People of Praise members defend group's community orientation

Graduate student Tom Loughran and Dan DeGelles, one of the community's 17 coordinators, are DeGelles, a writer for the National Catholic Register, and the head of the social action division and public relations division of People of Praise, is very open in talking about People of Praise, and very proud of his community's accomplishments. "There was a need for a spiritual renewal to accompany all the changes taking place in the church," said DeGelles, explaining the atmosphere of the late 60s in which the Charismatic Renewal started. "There was a hunger for spiritualism, and a disenchantment with materialism. You saw this in all the interest in Eastern religions."

Nore Dame theology professor Bill Storey, who was one of the founders of the entire movement but quickly became disillusioned with it, agrees. "This was a great time for members of the Church to get to know other churches," he said. "The Pentecostal model is about all you can say about this, an out spoken critic of the Charismatic movement as it has evolved. He wrote several letters to now-retired Bishop Leo Parsley asking for an investigation of the People of Praise by the Church."

Professor Josephine Ford, Storey's colleague in the Theology Department, is another critic of the People of Praise. Ford, who was active in the renewal in the early 1970s, was forbid den to attend prayer meetings when she and People of Praise leaders could find no common ground. "The problem I think they have with Josephine is that she is a woman and a scripture scholar which they were uncomfortable with," Storey said. "Their whole notion is that women are not through, stay in the kitchen and have babies. We thought this movement should be freeing up so it became a reinforcement of the status-quo."

"We patterned our overall structure on the model of the Head, the Body, and the Founder, which is a father. The way we see things now, many Charismatic communities that sprang up the Pentecost is the celebration of the Apostles accepting the spirit of Christ as their community."

The explosion blew one of the two men out of the truck and he survived, but his partner was killed. The survivor was hospitalized, and was reported unconscious and in serious condition several hours after the attack, sources said. The blasts occurred during a period of about an hour and at wide ly separated locations. Extensive damage was reported at the French Embassy, but only minor damage at the airport, which remained open. Minor damage was reported from the other blasts, and most injuries were minor. "There was extensive damage to all the buildings including the chancel," said U.S. Embassy spokesman David Good. The administration building, which houses the consulate, collapsed, witnesses said. Ahmed Shams, an embassy receptionist, was at his desk when the bomb went off. "The ceiling fell on our heads, but we were all unhurt (in the sec tion) was seriously injured," he said. "We heard screams outside, people looking for help but we didn't know what happened to them."

Witnesses saw a bright blast set several cars afire and hurled chunks of concrete into nearby buildings.

Police sealed off the area and evacuated guests from the Hilton Hotel about 50 yards away. Alan Weakland, the new director for Hilton International in New York, said he saw "people staggering around dazed" after the bombing. Some embassy buildings were damaged.

I told my wife last week that I was safe in Kuwait unlike Beirut," he said. "But I don't know. I am thinking of leaving the country right now."

Washington, State Department spokesman Alan Romberg said the U.S. has no foreign nationals who did main tenance work, died in the explosion, and that two people were missing. Of those injured at the embassy, 11 Americans live. All the current owners of the embassy. All Americans at the embassy had been accounted for. Romberg said none required hospitalization.

U.S. bishops, experts tackle economic conundrum

It may have been easier for U.S. bishops to write the recent pastoral letter on war and peace than it will be for them to write the upcoming letter on the American economy, said Notre Dame President Theodore Hesburgh last night. Hesburgh's remarks came at a conference of bishops' committee to draft the letter, who were meeting with clergy and lay persons to discuss what should go into it. The letter, the first draft of which is to appear in November, 1984, may be more contentious than last May's pastoral letter on peace and war, according to business experts who say it may contain harsh criticism of American capitalism. Archbishop Rembert Weakland, O.S.B., of Milwaukee has consistently argued, however, that the five bishops on the com mittee was not an either-or choice but both liberal and conservative views about the American economy. Weakland has repeatedly said the purpose of the conference is to bring together economists, politicians, theologians and businessmen of different philosophies to advise the bishops. Hesburgh called on the bishops to draw up a letter which connects the moral obligation to take care of work and the poor with the economic well-being of the nation. "Economics does not exist to a vacuum — it exists for people," he said. Hesburgh added the bishops must advise the U.S. Church about the American economy within "a rational and moral framework that is acceptable to most people."

About the letter of the event, he said, should be "to ask the right questions and to acknowledge the situa tions in a way which is fairly ob vious."

Hesburgh told conference members, "I hope we will take our people to a new place that is where we are right now." Hesburgh urged participants today that no one may disagree, but at least we have made a beginning."

The first day's activities cent ered on economic planning and policy.

Gar Alperovitz, Co-Director of the National Center for Economic Alternatives, said the U.S. must change its philosophy about inflation and a planned economy. "We should not use unemployment as a way to reduce inflation," he said. "There are lots of problems in our economic system which will need to be altered," said Daniel Finn, chairman of the economics department and theology professor at Saint John's University in Minnesota.

One of those problems, Finn said, is overemphasis on individualism at the expense of the good of society. "The U.S. should respect and "widen the scope of the decision-making process," he said. Finn described this process, however, as a slow one. "People believe the economy should be planned by a government," he said. Marita von Neumann Whit, York, said guests could be out of their rooms "two to five days" while damage is repaired.

In Brief

A motorist driving home from a party at 5 a.m., dashed through a field and into a culvert to pull a man from his wrecked car and blinding pickup truck just before it exploded, troopers said. Robert Buckly, 20, of Wayland, N.Y., said he drove to the ground for protection when the flaming truck "made a couple of pulls," then came to a stop in the field "for sure." He continued to the cab, broke a window with his fist and rescued Francis Ray, 23, of West Bloomfield, who was unconscious. State troopers said Ray crashed early Sunday after failing to negotiate a curve on New York 15A. He was in guarded condition at a Rochester hospital. — AP

New York urban "homestackers" will be able to buy vacant apartments in city-owned buildings for $250 and get $10,000 for Exups. Housing Commissioner Anthony Giedeman announced the program Sunday and said grants would give poor and middle-income people a chance to own a home and get "a head start on the rehabilitation work." Giedeman said applicants may select any vacant or underused building in areas eligible for federal Community Development money. About $1 million has been set aside toward 100 apartments in 11 buildings in Harlem, the upper west side and the lower east side in Manhattan, the South Bronx, and the Greenpoint and Sunset Park sections of Brooklyn. — AP

Relatives appealed yesterday for some contact from the kidnappers of the heiress of the Bulgari jewelry fortune, who went missing Saturday night. Mrs. Calissoni's cousin, Gianni Bulgari, another member of the family, said his fiancée was kidnapped last Monday night. The family has refused to say whether it has been in contact with the kidnappers. Mrs. Calissoni's cousin Giovanni Bulgari, another owner of the jewelry store, was kidnapped in 1975 and freed a month later after the family paid a ransom equivalent to $2 million. — AP

The Thai government has postponed indefinitely a request by North Korea to open an embassy in Bangkok, official sources said yesterday. The request is linked to the postponement to a terrorist bombing which killed 21 people in Rangoon, Burma, on Oct 9. The sources said the Thai government took the action after evidence was presented at the trial in Rangoon of two captured North Korean army officers. The officers were convicted on Friday of the bombing and sentenced to death. All 21 victims, four were members of the Cabinet of South Korea's president, Chun Doo-Hwan. Requesting anonymity, sources said Thailand was resisting to pressure for the postponement. Christmas in college

Margaret Fosmoe
Managing Editor
Inside Tuesday

But it might be worth the humidity and discomfort of starting the school year a week earlier in August to be home in time for a real Christmas. This would move the calendar ahead one week, so school would resume January 13, rather than the 17th. After you attend all the post-Christmas sales, make your way downtown to catch the latest holiday season gossip at the New Year's Eve parties, there's a lot to be done beyond showering costumes and plotting your spring break plans anyway.

This would also end the school year a week earlier in May, which is far more conducive to rest and last minute shopping. Perhaps the most lamentable aspect of not being able to experience a regular Christmas during college is that you don't feel much different than the rest of the year. You still have all the work to worry about and the pressure in its at its most intense.

Christmas should make you feel different. It should make you feel better. Christmas should give you the time to think about time and love and joy and friendship and all those other things that didn't seem applicable on Halloween or the Fourth of July. That's what was so great about Christmas as a child. What's that made it so special.

It's easy to forget about all that once you're home and the holiday is over. It's also easy to forget that Christmas is a time of renewal. Just because the holiday is past doesn't mean you shouldn't continue to feel different.

After you get home and have a chance to rent and open a few presents, think about that aspect of the season.

In one way, a college Christmas has its distinctive advantage over a "real" Christmas. In the real world, Christmas signals the end of one year and the beginning of another. It's a beginning, but it's also an end. In college, Christmas signals the half-way point. It's time to approach the second part of 1983-84 with renewed zeal and involvement. It's a chance to evaluate and plan to make the second half better.

Compensation for government members ‘hot topic’ for Senate

By JOSEPH MURPHY

News Staff

Calling compensation for student government members the “new hot topic” before the Student Senate, Student Body President Brian Callaghan said, “If we took compensa­ tion, we would not be the only ones. I think something is needed. Government activities take a lot of work, and a lot of time.”

Senators advocating monetary compensation said many students choose not to hold office in government because they cannot afford the loss of time or income, since they cannot hold a job during their term in office.

Callaghan said financial compensation “has its phases, but it also has its major drawbacks.”

“I don’t like the idea of buying ac­ countability,” said off-campus stu­ dent senator Rich Spotorno. “If we’re going to pay people financially, we stand the risk of people doing it just for the money.”

Campus groups received special treatment for Billy Joel concert

By CHRIS WALTON

Student Union and Student Senate members were among a group who received Billy Joel concert tickets without waiting in line.

Student Body President Brian Cal­ laghan, who handled the ticket distribution, said, “A lot of mistakes were made due to inexperience in handling an event this big.” Callaghan said.

Callaghan said that although Billy Joel ticket distribution was not handled properly, preferential treatment for seniors was justified. “I think that for the top five student body officials who put in twenty to thirty hours a week serving the stu­ dents, two tickets to a concert is a fair compensation.”

Dave McAvery, a student senator from Dillon halls, disagrees. “I was in the office with the understanding that it was a voluntary position. There are many people who volun­ teer their time on this campus. Why should the Student Senate receive special privileges?” McAvery has given the tickets he received to other students.

Factory closings affect SB area

By JEFF NIEKELSKI

News Staff

The effects of factory closings in South Bend are not limited to a handful of workers, as a recent court decision illustrates. The U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Indiana has ruled that workers have the right to be represented by a union in negotiations with employers.

The court has ordered the city of South Bend to pay $1 million in back wages to workers laid off from the American Can Co. plant.

The city has appealed the decision to the 7th Circuit Court of Appeals, which has agreed to hear the case.

The court’s decision is a significant victory for workers who have been laid off from the plant. It is the first time in Indiana that a court has ordered a city to pay back wages to workers laid off from a closed plant.

The decision also has implications for other cities in the area that have faced similar situations. It is likely that similar cases will be brought in other cities, and that similar decisions will be made.

... Praise

DeCelles liked the idea so much, he is currently organizing a program to help all immigrants get what they are entitled to from the government. His social action division also runs a food distribution program for the needy and is organizing a free day care center for needy women with children.

In fact, People of Praise was able to purchase the Studebaker mansion only because a benefactor, who was not a member of the group, donated half the purchase price. They also own the LaJolla Hotel downtown, which they purchased for only $150,000. "God provided the opportunity when the price was low," DeCelles said.

"I'm not a monomaniac on the subject. I'm not all right and they're not all wrong. But I'd say to them, you're probably good Christians in spite of what you're doing, instead of because of what you're doing."

Praise is not sexist and says that one member, states that People of Praise takes St. Paul's statements about women's roles in the New Testament very seriously. "We have women who are doctors and lawyers and Indian chefs," said Preuss. "It's just not true."

"We believe in the devil and demons and the People of Praise is not a true church, the literal is not a true exorcism. All members belong to sacramental churches, ninety percent of which are Catholic, and ten percent Lutheran or Episcopal. The Trinity teaches both a Catholic doctrine and a Protestant doctrine course. "We want to make sure we don't produce a generation of non denominational kids," DeCelles said. The spiritual warfare proved to be the last straw for Ford. "They wanted to exorcise me but I wouldn't allow it," she said. "I didn't feel that I had any demons. I think they're doing harm to people in teaching an outdated, reactionary form of religion," Stoney said. "You can't just ignore two centuries of learning. In premodern religions, everything that happened was attributed to God and everything that happened was attributed to demons. It's just a denial of secondary causality."

While DeCelles doesn't apologize for Charityo the group practices — the speaking in tongues and prophecy — he says the community aspect is the most important part of People of Praise.

People want to share more of their lives. People looked to scripture and saw the formation of the early Christian community with the coming together and caring for each other's needs in the Acts of the Apostles. But I think you can live a communal Christian life in a way that is in the world but not of the world!"

In the last few years, People of Praise has made an effort to reach out and help members of the larger community, both individually and as a group.

One retired member gave a Latino immigrant family a house to stay in without charging rent until the father found work, and then made the rent apply to ownership. He also took the father to the various federal agencies and helped him walk through paperwork to get the help he was entitled to.

NEW YORK — President Reagan told the nation's war heroes yesterday that America is finished with "turning our swords into plowshares, hoping others would follow," and that with his military buildup "our days of weakness are over."

Thinking the rhetoric he has used lately to justify his decisions to send U.S. troops into Lebanon and Grenada, Reagan declared in a lunchroom speech before the Congressional Medal of Honor Society lunch on speech before the Congressional Medal of Honor Society that "our military forces are back on their feet and standing tall."

The president was flanked at the head table by commanders of the Marines and Army Rangers who took part in the invasion of Grenada on Oct. 25, and some Marines who recently returned from Beirut. Members of the audience stood and waved their white napkins in salute: a military chorus sang traditional service songs.

Reagan said history offers only a few clear-cut lessons for those who manage the nation's affairs.

"One of them is surely the lesson that weakness on the part of those who cherish freedom actually brings on a threat to that freedom. Tyrants are tempted," he said.

"With the best of intentions, we have tried turning our swords into plowshares, hoping others would follow. Well, our days of weakness are over."

Reagan addressed about half the 259 living recipients of the Medal of Honor, the nation's highest award for combat valor. A few of the winners wore their military uniforms or the caps of their veteran's organizations, and most were in civilian clothes. But all, from the old men in wheelchairs to the youthful veterans of Vietnam, wore the distinctive medals on blue and white ribbons with a field of 13 stars.

Security was so tight around the Sheraton Centre Hotel ballroom where Reagan was speaking Secret Service agents refused for about ten minutes to admit members of the White House press corps.

Reagan became the first president to receive the congressionaly chartered Medal of Honor, which has been presented since 1861 to "distinguished Americans," chosen by the group. Former recipients include the late AFL-CIO president George Meany, former Labor Secretary Peter J. Brennan, Charles Johnson, Jr. of the Carpenters and Joiners Union, actor Jimmy Stewart, the nation's Unknown Soldiers, Will Rogers and former MidEast envoy Philip Habib.

'Bikes not to be stored in stadium'

By MIRIAM HILL

News Staff

Due to security problems in the past few years, student bicycles will probably not be stored in the stadium before Christmas vacation, according to Glenn Terry, director of Notre Dame Security.

Normally, bicycles are stored in the stadium after the last football game of the season. Last year, several bicycles were stolen from the stadium, so the Notre Dame Security Department is "trying to develop a statement that would relieve (them) of any responsibility for the stolen bicycles." Terry said a dollar fee is charged for each bike stored to cover the cost of registering a bicycle with the South Bend Police. Several parents of students were upset because their children were charged money to store bikes that were later stolen.

The security department is currently searching for a place to store bikes that is less susceptible to theft than the stadium.

Terry also noted the problem of storing bicycles in the stadium has been persistent because the security department has been busy lately.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said President Reagan was briefed about the explosions Monday morning but was not awakened by them. "We deplore acts of terrorist violence and extend our sympathy to those who lost their lives or suffered injuries," Speakes said.

The conference itself has bred some disappointing views from conference members. Notre Dame theology professor Daniel Maguire said the conference, at which there were no blacks, had failed to involve leaders of a significant number of U.S. workers.

Maguire urged the bishops to concentrate their efforts to give more attention to black workers and unemployed blacks, many of whom live in abject poverty.

The conference runs through tomorrow and will include discussions on employment, the poor, and U.S. trade with developing nations.

The little debate going on at this campus is only a small example of the debate that has raged furiously in our nation's politics. The controversy is over the conflict between the rights of the individual, especially that of economic freedom and the desire to have a more equitable distribution of the community's resources.

Conservatives regard during the famine Guided Age in the 19th century, during the Hoover-Coolidge years and now under the present Reagan Administration Liberals, have their heyday during the New Deal and Great Society era of FDR, JFK, and LBJ. This campus was active during the late 60s and early 70s, but has been complacent since. No group has done more for the liberals and conservatives than their opponents: each faction capitalizes on the failures and missteps of the other to legitimize their position. Liberals can use the excesses of unregulated big business and government ignorance of a welfare safety net (unfair labor practices, price-fixing, unjust income distribution, defective products and poverty) as evidence of the evil character of the unregulated private sector. Liberals have their own list of mistakes. The ballooning cost and cost of the welfare state, the failures of housing and affirmative action and lower productivity of socialism serve to justify the anti-liberal position.

The battle also has been waged in foreign policy. Morality and human rights are up against national security. As a community of scholars and Christians, how do we relate to this debate? Are we just a part of it on a smaller scale? I hope that people at Notre Dame are not paralyzed by their own problem capitalizes on the failures and mistakes of the other group.

One is considered soft on communism, the other is accused of supporting dictatorships. These views of the Soviet Union reflect the debate that is carried on within the United States. One view calls for increased armaments to assert U.S. will and strength. The other calls for cooperation and a better approach to the diplomatic problem. The debate continues while the problems that face us become ever more difficult to solve and increasingly severe. Our Congress is no longer interested in implementing innovative policies. Instead it creates committee after study after report.

Last summer when figures indicated that 15 percent of American people are living at or below the poverty line, President Reagan appointed a commission to find out why, rather than implementing relief measures. Republicans and Democrats, liberals and conservatives, looked into a debate. Each side is convinced that the other's policies are detrimental to the national good and threaten people's freedom. As a community of scholars and Christians, how do we relate to this debate? Are we just a part of it on a smaller scale? I hope that people at Notre Dame are not paralyzed by their own problem capitalizes on the failures and mistakes of the other group.

This campus was active during the late 60s and early 70s, but has been complacent since. No group has done more for the liberals and conservatives than their opponents: each faction capitalizes on the failures and missteps of the other to legitimize their position. Liberals can use the excesses of unregulated big business and government ignorance of a welfare safety net (unfair labor practices, price-fixing, unjust income distribution, defective products and poverty) as evidence of the evil character of the unregulated private sector. Liberals have their own list of mistakes. The ballooning cost and cost of the welfare state, the failures of housing and affirmative action and lower productivity of socialism serve to justify the anti-liberal position.

The battle also has been waged in foreign policy. Morality and human rights are up against national security. As a community of scholars and Christians, how do we relate to this debate? Are we just a part of it on a smaller scale? I hope that people at Notre Dame are not paralyzed by their own problem capitalizes on the failures and mistakes of the other group.

One is considered soft on communism, the other is accused of supporting dictatorships. These views of the Soviet Union reflect the debate that is carried on within the United States. One view calls for increased armaments to assert U.S. will and strength. The other calls for cooperation and a better approach to the diplomatic problem. The debate continues while the problems that face us become ever more difficult to solve and increasingly severe. Our Congress is no longer interested in implementing innovative policies. Instead it creates committee after study after report.

Last summer when figures indicated that 15 percent of American people are living at or below the poverty line, President Reagan appointed a commission to find out why, rather than implementing relief measures. Republicans and Democrats, liberals and conservatives, looked into a debate. Each side is convinced that the other's policies are detrimental to the national good and threaten people's freedom. As a community of scholars and Christians, how do we relate to this debate? Are we just a part of it on a smaller scale? I hope that people at Notre Dame are not paralyzed by their own problem capitalizes on the failures and mistakes of the other group.

Schnellenberger denies help going to the pros

Associated Press

CORK GABLES, Fla. — University of Miami Coach Howard Schnellenberger yesterday denied reports that he was leaving for a head coaching job in pro football, saying he'd be "happy to retire" here.

Television analyst Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder said on CBS Sunday that Schnellenberger had been approached by the National Football League's New York Giants, but that he had an agreement to go to the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League.

Schnellenberger, whose fifth ranked team is a virtual sure bet to face Nebraska in the Orange Bowl on Jan. 2, said it never got to that point, although those teams and several others had contacted him.

"After listening to them, I told them that my desire was to move this football program along and try to win the national championship," said Schnellenberger, age 48.

"I'm convinced that everybody thought I was qualified to coach any kind of football team in America. It bears the alternative. But I sure wish those things were done in a more professional manner so they wouldn't run the risk of upsetting my football team before their big game ever." Snyder said Schellenberger, who has three years left on his contract at Miami, had met with Generals' owner Donald Trump Schnellenberger made a trip to New York last week to help promote the Jan. 2 Orange Bowl game, in which his 10-1 Hurricanes will face unbeaten Nebraska.

Last year, Schnellenberger rejected an offer to be the head coach at the University of Kentucky, his alma mater.

Trump issued a statement saying that Schnellenberger was not a candidate and that he hoped to name a new Generals' coach within two weeks.

With Michaux, former coach of the NFL's New York Jets, 1979, who was reported to be under consideration as a replacement for Chuck Fairbanks as Generals' coach.

Snyder said that the Giants, 3-11-1, "are looking for a new coach" to replace free agent coach Bill Parcells.

Schnellenberger has a 40-16 record during his five seasons at Miami. He coached the Baltimore Colts during the 1973 and 1974 seasons before being fired by owner Robert Irsay. He worked as an assistant with the NFL's Miami Dolphins before taking the head job with the Hurricanes.

Trump tried to hire Don Shula away from the Dolphins earlier this year, but Shula recently signed an extension of his contract as coach of the NFL team. Shula broke off contacts with Trump after the Generals' owner dismissed the negotiations on national television.

The Wyoming Cowboys, the Big Red, who suffer a substantial height disadvantage.

The main Irish inconsistency has been in the backcourt. With Joe Buc hung up on that until January, due to residuals in his knee; Don Duff must take the reins as the floor leader. Joseph Price and Scott Hicks also need to boost their confidence by taking more perimeter shots tonight.

Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps said his team is coming off the soaring drought that has plagued the Irish since the opening game. The team has lost at a 46-85 clip for the last two games. Although this is not a phenomenal percentage, it is the same that Irish fans have seen for so far. Free throw percentage has dropped in half, from above 50 percent to 40 percent for the season. To be a better team, Notre Dame obviously must hit more of those shots.

Tonight, the Irish basketball team will try to improve on its 3-4 record and win its second game this season over a team with a better than 500 record (sound familiar?) the first was St. Joseph's.

They know they can always come back.

Ealy performed his magic despite his rocky start, despite the adverse fan reaction, despite having to throw into a defense that knew he had to throw, and despite the taunts of Dallas' defensive players, including linebackers Johnie Cooks, who kept telling Ealy, "I'm gonna get you.

Ealy was drafted by Baltimore but refused to play there and eventually was traded to Denver, triggering the ire of Colts fans and owner Robert Irsay, who had hurled veiled threats of bodily harm at the rookie.

Ealy viewed the outcome as a plot to vindicate for the only knock against him in college; he had never played for a winning team. "After all those people talked about how we (Stanford) never played in a bowl game, it's nice to make the playoffs my first year," he said.

"Everybody hung together and fought back," Ealy said. "I knew we had plenty of time. I'm a competitor."

Packers edge Bucs in overtime

Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — Jan Stenerud, who had earlier set an all-time field goal record, kicked a 25-yard 507th into overtime to give Green Bay a 12-9 victory over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers last night and keep the Packers' National Football League playoff hopes alive.

Stenerud, who passed George Blanda's NFL mark of 535 field goals with a 32-yarder in the third quarter, had forced the game into overtime with a 23-yard kick with 28 seconds left in regulation.

The victory enabled Green Bay, 8-7, to pull into a first-place tie with Detroit in the NFC Central Division. The Packers can win the division if they beat Chicago and Tampa Bay, 2-13, upsets Detroit on Sunday. If the Packers and Lions finish with the same record, Detroit would advance to the playoffs by virtue of a better record within the division and Green Bay would be eliminated.

Green Bay took the kickoff to start overtime and drove from its own 20 to the Tampa 6 on a drive that included Marlin Huckleby's 20-yard run that set up the winning field goal, which was kicked on second down.

Stenerud's tying kick came at the end of a 13-play, 75-yard drive that quarterback Lynn Dickey launched after Tampa Bay's Bill Capice missed a 55-yard field goal attempt.

The key plays on Green Bay's tying drive were a 24-yard pass from Dickey to Jimmy Lofton and a 7-yarder to Huckleby, along with the aspasting the pass penalty on Tampa Bay defensive end John Cannon that gave the Packers a first down at the Buccaneers 8.

Tampa Bay had taken a 5-2 lead on Jack Thompson's 4-yard scoring flip to Adger Armstrong with 7:33 remaining, but Capice missed the extra point. The winning touchdown came at the end of a 10-play, 65-yard drive that Thompson, who has thrown eight TD passes in his last three games, fueled with completions of 20 and 19 yards to Tho Bell.

Stenerud kicked a 35-yard field goal 255 into the game to give Green Bay a 5-2 lead. His 52-yarder left in the third quarter gave the Packers a 6-2 lead.

Cowboys went on to win the game, with a 22-yard kick with 28 seconds left in regulation.

North Carolina retains No. 1 spot

By DICK JOYCE
Associated Press

North Carolina, which routed previously unbeaten Kansas last Saturday, retained the No. 1 spot over Kentucky in the weekly Associated Press college basketball poll announced yesterday.

Meanwhile, upsets caused a shuffle among the other Top Ten teams.

North Carolina, which increased its record to 5-0 with an 87-64 victory over Tennessee, drew 17 first-place votes and 1,215 points from the panel of 62 sports writers and sportscasters.

Kentucky, which routed Kansas 72-50, collected the other 25 No. 1 votes for 1,205 points. Last week the Wildcats trailed the Tar Heels by four points in the voting, while each had 50 first-place votes.

Houston, which has reeled off five straight wins after its opening loss, moved into the No. 3 spot with 1,090 points, ahead of the previously unbeaten Louisiana State and St. Mary's of Texas.

In other changes, DePaul, which upset Georgetown Saturday for its fifth triump, jumped from No. 15 into the fourth spot with 943 points, a notch ahead of Georgetown (901 points), which has been rated No. 3. The Hoyas 5-1 had beaten St. Leo earlier in the week.

Irish begin to prepare for Boston College

Hello again, everybody!

Whether you like it or not — whether you are going or not — the Big Red and the Fighting Irish have already begun preparations for their December 29 Liberty Bowl match up with Boston College. While there definitely will not be a national championship on the line and the top twenty ranking on the line for the Irish, this still will be a big game for Faust and Co. The winners would like to go out as winners, the underdogs would like to use this game as a stepping stone for the future, and the entire team would like to see a national audience that Notre Dame was not wrong in accepting a bowl invitation with a 6.5 mark.

However, everyone knows now that Boston College won't be a pushover by any stretch of the imagination. The Eagles boast a 9-2 season with three bowl wins (1981 Sugar Bowl, 1978 Cotton Bowl, 1973 Sugar Bowl). Meanwhile, the Boston College coaches own a combined 1-2-1 slate in bowl play, including last year's 33-26 loss to Auburn in the Tangerine Bowl. The Eagles' lone bowl win came in the 1940 Sugar Bowl against Tennessee and resulted in Boston College's only national championship. The coach of that Eagle squad was a man by the name of Frank Leahy. And, if you're interested in how the two teams have fared against each other, the Irish own a 1-0 advantage in the series. That victory, a 35-0 drubbing on December 1, marked the first win for Dan Devine as football coach at Notre Dame.

Scooting the Eagles... It is no secret that anyone to the Boston College offense revolves around the arm of Heisman Trophy runner-up Doug Flutie. The 5-9 junior quarterback makes up for his lack of size with a quick release and a rifle arm. His statistics are impressive, indeed. As Flutie has thrown for over 2,700 yards and 17 touchdowns, he has been nothing but a fountain of fumbles and interceptions. He has a 16-24-1 record against the Irish defense, which held him to 122 yards and one touchdown in last year's Sugar Bowl.

A Look at the Irish... It's also quite obvious that the meat and potatoes of the Irish offense comes in the form of all-American Ad Pigank. The sopho...
