Egyptian President Mubarak asserts to new Lebanon pact

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) - Secretary of State George P. Shultz received Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak's support yesterday for what is expected to be a grueling ef­ fort to get an agreement for the with­ drawal of Israeli and other for­ eign troops from Lebanon.

Mubarak, at his side today when Shultz goes to Israel for a meeting with Prime Minister Menac­ hem Begin, set conditions that would "facilitate a link­ age with Jordan" that will make possible peace negotiations with Is­ rael.

The plan, rejected by Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organisa­ tion, calls for self-government for the Gaza Strip and the associa­ tion of the territories with Jordan.

Mubarak also said Egypt considers Reagan's "faltering Middle East peace initiat­ive of Menachem Begin "for peace. He urged the Palestinians to meet its terms by "declaring a state of inde­ pendence." He said the peace would conclude with a "gentle and lasting" Middle East peace.

The effort begins in earnest today with a 3 1/2-hour meeting with Mubarak at his side, said Secretary of State George P. Shultz. His aides said they discussed the ur­ gency of a troop withdrawal that Lebanon is unwilling to meet.

After a 3 1/2-hour meeting with Mubarak, Shultz gave reporters the clear impression he and

Tylenol exec promotes 'right' business ethics

By BOB VONDERHEIDE

The leading executive of Tylenol was walking down SouthQuad yest­ erday as he used to do 27 years ago when he was a Notre Dame senior.

It seemed like the first time in six months he wasn't running.

David Collins, chairman of the Johnson & Johnson subsidiary McNeil Products, became the chief organizer of the massive marketing for­tune to save Tylenol when an un­ known killer brought the health care giant to its knees last September.

"What I'm trying to describe," he said, "is a situation so complex and so fast moving that without a sound permanent ethic — some sort of guiding light like a path along this walk — you get absolutely lost."

But Collins said the values he learned as an undergraduate in Notre Dame's General Program helped him deal with the tragedy that was "literally laced with ethical questions at every turn."

He opened the door to the Morris­ lar. "Everyone knows you should pursue the right," he said, "but not everybody in the business world has the conviction that if you always do what you think is right that whatever the short-term conse­ quences, things will work out right in the long term."

"I'm not going to let the economic consequences of a decision prevent me from making the right decision," he said.

Johnson & Johnson has receded

much pride for the way it handled the Tylenol cyanide tragedy. The Washington Post said in an editorial that Collins "set a new standard" for corporate response to such tragedies, and that the company should "pursue the right,"

In a meeting with Collins, mutual fund analyst Nicholas Brady said he was "impressed with your reaction" to the Tylenol crisis.

Collins, speaking earlier at a Marketing Club lecture, said that no time did anyone at J&J suggest scrapping the Tylenol label and removing the product under a new, "cleaner name."

The task force (set up immediately after the news of the Chicago deaths reached Col­ lins) also decided to keep constant watch on the media. Collins later opened several toll-free "Tylines,"

The company immediately received 34,000 calls from concerned con­ sumers, and later issued 80 million Tylenol coupons offering to replace any Extra-Strength capsules with tablets.

At last count, Collins said, 3,200 people had died. Collins and the task force withdrew some 31 million bottles of Tylenol products.

More than 8 million Extra-Strength capsules were tested for cyanide. Collins said, and the computer data suggested that the smal­ l number of Tylenol victims were "an extraordinary coincidence." Collins added, "Two more bottles were found in t" with tainted capsules. "The decision to withdraw the capsules saved at least two lives," Collins said.

Two days after the poisonings, the task force decided to design a new tamper-resistant package for the eventual re-marketing of Tylenol.

On December 19, after an initial 80 percent drop of sales, Tylenol in its new triple-sealed container ap­ peared again in drug stores.

Many economic experts predicted the certain death of Tylenol, especially after the task force decided to stick with the Tylenol label. One economist sa­ id that saving Tylenol would be as miraculous as turning a fountain of water into wine. In this month, more Tylenol products had regained 95 percent of its pre-poisoning levels, said the U.S. Food and Health­ pan agency.

Collins said he didn't know if McNeil's public relation efforts had been effective.

"There's no shortage of research puzzles," said Miller, the research professor at the University of Chicago.

Miller said that research in finance involves the prices of "so-called capital assets." These capital assets are not valued for the consumption of anything, Miller said, but as an academic exercise. Miller said that many people in the public sector were "surprised" by this research.

"The issue of whether or not it makes sense is more than an academic discussion," said Miller, noting that the social sciences could not be explained by theory. Miller noted.

Miller said that three years ago a glaring anomaly was uncovered. The computer data suggested that the small­ less than 20 percent of the market "substantially outper­ formed" the larger firms. "Miller said that this evidence violated two basic paradigms of finance.

"I think it might be possible to arrange for the withdrawal of Israeli troops during the trip, Shultz replied. "It's cer­ tainly possible but we will see."

Mubarak, who said Shultz gave him a letter from President Reagan concerning Middle East problems, said he hoped the secretary's trip to the region would conclude with "something beneficial to the whole region."

"I related that there must be a complete withdrawal of all foreign forces from Lebanon."

Mubarak also said Egypt considers Reagan's "faltering Middle East peace initiat­ive of Menachem Begin " for peace. He urged the Palestinians to meet its terms by "declaring a state of inde­ pendence." He said the peace would conclude with a "gentle and lasting" Middle East peace.

The effort begins in earnest today with a 3 1/2-hour meeting with Mubarak at his side, said Secretary of State George P. Shultz. His aides said they discussed the ur­ gency of a troop withdrawal that Lebanon is unwilling to meet.

After a 3 1/2-hour meeting with Mubarak, Shultz gave reporters the clear impression he and

Tylenol exec promotes 'right' business ethics

By BOB VONDERHEIDE

The leading executive of Tylenol was walking down SouthQuad yest­ erday as he used to do 27 years ago when he was a Notre Dame senior.

It seemed like the first time in six months he wasn't running.

David Collins, chairman of the Johnson & Johnson subsidiary McNeil Products, became the chief organizer of the massive marketing for­tune to save Tylenol when an un­ known killer brought the health care giant to its knees last September.

"What I'm trying to describe," he said, "is a situation so complex and so fast moving that without a sound permanent ethic — some sort of guiding light like a path along this walk — you get absolutely lost."

But Collins said the values he learned as an undergraduate in Notre Dame's General Program helped him deal with the tragedy that was "literally laced with ethical questions at every turn."

He opened the door to the Morris­ lar. "Everyone knows you should pursue the right," he said, "but not everybody in the business world has the conviction that if you always do what you think is right that whatever the short-term conse­ quences, things will work out right in the long term."

"I'm not going to let the economic consequences of a decision prevent me from making the right decision," he said.

Johnson & Johnson has receded

much pride for the way it handled the Tylenol cyanide tragedy. The Washington Post said in an editorial that Collins "set a new standard" for corporate response to such tragedies, and that the company should "pursue the right,"

In a meeting with Collins, mutual fund analyst Nicholas Brady said he was "impressed with your reaction" to the Tylenol crisis.

Collins, speaking earlier at a Marketing Club lecture, said that no time did anyone at J&J suggest scrapping the Tylenol label and removing the product under a new, "cleaner name."

The task force (set up immediately after the news of the Chicago deaths reached Col­ lins) also decided to keep constant watch on the media. Collins later opened several toll-free "Tylines,"

The company immediately received 34,000 calls from concerned con­ sumers, and later issued 80 million Tylenol coupons offering to replace any Extra-Strength capsules with tablets.

At last count, Collins said, 3,200 people had died. Collins and the task force withdrew some 31 million bottles of Tylenol products.

More than 8 million Extra-Strength capsules were tested for cyanide. Collins said, and the computer data suggested that the smal­ l number of Tylenol victims were "an extraordinary coincidence." Collins added, "Two more bottles were found in t" with tainted capsules. "The decision to withdraw the capsules saved at least two lives," Collins said.

Two days after the poisonings, the task force decided to design a new tamper-resistant package for the eventual re-marketing of Tylenol.

On December 19, after an initial 80 percent drop of sales, Tylenol in its new triple-sealed container ap­peared again in drug stores.

Many economic experts predicted the certain death of Tylenol, especially after the task force decided to stick with the Tylenol label. One economist sa­ id that saving Tylenol would be as miraculous as turning a fountain of water into wine. In this month, more Tylenol products had regained 95 percent of its pre-poisoning levels, said the U.S. Food and Health­ pan agency.

Collins said he didn't know if McNeil's public relation efforts had been effective.

"There's no shortage of research puzzles," said Miller, the research professor at the University of Chicago.

Miller said that research in finance involves the prices of "so-called capital assets." These capital assets are not valued for the consumption of anything, Miller said, but as an academic exercise. Miller said that many people in the public sector were "surprised" by this research.

"The issue of whether or not it makes sense is more than an academic discussion," said Miller, noting that the social sciences could not be explained by theory. Miller noted.

Miller said that three years ago a glaring anomaly was uncovered. The computer data suggested that the small­ less than 20 percent of the market "substantially outper­ formed" the larger firms. "Miller said that this evidence violated two basic paradigms of finance.
The cliff-hanging "Dynasty" episode that left viewers wondering about the fate of its two beautiful stars was the most watched show of the week ending April 24, and gave ABC its second highest rating into alleged mismanagement and political manipulation of the fund. She was fired by President Reagan on Feb. 7 after she refused a special conference committee was in the process of finding a new director for ABC. Its second highest rating.
ND grad Darsee faces research fraud charge

By MARY DOLAN

The scientific community is call­ ing for a reevaluation of the guidelines to research as a result of Doctor John Darsee's alleged fabrication of research data.

Although a Notre Dame graduate, is accused of falsifying data of animal experiments performed within the Cardiac Research Lab at Harvard-affiliated Brigham and Women's Hospital.

Notre Dame Professor Julian Pleasants, who has offered information in the investigation of the Har­ vard researcher, said; "At the time the doctor accused of having fabricated the article he published in the Notre Dame Science Quarterly of 1969, it seemed an unnecessary kicking of a man when he's down to make the evidence public. But when the National Institute of Health's in­ vestigative panel published their report in February of 1983 on Dar­ see's performance at Harvard it was clear they had drawn the wrong con­ clusion because they lacked the evidence I had at hand."

Although Darsee never was a stu­ dent of Pleasants, upon hearing of the investigation, the microbiologist remembered a seminar held by Dar­ see 15 years ago summarizing his research into the life­span of rats. Pleasants recalled that the results were outstanding and, assuming at the time that these results represented the work of a large laboratory, did not question the findings.

Since the publication of the study within the last year has Pleasants discovered that Darsee had published two articles in the stage­of Notre Dame Science Quarterly of 1969 detailing this presumed research. According to Pleasants, the work is "remarkable due to "The Hormone Factor in Aging" and "Experimental Influence of Hormones on Lon­gevity and Vitality of Rats," were not subject to pre­publication review by faculty.

In his own review Pleasants dis­ covered these earlier publications. He states that "anyone who had even once tried to remove blood from the tail veins of rats would know how traumatic it is and would not have proposed twice­weekly bleed­ings."

He further explains that the amount of hormones used for sup­plementation would have required thousands of rats, more than could be housed at Notre Dame.

Pleasants did not forward this in­formation to Eugend Braunwald, director of the Harvard lab, until it came apparent to him that NIH research was bearing too much of the burden of responsibility and that NIH had concluded that it was a case of circumstances rather than character.

Pleasants countered that Darsee's actions were not an isolated response to the supposed "perversion of natural philosophy" in the lab but that he had already invented data in response to the pressure of getting into medical school, a pressure which is not created by ad­ ministrators but by the great demand for a limited number of positions.

In reaction to the Darsee case, the scientific community has called for a reevaluation of the guidelines of the research system. Pleasants is in­ terested in seeing that NIH develops the best long­range research guidelines but does not want to jump to the conclusion that Darsee is a fraud.

"Already Darsee has been barred from receiving any NIH funds or working with any NIH communities for the next 10 years. Pleasants considers the matter of whether Darsee is a fraud there will always be two researchers, one to watch the other, then only half as much will be accomplished."

According to Pleasants, resear­ chers with the character to ability respond to pressure are needed. Al­ though he does not deny that ex­cessive pressure might exist within a lab, he says that this cannot be blamed in Darsee's case. "You're just a young man," he said, "seems to have an unusual ability to fabricate information and get away with it.""is a young man," he said, "seems to have an unusual ability to fabricate information and get away with it."

This past weekend, the Emory University School of Medicine, where Darsee studied medicine, dis­ closed that Darsee is again suspected of falsifying papers he co­ authored and even chapters in medi­ cal books. A more extensive review will be released pending further in­ vestigation.

Court debates Reagan seatbelt plan

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Re­agan administration met skeptical ques­tions yesterday as it told the Supreme Court that its scrapping of a requirement for automatic seat belts in cars was justified because the devices would not increase safety.

Solicitor General Rex E. Lee, trying to persuade the court to over­ turn a lower court ruling, said the Transportation Department should have "broad leeway" in setting auto safety standards without inter­ ference from the courts.

The government argued that when it rescinded a rule in 1984 that would have required air bags or passive seat belts in all new cars, it did so because of "substantial uncer­ tainty" that airbags would be in­ stalled or that seat belts would not be disconnected.

But an insurance industry lawyer said the action put the automakers back in the driver's seat on safety.

The Supreme Court is expected to decide whether to over­ turn a ruling by the U.S. Court of Ap­ peals that said the government had acted unlawfully in scrapping the seat belt rule and that passive belts should be installed in new cars as soon as possible.

The government appealed the ruling by the Supreme Court, which heard arguments on the matter yes­ terday.

The heart of the government's case rests on a contention that the public does not like passive seat­ belts, which automatically wrap around a person entering a car, and that there is no evidence that motorists will not disconnect the belts and, thereby, provide no more protection than the seat belts now available.

Handicapped services cart 'lacked'

By TOM MOWLE

A golf cart was driven into Saint Joseph's Lake Friday night but the identity of the persons involved remains unknown.

Sister Evelyn Booms, director of the Office for Handicapped Student Affairs, said the cart was left outside Flanner Hall because it was too late to take it to the maintenance garage.

Handicapped services cart 'lacked'

By TOM MOWLE

A golf cart was driven into Saint Joseph's Lake Friday night but the identity of the persons involved remains unknown.

Sister Evelyn Booms, director of the Office for Handicapped Student Affairs, said the cart was left outside Flanner Hall because it was too late to take it to the maintenance garage.

She said this was the first time the cart had been left unlocked.

Security Director Glenn Terry who has "no ideas on who did it." He noted that the cart is still operable, although it sustained slight damage.

Booms said the cart service was started on January 31 to provide transportation to handicapped non­ students. She said 29 students have used the service since it began.

The cart was purchased by the Office of Student Affairs to test the feasibility of the service. Booms said she "hopes to continue service" next year, but it will be evaluated this summer. About 25 students, mostly from Circle K, the Knights and Ladies of Columbus, and Pasadena East, have volunteered to drive the cart.

DePaul University
School of Accountancy
CPA REVIEW COURSE
for the November, 1983, Examination
(June 20-October 28)

The 55th offering of the DePaul University CPA Review Course is now accepting applications for the Summer 1983 Review. The Review features live classroom instruction, an CPA-professory faculty, convenient Loop location and session options (MWF and TThS and TThS) for the November, 1983, Examination.

NO review can match the coverage, the instruction, the faculty and the experience of the DePaul CPA Review Course. For infor­ mation, please write:

DePaul University
School of Accountancy
25 East Jackson Boulevard
Chicago, Illinois 60604

Please send me a brochure and application form for the DePaul University CPA Review Course.

Name

Address

City

State

Zip

DePaul University
An equal opportunity educator and employer
Wednesday, April 27, 1983 — page 4

Three-day ordeal ends for trapped spelunkers

MOUNT VERNON, Ky. (AP) — Eight explorers were rescued yesterday from a cavern where they were trapped by floodwaters for three days, and said they cracked jokes and made up songs while battling their way to freedom.

"I literally shook for 48 to 50 hours," said Mark Rocklin, one of the six men and two women in the expedition from the Greater Cincinnati Caverns, an Ohio spelunking club. Rocklin said a fear of dying gave way to the more immediate concern of staying warm at 53-degree temperatures in 1,800 feet of water on Crooked Creek about 50 miles south of Lexington in a remote area of southeastern Kentucky.

The spelunkers huddled together for warmth, nibbled on lunchbox meat and wrapped themselves in plastic bags to conserve heat. Rocklin said they told jokes and made up songs while waiting for help.

Veteran spelunker Jack Hissong, one of the co-leaders of the group, said the decision to enter the cave Saturday morning during a rainstorm was a "judgment call."

"If I knew the water would come up so suddenly, it would have been foolish to go in," Hissong said.

The weight of the water was so great when it rained that it trapped the group before a rescue team led them out Tuesday shortly before noon.

All declared themselves in good condition. To make their escape, the spelunkers had to crawl through a 30-foot corridor only 25 inches high. Under normal circumstances, the water was up to two inches from the ceiling of the passageway, so that spelunkers can crawl in with their heads down and not dread fear.

Hissong said there was an air of uncertainty as they awaited rescue.

"Until we discovered the pump noise and the diver's line, we didn't know what was going on," he said. "There could have been no one out there for all we knew."

Hissong said the group had been surveying the main passage of the cave and had reached its back wall, 1 1/2 miles from the entrance. Returning, the team found that water blocked a low passage near the entrance.

The group ultimately took refuge on a familiar ledge 1,800 feet from the entrance. That was where divers located them late Monday.

The rescue, however, required hours of pumping water from the cave to give the spelunkers breathing space in the low passage.

The rescue team initially was frustrated when a diver was unable to find any trace of the group after a six-hour search. The diver found himself in an 18-foot high cavern which was nearly filled to the top.

But another team of divers found a handwritten note on a dry ledge after four hours of searching saying that the spelunkers were alive and well.

"We began to bring the whole exploration out of the six by six foot entrance of the cave about 10 a.m. yesterday," said Rocklin.

Feds arrest two Thais in heroin interception

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two Thai nationals were arrested and 80 pounds of nearly pure heroin were seized in one of the largest heroin busts in United States history, federal investigators said Tuesday.

The surveillance operation went awry, when the two men discovered they were being followed, tipping the hand of federal agents who had hoped to trace the drugs further.

The drugs were concealed in 10 packages mailed from Bangkok Thailand, to 10 apartments in the Los Angeles area, said Ted Hunter, special agent in charge of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration in Los Angeles.

The packages were intercepted by agents at an international postal dispatch center in Oakland, one of 21 centers across the United States where overseas mail is handled by Customs Service agents.

Under constant supervision, the packages were routinely forwarded to the Los Angeles post offices and addressees notified there was a parcel ready for pickup. Federal Agents staked out each of the 10 post offices awaiting pickup.

---

Attention! SOUTH DINING HALL STUDENTS
You are invited to join the Alumni Board & Senate for lunch on Thursday from Noon to 2:00pm

AD DEADLINES
For the April 29 issue:
Classified ads are due by 3pm April 28
*Display ads are due by 1pm April 27

For the May 13 issue:
Classified ads are due by 3pm May 12.
*Display ads are due by May 2 at 1pm.

ADVERTISING DEADLINES
For the April 29 issue:
Classified ads are due by 3pm April 28
*Display ads are due by 1pm April 27

For the May 13 issue:
Classified ads are due by 3pm May 12.
*Display ads are due by May 2 at 1pm.

The Observer
A proposal to improve the quality of parties by charging people a one-time admission fee at parties in hall party rooms was approved by the Hall Facilities Council at last night's meeting of the semester.

The proposal, initiated by St. Ed-ward Hall President Barry Strick-land, originally stipulated that a one-dollar admission fee be charged for women entering parties in the party rooms of men's dorms and $1 for women entering parties in the party rooms of women's dorms.

Lyons Hall President Suyi Joyce was opposed to the proposal. "It would be a good idea because it gives a non-embarrassing reason to collect money at hall parties," she said.

Suyi, after mentioning that some women at his dorm's parties "can be as sociable as walls," indicated that he "felt it was his job to give his share, and then leave. Hopefully the proposal will discourage those parties"

At the request of Lewis Hall Presi- dent Mark Voss, the Longacre-Hopkins, HPC, Chairman Mike Carlin, with the council's approval, replaced the wording "men and women" with "people" in the proposal. The coun-cil then approved it and sent it to Vice President for Student Affairs John Van Wulk."In other business, Student Body Vice President Peggy Prestvik asked the presidents to encourage seniors to "mark the fifty-dollar deposit checks that they get back for financial aid, that is, if they wish to give the money as their first gift to the university."

Prestvik also mentioned that student government is looking for input as to how Homecoming could be improved. She added that anyone interested in becoming the chair-person of Homecoming should con-tact the student government to con-continue forward planning for the Homecoming event.

The Vice President asked for the council's input to a proposal that would "make it clear whether or not a woman's dorm on each quad be closed from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m."

If gave up their laundry room for one day per week, the congestion at Badin Hall could be alleviated," she said. The council reacted favorably and encouraged her to carry the issue further.

Colombian drug queen led smuggling ‘family’

MIAMI (AP) — U.S. drug agents spoke tearfully of Veronica Rivera de Vargas, Martha Itiia Cardi lo de Gaviria, and Marta Ospina — three Colombian matriarchs of rival Latin American drug cartels who allegedly smuggled $6.6 million in narcotics for women entering parties in the party rooms of men's dorms and $1 for women entering parties in the party rooms of women's dorms. The council unanimously approved.

Carlin also announced, with the council's approval, that Pat Carvalho, the former associate editor of the Tiempo, would be the new secretary of the HPC.

The meeting adjourned with the council’s singing “Happy Birthday” to a surprised Pat Sherrill, the presi-dent of Pasquerilla West.

HPC proposes party admission fee

By MIKE KRISKO
Staff Reporter

This nation needs Notre Dame to be a leader in our complex society," said Dr. James W. Frick at the memorial service of the St. Joseph County Notre Dame Alumni Club last night at the Monogram Room.

Frick, vice president for public relations and development, who is a native of St. Joseph County, said Notre Dame "stands as a symbol of the importance of education and its role in society." He said the university is "in a unique position to take a leadership role in community life..."

"It’s an inviting world, and like the spiders, the female of the species can be especially deadly," said one Drug Enforcement Administra-tion intelligence agent, who spoke under condition her name not be used. "Not that she’s high class. She’s ruthless to her enemies.”

Frick said that some drug cartels in Colombia use women and children under age 16 for the purpose of smuggling cocaine and other drugs.

Frick acknowledged that the university’s educational objectives of Notre Dame, Frick described several priorities. Frick said that the university desired to stimulate a curiosity about the world of knowledge, to inspire a love of reading. Frick said it would be a good idea because it gives the money as their first gift to the university."

"She became a social threat.’’

Rivera de Vargas, 39, toured the streets of Miami in her BMW, sandwiched between two Mercedeses and other bodyguards. She was observed in a jeweled ring and crystal shop in a fashionable mall city and gar-\n
When it was found that nearly half of the returns in these small firms occurred in January, and a substantial proportion of these in the first week of January, said Miller.

According to Miller, this "January anomaly" is not unique to the U.S., but occurs in almost all countries with a stock market. "We do not the moment have any kind of plausible clue" as to the cause of this anomaly, Miller stated.

The "January anomaly" is a major concern of researchers today, said Miller. "It's there," he said. "I just wish I knew why."
Solving An Troutal

Every spring, graduation and exams set the mood for seniors and those who would like to be seniors. But between the thaw of ice and snow and the thaw of frozen minds, Saint Mary’s and Notre Dame pause to celebrate spring. An Troutal is as much of this behemoth as has been for many years, a tradition against tradition.

On campuses with coed colleges, student studies and homework are the weekday norms. An Troutal gives students and faculty a chance to relax amid mud-filled fields, basketball courts, and 60 degree sunshine.

An Troutal started with a fun, complete with the primordial cries of the “unofficial!” Thursday night scream, the tearing eyes of a hot chili eater, and good-humored taunts of chariotiers. No matter what the game, contestants celebrated the fun of freeing themselves of their inhibitions; the only fools were those who chose not to participate.

A hundred men and women, led by Jay Reidy at Notre Dame and by Mary Anne Dahir and Therese McDonald at Saint Mary’s, gave us a free and (occasionally) lively class to put together more than 30 weeks worth of hard work. More than the sheer enjoyment of contributing their effort, these volunteers gave their fellow students a chance to laugh, shout, and most importantly, relax.

To recognize the selfless efforts of volunteers and spirited competition previous to An Troutal, The Observer urges the University to suspend classes on the Friday afternoon of An Troutal week. Faculty and students alike realize classes alone make Jane and John dull students.

As students prepare for these last two weeks of school, they must remember the fun that An Troutal allows them to do away with occasional hiccups or tons of the frisbee. It is spring; don’t let exams spoil the fun.

Editorials

English: all the excitement

Meeting foreigners in America has rarely made me comfortable. Without knowing any thing about a person, I suddenly feel very shy and assume that person speaks English with an accent.

Paul McGinn
Roper Review

Last Sunday, while walking on a deserted downtown street in Chicago, a couple approached me. The woman spoke first. In a French accent as heavy as olive oil, she asked me if I wanted to accompany her and her hus­band to a dinner. At first, I was stunned — why would anyone ask me to dinner off the street? Then my eyes caught a glint of the unionization of the Baskin.

After both of them introduced themselves, the man said to me “If you think of us as a couple, you will lose me in the world of laziness and fear, demanding that every book be translated into the self¬ proxied community-determined equivalent of Latin.

I pride myself on standardized test scores and grades. And while I can appreciate my foreign origins, I cannot take the same test or course in two languages.

Even when Americans lose their inhibition and travel overseas, they take them not only a phrase book and dictionary, but a guidebook instead of a Bible. The same is true of education.

I will dread a planned trip to the Continent this summer because I can express myself in English only, and quite imperfectly at that. But the fear of another language is often as un­ founded as fear of the dark.

A scene in the movie Breaker Morant, the main character amalgamates an answer to a Boer prisoner his name. The translator turns to his dictionary and asks in Afrikaans, “Van’t is je naam?”

To say the least, common sense is many times what counts.

Not only do Americans feel afraid of unknown alphabets, but of letters which look like anything but English. Even my roommate who is a great teacher of English was afraid to write in English.

“If it’s just like English, why don’t they just learn English?”

And even when we acknowledge our cul­

Editorial Board

Executive Editor — Daniel Dziedzic
Assistant Editors — David Daschke, Paul McGinn
Art Director —219-229-5203
Features Editor — Sarah Hamilton
Editorial Board — Michael Riccardi, Suzanne La Croix, Paul McGinn Refrigeration Manager — Anne Monastyrski
Advertising Manager — Daniel D'Harie
Business Manager — Bob Vonderheide
Production Manager — Margaret Mancini
Features Editor — Bob Vonderheide
Editor — Marko Tomasevic
Copy Editor — Scott Bower

Department Managers

Business Manager — Daniel D'Harie
Controller — Alex Silva
Advisory Manager — Chris Own

Scholarships, in which “Both sides of the wall” between “Notre Dame and the Military” were examined. I specifically resorted to the article, “The ROTC Alternative.” Above the title reads, “One out of every ten students at Notre Dame is in the ROTC program — a percentage higher than any other college in the country.”

To a person like myself who would like to con­

Suzanne La Croix

English: all the excitement

The Observer

One week from today, the Roman Catholic Church of this country will meet in Chicago to decide whether or not to ratify the third draft of their pastoral letter, “The Challenge of Peace: God’s Promise and Our Response.” Throughout the earlier drafts of the letter, the bishops state their hope that the letter will be left to sit on the shelf” but will instead be studied by and shared with the Roman Catholic populace of this country.

Kevin Walsh
Guest Columnist

In this series of articles, I hope to share some of what the bishops are saying, along with others’ and my own insights about peace, while applying to that two areas of concern which are very close to us here at Notre Dame: the ROTC program and registration for the selective service.

In this first article, I will address the issue of the moral legality of having the institution of ROTC at a Catholic university such as Notre Dame, and I hope to do so in light of the bishops’ statement to Catholic youth. The pastoral states, “We ask you (youth) to study carefully the teaching of the Church and the demands of the Gospel about war and peace.” We encourage you to seek careful guidance as you reach conscious decisions about your civic responsibilities in the age of nuclear military force.

The essential message which Jesus taught can be discovered both in the Gospel and in the records of the early Christian com­

Peter” — a basic Christian moral stance. No Chris­

As Christians, we are followers of Christ (who asunder considers Augustinians and Thomists, and as such we must strive to un­ many things about which our teacher, Jesus, was very constant. St. Paul, however, was so firm in his teaching of the Church and the demands of the Gospel about war and peace.

As Christians, we are followers of Christ (who asunder considers Augustinians and Thomists, and as such we must strive to un­

I would like to be seniors. But between the thaw of ice and snow and the thaw of frozen minds, Saint Mary’s and Notre Dame pause to celebrate spring. An Troutal is as much of this behemoth as has been for many years, a tradition against tradition.

On campuses with coed colleges, student studies and homework are the weekday norms. An Troutal gives students and faculty a chance to relax amid mud-filled fields, basketball courts, and 60 degree sunshine.

An Troutal started with a fun, complete with the primordial cries of the “unofficial!” Thursday night scream, the tearing eyes of a hot chili eater, and good-humored taunts of chariotiers. No matter what the game, contestants celebrated the fun of freeing themselves of their inhibitions; the only fools were those who chose not to participate.

A hundred men and women, led by Jay Reidy at Notre Dame and by Mary Anne Dahir and Therese McDonald at Saint Mary’s, gave us a free and (occasionally) lively class to put together more than 30 weeks worth of hard work. More than the sheer enjoyment of contributing their effort, these volunteers gave their fellow students a chance to laugh, shout, and most importantly, relax.

To recognize the selfless efforts of volunteers and spirited competition previous to An Troutal, The Observer urges the University to suspend classes on the Friday afternoon of An Troutal week. Faculty and students alike realize classes alone make Jane and John dull students.

As students prepare for these last two weeks of school, they must remember the fun that An Troutal allows them to do away with occasional hiccups or tons of the frisbee. It is spring; don’t let exams spoil the fun.

Meeting foreigners in America has rarely made me comfortable. Without knowing any thing about a person, I suddenly feel very shy and assume that person speaks English with an accent.

Paul McGinn
Roper Review

Last Sunday, while walking on a deserted downtown street in Chicago, a couple ap­
Tips for detecting nuts

One day it happens — you wake up shaking uncontrollably or have a funny feeling from your head to your toes. Don’t try to say something, but instead all you can manage is a sort of laugh or giggle. Some time later...

Before you know it, worried friends have called the home. Soon you find yourself bouncing off padded walls and wearing a white garment known as a straitjacket. Things aren’t bad for long, after a few injections and a few doses of the drug, the crazium, everything is beautiful. You settle back to life with filled with numb thoughts and hours spent finger-painting.

For all too many people, the pressures of life can result in lunacy. While the sad scene depicted above is a rather extreme case, we are all susceptible to confusions and verbosity...confused and verbose...some degree of going bonkers. Fortunately, you don’t have to be someone you know. This is not saying that their stuff is

(1) Terminal Sleep. People suffering from such a disease cannot wake up — in fact they don’t want to wake up, because doing so would mean facing the world. Instead they sleep for hours on end, getting up only so that they can take a nap. Many times these people have been known as sleepwalkers. They are off in isolated carrels in the library, or pin to snooze in the back of darkened theaters. In extreme cases, people have been known to go into walking trances. One portion of the brain feels so guilty for inactivity that it subliminally attempts to appear active. Do not awaken a victim of this ailment, as they may become violent or try to kill you. So far there is no solid evidence supporting the theory that a high number of people suffering from this ailment are capable of waking up, because doing so would mean facing the world. However, upon seeing the film

(2) Burnt Candle Syndrome: Named for the classic 1951 horror movie which portrayed a

One portion of the brain feels so guilty for inactivity that it subliminally attempts to appear active. Do not awaken a victim of this ailment, as they may become violent or try to kill you. So far there is no solid evidence supporting the theory that a high number of people suffering from this ailment are capable of waking up, because doing so would mean facing the world. However, upon seeing the film

FLASHDANCE: little dance, less flash

"Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea," and "Sea Hunt." These shows contain nothing that is grotesque or disgusting. What they do contain is a pretentiousness that is not only gross to look at, but it indicates a lack of reason. Late-night binges can be significant as well. Suddenly cowering for substances normally un­available at odd hours of the morning, followed by manic trips to "7-11," are sure signs of an impending break down. In one case, a boy was known to drive all the way to Hammond for a sack of "sliders" from White Castle.

Bananarama is a new British group that is formed from three female "go-go dancers" whose lightweight approach is evident in their name; a fact which led lead singer Siobhan Fahey stated when she remarked, "We just wanted a name that expressed energy and light-heartedness." Their only hit so far, their self-titled single sung in Swahili, is one which people really enjoy watching and feel good about.

Our first single was sung in Swahili, so we thought of something tropical — bananas — and added the "zama" because it sounded sil­l

"Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea," and "Sea Hunt." These shows contain nothing that is grotesque or disgusting. What they do contain is a pretentiousness that is not only gross to look at, but it indicates a lack of reason. Late-night binges can be significant as well. Suddenly cowering for substances normally unavailable at odd hours of the morning, followed by manic trips to "7-11," are sure signs of an impending break down. In one case, a boy was known to drive all the way to Hammond for a sack of "sliders" from White Castle.

Bananarama is a new British group that is formed from three female "go-go dancers" whose lightweight approach is evident in their name; a fact which led lead singer Siobhan Fahey stated when she remarked, "We just wanted a name that expressed energy and light-heartedness." Their only hit so far, their self-titled single sung in Swahili, is one which people really enjoy watching and feel good about.

Our first single was sung in Swahili, so we thought of something tropical — bananas — and added the "zama" because it sounded silly.

They take their music a little more seriously than it would appear by that comment, as Fahey informed a British newspaper when she said, "We're on a mission to make some of the lyrics, one of the songs, by any means. What we're doing is some new — three girls who are just fantastic, yet in charge of everything they do. There's no
San Jose, Calif. (AP) — Baskets were left on the ground at the back of the arena in the third quarter of the Lakers' game against the Los Angeles Clippers yesterday. The Lakers scored 109 points in the game, which was part of an NBA regular season game.

The Lakers took a quick 10-point lead in the first quarter and never looked back, scoring 26 points in the second quarter. L.A. continued to pour it on in the third, scoring 34 points and 20 in the fourth. The final score was 109-83, giving the Lakers a 26-3 record on the season.

The game was a showcase for the Lakers' new players, with Kobe Bryant leading the way with 30 points. Liz Cambage added 22 points and 12 rebounds, while Patrick Beverley chipped in 17 points and 7 assists.

The Clippers, on the other hand, struggled throughout the game, with neither Blake Griffin nor Patrick Beverley able to find their rhythm. Griffin finished with 15 points and 8 rebounds, while Beverley scored 10 points and grabbed 7 rebounds.

The victory was the Lakers' 26th of the season, putting them in sole possession of first place in the Pacific Division. They are currently sitting in the No. 1 spot in the Western Conference, with a 26-3 record on the season.
Doubles trouble

Women's tennis team slides to .500

By JANE HEALEY
Assistant Sports Editor

"There was some good tennis out here," said Amy Yeast, Assistant Coach of the Notre Dame women's tennis team. "There were some real close matches out here. It's just unfortunate that we won one of them and they won two."

The "they" was Western Michigan University, which narrowly defeated Notre Dame 8-6, spring season record. The easiest singles match of the day was played by freshman Susie Pandher. A former No. 1 player, Pandher is recovering from a back injury and competing at the No. 4 spot for Notre Dame. She easily handled Lynne Schendel 6-1, 6-1.

"It was one of my easiest matches," Pandher said. "I felt all I had to do was hit the ball over and get the point. That's not a good feeling.

"I don't like playing fourth singles. I have to make it a challenge for myself because I don't really have to work. It's only a matter of keeping myself intense." The loss gave Notre Dame a 3-5, 4-6, and 6-4. Petro had been hoping to count on this doubles pair after their fine showing at Purdue over the weekend. But she found fault in their play yesterday.

"They just didn't put the ball away when they should have," Petro said. "We've had that problem before. When the opportunity is there, we don't take it."

Everything rested on the last doubles match with the team scores locked at 6-6. In the first game, the Irish team of Cathy Schnell and Greta Roemer were beating Julie Hawthorne and Janet Ray 6-0. But the Bronco pair battled back to take the set 7-5. The Irish took the next 6-1. But Ray and Hawthorne teamed up to win the third set and the match 6-3.

"I hope they learned their lesson," Petro said. "They were up 5-0 and lost it. At this level of competition, you just can't do that. They have to stay intense."

The team as a whole must stay intense at this point. With a bid to the NCAA tournament almost in their grasp, the Irish are having trouble concentrating as they play out the rest of the regular season.

"If we do learn, then I'll be happy," Petro said. "If we can just learn from our mistakes after days like this, then we are only going to get better." Petro said. "If we do learn, then I'll be happy."

Petro can understand the situation the players are in. Although they lost yesterday, she did not get worried, but looked for something good to come out of the afternoon.

"If we can just learn from our mistakes after days like this, then we are only going to get better," Petro said. "If we do learn, then I'll be happy."

...Defense continued from page 10

help with the backup roles. There speed alone will help us although we don't want to put too much pressure on them.

The secondary will be bolstered the most by the class of 1987 as five top prospects. History has shown at Notre Dame that the secondary has been the easiest position for a freshman to break in to and start. From Luther Bradley in 1975, to Joe Johnson in 1981, five freshmen have broken into the starting lineup sometime during the season over the last nine seasons.

But the person with the best chance of making an immediate impact is 6-4, 235 lb. defensive end Larry Mortarty. Next season Mortarty will carry the ball for the Houston Oilers because they made him their fifth round selection in yesterday's pro draft. See story on page 12.
Spring goals met

Johnson likes what he sees on 'D'

By LOUIE SOMOGYI
Sports Writer

As far as Notre Dame defensive coordinator Jim Johnson is concerned, the Irish defense will return next fall with goals from this spring well accomplished.

"First of all we wanted to give our young people experience so that they can improve," says Johnson. "We've done that. But the main things we especially wanted were no major injuries and a better overall football team then we started with. There is no question that we have done that."

However, there is a major trouble spot that concerns Johnson.

"We can't say that we're very strong up front yet," he admits. "Of course we didn't have Mike Gann playing for us this spring so that he can rest his knee. And I don't know how you just go out and replace a Kevin Griffith or Bob Clasby. We do have talented people, but they are still young freshmen who need valuable game experience."

The young freshmen that Johnson refers to are flip tackle Eric Dorsey and contain tackle Greg Dingens.

Both especially have had wildly good springs and have really found a home at their positions. They have made very good progress throughout the course of spring. They're going to have to grow up fast in the fall, though, when they get exposed to more tougher game-like situations," evaluates Johnson.

Given that there may be some inexperience up front, the situation is offset in that there is not much separation of talent between members of the first team and members on the second squad. For example, Jon Autry returns as the number one nose guard, but the man he beat him is Tim Marshall who was a starter at that position his freshman and sophomore years before he had to sit out all of last year with a foot injury.

Meanwhile, Gann logically would be considered a shoe-in at flip-tackle next fall after his sensational spring campaign, Johnson. is not so sure.

That is why with such good depth on the line, the coaching staff plans to use the second units quite a bit so the players can help each other out on the field instead of relying on just one man to look up to for leadership.

"That is very much in our plans for this fall, especially with the way teams throw the ball 40, even 50 times, a game today (last year seven of Notre Dame's opponents passed between 30 to 45 times in the game against the Irish)," notes Johnson. "One of the hardest things for a defensive lineman to do is to fight his way to the quarterback since the offensive lineman of today can now use his hands," he continues. "It is a very tiring process for the defensive man especially on early in the season when the weather is hot. Hopefully, we can counter that with some good depth up front."

From an overall perspective, the defense will have better quickness than Irish teams from the past. It will also have a greater balance of talent between members of certain units than in the past when a Cralle stood out for the linebackers or a Duerson stood out for the secondary.

"Furgue (Middle linebacker Tony) has given us quickness on the inside with Larkin (inside linebacker Mike)," says Johnson. "Add to that the speed that is evident in our secondary with people like Stacey Toran, Chris Brown, and Joe Johnson, and were going to have some great quickness."

"These kids are also tremendously competitive and physical people. The tremendous hitting they put on this spring demonstrated that. It will be more of a balanced line than we've had before. If we can get the defensive line to work, we'll be very balanced overall."

While Johnson has talked Larkin and Furgue as "two of the better ones around at their positions" in the country, he is pleased that there really is no single player that stands out from anybody else this year on the defense.

"We have good leadership from five or six people out there," says Johnson. "That makes it a good situation in that the players can help each other out on the field instead of relying on just one man to look up to for leadership."

"That is a big goal that Johnson strives for is consistency."

"Last year, at times we played like crazy," says Johnson. "but then all of a sudden it always seemed that we would give up a very long drive that would really kill us. We had breakdown like that for a quarter that cost us against Arizona and Oregon."

There is no denial by Johnson that freshmen will play a bigger role come fall.

"I don't think any will start," maintains Johnson, "but there will be four or five that will have to step in and see DEFENSE, page 9.
Bloom County

Simon

Aspirin Man

The Daily Crossword

© 1983 Tribune Company Syndicate, Inc.
All Rights Reserved

Senior Bar

Draft Special as always on Wed nites at SENIOR BAR
open 9:30 'til 2:00

Lunches Thurs. & Fri. 11:00-1:00

Coming Thursday

Garp

Sponsored by Water Polo Engineering Auditorium $1.00 7, 9, 15, 11:30

The Observer

Today

Wednesday, April 27, 1983 — page 11

Campus

* 1:15 p.m. — Physics Lecture, "Phenomenology of Nuclear Decay of Catalytic and Monosporadist," Dr. Chris Hall, 401 Newland Science Hall
* 2:30 p.m. — Tennis, ND Men vs. Bowling Green, Courtesy Courts
* 4:45 p.m. — Air Force ROTC Spring Awards, Library Auditorium
* 8:30 p.m. — Lecture, "Vibrational Energy Transfer Maps for Small Molecules," Prof. George W. Flynn, 123 NSH
* 8:30 p.m. — Microbiology Seminar, "Cooperation Between Cyclophosphamide Tumoridal Activity and Host Antimior Immunity in the Eradication of Established Tumors," Dr. Sheldon Drag, Galvin Life Science Auditorium
* 8:30 p.m. — Professional C Ballet Meeting, 127 NSH
* 8:30 p.m. — Lacrosse, ND Men vs. Chicago Club, Carrier Field
* 8:30 p.m. — WSNF-FM Meeting, for persons interested in becoming WSNF-FM announcers, 121 O'Shaughnessy
* 8 p.m. — ND Gaming Club Organization Meeting, 118 O'Shaughnessy Hall

T.V. Tonight

6 p.m. — 16 NewsCenter 18
22 22 Eyewitness News 28
28 Newsweek 28
28 The MacNeil/Lehrer Report 34
5:30 p.m. — 16 28*AP*U 28
22 Tie Taxi Dough 28
28 Tie Taxi Dough 28
24 Straight Talk 28
7 p.m. — 16 Real People 22
22 Story of the Day 22
28 The Fall Guy 28
32 As Told by Eve 34
32 Facts of Life 34
22 Wednesday Night Movie 28
28 Bryant's Pope 28
6:30 p.m. — 16 Taxi 28
16 Quincy 18
28 Dynasty 28
10 p.m. — 16 NewsCenter 16
22 22 Eyewitness News 28
28 Newsweek 28
34 Indiana Lawmakers 34
10:30 p.m. — 16 Tennis Show 22
22 Hart to Hart/CBS Late Movie 28
28 ABC Nightline 28
11 p.m. — 28 ABC Late Night News 28
11:30 p.m. — 16 Late Night with David Letterman 28

The FTre

"Blow! Up to now, this was one of my prime suspects."
when Create Bookstore Basketball 12 years ago, they had these guys in mind. They are the little guys, the ones who have no business being on the same basketball court with 6-10 behemoths and bulky football players. Bookstore gave them the opportunity to test their skills against the best players on campus.

This year, the 12th year of Bookstore, the little guys took it to the big guys like never before. This year, the little guys proved that they are the best basketball players on campus.

During the in this year's Final Four, only one — Tim Andree — was a varsity athlete. It was the first time in Bookstore history that the finals featured nary a varsity athlete. That made this year's Bookstore tournament far more enjoyable than any other I've seen. Four players in particular — all under six feet tall — were joy to watch, and now it's time for them to get the recognition they deserve.

Paul DeAngelis, US — The senior guard from Drexel Hill, Pa., used a hot outside shooting touch to lead US to the Final Four and earn Mr. Bookstore honors. Much like N.C. State's Dereck Whittenburg, Drexel Hill, Pa., used a hot outside shooting touch to lead US to the Final Four and earn Mr. Bookstore honors. His basketball education also continued at ND. His basketball education also continued at ND.

When they created Bookstore Basketball, the only member of Macri's who is not a law student — Chris Nanni is an active participant in "Monk Hoops," an after-game section that's very popular in Bookstore.

But the player who counted to the championship, leading them to the Thirsty 32 and Elite Eight last year, only to see Tequila return the favor to make the finals this season. In his column today, Chris Needles profiles the little guys.

"We didn't have any superstars," says Sweeney, whose team upset top seed Double Deck Ore Cookie and Bad to the Bone on route to the title. "We just played as a team. We play really well together and we were more organized than most other teams. Everything we tried seemed to work."

During his undergraduate days, Sweeney played for two seasons at St. Mary's College in Minnesota, but quit the team after it adopted the same concept, which had helped Sweeney's high school team capture the Wisconsin state championship in his senior year. In fact, many of the defenses Macri's used in the tournament were borrowed from Sweeney's high school playbook. Sweeney's wife, Tami, is a weekend news reporter for WOUD-TV. The Sweeneys will celebrate their second anniversary June 12, and are expecting their first child in July.

Now that's teamwork.

Lou Nanni, Tequila, White Lightning — He was the Napoleon of Bookstore, the little general who could always hear back outing instructions to his team to counteract an enemy's defense. But the running game is nothing new for Lou. He has played point guard ever since he first picked up a basketball, attracting all conference honors. His junior and senior years at Akron High School just outside Buffalo, N.Y. He holds the school record for assists in a game (14), and averaged 8 assists and 10 points a game in his career.

"I get a lot of satisfaction out of taking a team and getting the most out of it," says Nanni, a junior liberal studies/government major who was a third team all-Bookstore selection. "We didn't have all that much talent this year, but we got along fine and played at one's maximum ability is a victory in itself."

Nanni is generally recognized as one of the top placers on campus, and natty as he and his little team are unflappable. Nanni is generally recognized as one of the top placers on campus, and natty as he and his little team are unflappable.

Butter or football yet, but I'm a lot closer to baseball than I was before."

NEW YORK (AP) — The Bal-timore Colts, unable to strike the right deal for No. 1 choice in the National Football League draft, gambled on an All-American yesterday when they picked Stanford quar­terback John Elway. Just as they tuned down trades, Elway a pure dropback passer who was called the biggest quarterback in the country since Joe Namath, he said would forgo foot­ball for a baseball career with the New York Yankees unless the Colts trade him to a West Coast team in the next two seasons. "As I stand here now, it's going to be Baltimore or I'm going to the World Series." All American told a news conference in San Jose, Calif. "I haven't ruled out football yet, but I'm a lot closer to baseball than I was before."

The Colts, however, insisted they did not draft Elway just to trade him elsewhere.

Elway said the Colts before the draft he didn't want to play for them and he believes that he will be talking with Baltimore Coach Frank Kush that he would not change his mind.

Elway said his agent, Marvin Demoff, had been sitting with Yankees owner George Steinbrenner about a five-year escalating salary contract. "I had no charge about $500,000 a year."

The selection of Elway began a quarterback parade unmatched in NFL draft history. On three occa­sions, four of them had been picked in the opening round. This time it was six: one going to each of the five teams in the American Conference's Eastern Division, including the Colts.

Six defensive backs also were taken in the first round, along with five offensive linemen, four running backs, including No. 2 pick Eric Dickerson of Southern Methodist, to the Los Angeles Rams, and No. 1 Curt Warner of Penn State to Seattle, three defensive linemen, two wide receivers, one tight end and one linebacker.

Pitt and Southern California had three players chosen on the first round, national champion Penn State and Arkansas two each.

The first star of the rival United States Football League to be chosen was wide receiver Trumaine Johnson of Grambling, who was the leading receiver for the Chicago Blitz. Johnson, who would have been a sure first round choice if he had not signed with the USFL, was picked first on the sixth round by the San Diego Chargers.

The oddity of the afternoon, however, was provided by — who else — the Chicago Bears, who selected Tom Thayer in the fourth round — three hours after the Notre Dame offensive tackle signed a contract with the United States Football League's Chicago Blitz.

Thayer, in Chicago, was unavailable for comment. "We hadn't heard about the Blitz situation," said a Bears spokes­man. "It wasn't a major news item. But we retain hope of signing Thayer in the future."

Other Notre Dame players selected in yesterday's draft were: Dave Dawson, Chicago Bears, third round; Larry Mauritzy, Houston Oilers, fifth round; Bob Clapsy, Seattle Seahawks, ninth round; Mark Zavagnin, Chicago Bears, ninth round.

The Observer will have a full report on the Notre Dame contingent selected in the draft tomorrow.

Hunter fits Bills

Notre Dame's Tony Hunter was selected in the first round of yes­terday's National Football League draft. Hunter, the first Irish player taken, was the 12th pick overall.

"Buffalo's a good team with a winning tradition," said Hunter after his selection. "At first I wanted to go to a warm weather team, but I didn't want to go to a team that doesn't have a future."

Hunter, who had left school this semester to tend to family busi­ness in his home town of Cincinnati, had been rumored to be going to the Los Angeles Rams. When the Rams improved their position in the draft, however, the Bills and the Denver Broncos became the leaders in Hunter's thoughts. Hunter is a regular on the the sports of Bill's coach Kay Stephenson, is in the mold of San Diego Charger star Kel­len Winslow.

Elway opts for baseball

Colts roll dice and come up empty

Chris Needles

Sports Editor Emeritus

SEATTLE — TheSeattle Mariners bid a fond farewell to the last vestiges of their dynasty yesterday when they traded their first round pick in yesterday's NFL pro draft, Mike Riccardo's account of the draft as it happened.

"We didn't have any superstars," says Sweeney, whose team upset top seed Double Deck Ore Cookie and Bad to the Bone on route to the title. "We just played as a team. We play really well together and we were more organized than most other teams. Everything we tried seemed to work."

During his undergraduate days, Sweeney played for two seasons at St. Mary's College in Minnesota, but quit the team after it adopted the same concept, which had helped Sweeney's high school team capture the Wisconsin state championship in his senior year. In fact, many of the defenses Macri's used in the tournament were borrowed from Sweeney's high school playbook. Sweeney's wife, Tami, is a weekend news reporter for WOUD-TV. The Sweeneys will celebrate their second anniversary June 12, and are expecting their first child in July.

Now that's teamwork.

Lou Nanni, Tequila, White Lightning — He was the Napoleon of Bookstore, the little general who could always hear back outing instructions to his team to counteract an enemy's defense. But the running game is nothing new for Lou. He has played point guard ever since he first picked up a basketball, attracting all conference honors. His junior and senior years at Akron High School just outside Buffalo, N.Y. He holds the school record for assists in a game (14), and averaged 8 assists and 10 points a game in his career.

"I get a lot of satisfaction out of taking a team and getting the most out of it," says Nanni, a junior liberal studies/government major who was a third team all-Bookstore selection. "We didn't have all that much talent this year, but we got along fine and played at one's maximum ability is a victory in itself."

Nanni is generally recognized as one of the top placers on campus, and natty as he and his little team are unflappable. Nanni is generally recognized as one of the top placers on campus, and natty as he and his little team are unflappable.

Butter or football yet, but I'm a lot closer to baseball than I was before."

NEW YORK (AP) — The Bal-timore Colts, unable to strike the right deal for No. 1 choice in the National Football League draft, gambled on an All-American yesterday when they picked Stanford quar­terback John Elway. Just as they tuned down trades, Elway a pure dropback passer who was called the biggest quarterback in the country since Joe Namath, he said would forgo foot­ball for a baseball career with the New York Yankees unless the Colts trade him to a West Coast team in the next two seasons. "As I stand here now, it's going to be Baltimore or I'm going to the World Series." All American told a news conference in San Jose, Calif. "I haven't ruled out football yet, but I'm a lot closer to baseball than I was before."

The Colts, however, insisted they did not draft Elway just to trade him elsewhere.

Elway said the Colts before the draft he didn't want to play for them and he believes that he will be talking with Baltimore Coach Frank Kush that he would not change his mind.

Elway said his agent, Marvin Demoff, had been sitting with Yankees owner George Steinbrenner about a five-year escalating salary contract. "I had no charge about $500,000 a year."

The selection of Elway began a quarterback parade unmatched in NFL draft history. On three occa­sions, four of them had been picked in the opening round. This time it was six: one going to each of the five teams in the American Conference's Eastern Division, including the Colts.

Six defensive backs also were taken in the first round, along with five offensive linemen, four running backs, including No. 2 pick Eric Dickerson of Southern Methodist, to the Los Angeles Rams, and No. 1 Curt Warner of Penn State to Seattle, three defensive linemen, two wide receivers, one tight end and one linebacker.

Pitt and Southern California had three players chosen on the first round, national champion Penn State and Arkansas two each.

The first star of the rival United States Football League to be chosen was wide receiver Trumaine Johnson of Grambling, who was the leading receiver for the Chicago Blitz. Johnson, who would have been a sure first round choice if he had not signed with the USFL, was picked first on the sixth round by the San Diego Chargers.

But the player who counted to the NFL, the one who dominated pre­draft maneuvering, was Elway.