Lebanon president gives plans to U.N.

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — President Amint Gemayel, on the eve of meeting President Reagan yesterday, today hailed U.S. efforts to rule out use of the foreign armies that have turned Lebanon into "an arena for treachery and violence."

Advising the General Assembly, Gemayel also demanded "the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of all non-Lebanese foreign forces from Lebanon."

The Lebanese president called on the 15-member body to "help Lebanon regain its real independence and rebuild its economy."

U.N. Ambassador Jeanne J. Kirkpatrick and her seven-member delegation joined in the sustained applause that greeted Gemayel's demand. Israeli and Syrian envoys, whose countries have deployed armies in Lebanon, sat passively.

Assuring there could not be Middle East peace without a stable Lebanon, Gemayel said: "We applaud all positive steps taken by our friends in the international community on behalf of a united and sovereign Lebanon — steps such as the United States' initiative on Lebanon — which we shall explore to the fullest."

Gemayel was addressing the Security Council later yesterday to ask it to extend the mandate of the "Oslo" man — U.S. peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon. Since the force was overruled by Israeli troops in the June 6 invasion, the council has been extending the mandate every two months, instead of on a semiannual basis as was done previously. The latest mandate expires midnight tonight.

Gemayel is meeting Reagan today to discuss prospects for speedily implementing an American-brokered agreement for the withdrawal of Israeli, Syrian, and Palestinian forces from Lebanon.

The U.S. administration is depending on the council to use its influence with Syria to persuade the Palestine Liberation Organization to withdraw in advance of the departure of the Israeli and Syrian troops — as demanded by Israel. PLO fighters, forced to evacuate their besieged West Beirut bastion in August, still occupy positions in northern and eastern Lebanon.

An estimated 30,000 Syrian troops, who have been in Lebanon as a peacekeeping force since the 1975-'76 Moslem-Christian civil war, are concentrated on the Bekaa Valley and surrounding heights in eastern Lebanon, where they face Israeli positions.

Wearing a black tie in mourning for his brother, assassinated President-elect Bashir Gemayel, the Lebanese president addressed the assembly in English rather than Arabic or French. His speech was interrupted 10 times by applause, much of it coming from Lebanon supporters in the public gallery. Israel's ambassador Yehuda Z. Blum told reporters afterward that he realized "some satisfaction" Gemayel's call for departure of all foreign troops.

The PLO's observer, Zehda Labib Terzi, said she thought one of Gemayel's main threats was that Palestinian self-determination is a "prerequisite for peace in the Middle East."

NAIBORI, Kenya (AP) — Great Britain, attempting to strike up a compromise in a fight over Israel that has the United States threatening to pull out of a U.N. agency, proposed yesterday that the agency express alarm over the violation of Lebanon, but not over Israel.

The amendment was proposed at a U.S. chief delegate Michael Gardner told the 15-member U.N. agency, the International Telecommunications Union, that the United States would "immediately and permanently" resign if an Algerian-sponsored resolution to bar British participation passed. He said the United States would withhold its annual contribution to the agency, now $5.2 million — 7 percent of the U.N. budget.

Iran, lining up with the Arab states supporting the resolution, said it was willing to make up the U.S. contribution.

After speeches by 30 speakers, either urging the ousting of Israel or declaring that the resolution was a political issue inappropriate or legally placed before the technical working group, the session was adjourned.

It is to reconvene today, when a vote is expected. It would be the first test of anti-Israel sentiment among U.N. members, since Secretary of State George Shultz said Saturday that the United States would withdraw from the U.N. General Assembly if a resolution to expel Israel from it passes. That resolution is tentatively expected to be up for a vote at U.N. headquarters in New York next Monday.

Western delegates said the vote on the issue before the International Telecommunications Union would close. A non-aligned ambassador said the outcome hinged on the large contingent of black African countries.

The U.S. delegate said the agency has a precedent for the move against Israel from the 1979 exclusion of South Africa by depicting its apartheid policy of racial segregation.

"Israel, like South Africa, should have no place in our union," he said.

An American delegate said the United States considered illegal the moves against South Africa and Portugal, who also were excluded nine years ago. The Portuguese, attacked for "racist colonial" policies, regained membership following the 1975 independence of Angola and Mozambique.

In proposing the compromise, Britain said it hoped to define a "time bomb" that could wreck the conference and cause irreparable damage to the U.N. It said other countries would seriously press the "value of continued membership."

The compromise would amend the Algerian resolution to express alarm over the Oct. 26 Middle East situation resulting from Israel's annexation of Lebanon. It removes references to ousting Israel.

The compromise was sponsored by Australia, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Ireland, Norway, and Italy.

Do you care about anything? Besides yourself, those “loved ones” around you that you are supposed to care for? And perhaps your pet dog, what are your convictions?

As college students, society expects us to have causes, beliefs, opinions, and on everything. This is the one time in life when we can get away with supporting issues and causes that are outside the social norm. Society nodds with bemusement when young people support communism, feminism, and anarchism. But to support these causes is understandable. After being kicked around and being considered bruslees (or at leastclassed) by society and made fun of for young people to want to use their newly acknowledged faculties

About 40 Holy Cross residents were among thousands who had been injured after an explosion of a massive food fight in South Dining Hall. As part of Holy Cross Hall’s annual “Self-Professed Viking Night”, the students entered the dining hall, acted as Vikings, proceded to drink straight armed, and eat without utensils, while chanting traditional Viking slogans. An avalanche of food poured out into the dining hall. The food was getting all over the place. They started to trip it, and eventually began to throw it. Both exit doors were locked while security stationed the room and took names and I.D. numbers. The students must report to Dean of Students Jim Roemer regarding the incident.

Two South Bend juveniles were taken into custody for an alleged burglary at Notre Dame apartments early Saturday morning, according to South Bend Police Captain Ed Friends. While officers were checking the second floor of the apartment, the two males escaped from the back seat of the police car. Friend said that police searched the building and arrested two of the suspects, and an additional suspect is in the process. A Notre Dame student alerted police to the scene when he saw “two guys start climbing up a balcony” leading to a second floor apartment. A resident of the apartment told police that someone had tried to break into the apartment. The Notre Dame student said he had noticed the same two males walking around the apartment grounds a few minutes before the incident, and decided to notify police or apartment security. — The Observer

Bess Truman, the childhood sweetheart and closest confidante of President Harry S. Truman, died yesterday at age 97 in Independence, Mo. “The old engie just ran out,” said Dr. Wallace Green, who had been a family physician since the mid-1940s. “We’re known for a while that the end was near.” The public knew her as Bess and The Old Queen and looked to her as a closest, closest friend. Graham said Bess Truman died of congestive heart failure at the Truman home in Independence, where she was under constant care. She was born in Independence on March 26, 1896, and was married to President Truman in 1919. “She loved me longer than any other first lady, will be a part of me,” said Graham.

There are two types of A.I. organizations — the campus group, which handles general human rights concerns, and the adoption group, which deals specifically with the release of political prisoners. The Notre Dame-Saint Mary's group is unique among college campuses in that it is an adoption group.

Group No. 45 has two current adoption cases. One involves a Soviet engineer who was convicted of disseminating anti-Soviet propaganda, according to freshman John Dardis, the coordinator of the group.

"He has already served an eight-year prison term and is now in the middle of a five-year exile," Dardis stated.

Freshman Bob Cox is the coordinator of the Soviet campaign. He and others working on the case are writing letters to officials in the Soviet Union, including the ones who assign work at the prison.

"We are trying to make things better for him," Cox said. "For example, we are trying to get him a job that is related to his profession."

Cox thinks the letter campaign can help ease the situation for the prisoner because it makes the Soviet officials aware that he is being monitored. He is due to be released in a year or two, Cox continued.

"We are afraid that he might not be released on time," he remarked. "We have received information from London indicating he might not be released when he is supposed to be."

Cox keeps informed of the situation through correspondence from A.I. researchers in the Soviet Union and from the family and friends of the prisoner.

The other case that Notre Dame-Saint Mary's A.I. is working on concerns a Syrian lawyer who was arrested for taking part in a protest, Dardis explained.

"His case is so sketchy that it has been transferred from an adoption case to an investigation case," he said.

Junior Tony Musci, campaign coordinator for the Syrian case, said the mystery in this case is the location of the prisoner. "We have had no response from the Syrian authorities, and neither has our co-group in Italy, which is also working on the case," said Musci. "We have heard rumors that he had a trial and that he did receive a jail sentence."

The Notre Dame A.I. will continue to write letters on his behalf, Musci said.

All A.I. adoptions are arranged through the International Secretariat (I.S.) in London. The I.S. is a network of researchers and investigators that receives news of the cases, usually from the family, Dardis said. They then verify the information with an objective source before they take the case, he continued.

Faculty Senate dismay falsely reported

In Wednesday's article "Faculty Office Building brings complaints," Vaughn McKen, chairman of the Faculty Senate, erroneously said to be dismissed that the e-senate was not consulted concerning the design of the new building. The article should have stated that the senate was dismayed over the lack of communication between the design of the building and the Arts and Letters faculty. As a result, the Senate drafted a letter expressing concern and sent it to Father Hesburgh.

Eli Lilly and Co. has announced that third-quarter sales were up more than $47 million over the same period in 1981 but net income was down $3.5 million. The Indianapolis-based company reported yesterday that third quarter sales were $670.9 million, compared with $623.8 million for the same period in 1981. Net income for the quarter totaled $83.5 million, down from $87.7 million the previous year. The decline was due, in part, to the withdrawal of Ordax from the market, company officials said, adding that the one-time effect of the withdrawal amounted to 20 cents a share. The controversial arthritis drug was removed from the market earlier this year after reports linked it to deaths in the United States and Great Britain. Earnings per share during the third quarter were $1.10, four cents less than the same period last year, the report showed. — AP

Apple donates computers to ND

By VIC SCIULLI
Assistant News Editor

The Apple Computer Corporation has donated approximately $2.8 million to Apple II and Apple III computer systems to the Notre Dame Department of Engineering. The systems are on display at the World's Fair in Knoxville, Tenn. The computer systems will be used to support the work of Dr. Albert E. Miller, associate professor of Metallurgical Engineering, in developing computer software for use in engineering disciplines. The idea of the project is to develop a "smart" video disc with random access memory.

The gift of computers is a result of a proposal Miller submitted to the National Science Foundation, the Apple Corporation, and several other organizations, to put the fresh man Engineering Concepts course on video disc. The goal of the concept would be to provide computer assisted instruction in a laboratory.

The computers will be able to provide further explanations of classroom materials so that a student can know all the fundamentals of a process. The computers will also permit the application of engineering concepts in a form that the students can visualize, like the optimization of a system.

Miller emphasized that the computers are not there to "circumvent" teaching but rather to introduce students to individual learning through microcomputers. Students will be able to work at their own pace and can spend as much time as is necessary until all the fundamentals of a process are understood.

By the end of the course, Miller said, students will be able to sit down in front of a touch-sensitive disc terminal and "drive an engineering problem" to its completion. Miller's proposed problem was the operation of a model power plant similar to the one at Notre Dame. Students would be able to control the input into the plant (coal) to optimize the output (steam). Students would be able to visualize all the theories involved through graphic representations on the screen.

In addition to the Apple computers, the Engineering Department will also be receiving three fully configured systems from IBM. Thought has been given to where the computers will be housed, but a definite place has not been decided.

The additional computers will relieve the load on the presently overcrowded systems in Flaherty Hall. They will be immediately used by the freshmen classes but will not become accessible to other classes until the software for the courses are developed.

Miller and the entire Engineering Department are very excited about the computer gift, which Dr. Roger Schmitz, Dean of the College of Engineering, believes will launch not only Notre Dame but also the engineering field into a new era of computer instruction.

Army militarizes student aid

With nary a peep from official Washington last week, the Army began offering to U.S. college students a package of extracurricular recruitment incentives tied, for the first time, to student loan debts. Through fiscal 1983, recruiters are authorized to absorb up to one-third of any student's accrued debt in exchange for enlistment after graduation. They're also luring Army Reserve candidates to student loan debts. Through fiscal 1983, the economy has more than helped fulfill recruitment wff. The Reserve program is only an ad

Both Sides

The previous Friday night, someone had attempted to break into our house while we were all home. In the process of clenching up to a second floor porch, the person knocked out the powerline and cut off our electricity. Two of my housemates were awake at the time and their in the ushing the dark must have frightened the would-be thieves. It was a bit unsettling the morning seeing to see footprints on the side of the house leading up to a window next to my room. The following Tuesday at 10 p.m. one of my housemates was startled to hear banging on the side door of the house; we never use and is in total darkness at night. He went onto the front porch to see what was up. Two kids were there fiddling with the door. Just then another housemate came home from the library happened to stroll up and make his presence known. The two kids said they were looking for someone and then promptly ran.

The next night I was home alone. At first, I thought nothing of it, having been alone many times in my house last year and thousands of times before that back home. But then, as it got later and later, and the house started to creep and bump (as old houses will), I my imagination went to work. Fueled by the previous week's events, got me thinking about every sound in that house and what caused it.

Three times I went downstairs looking for intruders, prompted by some thump. Although a bit of an overreaction, my fears were not completely baseless. Daily, the already long list of houses broken into gets longer. After every weekend, The Observer usually carries a story or two about students being robbed and held at gunpoint during their excursions off campus.

Just the number of crimes involving guns by itself is unsettling. My next door neighbor informed us the other day that almost every nocturnally active teenager in the neighborhood packs some kind of handgun. No wonder off campus people get edgy when crime is mentioned.

The general reaction to being ripped off or having to live in fear of your physical well being is one of anger (after the fear has subsided a little). When you're angry, you look for someone to blame. The police and the University are the first two logical targets. Unfortunately, yelling at either of these two groups rarely produces any sort of immediate action.

The South Bend Police Department or Saint Joseph County Sheriff's Office cannot be everywhere at once. The type of crimes that are occurring take only 30 seconds; the perpetrator then disappearing into the face of darkness at his home turf.

Notre Dame and Saint Mary's security departments already have their hands full with campus responsibilities and do not have the authority to cruise around South Bend providing safety for Notre Dame students.

What's an off-campus student to do? Most importantly, be careful. Get to know your neighbors. Always lock up (although, if they want to get in, they will). The number of locks is up to you. Finally, when you do see suspicious activity to the police. Even though they can't be everywhere, they can stop if something funny is going on. Other than that though, there really isn't much except to develop a very healthy seige mentality.

COCKEYSV1LLE, Md. (AP) - Sources on both sides yesterday said negotiations aimed at ending the 28-day-old National Football League players strike appear to be crumbling.

There is a growing feeling among the participants this is going nowhere, a union source said as the talks entered their seventh and final day. And a Rooney Rule steering committee, the owners bargaining unit, said the talks seemed to be heading "nowhere toward an agreement."

Both sides met independently with a mediator yesterday morning. The talks were recessed at 1 p.m. EDT, with both sides scheduled to sit down face to face later in the afternoon.

The mediator, 71-year-old San Francisco lawyer Sam Kagel, said he spent part of the afternoon in Baltimore after being given "hardship leave" by both sides.

Asked to respond to the pessimistic comments offered by both management and union sources, Kagel replied: "I can't account for anything the union or I have difficulty with my own."

On Sunday, the Associated Press learned, the union was preparing to modify its wage-scale demand in an effort to achieve an agreement. Any modification suggested by union sources was the exemption of the superstar from the scale and allowing them to continue to bargain with the owners on an individual basis. In another futile effort to sell to the owners the union's demand for a wage scale, union chief Ed Garvey met secretly Sunday with this Rooney, president of the Pittsburgh Pirates and a member of the owners executive committee.

At that meeting, the sources said, Rooney stressed that Garvey's position on the wage scale plan yesterday, Garvey, union president of the Players Union, said the game was their four defensive plays.

With the talks at an impasse, Garvey held a second secret meeting Sunday with Ted Turner, owner of Atlanta's WGN television station, an Atlanta-based cable television system which is broadcasting the games, and with the promoters, who had hoped for a ticket sellout of 40,000.

In the fourth inning, it was Paul Molitor's turn against Cooper, who had played four positions in the past four years, has struggled to third base.

But with one out in the fourth inning, the Cardinals had runners at first and second — and with the help of a Gamer error — and Ozelle Smith at bat. Smith hit a high pop to right and third-Molitor made a leaping catch, stepped on the ball for one out and turned a ground ball into a double play.

"Sometimes you get the break, sometimes you don't," according to Turner.

You must remember this...

Maybe not today, maybe not tomorrow, but by New Year's Day, and for the rest of your life.

It was the Friday night show at which the hero was as admired as the villain. "Everyone is a hero," he said. "Everyone is the water," he said.

"I am Californian in the middle of the desert," he was told.

The reply was "California is no longer a policy?"

Apparently, Notre Dame coaches were massurified as well. I guess somebody told them that their game plan the last few weeks has been terrific, and that they have just walked all over some powerful teams.

Had they asked me, I think surely would have said, like the fat cat at the bank, "That's not how I go to the game, my dear coaches, that in today's college game, conservatism is no longer up to speed policy?"

Some UNUSED players of the most valuable hold the key to unrestricted travel to a bowl game. The members are signed by Buckeye, Leach and Fearsheim. They should have been revoked. They should not even have been questioned. It's time somebody to reach into the plan, pull the letters out, and use them.

There are some who are deep in despair. "We shall surely die here in Casablanca," they wail.

It is not enough to say: "What of it? I'm going to die in Casablanca. It's a good place for it." Something must be done.

At the airport, Rick says to Ilsa: "we all have Paris. We didn't have it — until last night."

Well, the Notre Dame team is at the airport too. They have a two-hour reprieve. You are going to learn, my dear coaches, that in today's college game, conservatism is no longer a policy?"

At the airport, Rick says to Ilsa: "we all have Paris. We didn't have it — until last night."

Well, the Notre Dame team is at the airport too. They have a two-hour reprieve. You are going to learn, my dear coaches, that in today's college game, conservatism is no longer a policy?"

Some students possess the letter of Ernst. Somebody holds the key to unrestricted travel to a bowl game. The letters are signed by Buckeye, Leach and Fearsheim. They should not have been revoked. They should not even have been questioned. It's time somebody to reach into the plan, pull the letters out, and use them.

There are some who are deep in despair. "We shall surely die here in Casablanca," they wail.

It is not enough to say: "What of it? I'm going to die in Casablanca. It's a good place for it." Something must be done.
