Albert Hague left the set of O'Laughlin Auditorium last night, as he discussed his musical and acting career, his role as professor Shorofsky on Fame, in particular. He included in his presentation a performance of "Did I ever really live," a song he wrote and has performed on the show.

The status of the Keenan-Stanford-Farley co-residential resolution was discussed at the first meeting of the new student senate last night in Hayes-Healy.

Student Body President Brian Callaghan described the proposal as "extremely controversial." He outlined it and some objections to it for the new senate members, saying, "The main problem is that Farley and Stanford residents are happy where they are and don't want to move."

Although the Hall Presidents Council failed to reach the two-thirds majority required for approval before Easter break, Callaghan said, "A group of HPC members are forming a committee to look into the issue." This committee will report to the HPC at next week's meeting.

In noting that support does exist for the measure, Callaghan said a vote by Stanford residents who favored the plan by a 2:1 margin. He said their approval was a "message of recognition that 'something must be done eventually', although they would prefer to remain in their dorms."

The University Board of Trustees will review this and other proposals at their May 5 meeting. Other issues include increasing financial aid, improving computer facilities, moving the placement bureau, and increasing social space. The group of students who will present these ideas include Callaghan, Student Body Vice President Peggy Prevost, and the new HPC chairman.

An eight-member committee has been formed to address alcohol-related problems on campus. Callahan said it will "look for concrete solutions" such as "having the first rotation of physical education classes deal with alcohol, drugs, and basic health" and getting more information to the students.

Members of the committee include Callaghan, the HPC chairman, Executive Assistant to the President David T. Tyson, and Associate Professor Edward A. Mollay. They also will report to the Board of Trustees.

Exchange programs with several universities are being considered for next year. They would allow students from each school to visit the others' campus on successive weekends. Schools being considered to participate in the exchange include: Vanderbilt, Marquette, Purdue, Indiana University, and Northwestern.

Student government is looking for a chairman for next year's mock convention which will be held before the presidential primaries. Callahan said about 2200 students participate every four years, and that the program is "very informative to people."

1983-84 budgets are now being prepared. The Student Government Budget Committee will meet April 28 to allocate funds to various branches. It will examine over the next 30 days the current 1982-83 budget, the actual 1982-83 budget, the proposed 1983-84 budget, and projected 1983-84 budget. The committee will then present its recommendations to the Student Senate.

Fame' star reflects on acting experience

By CINDY BOYLE

The scene might have been the School for Performing Arts, as professor Shorofsky from the NBC television series Fame discussed his musical and acting career last night at Saint Mary's.

During his lecture, entitled "Fame: From Albert Hague to professor Shorofsky: Converting Your Education Into a Livelihood," Hague recounted his musical education and musical background before being "whisked away to Hollywood.

Hague is a Broadway composer, teacher, lecturer, coach, musician and performer. He was born in Berlin, Germany, and studied at the College of Music at the University of Cincinnati. He worked in Cincinnati as a "kindergarten teacher."

Hague traveled to New York City after World War II and began composing musicals. His first hit was "Les Miserables," which was made into the Broadway musical "Redhead," which was later turned into a new musical. Hague said that "the most exciting thing about winning the Tony was that it was done by me."

Between writing shows, Hague decided it was time to "begin teaching something about auditioning." Since he has begun teaching the art of auditioning, he has attended 30,000 auditions.

Hague was asked by a casting director to audition for the part of professor Shorofsky in the movie "Fame." He got the part and made the movie in New York. The television series came as a total surprise to Hague. "It was like a dream came true that I never dreamed," said Hague.

Hague appeared on the piano during the lecture, playing his "Bargain Basement Boogie," the first tune he ever performed on his first job. He also played variations of "Beer Barrel Polka," imitating the styles of several classical composers.

Hague's advice to young artists is to "demonstrate that you can be of help when you go on your first audition." He also added that "the theatre is hard to get into" and he stressed the importance of "knowing how to do things effectively."

Hague included in his presentation a performance of "Did I Ever Really Love You," a song which professor Shorofsky has performed on Fame.

Another problem in Washington's campaign was his inability to introduce himself to the black community who had the best chance of making some bridges with at least some percentage of the white ethnics," including such ethnics as Rev. Collins. Bernard Epton had one specific problem, according to Roos. "Epton's biggest problem was the bluntness with which he raised the race issue. Even looking at it from a purely self-interest point of view Epton didn't have to touch it. He could have had surrogates or others do it. If he loses, I think he'll lose because he made whites simply saw Epton as scurrilous and taking the low road completely." Roos indicated that examined what each candidate must do if elected. Wash- ington is in the race with the two most outstanding deputy majors he can find — one black, one white.

Washington was also approached by a chief financial officer "with deep es- tablishment" ties, and a black police chief "who is perceived as tough on crime," he said.

As Chicago braces itself for today's decisive mayoral election, it is the time for the country to brace itself for the next national election known as the presidential elections of 1984. For political junkies, the coming contest should be unemployment. Jane Thrasher, watching of the race knows that it began shortly after Jimmy Carter fled back to the peatlands in 1980. His always happy and smiling vice president was suddenly and completely absent from events sponsored by Carter types and anyone else with a brush. When Carter publicly endorsed Mondale as a presidential candidate in 1984, a frightened Mondale disappeared to a Canadian hunting lodge to shoot ducks and avoid the chance of getting "lower classes" from Carter's inner circle.

Right now, Mondale is leading the pack of Democratic dogs for the party nomination. He has done this by adopting the proven strategy of politicians a workaday middle of the road. Statements like, "I am in favor of strengthening our national defense to provide a secure nation for our children, but we must reduce our defense spending in order to insure that we won't become a nation of poverty," brilliantly placed Mondale in line with what he's in Gallapooly and worries about insurance. He can also sidestep the political pitfalls of doing it practically with the issues, something that has tripped up better men.

The other democratic hopefuls present a diverse array. Senator John Glenn can give Mondale a good scare if he can remember all what's better than a movie star? a real author."

American men expand role in family life

By KEVIN BINGER
News Staff

"The world of the typical 'Dick and Jane' family is becoming home to the bacon and see themselves as superior to women, is no longer practicing Judaism, and that corporations are starting to be more sensitive to the needs of family men. He stated that his company would not promote him because he would not work overtime, he wished to spend more time at home with his two children.

"This is not a wholesale, overnight revolution, but a piece by piece change," said Bell.

Lectures in Judaica

"Women have comprised a larger part of college populations no longer willing to be lost housewives and mothers," Bell stated.

"Also, men have felt a need to be closer to their children and to unshackle their own personal and professional experience (varying aspects) of themselves."

This has forced men to make some difficult decisions between the role of the "traditional man" that their parents wanted, and that of the "contemporary man." Bell refers to this as "The Paradox of Masculinity," the subject of his new book: "A Man, the Paradox of Masculinity."

"We're beginning to see a mini-explosion in the birthrate as the war time baby boom children have grown and are now having their own children," says Bell, "that means more families are having to confront the problem of coordinating work and childrearing."

Bell says that many men are not satisfied with the traditional role and are searching for new ways to spend more time at home.

"One price is that the time that might be put into childrearing takes away from working toward career advancement," says Bell.

"Many men still thinking about marriage are the most important to them than having a career that takes them away from their profession," he continued.

Bell stated that "traditionalists still constitute a majority of the male population. Most men still think of marriage and female roles in one way -- either I'm the strong patriarch or she is the strong mother."

"Many men are having a difficult time relating to women as co-workers or superiors."

The house would not work overtime: he that corporations are starting to be practical for many Americans," said Donald H. Bell, chairman of the philosophy department at Baruch College. He is the fifth in a series of lectures sponsored by the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's American Studies program.

The lecture, "Secular Humanism and Its Implications," was sponsored by the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's is being discussed by the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's board of trustees. It is not a proposal that we would support," said the chairman of the board.

This announcement was made by the 1983-84 Saint Mary's board of trustees, which held its first meeting last night. The new schedule would make the University Village Apartments, which is considered on-campus housing, a regular stop on every shuttle run.

The shuttle is proposed to leave Saint Mary's and proceed down Notre Dame and the University of Notre Dame Saint Mary's Road, it would travel down U.S. 31 to Notre Dame, City College of New York.

There are presently four trips made to the University Village Apartments during the day. The board of trustees wants to get feedback from the students so that they can "make up some tentative proposal that we would support," according to Student Body President Elaine Hocter.

In other action at the meeting:

• May 1 is International Peace Day. The tentative schedule of events at Saint Mary's begins with a Mass at 11:30 a.m. Sunday. Live music on LeMansi courtyard will follow the Mass from 1:00 p.m. until 3:00 p.m. Other events, such as lectures and weddings, are on the schedule for Peace Day.

• A special movie preview of "The Ballad of Gregorio Cortez," not to be released to the public until September, will be shown this Thursday in Moreau Seminary at 7:00 p.m. The movie is being offered free of charge.

• The An Eventful Mr. Campus" will be held at Saint Mary's as part of Gentle Teens activities at 7:30 p.m. It will be followed by the Beer Garden.

• Registration for the "Walk for World Hunger" will be held in the LeMansi Lobby today from 11:00 a.m. until 2:00 p.m. The event is a ten mile walk, which will be held this Saturday at 10:00 a.m. in Leeper Park.

Ideal, we should be preparing for the future and living in the present. No phase of life is preparation for all the rest."

Lerner noted that the emphasis should be less on courses which transmit knowledge than on model- ing, which prepares students for life: "The emphasis should be less on courses and more on the human beings in the courses."

Lerner suggested that teachers break from "the many academic assumptions which causes us to ex­ clude our selves from the classroom and be only cognitive."

"Values theory should be part of educational theory," said Lerner, adding that he views "every classroom as a potential arena for confronting values."

Supplementing teachers by panels of people who question and challenge their statements is another of Lerner's proposals. He commented: "Any subject lends itself to diversity of interpretation. Surely we are shortchanging our students by giving them only one interpretation."

Lerner said that he assumes in his theories a measure of creativity in the teachers and students. He explained that integration is similar to creativity in that both of these processes involve relating, binding, and connecting which has not been before.

Gandhi sweeps awards ceremony

LOS ANGELES (AP) — “Gandhi” dominated the fifty-fifth Academy Awards with eight Oscars last night, including best picture and the best actor award to newcomer Ben Kingsley. Meryl Streep was named best actress for her role as the tragic Polish survivor of a concentration camp in “Sophie’s Choice.”

It was the second Oscar for Miss Streep, who won the supporting actress award for “Kramer vs. Kramer” in 1979.

• Best Picture — “Gandhi”
• Best Actor — Ben Kingsley, “Gandhi”
• Best Actress — Meryl Streep, “Sophie’s Choice”
• Best Supporting Actor — Louis Gossett Jr., “An Officer and a Gentleman”
• Best Supporting Actress — Jessica Lange, “Tootsie”
• Best Director — Richard Attenborough, “Gandhi”

OOTAWA, Ohio (AP) — The Farm Labor Organizing Committee says it plans to establish a national headquarters on a 20-acre site in Putnam County, where migrant workers clashed with deputies in a 1979 incident.

FLOC president Baldemtar Velaszquez said yesterday the land was purchased with a $54,000 loan from a supporter of the organization. He said the group now headquartered in Toledo, will be relocating to the property, midway between Ottawa and Miller City.

The migrant workers’ organization began picketing in tomato fields in northwestern Ohio in 1976. Since then, FLOC has targeted the Campbell Soup Co. and Libby, McNeill & Libby to try to persuade the two leading canneries to partake in the democratic process.

In 1979, U.S. District Judge Don Young in Toledo ordered Putnam County Sheriff Robert Beutler to halt surveillance of FLOC members, who complained they were being harassed by the sheriff and some deputies. Young ordered the sheriff and his men to stay at least 50 feet from FLOC members and to refrain from filming private meetings.

More than two dozen FLOC members were arrested in September 1979 after a strike by migrant workers at a Putnam County tomato field. A FLOC attorney, John Robey, told Young he had been beaten outside the Putnam County Jail by three deputies and a vigilante.

Velaszquez said some of the land at the new headquarters site is to be set aside for experimental, organic farming of crops, including tomatoes, in an effort to find ways to eliminate or reduce the need for pesticides. In addition, FLOC plans to devote more time to boycotts, including doubling the number of workers who are behind the effort.

FLOC has been seeking the right in the intervener’s hearing to renew a boycott against two farmers who grow tomatoes in California, said FLOC director Paul Cifarelli. He said Campbell has felt no effect from the boycott.

“Gandhi” was purchased with a $34,000 loan from the Campbell Soup Co. and Libby, McNeill & Libby and the companies. But the companies have refused to deal with the FLOC advocate of reconciliation with Israel, Velaszquez said yesterday the land at the new headquarters site is to be set aside for experimental, organic farming of crops, including tomatoes, in an effort to find ways to eliminate or reduce the need for pesticides. In addition, FLOC plans to devote more time to boycotts, including doubling the number of workers who are behind the effort.

For either candidate, “the first 10 days after the election and the first 60 days after the inauguration are crucial — how he acts the signals he sends,” Roos said. Everything for the next seven weeks should be “policy-oriented.” Stating that if he were in the place of the elected mayor, Roos said, “I’d do a great job of running the city.”

The first thing Washington would have to do is “get hold of the government, and buy himself some time by turning the day-to-day administration over to some top people” and by ending the confrontation with the union. Roos cited an old political remark, “You’re not doing a good job if your base is happy with you.”

Epton, if elected, must “count the numbers in the city council. If there are enough Democrats on the city council, they’re going to try to govern.”

Roos believes that Epton almost certainly will not be re-elected if he wins today as “he would have to win 80 percent of the vote to go.”

But Washington, if victorious, is on the track. He has “an awfully good chance of being a three-term mayor” if he “does a great job of running the city,” Roos said.

Vietnam, Cambodia hit hostilities peak

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) - The Thai-Cambodian border, where fighting recently escalated to a four-year high, is likely to remain a battlefront for years as a formidable Vietnamese army attempts to crush elusive and determined Cambodian guerrillas.

Cambodian civilians pour across the Thai-Cambodian border. Vietnamese and Cambodian fighters track each other in malarial jungles where mortars are the new weapons and the trading of illicit goods and intravenous drugs is common.

These scenes have been repeated again and again since early 1979 when Vietnamese invaders drove out the leftist Khmer Rouge government from Phnom Penh, spawning a guerrilla war that has created a floating population of civilians along the western edge of the country.

The Vietnamese launched their most ambitious drive to date against the guerrillas in December, making at least five significant strikes since December, then withdrawing several key bases in an offensive that began March 31.

"This rear they are tougher at hitting behind camps and are more willing to risk international criticism," says one Western diplomat. "But there is no question of the Vietnamese handling the guerrillas a knock-out blow."

As the Americans learned in Vietnam and the Soviets did in Afghanistan, there is no such thing as quick victory in guerrilla warfare.
With God at the goal line

Bear Bryant.) So it is wrong, they would tell us, and they would be right. When Turl Bailey in Albququerque claimed the original log chapel, the first administration building, and Saint Edward's Hall, last year, a fire in a private residence on Church Lane almost destroyed that structure, and many priests living there. Last fall, a false alarm at Holy Cross Hall at Saint Mary's created unbelievable confusion as few students knew how to evacuate their rooms. As Notre Dame and Saint Mary's continue their campaign to install more sprinkler systems and fire alarms, they are slowly realizing that the safety of many students was, for many years, jeopardized.

Notre Dame and Saint Mary's have failed to consider one important element in the prevention of fires and emergencies—the people. While posters boldly state the directions for tornado alerts, fire drills, and first aid procedures in dormitories and classroom buildings, faculty, staff, and students grow less and less aware of the need to remain alert to a possible emergency.

A recent incident involving a diabetic seizure points to the need for a more informed community. While both campuses are staffed by many professionals, those professionals cannot be in all places at all times. There must be a link between the victim(s) and the professional. That person is each member of this community.

While it would be naive to suggest that every student and staff member learn the basics of firefighting, first aid, and disaster assistance, it is within our power to ask that Notre Dame and Saint Mary's create a program to train its students in how to handle the everyday emergency.

It is essential that the University and College make the information plastered on walls and in books more accessible to students, to at least provide each member of the community with names, addresses, and phone numbers of those to reach in the case of an emergency, and a list which enumerates the procedures by which to determine how and when to contact health and safety authorities.

Such a program already exists within the upper echelons of dormitories and classroom buildings. Resident assistants, hall directors, rectors, and appointed staff members are in charge of handling emergencies on all campuses. But not all are up to speed and are by no means the only ones who practice their skills. And for those who do not know the first thing about an emergency, the procedures and plans of personal and community protection appear even less clear.

The two campuses have made great strides toward perfecting their responses to emergencies. What is now needed is the professionals in charge to communicate their expertise to other members of the community so that the smell of burning wood, an eerie cloud, or hearing of a siren, the communities may respond quickly and effectively.

"As long as we keep bringing home a piece of the action," Coach Noel O'Sullivan said Friday, "I'll be happy." The head coach definitely has reason to be happy to this point in the season. The 8-1 record the Irish compiled this weekend at the Indiana Invitational boosted the season ledger to an impressive 31-7 mark.

"We've been doing well so far," beamed O'Sullivan, "and I'm delighted so far." As a team the Irish finished with a 155 to 377 over the weekend, giving them a comfortable second place. O'Sullivan, "We're somewhat pleased and pleased with the way we're doing now," said O'Sullivan, Man John O'Donovan and senior Newell led the way for Double Decker.

"We were really excited about playing them," continued Wagner. "We had a lot of fun, especially with the crowd. They were great." Varner, Stacey Toran and Casey Newell led the way for Double Decker. Wagner hit on six of eight shots to lead all scorers: while Torn and Newell were 5-of-6 and 4-of-6, respectively for the game.

Senior John Badrner didn't do quite as well in his game against Name Withheld Upon Request, though. His 1-of-29 shooting in no way helped the cause of Smokey Joe's Chicago Knockers, as they dropped a 25-13 decision.

Ruder later issued a statement on his performance. "I can attribute my shooting success to excellent defense — usually there were three or four guards picking on me and denying me the ball.

"But I was hot, and they knew it. Everyone who watched the game knew it too. They knew that at any moment I was about to explode for another basket." Ruder, by the way, said that he learned to shoot a basketball somewhere in Indiana making himself a leading candidate for the House of Award.

Bruce Oakley padded the way for Name Withheld 1 point Request with his eight points. Bookkeeper Commisioner Davis Dindrcz made his attempt to condone his action as he made only 3-of-6. Torn of Stanford Hall took his own shot at Ruder's mark in putting up 4-shots, as his team, 56, beat Teams 3 and 21, 21-19. Fortunately for Mas, he hit of his 3-of-6-shooting. Von Wyk's team, Knockouts, were still able win the Exauce of Frunk.

Bayless pitches Belles to top

By JUDY McNAMARA
Saint Mary’s Sports Editor

The Saint Mary’s softball program has come a long way since its humble beginning six years ago. Its schedule has been expanded and virtually doubled in size since Head Coach Scott Beisel gained control of the Belles’ softball program four seasons ago. To do so, Saint Mary’s has proven itself a worthy contender by winning the Indiana state championship last year, which is hosted on its home field.

Many factors have contributed to the Belles’ success, but one player in particular seems to have a special effect on the Saint Mary’s squad. Senior pitching ace Mary Bayless has watched many of the changes take place and has been active in helping improve Saint Mary’s image as a serious athletic institution.

"Each year we’ve got a little better," says Bayless. "Last year we finally put it all together and won the state tournament." Bayless has set an example for the rest of the squad. Even when asked about her own performance, she mentions how important the entire team’s success is for her own.

"There’s definitely a lot of pressure when you’re the team’s ace," comments Beisel. "Mary has set an example of what it means to be a true team player. Even when asked about her own performance, she mentions how important the entire team’s success is for her own."

"Last year had to be my best year because the team itself did so well. That has a lot to do with how well I perform," Bayless confesses.

Mary has been very busy during her years as a Saint Mary’s student-athlete. She has been able to handle all the work by staying up a little later at night and gaining an understanding with coaches and professors.

A recent change in Saint Mary’s policy toward its athletes’ scholastic obligations is a visible sign of the college’s new support of its athletic program. Professors are now required to change times of final and test dates in order to accommodate every athlete’s schedule. This has not been common practice but now should help greatly in Saint Mary’s quest for a legitimate and competitive athletic program.

But it’s going to take more than the college’s new policies to successfully complete the quest. It is going to take outstanding players and team leaders that can perform well on the field. There is only one Mary Bayless to go around, though.

"Sometimes you hear a coach say that he’s got a team’s best player or that he’s got a winning attitude," says Beisel. "But Mary truly is both of these and even more."

Now Bayless is looking ahead to her graduation. She has enjoyed her years as a Saint Mary’s athlete but is also looking forward to graduating.

"I’ve got good and bad feelings about leaving here; I’ll miss all my friends and teammates but I’m ready to move on and start social work on a full-time basis."

But first, there is another season to worry about. After six straight cancellations because of bad weather, the Belles are now ready to begin the season today against Grace College on their home field with a doubleheader starting at 3 p.m.

The Saint Mary’s softball team has been rained out of its first six games during this stormy and unpredictable month of April. This is significant to the Belles this season because they now belong to a league which awards points to teams according to number of wins and runs scored during the season. Teams win berths to the league championship on the basis of the number of points they have earned.

The championship game will be held at Kearney State College in May. Head Coach Scott Beisel and his ladies will have their work cut out for them as they attempt to overcome their poor start and earn enough points to secure a position in the playoffs. The Belles could very well begin their quest for this position today in a home game against Grace College. Ground conditions permitting, the doubleheader should begin at 3 p.m. on the Saint Mary’s home field behind Angola Athletic Facility.

The Notre Dame lacrosse team destroyed Mount Union this Saturday, 28-4. For more details on the game and the upcoming week, see Mike Sullivan's story below.

Awaits tough MLA foes

Lacrosse destroys Mount Union

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Assistant Sports Editor

Entering Saturday's game against Midwest Lacrosse Association rival Mount Union College, the Notre Dame lacrosse team was having problems getting behind early, forcing itself to play catch-up. The Purple Raiders from Mount Union, however, may have helped the Irish overcome their problem — and just in time, as the toughest part of their schedule approaches. It's when the clock mercifully ran out, Notre Dame had beaten the badly outmatched Mount Union team, 28-4. In the process, the Irish set a team record for most goals in the game (21) was the previous high) and tied a record for least goals allowed in a game — all in the same game. Fifteen different players scored for a Notre Dame team that was riddled by injuries.

The victory lifts the Irish record to 3-4 and brings the squad's MLA to East Lansing today for a 3:30 game against the Spartans. They will then advance to the next round, including the Spartans — but the Mount Union game may have been just what the team needed — a confidence booster.

IRISH ITEMS — The Irish travel to East Lansing today for a 3:30 game against the Spartans. They will then return home to host Ohio Wesleyan on Saturday at 1-30.

If you're a senior and have the promise of a $10,000 career-oriented job, do you know what's stopping you from getting the American Express Card? You guessed it: Nothing.

Because American Express believes in your future. But more than that. We believe in you now. And we're proving it.

A $10,000 job promise. That's it. No strings. No gimmicks. And this offer is even good for 12 months after you graduate.

But why do you need the American Express Card now?

First of all, it's a good way to begin establishing your credit history. And you know that's important.

Of course, the Card is also good for travel, restaurants, and shopping for things like a new stereo or furniture. And because the Card is recognized and welcomed worldwide, so are you.

So call for a Special Student Application or look for one at your college bookstore or on campus bulletin boards. The American Express Card. Don't leave school without it.

Women's Bookstore opens for fourth time

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Assistant Sports Editor

If you hear the sound of bouncing basketballs coming from some place where besides Lyons, Stepan, or the bookstore today, it's because there is another basketball tournament that has opened play — Women's Bookstore.

The tournament opened its fourth year as the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's women's answer to the original bookstore tournament with final round action yesterday at Saint Mary's. Sixty teams will participate, making it the biggest women's tournament to date.

"We were hoping to get a full tournament of 64 teams," says one of the Women's Bookstore commissioners, Kendra Evans. "Sixty teams is a good number, though, because if the four seeded teams win, a first round game will be played on Saturday.

Each of the four seeds — Oreo, Who Cares' Last Dribble, and We Ain't So Bad — will be the top seed in one of four sectionals. Three rounds of games will determine which teams will compete in the sectional finals. The sectionals are scheduled for Friday, April 22, and the championship game is set for 11 a.m., April 24, just before the Bookstore All-Star game.

The opening day of the tournament saw half of the teams in action. The other half of the teams will be playing today. In all, 16 teams advanced to the next round, including two teams that played in yesterday's Tournamnet.

Remarkable shooting performances — both good and bad — marked the opening day. On the "remarkably good" side, there is Joanne Weiss and Mary Paolucci. Paolucci made 10 of her 11 shots, but was not even the most accurate shooter on her team. Weiss was hitting all 10 of her shots. The two of them led Pretenders to a close 21-18 victory over Team #4. The losers had a hot shooter of their own, as Patricia Streveron made 11 of 15.

Maureen King of The Blow-offs was the high scorer of the day as she pumped in 17 of her 23 shots. Her good shooting more than offset the poor shooting of her teammates who made only 9 of 31. The Blow-offs came away with an easy 21-7 win over The TV Crew who shot a combined .5 for 55 from the field.

Notre Dame volleyball captain Rose Maresaro showed she has some talent in another sport as she made seven of her 11 shots to lead Real Farley Women to a 21-5 rout of The Tri Beto Bombers. Amy Schell of the Bombers did not have as much luck, hitting only one of 17 shots.

Still, Scheel's performance was great when compared with the shooting of Trabajo's Five Orphans. Amy Tenbusch and Debbie Ficker led the Orphans' charge by hitting a combined 6-for-18. Joanne Rudser, sister of Hoosier Award candidate John Rudser, who has been in 20th century men's competition, made the Ruders a definite candidate for the Hoosier Family Award as she made three of her 19 shots. In fact, the Orphans combined for 9-103 shooting in their 21-8 loss to Mort and his Shabbobusters, who weren't too much more accurate, making 21-118.

All in all, things ran as expected in the tournament. The only change in plans was a rule that allowed games to start 15 minutes before 21 if both teams agreed. About half of the teams agreed to the change.

Today's games will again be played at Saint Mary's beginning at 4 p.m. The winners will advance to the next round which will be played on Saturday and Sunday at Stepan and Saint Mary's.

Marshall battles back from injury

By LOUIE SOMOGYI

"Time Marshall will start. . . You just can't keep a player that good out of a lineup."

Such were the words of former Notre Dame football coach Dan Devine after seeing freshman Tim Marshall's first week of practice in the fall of 1980. Unfortunately, Notre Dame fans found out last year that a player that good indeed can be kept out of a lineup.

Marshall came to Notre Dame as one of the most ballyhooed players in recent years. He was a consensus prep All-American his senior year at Van Meter High School in Chicago and was regarded by many to be the top lineman prospect in the nation. In addition he was honored as the national high school "Catholic Player of the Year" — an honor won by Tony Hunter and Bob Grable the two previous years.

Top Bookstore team takes first game easily

By JEFF BLUMB

There were few surprises in yesterday's Bookstore XII action. As expected, highly seeded Double Decker Oreo Cookie handily won its game with Captain Wags and the Sleepwalkers, 21-7.

Donning blankets as warmup caps, Captain Wags and his team passed out Oreo cookies to the large crowd of about 250 in attendance at Sipran court 1 upon their arrival.

As the teams took their places to start the game, it was found that Double Decker's Billy Varr had to leave the game because of a sprained ankle.

This was the strongest division in baseball. Again. Any one of five teams could win it all. Two could finish anywhere from first to last. Baltimore — The Orioles lost Earl Weaver, and he won about 10 games himself every year. But, in a mediocre season (for them), they almost won last season. Pitching is the key. Jim Palmer, Dennis Mar­

 VWаг

New York — Billy Martin wins. Everywhere. The Yankees have an awesome hitting line-up with Dave Winfield, Don Baylor, and Steve Blyler batting 3, 4, 5. 'Goose' Gossage will be a key, and must stay healthy.

Boston — The Red Sox may have the most powerful hitting line-up in baseball. Wade Boggs will win the MVP soon, and he's followed by Dwight Evans, Jim Rice, Toots Arrmas, Yal, and Dave Stapleton.

Boston has the worst starting pitching in the division, but led for two months last year despite it. They could finish first, last, or anywhere in between.

Detroit — Sparky Anderson is almost there. They are as strong up the middle as anyone, with Lance Parrish catching, Alan Trammell and Lou Whitaker in the infield, and Kirk Gibson or Chet Lemon playing center. Jack Morris and Dan Petry could each win 20 games, but the Tigers lost 2 games after the sixth inning last season. The bullpen will be the key again. They could also finish first or last.

Toronto — Surprise. Here is quality pitching, and talented young players. Stieb could win the Cy Young. Alfredo Griffin and Dennis Garcia are both potential All-Stars, and rookie Tony Fernandez may be better than both. Ream them while you can, they're coming fast.

Milwaukee — You can't lose two Cy Young winners and still carry the ball. Pete Vuckovich may be done forever, and Rollie Fingers is just as questionable. These guys can kill the ball, but age is catching up with them. Fifteen players are over 30.

Cleveland — By far the best last place team in any sport. A solid infield, with the addition of Manny Trillo and Julio Franco to go with Mike Hargrove and Tober Harrah. But the starting pitching, with Bert Blyler, Len Barker, Rick Sutcliffe, and Larry Sorensen is only average. The Indians are living proof that mere mediocrity, while acceptable elsewhere, can't make it in the A.L. East.

He lived up to such billings in 1982 as he earned freshman All­America honors from Football News by making an immediate impact for the Irish front line in their 9-2-1 Sugar Bowl season.

Spring Football '83

The next year he played more than any other Irish defensive lineman as he raised his career sack total to 15.

In a fall pre-season practice last year, however, Marshall injured his foot. Having a club foot which can't bend like a normal foot, the healing process was extremely slow. Eventually, he had to sit out the whole year.

"Personally, I think it worked out well for me," says Marshall who now has two years of eligibility left. "It makes you appreciate all the more something that you may have just been taken for granted. I've been playing ball for 12 years now so things started to get repetitious for me.

"By sitting out last year, it has made me want to play again more than ever. I've never been much of a practice player, but now I don't mind doing the things at all in practice that used to. Not that I had a bad attitude before, but it has"
