WAKKANAI, Japan — A Soviet search vessel lowered a small yellow submarine yesterday into international waters where the downed South Korean airliner is believed to have crashed and warned a Japanese patrol boat to stay away from the area, the Japanese navy said.

In Edinburgh, Scotland, the editor-in-chief of the Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda criticized his nation's military for the six-day delay in acknowledging that one of its fighter jets shot down the airliner.

However, the editor, Victor Afanasyev, interviewed by the British Broadcasting Corp., insisted the six-day delay in acknowledging that one of its fighter jets shot down the airplane.

He said the submarine was different from one used in two previous Soviet dives.

In the Sea of Japan, the 15,000-ton Georgi Kosummin signaled by flag to the Japanese vessel Rebun to "move north" away from the Soviet search zone, 25 miles north of the tiny Soviet island of Moneron, off Hokkaido's southwest coast, Kato said.

He said the submarine was different from one used in two previous Soviet dives.

The zone is dominated by at least 25 Soviet vessels, including the 8,200-ton guided missile cruiser Petropavlovsk. The Rebun and two other Japanese patrol boats are moving in the area, sometimes coming within 500 yards of the Soviet ships, said Kato.

At least four U.S. ships and four South Korean trawlers also were seen in the area yesterday, he said.

"I think in this respect our military people are guilty," he said.

NEW COLLEGE CENTER CHRISTENED

By HELEN LUCATIS

Saint Mary's students should "learn how to use leisure time to cultivate their minds and hearts and to contribute to the order of life," said John Duggan, college president, at the Hagar College Center dedication ceremony.

The ceremony was held on the center's patio balcony, last Friday afternoon and was well attended by students, faculty, administration, and guests.

The Hagar Center is "where we can become one family and share our gifts with one another," said Elaine Hocior, president of Saint Mary's student government, who opened the ceremony with a greeting. "We are celebrating today, in one spirit, what is truly ours." Following the greeting was an opening prayer read by Sister Mary Jane Homan, chairman of the Board of Regents. The liturgy was then read by the Dean of Student Affairs, Sister Karel Jackowski.

"We are celebrating the foundation of a building of activities and services for our community," said Sister Mary Mary on the dedication.

Democrat plan use of War Powers Act

WASHINGTON—Senate Democrats are united as never before in their three years of minority status on one issue — a demand the president give Congress a role under 1973 law in deciding how long the Marines will remain in Lebanon.

While aware of public uncertainties over the presence of American troops on foreign soil, few in Congress are arguing that the 1,200 troops now in Beirut should come home.

But the White House remains uncertain how much power to surrender to the House and Senate on the issue of the troops, and the usually contentious Senate Democrats — a minority since Reagan won election in 1980 — have taken the lead in seeking to invoke provisions of the War Powers Act.

At issue is the Vietnam-era War Powers Act, which requires the president to notify Congress when American troops overseas are in combat and to bring them home within 60 days unless the House and Senate specifically allow them to remain.

Twenty-nine of the Senate's 45 Democrats met last week and unanimously approved a resolution which would declare that hostilities in Lebanon have triggered provisions of the War Powers Act.

Democratic leaders say they believe they would have nearly unanimous support among their own for that resolution on the Senate floor, and a substantial number of Republicans are known to believe President Reagan is wrong to fight the issue.

"If we get it to the floor, we will pass it," Sen. Thomas P. Eagleton, D-Mo., said of the Democratic resolution. "Eagleton was an original author of the 1973 law and a key figure in efforts to persuade Reagan to invoke the freeze resolution.

On Tuesday, that panel votes on a proposed nuclear weapons freeze resolution. The House passed freeze resolution is one of several arms control proposals to be considered by the committee, and opponents say the recent Soviet downing of a Korean jetliner dim chances the freeze resolution will pass the Senate.

Both the House and Senate have debates scheduled this week on appropriations bills for various departments, and the House will continue debate a bill promoting the construction of canal slurry pipelines.

Before Congress returned from a five-week summer recess, four Marines were killed and several were injured in attacks by Lebanese rebels firing on U.S. positions. The Marines have been in Lebanon for a year now, as part a multi-national peacekeeping force.

Mark Hendricks is hoping people think it's safe to go back to the water after showing "Jaws" last year. Hendricks plans to bring another water oriented thriller — "The Deep" — to his dive-in movie theater. Yes, that's dive-in. "You put a bunch of rafters and inner tubes in the pool, tack white paper on the wall, turn on the lights and switch on a scary movie," he explained. "You never hear so much screaming." Hendricks, director of intramural sports and recreation at the University, said the showing of "Jaws" packed the campus pool for four nights last spring. When the shark headed for swimmers on the screen, he said, "people would start disappearing into the pool. It was great. Everyone was getting real scared." - AP

Former Vice President Walter Mondale, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, called on the Reagan administration yesterday to lead the Western alliance in economic punishment of the Soviet Union for its invasion of a Korean jailer. "I think it's important," the former vice president said of the situation. "The game is on with Dan Rather." There has to be a political cause that it's to stop when they act in a way such as this," Mondale said as president he would have sought agreement among Western industrialized nations to raise the cutoff trade credits and reduce their availability to the Soviets in retaliation for the killing of 269 people around the plane. - AP

Calling its actions "errors, not intentional violations," Xerox Corp. agreed to pay civil penalties of $17,000 to settle claims it supported an Arab trade boycott of heart. Xerox signed a consent agreement with the U.S. Commerce Department calling for a 12-month suspension of its export licenses to 12 Arab nations, said Thomas Bartholomew, a Commerce Department lawyer. The department said Xerox agreed in 1980 to furnish the Arabs' Central boycott Office with a list of American companies owning Xerox stock. Xerox spokesman John Rasio said, "these were errors, not intentional violations." - AP

At least 30 members of a high school band were injured when wooden risers collapsed during a photo session at a band camp. The concert schedule called for the 50 members of the Tipp City High School band to be standing on the risers at Tipp City Park when they collapsed Saturday afternoon during the annual Tipp City band in vitro. The police said. The temporary risers were provided by a photographer who was taking pictures of the 12 par bing bands. Officer Bob Nguyen said. Emergency squads transported the injured students, still in uniform, to hospitals in nearby Troy and Dayton. All were released after treatment except for a 16-year-old boy who was admitted overnight, a nursing supervisor said. Band members complained mostly of neck, leg and back bruises, scrapes or fractures. - AP

Haggard bids adieu to NDCU

Anne Monastisky
Saint Mary's Editor

Inside Monday

The college was not considered in the bid. 1st Source occupies a convenient niche — equally convenient and centrally located, but for whom? Certainly not for the many students and faculty who have accounts with NDCU. Stipulations in the bid were for accounts for NDCU to even participate in the bid. Odd how the specifications were not questioned when NDCU occupied the office in LeMans. The credit union's charter would not allow for a 24-hour teller in Haggar since it would not be available to the public around the clock, but the bid specified a need for 24-hour automatic teller. Justice?

So NDCU lost the bid, or could not compete — take your choice. But was it wrong with allowing NDCU's branch remain in LeMans? What's wrong with a little competition. Sorry, I am as just being logical. Competition could mean next to no business for the 1st Source branch, in the centrally located college center. What if you happen to do your banking with neither credit union? Will you drive to the credit union? Until Aug. 28, students with no means of transportation other than the shuttle would have had to try to the main office on Douglas Road, or switch banks I, like most students pleased with the services provided by the credit union, did not want to do business with 1st Source.

Students let out a collective sigh of relief when NDCU opened the "off campus" on campus branch in the lower Clock building located between Holy Cross Hall and the Current, thanks to Holy Cross Shared Services (the management arm of the sister of the Holy Cross). At least Holy Cross Shared Services does business logically. Since many of their employees have a accounts with NDCU, Holy Cross Shared Services decided to rent space to NDCU for the branch office. Makes sense to me. If only the College would think logically, the Haggar Credit Union Center would be a college center with the banking institution of the campus.

Lower rates likely result of campus phone revision

By SCOTT HARDEK
Staff Reporter

The days of waiting until 11 p.m. to make a long-distance call will soon be over, due to a new phone system which will be installed over Christmas break.

Touchtone phones linked with an MGI-type system will be installed in all dorms when students return for the second semester.

Each student will be given a personal billing number which can be directly punched into any touchtone phone on campus, nearly eliminating the need to repeat numbers in operation. Rates should be comparable to other long-line telephone leasing systems, said Thomas Mason, vice president of Business Affairs.

The new system is a result of the split of the Bell companies and Inland Telephone. It is designed to continue the current student billing card system and service the present rotary phone and switching system. Mason explained that the University solicited bids for the installation of the system and examined eight different bids before choosing Infonet, Inc. for the phone and billing system and American Bell for the switching system.

Infonet will install the phones and assign billing numbers. American Bell will install the switching system in the basement of the library in part of the area that the current switching system will vacate. Computer jacks will also be installed in the dorms for terminal links.

"It is a truly innovative system that is responding to the students' concerns and needs. We are quite pleased," said Mason.

Security increased for games

Although most Notre Dame students don't start their "pre-game warmup" for the home football games until sometime Saturday morning, the Notre Dame security officers begin their preparations the day before.

Friday's activities include guarding the stadium after the media crews have set up their equipment.

Chemistry lab accident raises safety concerns

By KATHRINE ESQUIBEL
Staff Reporter

An accident in the freshman chemistry lab sent one girl to the infirmary with acid burns last week.

The Chemistry 115L classes were making solutions last week when one student dropped a bottle of sulfuric acid on the floor and splattered a young woman standing nearby. She was wearing shorts at the time and received several burns. Lab instructors rinsed her off and took her to the infirmary, where she was treated and released.

This accident has drawn attention to the safety of the chemistry laboratories, especially CHEM 115L, the freshman lab. There is always a risk involved when students are using dangerous chemicals, say lab instructors, but even more so with freshmen, who may not have had exposure to chemistry labs before.

The chemistry department has and barricading the roads for the one-way traffic system.

"Our first concern is the personal safety of people coming to the game," Rakow said. Physical hazards, such as manholes and pedestrian walkways through traffic patterns are taken care of as part of the overall safety goal of "being alert - seeing what's going on," he said.

Binoculars and radios are used by officers in the crew's nest above the south scoreboard to survey the parking lots Saturday morning and during the game in order to keep people from breaking into cars, or illegally soliciting items such as food and N.D. paraphernalia. "We've had people selling everything from little hats with N.D. on them to the University Church selling buttons. Anything you can put N.D. on, people try and turn a buck on," Rakow said.

"We also put eight of our people onto the playing field, to patrol the stadium in various places," said Glenn Terry, Security Director. Terry added that officers are also placed on campus, in locations such as the ACC and Senior Bar.

Although there is generally not a lot of criminal activity, "a lot of kids report stolen football tickets... and lost IDs," said Terry.

Security in the residence halls is partly taken care of by the janitorial staff, who are paid overtime to watch the entrances while most students and hall staff members are at the game.

Rakow added that the police forces in the South Bend and St. Joseph areas are also stepped up, "particularly with the new Indiana laws on drunk driving."
Shipbound Marines wait while listening to combat

ABOARD THE USS TARAWA — Waiting isn't easy for the 2,000 Marines sent to back up the multinational peace force in Beirut.

Many say they'd rather be ashore in Lebanon than slowly circling out here in the eastern Mediterranean, where the war-wrecked nation has only a thin brown strip on the horizon.

President Reagan ordered the 31st Marine Amphibious Unit to the scene after two members of the U.N. R.C. Gulf Commanding officer of the unit. "What we are doing is simply to be here, to serve as a deterrent. This is the sort of thing we are trained to do. The only change is the uncertainty of where we're going next."

"The men say it's relatively buoyant," said Beaudoin. "But after a few more weeks... the men will get jumpier. It will be a referendum."

Officers are trying to familiarize the situation with the "wars" in Lebanon, which include political and religious strife.

BEIRUT — Lebanese air force jets strafed and rocketed Druze militia and Palestinian positions yesterday on a strategic ridge south of Beirut, and police said heavy artillery shelling of a Christian port city north of the capital killed at least 16 civilians.

Heavy fighting between the Lebanese army and Druze rebels ended in its third week, and Syria ordered its forces in Lebanon to retaliate if U.S. warships shelled them.

"There were some displaced Marines, mostly because we'd been away from our families and had hoped to be back soon. The biggest concern was for the families," Beaudoin said.

Since arriving last week, the Marines have spent their time aboard this helicopter-laden ship and two smaller vessels, patrolling the Lebanese coast, uncertain if tomorrow would bring an order to go ashore, to return home, or to just sit and wait some more.

A few senior officers and others have flown by helicopter to the shore contingent's base at Beirut's international airport.

But the only contact enlisted men have had with the Marines is the faint rumble of artillery they can hear while jogging on the flight deck.

The Marines spend from 5:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. in physical training, classes, maintenance and normal housekeeping. But their officers say Marines can't be kept off shore indefinitely without boredom taking its toll.

"Quite frankly, we have little with which to occupy ourselves" said Beaudoin. "There are a couple of Marines and commanding officer of the unit. "What we are doing is simply to be here, to serve as a deterrent. This is the sort of thing we are trained to do. The only change is the uncertainty of where we're going next."

Comrade of executed spy said vital to Russian technology

WASHINGTON - A Harvard re­searcher has uncovered evidence in­dicating that a long-missing associate of John Eleftherakis, ex­ecuted 50 years ago for atomic espionage, assumed a new identity in the Soviet Union and played a key role in the development of Soviet microelectronics.

On Aug. 20, 1990, following Ros­enberg's arrest by the FBI, 32-year-old Alfred Sarant fled across the U.S. Mexican border with a neighbor's wife from Illinois, N.Y., where Sarant had been working on a previous electronics­smasher project at Cornell University.

A few days later, the couple disappeared.

Justice Department officials at the time said it was presumed that Sarant and another Rosenberg as­sociate, Joel Barr, had defected to the Soviet bloc.

But for years, the fates of Sarant and Barr remained a mystery. No specific information reached the West regarding their whereabouts, work or personal lives.

Now, however, interviews with scientists and engineers who recently emigrated to the United States from the Soviet Union indicate that Sarant not only went to the U.S.S.R., but also emerged as a founder of Soviet microelectronics.

According to Mark Kuchment, a science historian at Harvard's Rus­sian Research Center, Sarant headed first to Czechoslovakia and then to Leningrad, where he lived and worked under a new name — Philip Georgievich Storos.

"His career really developed in the Soviet Union," Kuchment said, noting that by the early 1960s the American detector had gained the attention of Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev and Dmitri E. Ustinov, then minister of defense.

In 1969, Storos was named a Soviet state prize laureate. After he died of a heart attack 10 years later, an obituary appearing in the govern­ment newspaper Izvestia saluted him as an "indispensable scientist ... who made a major contribution to the inception and development of microelectronics in the Soviet Union.

Kuchment, who himself left the Soviet Union in 1975, has been conducting an emigrant interview project under a three-year, $120,000 grant from the Washington-based National Council for Soviet and East European Research.

He said the interviews have indi­cated that Barr, an electronics en­gineer who had shared an apartment with Sarant in New York, also went to the Soviet Union and assumed a new identity — as Joseph V. Berg.

"According to the information I have, Joseph Berg is still alive. He works in Leningrad," Kuchment said.

Also reported to be still living in Leningrad is Sarant's widow, Anna, who as Carol Dayton — Sarant's first wife — died of a heart attack in Illinois at that time married to a Cornell physicist — had gone with Sarant to Mexico in 1950.

Joyce Milton, co-author with Ronald Radosh of "The Rosenberg File," a recently published study of the Rosenberg case, noted that she was impressed by the new evidence emerging about the Soviet lives of Sarant and Barr.

"Walter and Miriam Schneir, co­authors of another major book on the Rosenberg case, "Invitation to an Inquest," said in a letter accompanying the current issue of the New York Review of Books that a few years ago, the former Carol Dayton con­ tacted family members in the United States for the first time, and she has since corresponded and met with some of them.

"According to family members, she and Sarant lived in Mexico for six months, during which time she decided not to return. They married, moved to Prague and later to the Soviet Union, and had four children. Sarant had a successful career as an engineer scientist and died of a heart attack in 1976," the Schneirs wrote.

Cambodian meals aid refugees and charities

By JANE KRAVICK

Refugee families in the South Bend area will benefit from the money raised by Cambodian meals held at the Genent and St. Mary's Student Center for Social Concerns last week.

These are the first in a series of ethnic lunches benefiting charities. If enough interest is shown, these meals will be held every two weeks.

The Cambodian meals, which were served on Wednesday and Saturday, were prepared by Thien Phanger, In.

A calendar of the men of Notre Dame sounds innocuous enough, doesn’t it? Apparently so, or at least a group of women in Walsh and Farley Halls who have decided to produce a calendar depicting—presumably “cute”—Notre Dame males.

Mike Skelly

Back again

Despite its attractiveness as an easy form of fundraising, the calendar seems neither cute nor innocent. Indeed, it is one of the biggest problems at Notre Dame, and this calendar can only exacerbate what is already a significant social problem.

For years women have complained about male chauvinism in our society at large, and the resulting treatment of women as sexual objects, rather than people. Progress has been made in this area, but the reverse scene this which calendar represents will only worsen the cause of equality between the sexes. If a group of men proposed a “Notre Dame Chicks” calendar, undoubtedly there would be tons from many who rightly objected to it. A calendar featuring Notre Dame women would be a degradation of women in general and could not possibly represent the diverse nature of the female segment of the Notre Dame community. Why should it be any different for a calendar of men? To eliminate sexist double standards must be done away with on our campus.

Another problem with this calendar is the inevitable misrepresentation of the Notre Dame men that it would constitute. By calling this calendar “The Men of Notre Dame,” or my permission thereof, it purports to make some sort of statement about what Notre Dame men are, should, or perhaps could be if they would only subscribe to the dubious qualities this calendar seeks to depict.

The calendar could not possibly represent the richness and diversity of this school. Because this calendar will depict so-called cute male students, the calendar and the men in it will only be a gross misrepresentation of Notre Dame.

Supporters of this calendar have predictably pointed out that many other groups across the country have produced calendars featuring students, often in various stages of nudity, at their respective universities. Some of the women of Walsh and Farley apparently see this as sufficient justification for a calendar at Notre Dame. This strange reasoning hardly seems to excuse away our repetition of sexism.

Furthermore, this logic seems to show that little serious thought about the project’s implications has gone into its planning.

Though dorms may need funds for their undoubtedly worthwhile projects, fundraising opportunities are not so few that Walsh and Farley need resort to a sexist calendar to raise money. Hopefully, the women of these two dorms will encourage their representatives to abandon the calendar, since it will only increase the all too apparent tension between the sexes here at Notre Dame.

Finally, any male arrogant enough to feel that he could accurately represent Notre Dame men in general should strongly reconsider his motivations behind participating in this calendar. Any serious examination of the calendar and its ramifications will clearly result in its extinction due to non-participation by the men of Notre Dame.

P.O. Box Q

Dear Editor:

Perhaps Dean Roemer and Sr. Karl Jaworski were never children. If they had been, they would be able to put the “childish” and “juvenile” behavior of their students into a more reasonable perspective.

There are few of us who would disagree with the fact that the annual tradition of a “panty raid” is childish. Of course, it is that being childish by no means makes it wrong or improper. All jokes aside, the “panty raid” is a lot of fun. It lets off steam, unifies each and every, and its popularity remains unchecked despite official disapproval.

However, if it is considered proper to do such things, it is time to consider ending other popular traditions unique to Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s as well. An Truce would be a good start — mommy and daddy would never allow us to play mad volleyball or compete in chariot races. And what could be more degrading than hundreds of mature and intelligent students fingerpainting and playing, childish games at “recess” in the Student Center. From Emil march each semester exam to basketball games on snow-covered courts, we impose ourselves on countless immature activities every semester.

We will all eventually outgrow “panty raids,” but for now, as one freshman so eloquently put it, “we’re fortunate to be old enough to know better, yet young enough to enjoy ourselves.” These activities give our campuses the spirit and flavor that make them special. The somber maturity requested of us may appear sense in theory, but without a few “childish” and “juvenile” activities now and then, we would be reduced to a colorless congregation of dull, inactive students. Please remember, Dean Roemer and Sr. Karl, that we do more than just study here.

We live here. We will spend the next sixty years of our lives being mature adults. Please allow us to have a little mindless enjoyment in our last four years of childhood.

Dear Editor:

Regarding the letter written by Mr. Ken Kemp (Sept. 15, 1983), I am shocked and appalled by the response which he has made to Mr. Jurgen Brauer’s letter.

First, Mr. Kemp states, “If he thinks this is serious enough to bring in the police.” I don’t think they should, because the tickets are so hard to get. Scalpers give the opportunity to get my friends and family into the game.

Another problem is the lack of tickets. Mr. Kemp states, “If he thinks this is serious enough to bring in the police.” I don’t think they should, because the tickets are so hard to get. Scalpers give the opportunity to get my friends and family into the game.

No, as a firm believer in the free market system, how is a guy supposed to make a buck these days? The market is too tough.

Yes, ticket scalping should be under tighter security. The cost of making ticket distribution more fair.

Campus comments

Should the administration crack down on ticket scalping?

Yes, ticket scalping should be under tighter security. The cost of making ticket distribution more fair.

No, for the reason that enforcement would be close to impossible. Black markets are difficult to control, as the Prohibition hackers would have said.

We live here. We will spend the next sixty years of our lives being mature adults. Please allow us to have a little mindless enjoyment in our last four years of childhood.

Keeping in tune with the nation

The Notre Dame Progressive Music Club is an organization with a mission. It is a movement determined to bring people together under the rising popularity of new music.

The club, led by president Barney Grant and vice president Rob Syder, only came into being last year. Presently, both men are hard at work to make this year's plans for the club truly outstanding.

"The club must establish a strong membership. Once we have achieved this goal we can concentrate on the scheduled party plans," says Clark. Weather permitting, the club plans to make an excursion to the Dunes the Saturday before the Miami game and intends to sponsor a benefit dance for the Logan Center.

Also, during the October break, the club would like to make a trip to Toronto. "We would be checking out the culture, history, and partying system, because the students of the University of Toronto definitely party differently than us," stated Grant. Other ventures will include spontaneous trips to Chicago to see concerts.

The club would also like to continue tailgating, especially for the USC game, along with putting on monthly dances similar to the "Chance to Dance" that took place this Friday night on the second floor of La Fortune.

The overall theme of Friday night's dance was a promotional one. Familiar tunes from Culture Club, ABC, and Human League in corporated with new music from Altered Images, New Order and Yaz were switched on and off the turntables. The DJ, Barney Grant, played anything that was within the frame of dance music, such as Michael Jackson, Grand Master Flash, pop music and soul. "A happy medium between the many genres of music helped to make the party an interesting one," comments Grant. One Notre Dame junior said, "It was great that people got into the dance and were able to forget the general apathy that accompanies so many campus parties." At the same time a Notre Dame sophomore pointed out that "amidst the sweat and grime from everybody jamming, the dance provided a very good outlet for people who truly enjoy this sort of thing." All of the door jostling is controlled by Grant who takes full responsibility for the music played saying, "It is like my little toy."

With a main emphasis on new music, the PMC hopes to keep the selection of music in a Midwest university like Notre Dame up to par and constantly aware.

Any students or faculty who are interested in finding out more about the Progressive Music Club can contact the president, Barney Grant, at 283-8562.

The first meeting of the PMC will be this Wednesday night, place and time to be announced.

Something to tell the children

Jim Pernas was right. They came in droves, just as always. And nothing stopped them. The "strongly worded" letter didn't keep them from coming, and the $100 fine didn't stop some from scaling the walls.

No, this was the night on which Notre Dame freshmen guys unashamedly leashed the savage beasts within, the night on which they let loose their amoralistic emotions, the night on which they ran like a herd of horned bulls to their destination with only one thing in mind: Panties.

Yes, this was the panty raid, that colorful event which precedes the wild night of Neanderthal-like mania.

Now what's wrong with that? It seems to me that every culture has at least one occasion on which everyone is allowed to have fun and go wild. Take New Year's Eve, or St. Patrick's Day. Every place, every community, has to break out of the every-day routine once in a while.

Enter the panty raid. It's been called all sorts of things: Fun. An experience. An opportunity. An event which they ran like a herd of horned bulls. A tradition.

And someday, my children, you will be able to say that not only did Knute Rockne, and Pierre Trudeau, and Jimmy Carter, and Ronald Reagan, set foot on this campus, but so did Cap'n Crunch is coming to campus in October. A throng of freshmen are locked down upon if they run to Saint Mary's on one night of the year, but Cap'n Crunch is coming to run around the campus of the University of Notre Dame for five days. And, little ones, he is going to give away prizes.

And someday, you can tell them about the traditions that lived on, and you can tell them about the Panty Raid. You can tell them about how the administration disapproved, and how the occasion was really very harmless and wasn't forced on anyone who didn't want to take part, unlike the process of registration.

You can tell them about the raid you took part in, and how the security guard at Saint Mary's, who should have been against such shameful, mindless, degrading, demeaning, harmful activity, wasn't upset and wasn't even frowning as you went by. He just grinned and waved at you, because he realized what you were doing and why it was tradition.

American skipper Dennis Conner now knows the Australians can bear his boat on light winds, and that if he wants to keep the America's Cup there, he'll have to work a little harder. The 12-bacters. "We're hoping to have a little different weather and see how we do," said Conner. Australia II launched its yacht Liberty by three minutes, 14 seconds yesterday, Conner immediately: "They asked for and was given a day off today after the first Amway victory in the best-of-seven cup championship series cut his advantage to 2-1. "We thought there might be more wind on Tuesday," the defending America's Cup holder noted. "Yesterday was just like another day at training." Australia II's 12-meter yacht can't go out to race anywhere over 25. The Australian yacht with its secret wings keel quickly sailed off to a big lead in yesterday's race, lost some of the edge briefly, but moved ahead steadily on the last three legs. "We tried everything we could think of and the look didn't hold," Conner conceded. But he emphasized that he is still ahead. "I'd say that with a 2-1 lead, don't look too bad," he said, the veteran of four straight cup campaigns. The southwest winds yesterday on the race area in Rhode Island Sound were clocked at an easy seven knots at the start of the race and up to 10 on the finish - conditions under which Australia II has shown speed all summer. The Americans, beaten in the first two races with major equipment failures both days, were buoyed by the win. - AP

Spartan kicks Irish out of game

BY MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

Losing coach Gerry Faust called him "the difference in the game." Winning coach George Perles predicted that he had "a great career ahead of him."

And he was the one responsible for the rain after the game. Who was this remarkable person? Was it safety Phil Parker who intercepted two key passes? Was it Dave Yurema who passed for three touchdowns? Was it Derek Bunch who had a game-high 19 tackles? None of the above.

It was the man with the rocket foot, Michigan State kicker Ralf Mosiejenko, who, unlike the Spartans, was providing that extra edge that the Spartans needed to pull off the big upset.

"I've never had a game like this before," said Mosiejenko.

Not many people have. Not only did Mosiejenko average nearly 50 yards on each punt, but he also boomed every kickoff into or over the end zone except for one. And it was his 71- and 58-yard punts late in the game that allowed Michigan State to keep the Irish out of the end zone.

Mosiejenko's performance was similar to that of Ron Stall, the Florida State punter who, two years ago, kept Notre Dame bottled up for the entire game, allowing FSL to win the game in the final quarter. Stall is now among the leading punters in the NFL.

"I really enjoy it when we have a foot to go and the coach goes for it," said Mosiejenko. "But I had a good senior year as a field goal kicker (6-for-5) and they were recruiting me as a field goal kicker."

He might not have kicked any field goals on Saturday, but he was able to get his revenge. "Beating a Notre Dame team that I wanted to play for, but that didn't want me, means so much to me," smiled Mosiejenko.

But, while beating Notre Dame makes Mosiejenko feel good, the respect that he gets from his coaches and teammates makes him feel even better. While kickers are sometimes looked down on by the other players because they do not have to go through grueling practices like everyone else, a team knows when its kicker is bailing them out of tough situations.

Michigan State faced one of those tough situations in the fourth quarter on Saturday. With just over ten minutes remaining and the score tied at 21, the Spartans faced a fourth-and-inches inside their own 10. They elected to punt, hoping that Mosiejenko could keep the Irish from getting good field position. They were not disappointed.

The Michigan State snap and rocketed a kick that Notre Dame returner Greg Bell could only watch fly over his head. The ball hit the ground 60 yards away and bounced into the end zone.

Two plays later, Parker made his key interception.

"I'm really glad when we have a foot to go and the coach goes for it," said Mosiejenko. "It shows that he has faith in me."

Millions of Notre Dame fans now believe in Mosiejenko's kicking. More than one of them felt the rain and wondered if Mosiejenko was to blame for that, too.

After all, when Notre Dame loses, doesn't God cry for the fighting Irish?

With Allen Pinkett doing most of the work, Kiel led the Irish back to the MSU 33-yard line. When the senior quarterback completed a fourth-down pass to Mark Bavaro at the 18-yard line, the sellout crowd rose to its feet, and it appeared a story book ending was about to unfold.

However a costly intentional grounding penalty forced a third-and-35 situation. After an 11-yard completion to Bell, it was do or die situation for Kiel.

On fourth down, Kiel went to Howard, but his pass was forced out of bounds. Five yards short of the yardstick. "We knew they were bigger and stronger than us," Faust said. "What was happening was the receiver was forced to come under short even to catch the ball."

Although Notre Dame got a chance to throw one more pass after an intentional Spartan safety, for all intents and purposes, the intentional grounding penalty was the ball game.

After the game, a pleased George Perles praised his team for its efforts. "I'm scared to say what I really think about this team I know they would play hard, but I didn't know if it would be enough to win."

"We knew they were bigger and stronger than us," Faust said. "But we played as hard as they can, and they would have a lifetime to remember it."

Meanwhile Notre Dame's Chris Boldt got up in the locker room.

"We can either get our heads together and the next game we can sit around and moan. I'm sure next week players will see a different Notre Dame team."

It better be a different Notre Dame team, perhaps the one that played against Purdue, or else the Irish may find themselves 1-2 with Pittsburgh, Southern Cal, Penn State and Air Force yet to come.

Big plays lead to MSU's upset of Irish

By STEVE LABATE

Astonishment! No, it's no longer a shock when a Notre Dame football team loses, at least it has not been the past four seasons and two games

a stretch of time in which the Irish have started the year 24-8-2. However

Saturday's loss to Michigan State brought more than most of the other losses because it delivered a cruel jolt to the hopes of those people who dreamed of a National Championship in 1983. Not a death blow mind you, just a cruel jolt.

The key play of the game occurred early in the fourth period with 3:36

yard line, Irish quarterback Blair

Rolle threw a deep pass to Butch

Rolle in the left corner of the end zone for the touchdown. The throw was hurry and forced, and waiting at the other end pass was MSU's Carl

Butler, who returned it 47 yards to the Irish 20.

Two plays later, Spartan quarterback

zone for the passing touchdown. But the big breakdown under the continuous hurried and forced, and waiting at the other end pass was MSU's Carl

Butler, who returned it 47 yards to the Irish 20.
