Hesburgh rejects Observer plan for third-party accountability

By JEFF HARRINGTON
Assistant News Editor

University President Father Theodore Hesburgh has rejected an Observer plan to turn the University's budget control system over to a third party and has cut off additional funds for the newspaper.

"I was disappointed and surprised that Father Hesburgh did not consider the Observer's proposal in his letter," said Editor-in-chief David Dziedzic. "He said he's willing to 'put it in writing' that the University will not interfere with editorial content of the paper, except in a case of 'preposterous' or 'outrageous' actions by the paper. He said he would agree 'to have a third party judge if something is preposterous.'

Dziedzic maintained that an agreement in writing would not begin to meet the demands of Father Hesburgh. "As of now, I would say that an agreement in writing is at least one more step in the double-cross of Father Hesburgh. I believe they are dedicated to the idea of an editorially free paper," he said. "But I'm worried about their successors who might read these letters. Will they appoint someone outside the University to edit the paper? And what if you don't like, and pull funding as a way of resolving the problem."

The Observer has the money, who has to stop them from breaking the written agreement? In the past, the University has never forced The Observer into doing anything. If a law had come down, I could force you into doing many things."

"The one thing (the newspaper) won't compromise is their third-party accountability," Dziedzic said. "The University's demand is to assume ultimate financial control of The Observer's finances comes in the wake of a University-conducted audit last summer which revealed a F70,000 deficit from last year's Observer operation and several cases of financial malfeasance among members of the '82-'83 Observer general board."

Dziedzic said that he was "very disappointed and surprised that Hesburgh did not consider the Observer's counterproposal in his letter nor did he offer to discuss the letter."

"I am very disappointed in Hesburgh's refutation of my letter," he continued. "The Observer does not even say why he doesn't agree with our proposal."

Dziedzic said he was willing to try to explain why he believes the action of the administration is "preposterous" or "outrageous." He said the Observer's budget is exactly what the University has been demanding for over the last decade. "There are three things everyone to see. Even those who have never attended Notre Dame and who have a stake in the university, even the ones who,随便, even the ones who haven't done anything about it."

"The Observer must be administratively independent for the sake of this university, because in each one of these things, each one of them must be accountable to someone else. Why trust administrators who, in the summer of 1975, condemned the Observer, and in the summer of 1976, cut off all financial support? Why trust a president who openly declared at a meeting of the Notre Dame Student Council that 'no quarter' was to be given to the Observer. Why trust administrato..."

Bonuses to three top management personnel are not a revelation of graft, as some students are being led to think. Many students who hold a job at college, some Observer employees are paid salary. Unlike most working students, however, Observer employees salaries average far below minimum wage. The University report ignores the fact that bonuses were issued several times during the year to all general board members (not just the top three) to supplement salaries equaling less than $1.50 an hour.

The University audit report, to the average student, may seem to be just as valid as a third-party audit. This is questionable. The university has accused The Observer of improper business procedures yet it is refusing to let the newspaper’s editors review the audit before it is released. The University violated standard business procedures. The auditors admit this in a convenient disclaimer accompanying the report, because the legit's position of "improving an unknown delay," not a single Observer employee was contacted before the release of the report.

In addition, Louis Cohen, director of internal auditing, started the audit after seeing a copy of a University newsletter. This decision is questionable. The University has accused The Observer of misappropriation of funds. The Observer wasn't bad. It was a typical student-run organization. Things were questionable, but there was no outright thievery.

The Administration has not accused The Observer of misappropriation of funds. The Observer wasn't that bad. It was a typical student-run organization. Things were questionable, but there was no outright thievery.

Notre Dame is demanding financial accountability. The paper has offered third-party involvement. The University deserves this for collecting the fees. It is something the university audit report failed to detail.

Organizer of AnTostal charged with theft of $3000

By DAVID SARPHEL Assistant News Editor

One of the organizers of the 1983 AnTostal has been charged with the theft of $3000 from the festival's bank account. Director of Student Activities James Roemer, of the Office of Student Activities said, "The suspect, a resident of Rooftop Village, was arrested by police yesterday and taken to the University Police Station for questioning." Roemer subsequently conducted a hearing and charged the person with the theft. According to the statement, the person has signed a promissory note to repay Student Activities $3000.

The Student Activities office released a notice to the residents of the campus area about any disciplinary actions taken. According to the statement, the person involved has received the legal advice of a local attorney and has decided to accept the charges.

A statement released yesterday by the Office of Student Activities said, "The theft of $3000 from the festival's activity fee money is an extremely serious matter. The university will take all necessary steps to ensure that this type of behavior does not occur again."

The statement further said that the university will cooperate fully with the authorities in the investigation of this matter. The university also encourages all members of the community to report any suspicious activity to the university police department.
Cap'n Crunch eating contest closes week of campus wide festivities

By AMY STEPHAN

With 'América the Beautiful' blaring from loudspeakers, 400 hungry contestants vied for trips to Ft. Lauderdale in the grand finale of Cap'n Crunch week — the Cap'n Crunch eating contest. It was "lots of fun," said Kevin DeMartino, a sophomore; Mike Chmell, a junior; and Martin Whittaker, senior.

The winners, all from Fisher Hall, were present at the start of the contest area. "This is America for me," said freshman Eric Prihuchar, "anything to be a fool..."

The crowd response was great, and the enthusiasm wild," said Lee Broussard, commenting on the contest area. "This is America for me," said freshman Eric Prihuchar, "anything to be a fool..."

"The competition was exciting, but detrimental to the roof of the mouth," said Mike Loched, echoing the sentiments of many other participants.

"Speculators, many wearing Cap'n Crunch T-shirts, lined the roped-off contest area. "This is America for me," said freshman Eric Prihuchar, "anything to be a fool..."

Stadium usher suspended pending investigation after striking student
By MARK WORSCHEH
News Editor
An usher who University officials said struck a Notre Dame sophomore in the head at an USC Notre Dame football game has been suspended pending the outcome of an investigation by the Security Department.

Joseph O'Brien, associate athletic director, said yesterday that the usher had been suspended and that he did not report to work for the Navy Janitors' game on Saturday.

Security Director Glenn Terry identified the usher as Spencer Grady, a supervisor in the ushering crew. He said that Grady admitted hitting the student and that the usher believed he was hit and was only protecting himself.

Grady refused to comment last night about the incident.

According to Terry and reports from witnesses, the incident occurred at about the end of the USC Notre Dame game. The student was part of a group attempting to run onto the field to celebrate a victory.

The ushers were attempting to keep the crowd back with a rope, said Terry, and Grady was knocked down. The student ran through the line of ushers, and when he was a few yards past them, he was approached from behind and "struck by an usher by the name of Spencer Grady," said Terry.

The student, "was shocked over the whole incident. "I can't believe he did that," he said.

Terry would not estimate when the department's investigation would be finished. He said that statements were still being gathered from witnesses.

Judge throws out Craft verdict
Associated Press
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — A federal judge on Monday threw out a $500,000 verdict won by a former anchorwoman for an invasion of privacy.

Christine Craft, 28, won the award in a 1981 trial against Metromedia Inc. in the case of "Miss Kansas America." Craft, who was 23 at the time, claimed that the Kansas City TV station had taped her on the beach and used the tapes in her appearance as "inappropriate to her unique circumstances,"

Steven Stevens, Craft's lawyer, said yesterday that the $500,000 award was "an invitation to his lawyer," and ordered a new trial.

The former anchorwoman, in Milwaukee on a speaking tour, said she was "appalled by the decision and vowed to pursue the case "to its highest level if I have to."

Mr. Craft had claimed that she was depicted from co-analysts of news broadcasts to report on what was "noteworthy or defamatory," and that the tapes were "inappropriate to her unique circumstances,"

Steven Stevens denied Ms. Craft's request for a new trial on her claim that equal pay laws were violated by Metromedia, which owned KMBC-TV at the time she was demoted in August 1981.

The jury that awarded Miss Craft $500,000 in the fraud case in August had ruled against her on the equal pay issue but had returned an advisory verdict in her favor on the sex discrimination complaint.

An attorney for Metromedia, Sandra L. Schermersohn, said she wanted to limit her comments on Monday's ruling because "the judge is very concerned about procedural publicity."

"We are pleased with the outcome," Ms. Schermersohn said. "We are very hopeful that the new trial on the issue of fraud will turn out favorable to Metromedia."

The judge had refused, at a Sept. 1 hearing, to issue a directed verdict in favor of Metromedia, but the company filed a motion asking for a reduction in the jury award or a new trial.

Stevens criticized the publicity surrounding the case, and said the new trial on the fraud complaint would begin Jan. 4 in Joplin, Mo., 10 miles south of Kansas City. The jury in that trial will be sequestered, unlike the jury in the first trial, he said.

Ms. Craft, 38, returned to her old job at KTVY in Santa Barbara, Calif., after refusing to accept her demotion, but quit that job after the verdict to write a book and lecture.

U.S. invaders admit shelling of hospital
Associated Press
BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) — U.S. invaders on Grenada sort seized weapons and documents Monday, admitted they accidentally shelled a 700-bed hospital and said the military leader of the ousted junta has been detained on a war ship.

But the Pentagon denied reports in the Canadian newspaper Maclean's and the New York Post that about 50 mental patients died in the shelling attack, saying casualties were "substantially lower."

American forces burned the building, apparently without realizing it was a hospital, the White House said. Military officials said they did not learn about the casualties at the hospital until early Monday, although the shelling apparently had occurred on the first day of the invasion, Oct. 25.

Soviet and Cuban made weapons were among the arsenals discovered on the island. Jamaican Prime Minis­ ter Edward Seaga, given a tour by military officials, said he was shown an estimated 100,000 grenades and 4 million rounds of ammunition, much of it piled in the backyard of Bishop's house.

ND trustee Foley dies at age 69
Special to The Observer
Richard Foley, a Notre Dame trustee and retired chairman and chief executive officer of the Interpublic Group of Companies, died Sunday in New York City. He was 69.

A 1937 journalism graduate of Notre Dame, Foley was a reporter for newspapers in Chicago and his hometown of Pontiac, Mich., before entering the advertising field in 1940. In 1964 he was named chairman of McCann-Erickson and in 1971 moved up to head its parent company, Interpublic, a holding company of advertising agencies.

Richard Foley

Foley was named to Notre Dame's Arts and Letters Advisory Council in 1975. He was also a member of Trustees two years later. As chairman of the Board's Public Relations and Development Committee, he was influential in the planning of the University's $180 million development program, "The Campaign for Notre Dame."

Foley received an honorary doc­ tor of laws from the University in 1976.

Observer funds

Dear Editor:

I would like to make a few comments on the University’s request that The Observer join the University budget program beginning January 1 or face the cutoff of funds from student activity fees.

I agree with the comments of Editor-in-Chief David DeSoto and Managing Editor Margaret Fosmoe as reported in the October issue of The Observer. Although The Observer should provide the University with a degree of accountability, it should be through an outside agency, since a newspaper can be totally independent and free of influence from anyone — even someone who controls the purse strings.

Father Whitcraft and Father Hesburgh state that “the University does not plan on exercising any editorial control of the content.” I’m sure that is the case — for now. Major journals, editorial boards, and the student body will all be independent and free of influence from anyone — even someone who controls the purse strings. Let us look at campus life.

The Observer is the independent newspaper published by the students of the University of Notre Dame. In the early 70s, since that happened there are not enough resources to provide all the students with a quality newspaper. This is my first column — and I am only one of many. So is this why the University of Notre Dame is such a great place to learn? Maybe not.

4. Many private school teachers never attended a school of education, thus Notre Dame graduates are not as well equipped as private school teachers.

5. But of course, the clincher, Notre Dame graduates 25 or more persons incensed to teach and much more. Graduates are allowed to teach and much more. As one reader put it, how many? The answer is: only one of many. So is this why Notre Dame has lost to Michigan State and Miami? Mary D. McGinnis doesn’t make these kinds of excuses!

this one coming in the third quarter. Green, under a heavy rush by Mike Gann, threw a desperation pass that was tipped by Jon Autry. Naylor grabbed the ball on the 49, then romped for seven and 11 yards on the next two plays, the latter run giving him his third touchdown of the afternoon.

USC's long score of the game came on a 5-yard pass interference call against Pat Ballage that set up Mike Barel's one-yard touchdown run (this time he had possession of the ball). A 39-yard field goal by Johnston rounded out the scoring.

While Pinkett and his mates on the offensive line grabbed most of the attention, it was the play of the Notre Dame defensive line, directed by USC Head Coach Ted Tollient the most.

"Believe it or not, our defense played as well as it has all season," said Tollient.

"We weren't sure that we could move the ball on the ground," continued Tollient. "If we could have, it would have been a close game."

The Trojans still rank among the top 100 yards in 58 rushing attempts against the Irish defensive unit.

Although his interference penalty did set up the one Trojan score, corner back Pat Ballage played an especially outstanding game, as his nine tackles led the team. Time and time again he came up from his corner position to break up passes near the sideline this afternoon.

In summary, it was another day for USC's student body right/left sweeps.

The passing game for USC wasn't much help in this contest, as the Gridirons clipped 141 yards on 114 plays — almost one hundred yards below the season average.

Norte Dame may not have come out in its usual blue, but it did create some problems for the USC sideline this afternoon.

Navy, meanwhile, went to just 21 yards in the second quarter, but it did convert on a 53-yard field goal early in the second period to trim the Irish halftime lead to 14-3.

Early in the second half, Navy showed that it meant business as it drove 99 yards to the Notre Dame 41 from there. Steve Young kicked a 48-yard field goal to cut Notre Dame's lead to eight points. That was incentive enough to restore some composure in the Notre Dame offensive attack. Led by the well-posed Beuerlein, the Irish drove the ball 77 yards in 11 plays for a touchdown and a 21-6 advantage. Beuerlein, who completed half of his 18 passes for 103 yards, demonstrated his uncanny ability to come up big in the touchdown drive.

First, on a third-and-eight, he drilled a 14-yard pass to Howard to keep the drive alive. Later, on a third-and-nine, he rolled right, scrambled, and then picked up the first down with a great second effort drive.

On the next play, Pinkett left Navy defenders grasping as he bolted six yards into the end zone.

In the two third-down situations, freshman flanker Alvin Miller ran his own end around reverse for 19 yards.

Faust continues to be impressed with Beuerlein's development.

Rod Carew files for free agency

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Rod Carew, a seven-time American League batting champion, and outfielder Dan Ford of the world champion Baltimore Orioles were among the seven players who filed for free agency over the weekend, the Major League Players Association said yesterday.

With a Monday midnight deadline for filing, 46 players have made themselves available for the re-entry draft set for Monday.

Carew, 38, a first baseman, batted .359 for the California Angels this year. Ford batted .280 with nine home runs and 55 runs batted in for the Orioles.

Others filing over the weekend in cluded pitchers J.R. Richard, the former Houston Astro's star who hasn't pitched in the majors since suffering a stroke in 1980, and Jerry Koosman, who posted an 11-7 record and a .546 batting average with the Texas Rangers in 1980.

Defensively, Mike Golic and Mike Kovaleski led the team with twelve tackles apiece. Golic, Mike Gann, and Eric Dorsey each had two quarterback sacks, and Kovaleski chipped in on another one.

"It wasn't a pretty game execution-wise," summarized Faust, "but it was an excellent game as far as hitting goes."

Three division leaders are upset

Associated Press

The San Francisco 49ers, Los Angeles Raiders, and Minnesota Vikings, all division leaders, were the prime victims in Sunday National Football League upsets.

Richard Todd threw for 201 yards as he led a balanced, virtually errorless Jets, now 4-5, to a 17-12 victory over the 0-9 Buccaneers.

Neil Lomax fired two touchdowns to Ray Green and one to Pat O'Hara for the Steelers overcame seven turnovers and an NFL record 42 carries from Tempe's backfield.

Boyce Green sprinted 20 yards up the middle for a touchdown on the first play following an interception in overtime as the Browns sent the Oilers to their 19th straight defeat, 25-19. The loss was the second straight in overtime for Houston, 0-9 this season.

The victory was only the Cardinals' second in this week's Associated Press college football poll. This week's poll is detailed on the back page.

The titles of Beast of the East and the Best in the West apparently have new owners.

"I guess they are No. 1 in the East if they beat us," Penn State Coach Joe Paterno said after the Nittany Lions, who had recovered from an 0-3 start by winning five in a row, fell to Boston College 27-17.

The victory was only the Cardinals' second in this week's Associated Press college football poll.

Meanwhile, eighth-ranked Michigan, which has won or shared 10 of the last 14 Big Ten titles and whose fight song even proclaims the Wolverines as "Champions of the West," dropped out of a tie for the league lead by losing to No. 9 Illinois, 10-0.

"Who are we kidding? I feel we are the favorites to go to the Rose Bowl," said Illinois Coach Mike White.

It was a weekend in which at least two more national championship hopefuls fell from the ranks of the unbeaten. Third-ranked North Carolina saw its perfect record ended by No. 13 Maryland, 28-26, in an Atlantic Coast Conference thriller, while fifth-ranked Florida, previously unbeaten but once tied, lost, 28-21, to No. 4 Auburn, which had recovered from an early loss to lose to No. 9 Illinois, 10-0.

Fourth-ranked Georgia, which won the Orange Bowl, only the second one in the history of the University of Miami, beat Texas Tech 20-3, and No. 10 Southern Methodist shut down Texas A&M three times from the 1-yard line in the final period to preserve a 10-7 victory.

Morgan released by Phillies

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA - Second baseman Joe Morgan asked for and received his unconditional release from the Philadelphia Phillies, the club announced yesterday.

Phillies President Bill Giles said in a statement, "I spoke with Joe several times last week and he hadn't made up his mind regarding next season. There was a clause in his contract in which we had an Oct. 31 deadline for renewing his contract for 1984."

"Joe requested that the Phillies exercise their option not to renew his contract and he has given his release so that if he decided to play next season, he could play close to home."

Bears' founder, owner Halas dies

Associated Press

CHICAGO — George Halas, a pioneer of the National Football League and founder and owner of the Chicago Bears, died last night at the age of 88.

Halas lived at his home on Chicago's North Side just before 9 p.m. CST, according to Richard McCaskey, his grandson.

Halas, who founded the Bears and began their first televised games out of his own pocket, was born ill with heart disease, pancreatitis, disease and various other ailments for about one year.

Halas, born Feb. 2, 1895, was pioneer and patriarch of the National Football League. He was the last survivor of a group of men who founded and organized professional football in Canton, Ohio, an automobile agency in 1920.

He played, he coached, he sold tickets and in the early days before the great media floods, he even wrote stories of the games and went to various newspapers to have results of the games printed.

Halas was around when the players passed hats throughout the stands to collect money and he was around when sponsors were paying hundreds and thousands of dollars for a commercial minute on television.

Despite the game's popularity today, it was a long and great struggle in the early years. There were times Halas sat on his players with TV's and later, in the throes of the Great Depression in the 1930s, Halas had to borrow $5,000 from the late sportswriter Charles Bidwell to keep the Bears afloat.

After graduating from the University of Illinois and a stint in the Navy during World War I, Halas briefly played right field for the New York Yankees until he brokered his third base with a triple.

The following year, Halas went to work for the A.E. Staley Co., in Decatur, Ill., "to learn the starch business" and became the firm's athletic director.

Halas organized the Decatur Staleys football team and was in line for a promotion in the glucose department of the starchworks when the 1921 depression hit. The company couldn't withstand the team any longer to "Mr. Halas give $5,000 to the team and call them the Staleys for one year."

Halas moved the team to Wrigley Field and the following year adopted the name of the Chicago Bears. Despite financial difficulties, Halas managed to hold onto the team. He was instrumental in changing the rules to step up scoring and modernized the game but it wasn't until 1925 that the game began catching on.

Then came the great maneuver Halas eventually entitled Red Grange, the Gallipoli Ghost from Illinois, to form professional after negotiating a $100,000 deal with C.C. (Cash) Carey Jr., probably pro football's first noteworthy agent.

On Thanksgiving Day in 1925, Grange made his professional debut and the Bears packed Wrigley Field with a crowd of 50,000.

"There had been room, we could have put in another 50,000," said Halas. "We went to New York and drew 65,000 the day after the Army-Navy game drew 60,000. It was the beginning of a coast-to-coast tour in which the Bears played 16 games from Nov. 26 through Jan. 31, interrupted by a two-week rest.

Halas had turned pro football into a big time sport.

Late Moseley kick gives Redskins victory

Associated Press

Arlington, Va. — Mark Moseley, who had missed four field goal attempts in the game, booted a 51-yarder with nine seconds remaining last night to give the Washington Redskins a 27-24 National Football League victory over the San Diego Chargers.

Moseley's kick dashed a brilliant fourth-quarter comeback by the Chargers, who had come from a 2-7 deficit to tie the game 24-24 with a minute span.

Chandler's touchdown, which closed the gap to 24-21, came with 1:15 left and capped a 69-yard drive. Bengtson's tying field goal came after James Brooks returned a punt 40 yards to the Washington 30 with 2:59 remaining.

On the winning drive, Washington quarterback Joe Theismann converted a third-and-seven play with a seven-yard completion to running back Joe Washington to keep the drive alive. One play later, he hit wide receiver Art Monk on a 25-yard gain to the Redskins' 44.

Borg continues to beat the best

Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Bjorn Borg is retired from professional tennis, right?

Then why is he still beating some of the best players in the world?

Sunday night it was hard-serving Roscoe Tanner whom Borg defeated 7-6, 7-6, to win the Merrill Lynch Tennis Cup in an exhibition at the Met Center.

But Borg insists he is retired from competitive tennis forever.

"I'm happy with the way I'm doing everything," the Swedish player said. "I play maybe five hours a week now. Instead of 25, I like to stay in shape, but you have to work hard and train, and I like to do other things besides play tennis."

Borg added, "I have no health problems or injuries . . . I've always been lucky, but I've just decided to retire. The decision was hard to make but now that I've made it, it's not tough anymore."

Still, since his retirement in January, Borg has played exhibitions and a few tournaments because of prior commitments. And among those lost in the last 10 months are Jimmy Connors, Ivan Lendl and John McEnroe.

"Bjorn's game you can judge on the big points," Tanner said after losing the tie-breakers 7-5, 7-5.

"Look what he did in the tie-breakers. He hit passing shots, good winners. Nothing has changed," Borg, who at 27, plays hockey, jog and oversees a designer clothing business, used nine service aces, a variety of deadly ground strokes and soft lobs in displaying near championship form against Tanner.

Is this retirement?

First battle

Ralph Sampson met a stiff test in his NBA regular season opener last Saturday night, as the Houston Rocket's rookie center faced the formidable Arts Gilmore and the equally tough San Antonio Spurs. Sampson and his teammates won the battle of Texas teams this time, though.

Irish win two-way break to raise record to 6-2

Take advantage of two-way play as en route to routine win over Navy...

Taking advantage of two early trick plays, the Notre Dame football team jumped out to a quick 14-0 lead in its first two possessions Saturday afternoon and Irish head coach Joe Howard made that lead stand up as they went on to a routine 28-12 victory over Navy.

In the four weeks prior to the Notre Dame game, Navy had scored its opponents by a 5-15 count in the first quarter. The Irish once again took the initiative to bury their opponent early.

On the defensive play, from their own 33, the Irish covered Al len Pinkett on a sweep and then ran an option on gold end Joe Howard. Led by a big block from a pulling Mike Kelley, Howard raced 90 yards down to the Navy 5.

For the clutch passing of Steve Beuerlein took over from there. On a third-and-five, Beuerlein completed a 21-yard strike to tight end Mark Bavaro. Facing a third-and-seven situation one minute later, the freshman signal caller flipped an eight yard pass to Pinkett for another first down.

One play later from the five, Beuerlein hit the leaping Jackson in the end zone for a 20-yard touchdown strike. It marked the end of an amazing string of coincidences that the Notre Dame fans hom e happy too, as they were far from out.

In one of his best all-around performances, the Irish fans were enam ored with his performance against Southern Cal," said Head Coach Gary Faust after the game. "I brought out the jerseys because we are so quick that he's gone before you can react."
