WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential Reagan plans to take the Washington bureaucracy out of much of the highway construction business, creating concern as to whether states, even after a lengthy transition, will be able to take up the slack.

Among the 14 federal programs to be turned over to the states under Reagan's "new federalism" plan announced last week, 10 involve transportation. They include highway safety, mass transit subsidies, and airport construction.

Federal mass transit funds already are being reduced as the Reagan administration seeks to phase out operating subsidies for bus and subway systems by the end of 1986.

Similarly, the administration is slashing funds for airport construction in favor of computerizing the air traffic control system.

This year, the Transportation Department is expected to send about $8.5 billion in road building funds to states, counties and municipalities, including $3.6 billion for the nearly completed interstate highway system.

State and local governments probably will spend another $53.5 billion on highways.

Since the government began a key role in financing road construction, that will change if Reagan has his way, except for the Midwest receives military aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israel and Egypt, the largest recipients of U.S. economic and military aid, are due to receive hefty increases in fiscal 1983 if President Reagan has his way. Still, neither is entirely happy with the size of its slice of the American lifeline.

Reagan plans to boost military assistance to Israel to $1 billion, up from $800 million this fiscal year, and to $1.7 billion to Egypt, where defense aid would be $1 billion, up from $1.3 billion last year.

"There is no question that the increases would be helpful," said one Israeli official, noting that his government already is having difficulty repaying past loans. "It's a question of our ability to pay.

Sources said Israel would like to have at least half of the new military aid as an outright grant for the first part of the fiscal year. $500 million of the $1.7 billion total is in the form of grants.

As for Egypt, President Hosni Mubarak is expected to face complaints during an official visit beginning today over the strings attached to American assistance, as well as the cases and delivery performance of U.S. arms-suppliers.

It will be Mubarak's first visit since becoming president following the assassination of Anwar Sadat in October. Mubarak will meet with President Reagan tomorrow and also will confer during his visit with leading members of the administration and Congress.

No other nation comes close to receiving U.S. military aid in the amounts provided to Israel and Egypt. The aid to Egypt has been increasing proportionately faster in recent years — a trend that would continue in fiscal 1983 — although it still trails Israel.

The two countries also receive substantial amounts of economic aid, and for Israel, that amounts to $900 million in the current fiscal year for a total aid package of $2.2 billion. Economic assistance for Egypt in the fiscal 1982 budget is about $1 billion, for a total aid package of $1.9 billion.

U.S. officials expect Mubarak's talk this week to be predominately focused on economic and aid matters. They say Mubarak is likely to push for more flexibility in using $72 billion in economic aid already in the pipeline from previous years.

Mubarak wants to reprogram large amounts away from projects which his government no longer considers vital or useful into programs more closely reflecting the priorities of the new regime that would mean more emphasis on urban housing and development.

Dr. Andrew critiques Olivier's 'Henry V'

By John Spedlen

Dr. Dudley Andrew, discussed Olivier's Henry V, as an interpretation of the play during the W III era yesterday at the Center for Continuing Education.

A Notre Dame graduate and renowned film critic, Andrew considers the film "ambitious" as it forces the viewer to reflect upon the context of the words and actions of the characters. Andrew expressed that freedom of choice is what Olivier wished the British to focus upon.

Andrew also discussed the emphasis of film techniques — graphics, color, light and sound — which he saw as the best of their time and will give an excellent perspective to the film.

Andrew noted the graphic realism used by Olivier, but also said that the context of the film is Shakespeare's rigid verse.

He continued by saying that the text of the film is valid and the cinema is driven by this work.

Priestley said in his "Literature and the Western Mind" that Joyce did not invent stream-of-consciousness or interior monologue and what's more: "most of what we have been told about Joyce as the great modern master of the novel, changing the course of fiction, opening a way for later novelists, is nonsense."

Novelist Evelyn Waugh once said of the Irishman: "He wrote absolute rot. You could watch him going mad sentence by sentence if you read "Ulysses."

Joyce's ambivalence toward Ireland led him to choose exile in Europe from his early 20s until his death in 1941, but he continued to write almost exclusively about Ireland. Born in Rathgar, Dublin, on Feb. 2, 1882, the author of "Ulysses" and "A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man" was one of the greatest novelists in all of modern literature, said Ellmann, who rates "Ulysses" the fiction masterpiece of the 20th century.

"I think Joyce was the first writer to show us in English what modern literature really is," said Ellmann. But Joyce's anti-Catholic, like the autobiographical Stephen Dedalus in "A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man," is nonsense.

Ellmann will join Norman Mailer, John Cage, based on a centenary composer John Cage, based on his "Ideas and Opinions," and the chairman of the Users Federation of America, whose mission is to help states pay for the new interstate* funds among the states raises some concern among some state and federal officials is whether all states will have the resources to continue highway programs on their own after the federal to-state program is closed. It was the major topic of discussion at an all-day meeting of state transportation officials here this week, and a prime concern at the winter meeting of the National Conference of Governors.

"There are quite a few concerns from states whose needs are greater than revenue collection within those states," says Charlton Cowan, a transportation specialist with the National Governors' Association.

"The question is whether these recipient states can raise the money under (new federalism)." If they have to look at only their own sources, they will have to raise taxes, said one Federal Highway Administration spokesman. Should raising taxes not be to be identified by name:...Bar

...Federalism

To interview state officials and spokesman for transportation interest groups expressed concern that there was no assurance that a "dollar-for-dollar" amount would be dispersed for transportation needs once the federal-to-state program transfer is completed.

Also, asked Rankin, "Will the states continue to use the money for road purposes?" If they are faced with other demands for money?

The overriding concern of many officials is whether all states will have the resources to continue highway programs in their state, that the federal highway trust fund is ear marked only for the interstate system. The fund is financed by a variety of user taxes, mostly on motor fuels and vehicle sales.

Today, federal funds go toward more than 90 categories of highway assistance, from bridge replacements to markings at railroad crossings.

How much money each state receives in relation to the amount of money its taxpayers contribute to the federal highway trust fund depends on formulas based on population, land area, road mileage and other factors.

The uneven distribution of highway funds among the states raises some concern among state and federal officials about Joyce's new "federalism" plan.

In Montana, taxpayers sent $55.7 million in highway tax funds to Washington in 1980, the last year statistics are available. The state was allowed 590 million from the federal trust fund. West Virginia sent $55.7 million to Washington and was entitled to $32.5 million.

Some of those disparities are the result of excessive interstate highway projects in a state, but a significant amount stems from the distribution formula.

Roemer also suggested that the new facility be utilized in ways other than exclusively as a bar. On those nights on which the bar is not frequented by many Seniors, usually Sundays through Wednesday night, a section of the bar could be opened to Juniors, Sophomores, and Freshmen as a non-alcoholic meeting place. The bar could also serve as an informal meeting place for students and faculty members. In the past, faculty members have shied away from the Student Bar because of the crowded conditions and lack of quiet space. The possibility of the bar serving as the site for wedding receptions during the summer for students who get married at Sacred Heart was also discussed.

Thompson and Roemer both mentioned that some Seniors do not favor the addition of a full time manager for fear of losing control of the bar, which they feel should be run completely by students. However, Roemer emphasized the fact that the full time manager would be the only student on the staff and that all other positions would be filled by students.

This is still a Christian country and the beliefs and customs of the vast majority should not be offended by the 1 percent or 2 percent who wish to impose their godlessness through filth on their own media," said Ellmann.

"I think the Irish have been a little slow to recognize Joyce's greatness but they have done their best to catch up now," he said.

Ellmann will join Norman Mailer, Tom Stoppard, Burgess and other writers at an international symposium in Dublin in June.

It's a great tribute to him -- 100 years in quite good standing power for writer, you know," said Ellmann, who rates "Ulysses" the fiction masterpiece of the 20th century.

"I think Joyce was the first writer to show us in English what modern literature really is," he said.

Revenge in mind?

Irish, Dons prepare to battle

By DAVE DZIEDZIC

Sports Writer

Revenge may be sweet but Notre Dame basketball coach Digger Phelps claims it's not enough if the sure-to-be-in-the-mix-of-11 Irish face the 19-2 Dons of Stanford at 7:30 p.m. in the ACC.

"We'll be playing to win this one, not to make up for the last one," Phelps claims.

The "last one" occurred exactly three weeks ago in Oakland's Arena, when USC struggled with Notre Dame's tight zone defense but eventually defeated the Irish, 75-67.

"That was a big game for us," says Digger, who is.module(12) 6-foot guard, made a career-high 11 points against the Irish last season and for the past two seasons has been the runner-up for the MVP in the WCAC. Now his name is in the top 10 in all-time scoring for the Waves.

"I think we'll fit into our program very well," says DiStasielas.

"She's versatile, intelligent and not afraid of hard work. We're hoping she'll be able to play a guard spot for us."

"We think Cathy was the sleeper among all the high school prospects," says graduate assistant Mary Murphy. "Not many people saw her play because the campus she participated in didn't draw a lot of people. But she's a very intense player. Her father is just ecstatic, because he always wanted her to go to Notre Dame."

"We're not too high on her, but because she can shoot, and sometimes at no cost," says Coach O'Brien, who has a brother who participated in didn't draw a lot of interest."

"The agressive defense of Irish center Tim Andree (left) was a key factor in Notre Dame's 86-84 double-overtime victory over USC."

LOS ANGELES (AP) _ Sam Gilbert, the owner of the UCLA basketball team since the mid-1960s, has been quoted as denying allegations that he facilitated the Dons' No. 64 overtime double-overtime victory over USC. He is in the contest and his defense may be missed this season.

But the Irish are not without a 32-year veteran forward, who had an im­pressively strong outing three weeks ago against the Irish.

"The Irish are not without a 103-degree fever," he said, "but we still had a shot at a victory."

"In fact, the story is rubbish."
