Mother of 20 discusses family, work

For United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young discussed American foreign policy Saturday in the Center for Continuing Education. Young said that he believes that the problems in America today are the result of the loss of American ideals and values.

"In my travels as ambassador, I found that the people causing the troubles had either been educated in the United States or were educated by missionaries from the U.S."

Young added that the Soviet Union is not responsible for many of the political crises in countries such as El Salvador.

"We do ourselves a disservice by according most political topics to the Russians," he said."You can't have a country where fourteen families own most of the land and a church where we all declare ourselves God's children without expecting people to raise questions as to why they're hungry."

"Now that what administration is elected, I don't think that we can repeal the notion that the American government is on the side of human rights. We will never be able to reverse the American's respect for human life."

Young stressed the need for peace in order to maintain economic success on the foreign market.

"We need stability through peace in order to be able to sell our exported goods and services," he said. "In this instance the Russians are no match for us. The more we move towards peace, the more competitive we are in the economic market.

Our competition is not Russia, but Japan and Germany. While we were developing tanks during the Japanese, we were developing cars that could run 95 miles on one gallon of gasoline. The current demand is for包子 cars.

"We forced countries like Japan and Germany into peace-time development. Now they are economically stable. Their governments cooperate internationally, and have developed expert expertise.

"The United States will have to expand their business interests. There is currently a conflict between American interests and ideology.

Study skills workshops, interview workshops, human sexuality workshops and Freshman seminars are only a few of the workshops and groups offered by the Counseling and Career Development Center at Saint Mary's.

"Personal identity is confidence in the ability to maintain continuity. To establish this, the student must understand his own characteristics, physical needs and be sure of his sexual identification."

Once personal identification is established, the student should be able to express greater trust, independence and respect for others. Developing tolerance for a wide range of persons is an important aspect of this task.

Clariifying purposes and developing integrity are the last of the developmental tasks. To develop purpose an individual must formulate plans and priorities dealing with interests and lifestyles. The task of developing integrity involves making one's values more personal. Individuals must provide a set of beliefs to be used as a guideline and begin to live accordingly.

These developmental tasks are a normal part of the maturation process. Often college students have difficulties achieving them. Along with DePauw and Campbell, the Counseling and Career Development Center is provided with other counselors like Mary Thes and Pat McQuinn who understandably help students through these growth processes. DePauw is a certified psychologist and a psychiatrist is on hand if necessary.

In this respect the Career Center is only for Seniors. In fact, DePauw stresses the importance of early development. The Center provides workshops and counseling for all classes.

For all students having academic difficulties, the Center designed a voluntary program with Teresa Warren, Dean of Academic Affairs, and Susan Vaisey, Freshman Academic Advisor, to teach students how to develop towards peace, the more competitive we are in the economic market.

The possiblity of a lottery was announced in February after a record number of students submitted contracts for off-campus housing next year. Heppen had set this Friday as the deadline for students to renig on their contracts without the standard $150 and $50 deposit forfeit.

The overcrowding problem in the dormitories has not been completely alleviated, however. Some students will be required to live in the study lounges of Grace and Flanner Halls, Heppen said. "The largest number of returned contracts were in Grace and Flanner," Heppen said. "Some upperclassmen will be required to live in study lounges on Floors 2 through 11."

Heppen offered that no incoming freshmen would be required to live in the quadrangles rooms.

A release from the Housing Office states that in the future juniors will be issued residence contracts "on a space available basis" and that a committee would be formed next fall to "study the various options." Heppen declined to comment on the makeup or function of the committee.

Services and Personal Development Counseling are provided to Saint Mary's students alumni, faculty, staff and their families.

Mary Elizabeth DePauw, Director of the Center explains that the program developed in 1978 when the counseling center and career center were combined. This union encouraged students to come to the career center to discuss personal or career issues. The focus of the center is to learn growth and planning skills through workshops, groups and counseling.

On the personal level, students are encouraged to talk to the counselors about their own and college life. According to counselor Tony Campbell, "we work with a range of problems from suicide attempts to boyfrined problems." "But, he continued," the majority of the students who seek personal counseling are dealing with one or more of the seven developmental tasks faced by all young adults (which are) a normal part of growing up.

Achieving competence is the first of the developmental tasks. It involves the development of intellec tual and social abilities, as well as physical and manual skills. The young adult must also face the initial task of becoming aware of personal feelings and emotions. Without emotional independence mature autonomy can not be achieved.

The Center helps individuals deal with this. The fourth developmental task for college students is establishing identity. Identity is confidence in the ability to maintain continuity. To establish this, the student must understand his own characteristics, physical needs and be sure of his sexual identity.

Once personal identification is established, a student should be able to express greater trust, independence and respect for others. Developing tolerance for a wide range of persons is an important aspect of this task.

The Tube face test

Television is in trouble. For an industry that is based upon the creation of fantasies, the fantasy of captive and passive audiences is quickly coming to an end. Network producers and advertisers are feeling the pressure of militantly dissatisfied audiences.

For year, television audiences have eagerly swallowed whatever the networks pumped out. The routine abandonment of creativity for the comfort of audience and ratings audiences. Imitation is the key to success. If a show worked once, it will work again. And again, and again. Familiarity is the key to success in television.

Those old good days are gone. As socially conservative groups such as the Moral Majority and the National Conservative Union have risen into the public’s eye, the few voices that have ever bothered to protest immoral television programming in the past have gathered new strength. At the forefront of this movement is the Coalition for Better Television (CBT).

By June 1, the CBT will have monitored all network programming in a three-month period. The coalition will compile any incidents of explicit sex, vulgarity and profane language and broadcast, and list the 10 “most constructive” and “least constructive” programs.

The CBT will then consider any advertisements by advertisers who are judged to be in opposition to the moral character of the community. It will declare a nationwide boycott of their products.

The idea of boycotting television advertisers is not new. One victory: in the fight against violence, the Coalition for Better Television was the focus of a boycott by the National Parent Teacher’s Association and other education lobbyists during the mid ‘70s.

Those groups were upset that Godfather and Battlestar Galactica were too violent for children. But the CBT does not think violence is an acceptable behavior. While these shows eventually were pulled off the air, it was due more to the networks’ own sensitivities than to the pressure of the boycott.

The difference today is the mood of the country. People are running scared of Rev. Jerry Falwell and his Holy Crusade. Every politician in the country shivers at the thought of being peg of Rev. Falwell’s Chosen People.

The conservative and evangelical groups have proven to be the most effective campaigners and lobbyists in politics. Never mind their tactics, they are effective.

Understanding the methods and mailing lists compiled by these groups, the CBT has a tailor-made audience for its mission. The coalition offers advertisers an emotional appeal to those who see moral permissions as the greatest weakness of society. They decry the sexual explicitness of today’s media and the political force in the degradation of Christian values in a moral society. They believe that they can prove that the power of the CBT is to be feared.

For Fellow Seniors choose Hunter

I'm speechless and for me that's quite unusual. I'm surprised and pleased. It's really an honor. These were the words of Rich Hunter when he was told that the senior class had elected him Senior Class Fellow. Hunter, a Notre Dame professor and coach, is the 18th person to be named Senior Class Fellow.

Hunter is known for assisting students both inside and outside the classroom. As one student put it, "He helps us out with more than just school work. I think he's a great guy. He's always available." Another student added, "In his classes he's concerned about the students, not just pushing through the material."

A native of Belleville, New Jersey, Hunter received his undergraduate degree from Notre Dame in Government and International Studies in 1971. In 1972, he received his master's in International Economics.

As Assistant Professor in the Business School's Management Department, Hunter teaches the Legal Environment of Business and Business Law, and a graduate course entitled Legal Problems in Business.

Along with his teaching responsibilities, Hunter also coaches varsity soccer. Since 1977, Hunter has held Notre Dame's soccer program, and compiled an impressive 77-21-3 overall record.

Besides being a teacher and coach, Hunter also helps many students with legal matters free of charge. This is one of the many ways Hunter shows his interest and concern for Notre Dame students. Hunter is Supervising Attorney for the Notre Dame Legal Aid and Defender Association.

Hunter will be honored during Senior Week. Information will follow about the plans for these events at a later date.

Once seen, it can never be forgotten: more than 64,000 people, 90% of them women and children, clustered together on a barren hillside, their only shelter small huts made of thorn bush branches, animal skins, and pieces of cloth. No one in the camp had received food rations in two days, and it was uncertain when the next food supply truck would arrive....

We swung about as far right as we could in the Presidential election. Young is aosomal candidate in Atlanta, his home community. ‘In terms of my professional life, there isn’t anything I would rather do than be mayor of Atlanta,’ he said. ‘I feel that I owe a few more of the productive years of my life to the development of that great city.

For the first time at Saint Mary’s, internship programs are being offered to juniors. Designed mainly for the Liberal Arts majors, the programs give students the opportunity to experience the business world. Says Campbell: ‘You are treated as a professional, learning a professional skill. Although the internships complement the academic program, academic credit can not be applied through the Center. However, students can ask for individual credit from their professors.

children to obtain the attention from your husband and yourself that they deserve?

A: Yes, it is the biggest challenge we have. As a result, what we try to do is provide quality time as opposed to quantity. We also took out the television many years ago because it destroys all kinds of communication. The parent who says I spent time with my child last night while they sat and watched the ‘boob-tube’ for three hours is kiding himself. We may only find time to go for a walk around the block with the child, but we make sure we do that. We also, if we are going to the grocery store, take one child with us so we can have that time for the two of us. If we’re going to the dentist together we sit and talk and take advantage of the time to have a good, intimate conversation. It’s a matter again of working it in to the organization of your day. It’s the most difficult for us to find that, but we do try to balance and so far we seem to be handling it.

Q: And balancing time for your marriage at the same time?

A: Absolutely. That’s terribly important. As a matter of fact our responsibility to each other, my husband and mine is the most important one, and the children know that. And so to that comes our responsibility to the children. That is where the security lies of course, because you feel that the rock is there. And if that’s there then everything else comes from that.

NBA roundup

Rockets win, take series

Houston 89, L.A. 86

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Housto
Rockets upset defending NBA champion Los Angeles 89-86 Sunday to win their opening playoff series two games to one, holding last year's hero, Earvin "Magic" Johnson, to just 10 points.

Johnson scored only two field goals and six free throws, and it was his miss with five seconds left that preserved the victory for the Rock ets.

Moses Malone scored 23 points for the winners, while Kareem Abdul-Jabbar topped Los Angeles with 32.

The Rockets now play at San An tonio Tuesday and Wednesday nights in the opener of the Western Conference semifinals, a best-of seven series.

Mike Dunleavy threw in an 18-footer, sending the Rockets ahead 87-86 with 15 seconds left. Johnson dribbled up court, kept the ball and then badly missed a 12-foot jumper.
Johnson, the MVP of last year's Laker championship, missed 12 of his 14 field goal attempts and five of his 11 tries from the free throw line.

K.C. 104, Portland 96

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Forward
Reggie King scored 20 points in the second half and dominated play inside as the Kansas City Kings downtown Portland 104-96 Sunday and eliminated the Trail Blazers from the NBA playoffs.

The Kings beat the Blazers twice in Portland to win, the best of three series 2-1. The Kings meet the Phoenix Suns in the semifinals of the Western Conference playoffs.

Irish women 'fantastic' in W. Michigan Invitational

By LOUIE SOMOGY

Neither wind, lack of experience, nor a shortage of performers prevented a strong performance by the Notre Dame women's track team in Saturday's 16 team Western Michigan Invitational.

"We had a fantastic meet," said stan coach John Amato of the thriller finish. "This year's wind was really incredible. It was blowing the high vault and pole vault equip ments all over the place. The fact that we ran against it and did well was even more great."

What is even more amazing is that none of the 25 girls on the squad were able to make the trip as others had to stay home due to illnesses or exams.

The meet started off with Fresh man La Mia Loutzenhorst running a 28.8 1.200 meter preliminary heat, and finish ning with the eighth best time in 1:30.
Not too bad for the 16 team dual.

Cichy attempts change

By PAUL MILLAM

By PAUL MILLAM

For Steve Cichy, 1980 was a disaster. While making a tackle on the opening kickoff of the season's first game, Cichy crushed the sixth vertebra in his neck. The injury wasn't discovered until after the game - after Cichy had gone the distance in Notre Dame's 51-10 win over Purdue. It was Cichy's first, and last, game of the season.

For Cichy, 1981 looks a lot brighter.

"The healing has stabilized," he says. "They tell me that the only way I could hurt it again is to get hit in exactly the same spot, exactly the same way, with exactly the same impact. It was truly a freak accident."

Nevertheless, Cichy has his work cut out for him. Any athlete will tell you how difficult it is to bounce back after missing an entire season. But what will make it tougher for Cichy, both this spring and in the fall, is his switch from strong safety to linebacker.

"Right when I got back from Christmas vacation, coach (defensive coordinator Jim) Johnson told me that they wanted to move me to a linebacker," Cichy says. "He said that I probably would be able to help the team most at that position.

"If that's where the team needed me, I'd play there. If things don't work out there, I can always go back to strong safety.

Regardless of where Cichy is most needed, his physical appearance has always been that of a shot back. At 6-2, 218 pounds, he has always been a menacing tackler.

"I guess the position is probably more suited for me, because of my upper body strength and the physical nature of my play," he says. "But I'm still going to have to work extra, hard with the transition." At linebacker, when you get up to the line of scrimmage, your instincts aren't as refined. Right now I feel like I'm in class one day, and have a quiz the next. I've just got to go over things again and again to get use to them.

"A lot of progress has been made, but I've still got a lot of things to learn, especially in regards to technique. But so far I've been pleased."

Also pleased with Cichy's progress is Johnson, who ranked the new linebacker among the most impressive performers in the first week of spring drills.

Cichy realizes, however, that he'll have to improve the coaching staff right up until the September 12 opener against LSU. With the likes of Bob Crable, Mark Zavagnin, Rick Naylor and Joe Rudzinski among those competing for full jobs, Cichy will have plenty to do in order to attain his personal goal - winning a starting berth.

"We're very rich in talent," admits the Fargo, N.D., native. "But it really brings us together and makes us better football players.

"In most cases, if I was first team going into practice, I wouldn't feel any pressure except to improve myself. But with six or seven solid linebackers like we have, it really makes you want to improve. You really don't have much choice.

Cichy, who is expected to receive a starting berth, is excited to play the type of defense that head coach Jerry Faust and Johnson have planned for the upcoming season.

"We'll show a lot of different fronts," he says. "Maybe we'll have a 5-4 to go along with our four-man front. We'll mix it up. We'll gamble a lot, and we'll blitz a lot, because we've got a lot of talented linebackers and defensive backs. We're hoping to get a gamble at the line of scrimmage.

Cichy claims the team is ready to see a 4-3 lead over the eventual national champion, Jana Angelakis of Penn State. Angelakis, who led the Lady Lions to the team title, calmly rebounded to take a 5-4 decision.

After that match, Twila had to face the 1979 Champion and eventual fourth place finisher, Jos Ethrian. The San Jose State finisher won, 5-0.

With her back against the wall, Twila faced a must-win situation against Temple's Maureen Leun. Leun rallied from a 3-4 deficit to hand her second 5-4 loss and put an end to her championship hopes.

"A lot of people were surprised at our (7 wins and three losses) of the Saint Mary's fencing team this year," claimed DeCiccio.

KITCHEN excels in championships

When Twila Kitchen arrived at Saint Mary's as a freshman, she had never competed in a variety of sports, ranging from basketball to track, but like many other fencers in the NDSCC program (the two schools hold joint practices), she had never touched a sword.

"We employ a step-ladder operation," says Irish coach Mike DeCiccio. "Our more experienced fencers help our beginners improve their skills. We've had one NCAA champion Mike Sullivan, among Division III teams and first in the NDSCC program, win a national championship.

The Notre Dame lacrosse team received a rude introduction to the Midwest Collegiate Association in their first weekend of league play. Facing the defending MCA champions in their first three games, the Irish fell to Ohio Wesleyan, 17-0, on Friday afternoon, then lost to Denison, 16-0, on Sunday. Both games were played at Carter Field.

Wesleyan's Battling Bishops, who were ranked eighth nationally among Division III teams and first in the Midwest, jumped out to a 0-3 advantage midway through the second quarter and the Irish never threatened. Jerry Levesque, Steve Linehan, Dan Charlton, Danny Pace and Kevin Campion all chipped in goals for Notre Dame. But the Irish couldn't withstand a seven-goal outburst by Wesleyan's Dan Sheehan.

The Big Red of Denison, defending MCA champions and the 10th-ranked Division III team in the nation, jumped to an early 5-2 lead until Linehan brought the Irish to within 5-4 at 5:55 of the second period. But Denison exploded for five more goals before the half ended and shut out the Irish for the remainder of the game.

The Irish missed the offensive punch of freshman attacker Seve Peasall, who had tallied eight goals in Notre Dame's previous two games. Peasall missed weekend action with mononucleosis and a dislocated shoulder and should be out for at least another week. Senior midfielder Carl Lundblad was sidelined Friday with a groin problem that his senior teammate Cichy Kitchen had a ready-made replacement in junior midfielder Kevin Campion all chipped in goals for Notre Dame.
