Off-campus crime decreases

By DAN MCCULLOUGH

Increased efforts on the part of both the Department of Off-Campus Housing and the South Bend Police Department (SBPD) have resulted in a marked decrease in crime in the near Notre Dame community, according to Rev. William Beuchamp, C.S.C., director of off-campus housing.

As part of these efforts, every transfer and off-campus student was given a specially prepared pamphlet on preventing crime. "We are trying to get the kids as they are moving in, and tell them what the neighborhood will be like and what they should look out for," says Beuchamp.

Other measures include the recent expansion of the SBPD, which now has a station less than a mile from the housing centers. These centers are also using crime-prevention checks over the area. knobs that were run on all local television and radio stations last week warning potential victims and giving suggestions for preventing crime.

Beuchamp, along with Captain Larry Bennett of the SBPD, urges students to lock doors, windows, and to secure all possessions, to record serial numbers of bikes, televisions and anything of else of value, and to take special care not to invite crime through a lack of concern.

The Department of Off-Campus Housing provides additional security services for the students. The department suspends all available housing, and rates the condition and safety of each. A list of these houses or apartments is made available to every student residing off campus. The law school has prepared a leased containing clauses to protect the student from unnecessary obligations, and this also is made available to each student.

Although Beuchamp warns that "as soon as you move off campus, you are a regular citizen," our view is that there is also giving increased attention to the security problem.

He frequently rides with the SBPD as they survey the housing sections, and is often called upon in a way which most benefits the students who are under the care of Off-Campus Housing.

The department's efforts have not gone unnoticed. Board members have assumed the position of chief of the department new duties and letters have been received which proclaim that security has "done more than ever before.

Professor disapproves of pipeline sanctions

By JOHN BURCHET

A leading West German professor in constitutional and public international law says he disapproves of the Reagan administration's sanctions on technology which may be used in the construction of the trans-Siberian pipeline.

Dr. Jochen Abraham Freiwald's comments came at a luncheon yesterday at the University Club.

Following the luncheon, Freiwald gave a lecture in the law school in which he explained the structure and purpose of the European Convention on Civil Rights of 1953 and of the European Commission on Human Rights. Freiwald said the outcome of the 1953 Convention was a treaty that contained a list of basic human rights.

Roemer issues alcohol directive

By VIC SCIULLI

A directive which lists the regulations regarding the use of alcohol at Notre Dame was issued from the office of the Dean of Students yesterday.

The list is comprehensive than the alcohol regulations listed in Du Lac and also covers the rules pertaining to the Alumni Senior Club.

Kegs and parties are restricted on University owned grounds, including inside the football stadium and the ACC. Violators face a minimum $100.00 fine with more severe violations resulting in additional sanctions.

This year's directive also includes a summary of related Indiana State Laws, which define the criminal penalties for minors who purchase, consume, or transport alcohol in the state. A minor in Indiana is defined as anyone under the age of 21.

According to the directive, drinking (in moderation) is permitted only in private residence rooms and in the Residence Hall Party Rooms. Violators of either of these rules are subject to fines and sanctions.

The new directive also specifies rules for the Alumni Senior Club.

(a) No student under twenty-one is permitted in the Club. Those who gain entrance are subject to the above fine.

(b) Anyone who enters this facility except by the front door will also be in violation.

(c) Anyone who opens an egress door to permit students to enter will be considered a violator.

Minimum $800 fines...
On a midnight run through the French town of Tours, country music star Randy Travis was shot and killed himself by an unknown man. Travis, 47, was known for his country music hits and was set to release his latest album, "The Masterpiece." The singer was found with a gunshot wound to the head, and the cause of death was confirmed by authorities.

Guards gain guns, responsibility

Almost two full centuries ago, our wise forefathers gave birth to a republic, a republic that rights to bear arms as put forth in the Bill of Rights. Of course, just a few years before the American Revolution was unvelled, thousands of masto n men wearing red coats were feverishly fighting us in an attempt to regain control of the colonies. Since the beginning of the war, the nation has been explored and untamed to the west. In those days, the gun was said to be the tool of freedom. The gun put on the table and allowed the pioneers to explore the unknown territories. The gun was necessary for survival.

Today, ours is still a gun-crazy society, but for very different reasons. Some say the gun is still essential for survival, but it seems that many more are killed by it than are saved. We live in a society where life is cheap and guns are cheaper and can be as easily obtained as a pack of cigarettes. The bad guys have guns to rob the good guys, and the good guys have guns to protect themselves from the bad guys. Under such conditions, it seemed inevitable that Notre Dame's security force would someday have to arm itself in order to become more effective in the never-ending battle between the modern day Jesse James and Wally Earp. So it came as little surprise when The Observer reported last week that many parents are struggling to keep up with the costs. The pot is currently up to 14. Vision of crazed security officers has for a long time dominated my mind, as I imagined them laying in ambush for unsuspecting donors to make a clean sweep. Inside Thursday

Law Enforcement Academy in Plainfield. This training included at least 53 hours of target practice on both inside and outside range. While some worry that the chances of being struck by some stray lead have been minimized, so you might want to put that off until you were planning to your local bullet proof vest dealer. And despite the vicious rumors that have circulating, academy officials have assured me that Clint Eastwood movies were not included in the regimen of training films.

Another aspect to be considered when trying to understand this situation is just how necessary the gun slinging officers are. They are rarely, if ever, faced with a life or death situation involving a gun. One cop did announce official said as that as long as he has been at Norte Dame (seven years), there has never been such a life threatening confrontation. So why the guns? Believe it or not, the main reason is practicality. University officials are fully aware that South Bend isn't quite exactly Shangri La. Crime is not stranger to society, espe­ cially in some areas around Notre Dame, The potential for armed robbery or other violent crimes is very real and very terrifying. And with the campus being slowly expanded to cover more area, an extra burden of vulner­ ability is added. With the new WNEI building to the west, the credit union to the north and the ACC to the east, a greater area must be covered.

Despite the protection that the guns should allow the officers in a dangerous situation, the number of meetings involved changing the campus perimeter in cars will be armed, a gun has only one purpose, to shoot another person. Let's just hope that our security offices are well prepared and protected.

These places are susceptible to crime not only be­ cause of their outlying locations, but also because they often hold large amounts of money. The credit union, the ACC ticket windows, and the new Student that all present major targets for criminals. If one of these places were to be robbed by a gunman, the responding security officer would be helpless to do anything and may be even more of a target because of his blue uniform.

Under such protection that the guns should afford the officers in a dangerous situation, the number of meetings involved changing the campus perimeter in cars will be armed, a gun has only one purpose, to shoot another person. Let's just hope that our security offices are well prepared and protected.

Temporary housing remains
Nine freshmen moved at SMC

BY SANDY VALENZUELA
Staff Reporter

Nine of the eighteen freshmen in temporary housing at Saint Mary's have been moved to permanent housing of this week, according to Sister Kendal Jackowski. Some of the call residents for a residence like. Some of the students have been relocated to rooms in McCandless, Saint to Holy Cross, and one to begin.

The two suspects, both male, stole valuable stereo equipment from each apartment, and then vacated and will once again be used or passed to the college.

Mary Ann Rowan, director of ad missions, explained that "a historical study of enrollment is done each year to determine how many students are expected to enroll from the number accepted." Accepted students who do not enroll may have encountered financial difficulties or perhaps viewed Saint Mary's as their second choice. This year, however, such was not the case.

Rowan says, "Saint Mary's must have been the first choice of the majority of our accepted students, or SMU met the needs of those accepted because a larger percentage enrolled than was expected."

According to Jackowski, it is unusual to allow the admittance of ten extra people because of expected drop-outs. This year, however, 31 students -- 18 freshmen and 13 transfers -- were without housing at the beginning of the semester.

The students placed in the temporary housing were those who were accepted late and/or sent in their deposits late. For about the past five years, temporary housing has been set up just in case. Last year it was not necessary to use the extra rooms.

The students admitted into temporary housing at the beginning of the year were required to sign an agreement to move when permanent housing was found for them. The students were not given the option to stay in the temporary housing, for hall residents need the space for convivial and entertaining purposes.

Fr. Hawkins: a resident of the McCandless lounge, says of the rooms, "I like it. I really like it. I've given use to it." He says that although she likes the closeness with the other students in the suite, she doesn't "go as much as many other people from the hall."

Gail Kask, also residing in the McCandless lounge likes it because of the spacious room and the convenience of a bathroom and lounge within the suite.

Kraft also notices the isolation from the rest of the hall. The McCandless lounge, she notes, has no telephone. "I'm not sure, although they have paid for their telephone charge for the semester, must use the phones at the front desk or in friends' rooms. This tends to be inconvenient, she notes, for incoming calls.

The students still residing in temporary housing will be relocated as soon as rooms are made available. The students in McCandless will be housed first. If more space is made available, the transfers then will be moved on campus, according to Jackowski.

Shuttle Schedule Changed

The Office of Student Activities has announced the following changes in the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's shuttle schedule: Bus #26, operating, Monday-Friday, which arrives at the ND library at 10:00 a.m. will depart not until 10:45 a.m. The bus will then arrive and depart from the ND Circle at 10:48 a.m. Although the bus arrives at Saint Mary's at 10:55, unchanged from the listing in the schedule.

Three Lutheran churches, holding simultaneous conventions in three states, voted nearly unanimously Wednesday to form a 5.5 million-member body that will be the nation's largest Lutheran church.

The church conventions in California, Kentucky, and Ohio also voted to establish a 70-member commission to iron out doctrinal and structural details of the new, as-yet-unnamed, church.

The agreement was reached by delegates representing the three churches, the American Lutheran Church, the Lutheran Church in America, and the Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches.

The three conventions also considered a plan to allow joint communion with Episcopalians. "I hope we can look ahead with the sense that we're not going to do this just to get the job done, but to manifest the (Holy) Spirit's work being done in the church today," said ALC Bishop L. David Brown of Iowa.

There are 18 different Lutheran groups in the United States, which were formed when various ethnic, immigrant, churches combined during the last century.

The formation of the new Lutheran church would gather 98.1 percent of all Lutherans in the United States into three national bodies, and the new church would become one of the top five Protestant churches in the country.

Arab leaders maintain demands at summit

FEZ, Morocco (AP) - Arab leaders will negotiate a Middle East peace plan this week, according to President Reagan's initiative, but only if Israel recognizes the PLO and the territory includes a Palestinian state in corporating east Jerusalem, officials said yesterday.

Israel has rejected those conditions in the past.

The leaders were approaching a compromise on the Palestinians' proposed offer of mutual recognition between Israel and the Arab states - including a sovereign Arab state in the West Bank and Gaza - and on the proposal that the first talks be focused on politically relevant issues.

The leaders took a break from three days of intense talks to attend a folklore festival near the summer palace of Morocco's King Hassan II at Ifrane, in the hills 20 miles south of Fez.

These developments are part of a final communiqué was the "mystery man" rescue Matusiak. It said the United States was dispatching a deputy assistant secretary of state to the Middle East to continue peacekeeping efforts there.

Begin said he was ready to go to the polls next May or June, two years ahead of schedule. Begin's Likud bloc is outnumbered 56-46 by the Labor Party in the 120-member Parliament, and seeks a coalition of 64 seats. Polls predict an outright majority for the popular Begin if a vote was held now.

Begin was unrelenting in his opposition to Reagan's proposals for Palestinian autonomy in the West Bank and Gaza Strip in association with Jordan. He rejected them, saying they would deprive Israel of parts of the West Bank, put hostile Palestinians in control and jeopardize the lives of Jews.

Parliament endorsed his position by 50 votes of the coalition to 36 of the Labor Party and two split-ticket faction.

An earlier vote on a separate issue, the conduct of the war in Lebanon, was a narrower 81-49, reflecting the divisions in this country over the three-month-old operation that routed Yasser Arafat's Palestinian Liberation Organization from Beirut.

Begin accused U.S. officials of wagging a campaign to oust him from office. "This is intervention in the internal affairs of Israel," he stormed.

Begin accused Reagan of making "false (information) and journalists write: 'the beginning of the end of Begin's rule.'"

I want to tell the editorial boards of The New York Times and The Washington Post, you will achieve the opposite of your desires with this talk.

Begin claimed Reagan's proposals deviated from the Camp David accords, the only peacemaking framework Israel recognized.

Labor's Shlomo Hillel told Parliament that Begin's insistance on observing the letter of the Camp David accords had become "a scholastic exercise" which ignored changing conditions in Israel.

He accused Begin of running Israel's image by making the Arab League ministers meetings in Fez, Morocco, seem "more moderate, more balanced and, I'm sorry to say, more sophisticated" than Israel.

Hillel said Labor also disagreed with Reagan's call for a freeze on Jewish settlement construction in the West Bank. But he said such settlements should go up only in strategically vital areas, and not in Arab-populated areas.

Swiss authorities continue negotiations

BERN, Switzerland (AP) - While authorities negotiated Wednesday with terrorist leaders who held up the Polish embassy, police spirited a diplomat out of an attic window where he had been hidden, the armed raiders for two days, official said.

The anti-communist Polish raiders, who are holding the mission's military attaché and four other staff members hostage, expanded their list of demands Wednesday to include safe passages out of the country, Swiss authorities turned down the demand and said they would accept only unconditional surrender.

The gunmen say they will blow up the building if their demands are not met, with their hostages, at 10 a.m. Friday (4 a.m. EDT) unless Swiss authorities lifted military law and freed all political prisoners are freed.

Sources said one of the security forces surrounding the building had put a metal ladder up to the embassy window Tuesday to a rescue attempt that later was abandoned and there was speculation that this method was used to rescue Matusiak.

Reutel said that police have been kept 200 yards from the police-ruled embassy.

The communiqué said Matusiak was the "wonder man" in a widely published press photograph showing someone holding a white paper out of the attic window and gesturing to police hiding in the embassy.

Scientists find oldest fossils

From Universal Press Syndicate

In a desolate African wasteland so rich in fossils that in places they literally crunch underfoot, scientists have discovered the remnants of what seems to be the oldest known direct ancestor of man.

The fragments of thigh and skull bones, taken from the Middle Awash River Valley of Ethiopia, have been shown by radioactive dating of the sediment they were found in to be 4 million years old. That is 300,000 years older than "Lucy," the previously oldest known fossil hominid.

The bones, uncovered just 40 miles from where Lucy was unearthed in 1974, have been tentatively identified as Australopithecus australopithecus, the same species as Lucy.

They apparently belonged to creatures who walked upright, stood about 4 1/2 feet tall, and had brains somewhat smaller than those of chimpanzees.

Anthropologists J. Desmond Clark and Tim White of the University of California at Berkeley, who announced the find in June, say it provides further confirmation that human beings developed upright posture long before they developed enlarged brains. The two traits were once thought to have evolved together, but Lucy and other fossils of her species have upset that notion.

The diminutive figure of the potential science superstar was all but swallowed up by his academic robes, and his youthful looks masked the impressive intellect that had earned him the right to march with his peers. But on graduation day at Boise State University, 12-year-old Jay Luo, the American-born son of Taiwanese parents, became the youngest college graduate in the history of the United States.

Jay graduated cum laude in three years, majoring in mathematics, taking extra work in physics and computer science, and finishing with a 3.5 grade point average. He entered the unusual program in 1979 after his father, a computer engineer, read an article about teaching gifted children by William Mech, a Boston University mathematics professor who later became Jay's advisor.

At a pre-graduation press conference, he revealed to inquiring reporters that he has a Pac-Man appetite for problems in higher mathematics, but also has interests more typical of a 12-year-old — — including the Saturday morning television cartoons.

The next step for Jay will be to enter a graduate math program at Stanford. The Luo family, which includes a younger sister and brother, will move to California to be near by.

Censorship sports social space forcibly

While at the downtown South Bend Library recently I picked up a copy of a free publication occasionally available on the check-out desk, The Neighborhood News. Usually I take a quick glance at the first page of the book, but this time I became very interested by a "commentary" about a new "action group" by one who obviously is one of the founding members.

Tim Neely

My Turn

He begins by stating the premise behind his group: to return America "to what it used to be." I've been hearing that phrase a lot in the last few years, but it never seemed to really mean anything. The problem rests in how this new America magically become un-great, "great again," if it ever becomes great again." I don't mind making America a percent of the vote in 1980 by using the Amusement industry. Somehow this man feels that pornography and anything they can come to an X-rated theatre. Somehow this man feels that pornography and anything they can come to such as the more evident danger to the family, the free press, speech, and expression for the sale of a few self-deceived "dirty" books and ads.

David M. Schorp

Chautauqua in Faith

Practical philosophy, then, does not deal in formal logic or abstract terminology but is an informed personalizing system from the author's observation of society as he sees it in his everyday experiences. In some ways a lack of formal training can be a drawback, but perhaps this practical, informal manner of observation and communication lends this column more relevance and meaning.

To enable the description of any broad, conceptual system, a map of the frame of reference must first be established. This is often done in the sciences in the form of postulates, which are preliminary assumptions accepted without proof. This is because:
1)Postulates cannot be observed or worked in practice, and 2)Postulates provide a convenient and insightful looking at things.

As a human being: We humans are in secure and need affirmation. People are social beings — much of our daily experiences and somuch of our sense of fulfillment involves our interaction with others. We need to love, to be loved, and to feel that we are living a worthwhile life. Doesn't the concept of love imply relationships with other people? And don't these needs express themselves through our want for attention, our need for feeling accepted?

Those of us in college are especially aware of the need for self-fulfillment, for being young, energetic, intelligent, and ready and eager for relationships with the opposite sex. There will never again be a period in our lives when we are surrounded by so many others like ourselves.

So we feel very intimately our presence in and relationship to the people around us. Again, as adolescents are wont to feel that we're living good lives. How do we answer ourselves?

The second "postulate" will start with a divergence into American society. Let me give it. I heard a philosophy teacher say to the class, "American as we speak," I was pretty offended. What evidence did he have?

But wait! We say, America offers its citizens to such extent that many things can easily be taken for granted. We have one of the highest standards of living in the world.

The vast majority of us have never had to worry about food or shelter, or been inconvenience by a lack of electricity or water.

Andy Rooney

A Few Words

To correct this lack of appreciation be more of the world, there's something else Ararat ought to do after he shapes. He ought to get himself a good public relations firm to image his image. Polls show that the American people are unimpressed, and they're probably right. It's those who have lived under the world's most horrid governments who are unimpressed. Ararat could have improved his image, and if he had done this, maybe the Palestinians be given a homeland of their own again.

As our American environment is a materialistic one, advertising comes immediately to mind as a means for our guidance.

(Wilson Bryan key Book's, Subliminal messages and most of the presentation of a way to innocent America, reveals how profoundly sexy is subliminally inserted into magazine and TV ads. To what extent are our materialistic influences responsible for the philosophy in the spectator's line of evidence?

What other "guidance systems" does a hungry heart have? (This will be discussed in a soon to come column.) But now, I believe, the foundation can be set. This column's third premise will most accurately be described as an theorem, because the rest of the column will be trying to prove it. And it is simply yet powerfully thus the most fundamental and essential form of guidance an individual has to find his faith.

"Clothes (a and a shave) make the man"

Of all the public figures I've ever seen, Yasser Ararat suffers most from what he looks like. How does he manage to look as if it's always been four days since he shaved? He never has a real beard and he's never clean shaven. He just looks scruffy all the time.

Menachem Begin is more popular in America than Ararat. It isn't easy to come second to Begin in a popularity contest, but that is what the PLO has left Beiru to driv e out the Palestine Liberation Army. It isn't easy to come second to Begin in a popularity contest, but that is what the PLO has left Beiru to drive out the Palestine Liberation Army. It isn't easy to come second to Begin in a popularity contest, but that is what the PLO has left Beiru to drive out the Palestine Liberation Army.

Now that the PLO has left Beiru and Ararat is in Greece, he has sworn to continue his territorial activities against the Israelis and against everyone who helped them in their recent effort. This is a go to Ararat nothing but trouble, and it won't get the Palestinians a homeland. Imagine how much better it is to be if Ararat issued a statement like this: "I want to take this opportunity to congratulate Menachem Begin and the Israeli Army on their victory over the PLO. The better army won. We now hope that the Israelis can find it in their hearts to allow my people to have a land of their own so that they will no longer be the homeless wanderers of the world. Jews and Palestinians are, after all, both Semitic people. Some of my best friends are Jewish, Shalom Yasser Ararat."

A statement-like statement of that type would have all the world feeling sorry for Yasse and his Palestinians. He could have erased the picture the world has of him as bomb-throwing terrorists and replaced it with one that evoked sympathy.

All through history there have been public figures who looked just right for their job and others who looked all wrong. Winston Churchill, for example, looked perfect. Even Adolf Hitler was perfect in his own way. If you were going to cast a character to play the most evil despot of all time, you could hardly change a hair on Hitler's mustache. George Washington looked the Father of a Country if anyone ever did, and Albert Einstein looked like a mathematical genius. Walter Cronkite had the perfect face for a television news anchor.

Ararat just doesn't look right. He looks as if he just took a four day, nonstop airplane ride and needs a shave and some clean clothes. He ought to get a fresh start in his new home in Greece, and he could begin by buying himself a razor.

I hesitate to suggest it but he might even consider a Shikr Inspector razor.

Irish place high in Division II tournament

By DONNA WITZLEBEN
Sports Writer

Last season's 1981-82 women's tennis team reached a tie for sixth place with Idaho nationally, as they competed in the AIAW division II tennis tournament last Memorial Day weekend in Colorado.

Coach Sharon Petro's Irish improved their standing greatly from the year before when they placed 20th among 27 teams.

Notre Dame earned the right to go to the Nationals by coming in second in the regional competition last May.

Notre Dame's Laura Lee, then a freshman and unseeded, earned All-American honors and a national championship in No. 5 singles by handily defeating top-seeded Margaret Faughnan of Georgia, 6-3, 6-1.

Junior Pam Fishette, then a sophomore, was named All-American by reaching the No. 3 singles championship match in which she fell to top-seeded Sharon Danong from Richmond, 6-1, 6-3. Fishette, one of the co-captains of this year's squad, was also unseeded at the onset of the tournament.

Lee and this year's co-captain Camille Cooper of Shreveport, La., took 5th place in doubles in the overall standings.

Needless to say, Petro is "very proud" of her 1981-82 team's accomplishments and the individual honors received by Lee and Fishette as well.

Petro 'excited' about fall season

By DONNA WITZLEB
Sports Writer

Northeastern women's tennis Coach Sharon Petro has difficulty hiding her feelings regarding the upcoming fall season, she says. And exciting is the perfect word to describe the rapid growth and the spectacular individual talent of the 1982-83 squad.

After a successful summer of tryouts and practice, the Irish open the season tomorrow. Petro has had little time to decide on her lineup, but deciding on a No. 1 singles player is very important to the Irish. Freshman Sue Panter will play No. 1, as did her sister, Shawnee, at the Mid-American High School Championships.

Petro named a 9-5, 3-5 high school record at Shawnee and many other accomplishments. She placed second in the state in doubles and won championships as a senior. She also won the Eastert Bowl National for 18-year-olds in singles and doubles in 1981.

"Sue's been practicing very hard to get his position vitally the same year. She was chosen to represent the Midwest in the National Olympics Sports Festival in '81. She is currently ranked 53rd among 18-year-olds in the country by the United States Tennis Association." Petro said. "Making a big jump on the ladder to No. 2 singles is sophomore Laura Mcelroy, who played No. 6 singles last year and posted a 22-5 record. Lee (Agoura, Ca.) is the defending Division II national champion at No. 5 singles, and an All-American as well. At No. 3 singles is Mary Colligan, a freshman from Bishop Leers High School in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Last year's No. 1 singles player Lisa LaFratta (Richmond, Va.) was No. 4 singles this year, and held a 19-10 mark in that spot last season.

Petro commented, "I think the Irish will be successful this season and probably one of the top offensive lines in the country. We are going to feature aggressiveness rather than just learning."

"When it comes down to fourth-and-one, we worried too much about technique when they should have just created the guy in front of us," stated senior guard Tom Thayer at the start of spring practice last fall.

"We've got a lot of people coming in to get us off the field," said Petro of the lineup. "I'm not sure about our depth, but I'm excited about the potential of the team."

The person who is helping guide the Irish is Con Elton, Petro's assistant. The two have been working together for the past two years. "John Elton has always been a good worker with a lot of potential. He's very physically mature for a sophomore, and potentially one of the best defensive players in the country in the future."

Tom Elton, of course, is the starting left tackle. He has been practicing with the team for the past two years, and is expected to be one of the top offensive linemen for Northeastern in the future.

"Experience is much less of a problem at guard as both Thayer, a three-year starter, and Randy Ellis, who took over as a regular at guard in 1980, return for their final season. Thayer, who has won the Herring Award for the past two years as the top offensive lineman, has been mentioned by the coaches as a definite All-America candidate at his position."

"Tom's strength of course, is what stands out (he has bench-pressed 450 pounds)," explains Petro of Thayer, who is the mainspring on the line. "But he also has lots of..."
