’m not sure that having policies that are not between students or study groups, or whatever. I’m convinced that as a women’s college, where we talk regularly about the value of women who are learning from and with other women who are interacting regularly with them, and being free of the kind of restrictions of society that are typically imposed by strict dominance, or male presence, then there’s certainly no harm gained by introducing men to the dormitories on weeknights.

Q: I’d ask myself, in what sense are we a women’s college? If we have some classes with men, if we have men as regular fixtures in the dormitories on a day-in, day-out basis, then do we say that there are advantages for women to be educated in a women’s society? It seems the next step would be to become coeducational.

Q: What would be a cause for a change of idea?
A: I think a well-researched, well-documented proposal that addresses itself to some of the concerns that I’ve raised (would be a cause for a change of idea).

Q: When the 1972 merger between Notre Dame and St. Mary’s was completed, the future of St. Mary’s was uncertain. Looking back, what were the good and bad results of that decision?
A: Well, I wasn’t here then, so what I know I know secondhand. I think it was for a change of circumstances that results that have come from that decision. It forced St. Mary’s to do a campus-wide rethinking of what we were going. That process, I think, had an understanding that this is the kind of society you’re going to live in. Not “in loco parents,” but rather a community where people can develop and share the experiences of their development, and work toward the kind of the understanding that this is the kind of society you’re going to live in. Not “in loco parents,” but rather a community where people can develop and share the experiences of their development, and work toward the kind of society you’re going to live in.
Perpetual late-comers are like people with chronic hiccoughs—they can't help themselves. They try to conform, they do, but it is nearly impossible.

What is Time anyway? We divide it up into little packages and plan our lives to fit within them. It's convenient, that's all. Time packages get things done—but who wants to try and fit one's whole life into one? If anyone has ever had a schedule where they had to be someplace every hour of the day, they will understand what I mean. From, say, 9 a.m. till 10 p.m., you are running back and forth to places. You usually find by the end of the day that you were never really at any of those places. In your mind you were thinking ahead to the next place, and how and when you were going to get there.

Keeping strictly to a schedule reduces spontaneity and creativity. You enjoy the present moment less. Life becomes a series of what's next? "Where next? And you run around like the rabbit in Alice or Wonderland saying, 'I'm late! I'm late for a very important date.' You're so busy getting to where you are going, that you miss the reason for your going.

But, if you resign yourself to the fact that you'll get there when you can, and do that as soon as possible (like all perpetual latecomers), then it all gets done and sometimes it's a little better, and sometimes it rambles on, enjoying not ever coming to the end.

Speaking of coming to the end...twelve hours of driving through Tennessee, Kentucky, and Indiana has bought us back to the land of the Golden Dome. I am now past deadline, but I have a very understanding Design Editor who is also used to my columns being a little late.
Snite opens to public

By David Sarphie Staff Reporter

A large, enthusiastic crowd greeted the new addition to the Notre Dame campus yesterday, as the Snite Museum of Art was publicly opened for the first time. To the delight of museum director Dr. Dean Porter, over 120 students and members of the South Bend community were among the first to enter the modern structure.

"The public dedication was preceded by several days of activities, including a dedication Mass and a panel discussion by leading national art critics. "The art experts seemed very impressed with the pieces we have," Porter noted. "They compared the Snite Museum with the fine university galleries at Yale and Harvard."

The collection of alumni and faculty art pieces drew considerable attention from the first day's visitors. "We have almost one hundred alumni included in this unusual exhibit," Porter pointed out. "I think there are some very fine works here."

Porter was especially pleased at the number of visitors from the South Bend community. "Many have wondered if it's possible to do something positive in the South Bend area. I think we've proven we can." Porter emphasized the goals for which the Snite staff must now strive. "We're reached a kind of plateau," he said. "We have a good building and good people. Now it's our job to acquire more masterpieces." From the reaction of the crowds, it appears they have an excellent start.

Campus Democrats rally following Tuesday's defeat

by John W. Higgins
Staff Reporter

Speakers at a campus rally Friday afternoon called on Democrats to maintain social concern and political interest during "this long, winter of defeat and discontent" in the wake of the overwhelming conservative victory in Tuesday's election.

Three University faculty members addressed a crowd of 120 who turned out for a public discussion of the future of the Democratic Party, the South Bend community and the University.

"It's natural to feel dejected," Government Professor Edward Gaffney said, "but this is not the time to become apathetic. In the past, defeat and discontent have led to revolution. Now is the time for concern about justice, to talk to the other side, not to despair."

"If we can no longer depend on party affiliation for support," Law School Professor Edward Gaffney said, "we need to engage in a critical dialogue to see what can be done to revive those elements of the party that have become disinterested." The dedication of the crowd attending the rally to the Democratic Party was somewhat surprising. An informal survey of 14 people who attended the rally turned up no one who had actively participated in the recent election campaign on behalf of any Democratic candidate despite the bitter struggle of two Democratic Congressional leaders to remain in office.

Gaffney called for discontented Democrats to talk with party leaders on the grassroots level to find out what can be done. "Now is the time to go back to the party organization and say, 'Hey, I'm interested in active leadership, what can I do?'" The dedication of the crowd attending the rally to the Democratic Party was somewhat surprising. An informal survey of 14 people who attended the rally turned up no one who had actively participated in the recent election campaign on behalf of any Democratic candidate despite the bitter struggle of two Democratic Congressional leaders to remain in office. House Majority Whip John Brademas and three-term Senator Birch Bayh, that occurred in this district. Both were defeated by young, "New Right" candidates.

"I didn't really see a race I wanted to get involved in," one student said, also citing his residency outside of Indiana as a major factor.

The main problem with the Democratic Party today is a lack of organization of its supporters", Gaffney said. He quoted satirist Will Rogers, saying "I belong to no organized political party, I'm a Democrat."

The Notre Dame cross country team split in a double dual this past weekend in Bowling Green, Ohio. The Irish were defeated by the host Falcons 36-21. In the rally from the same race Notre dame nipped Northern Illinois 31-27.

Greg Domenet finished at 24:29 to capture the individual tally from the same race Notre Dame's Jeoff Cavaugh came in second. Chuck Aragon placed third and paced the Irish with a time of 24:40. The other finishers for the Irish were Ralph Caron (7), John Filosa (11), and John Riely (13).

"We could have run better than we did," commented head coach Joe Piane. "But overall I was satisfied with our performance. I thought John Riely ran his best race of the year. Ralph Caron also ran well.

"We have run B.G. twice this year. I think the way we ran tonight showed that we have had some improvement this year."

Piane's squad will travel to Champaign, Ill. Saturday for the NCAA District IV championships. The race will be 10,000 meters. Nine days later the NCAA championships are scheduled to take place in Wichita, Kan.

Irish suffer 3-3 loss

by Craig Chul
Sports Writer

ATLANTA -- Only a school with a 5-3 record can consider a 3-3 tie the biggest win of its season. But that certainly was the case Wednesday afternoon when Georgia Tech stunned top-ranked Notre Dame, 3-3.

The deadlock no doubt will be accompanied by an eviction notice and a final order to vacate. The Irish had been looking ahead to a big showdown with eventual national champ Miami. But to a man, the Irish denied the charges.

"We like to give the Georgia Tech team credit for a great fight," said Coach Dan Devine. "To dwell on our turnovers and mistakes would be foolish. We were simply outplayed." By the same token, don't think they gave any effort that they were able to fire down the red热nts route for a week. But on a man, the Irish denied the charges.
