The Far Side creator to bring humor to TV

By BOB VONDERHIDE

The Far Side is coming, the Far Side is coming. Take a shower, wake the kids and tell them it’s true. That creative mind behind the cartoon madness — the very genius who’s been populating the campus at The Observer’s lunch time laugh track — will, if fact, irrevocably be here.

Not Purdue. Not USC. But here. On campus. Tuesday, Jan. 31. 8 p.m. in the Library Auditorium.

Gary Larson the eccentric behind dogs who move grass and cows who raid the freezer, is the freshest thing to hit the campus since fish on Friday. He’s the genius behind the cast of characters, the Copernicus of cats. You see things one way, and Larson turns it upside down, backwards, and — watch out — he’ll make St. George attack wagons and spiders catch humans for dinner.

Larson will bring the whole kit and caboodle to Notre Dame when he delivers a mishmash of slides, in-sight and human insights collectively called “A Look Behind The Far Side.” The presentation promises to reveal Larson’s personal nightmares and cartoon humor, how he began his business, and why he gravitated toward animals as characters. Larson and Mary Margaret Schmid, academic commissioner of the Saturday Evening Post, have published two books, The Far Side and Beyond The Far Side, both of which scored well on the New York Times and the Washington Post best seller lists. The Student Union has arranged an autograph session at the Bookstore on Tuesday in advance.

‘America back,’ declares Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan declared in an election-year State of the Union address last night that “America is back, standing tall,” and he sought constitutional power to trim spending and pare the federal deficit — without raising taxes.

And hours after engaging House Speaker Thomas P. O’Neill in a Nixtem exchange over Medicare policy, Reagan told a joint session of Congress he is determined to keep U.S. forces in Lebanon because the United States must never be turned away by “state-sponsored terror.”

Reagan asked congressional leaders to join him in developing a “down payment” on the federal deficit by enacting “some of the less contentious spending cuts” he already has proposed and by closing tax loopholes. But he rejected a major tax hike as a “Band-Aid solution to cure an illness that has been crying for attention.”

The president proposed one costly new item himself — a permanent academic standing requested invita- tion for this weekend at the last minute, according to Carlson.

Several events have been planned for the students and their mothers, who include a welcome reception Friday night, a fashion show Saturday, dinner Saturday night at the Americana Hotel, and a Sunday Mass and brunch.

Two different package deals were offered this year, which raised some problems, said Drabick. “People couldn’t decide which package they wanted,” she said. “We thought by giving them a choice it would be easier but it turned out to be a little bit harder.”

Drabick said seating will be tight at the Americana Hotel for dinner Saturday, and the Sunday brunch.

The overwhelming response to Junior Mother’s Weekend at Saint Mary’s has raised some serious questions as to whether sufficient accommodations will be available to accommodate the large number of students and their mothers, who include a welcome reception Friday night, a fashion show Saturday, dinner Saturday night at the Americana Hotel, and a Sunday Mass and brunch.

Goodbye WSN D; hello W V F L. The new call letters for the campus radio station, which stand for the Voice of Fighting Irish, were selected recently by the executive board of the station. As of Wednesday, the University Student Activities Board (WSN D) is hoping to become an FM station, and a name change will be necessary to comply with the University's other radio station, WSN D-FM. The switch to FM must still be approved by the Federal Communications Commission. A decision on WSN D-FM's application is not expected for several months. — The Observer

While everyone else is trying to pull computers in college; a Kent State University student has reduced college to a maze game. Christopher Skapura, a graduate student in business administration, says he drew heavily on his own college experience in designing the computer simulation. The object of the maze is to graduate with a B.A. Surviving registration is the first of many tasks players encounter. Others include seeking financial aid, facing the bursar, and passing a chemistry test. Discovering the proper sequence becomes part of the challenge—just like in life, says Skapura. There are only a few "final errors" in the game. One involves a fraternity house; a character named Bluto, a cheat sheet, and a quantity of alcohol. You figure it out. The game is not for people with low frustration levels. If you want to pick up a book and the computer is programmed to respond in "get book," it won't give it to you if you type "take book." Must pay the price you earn with that sort of thing in order to enjoy solving the puzzle, says Skapura. — The Observer

Three law students passed the magical 100 (calories) mark in last night's 10K eating marathon. Sixteen runners started the grueling race through plates of spaghetti and mountains of ice cream, but only six finished the calorie-laden course. Jack McCormick, also known for his appearance on Wheel of Fortune, ran the first by way to first place by consuming a whopping 11,400 calories. Other runners devoured five plates of spaghetti, five slices of Italian bread, two double-deep ice cream cones, a large bag of pop-corn, and seven beers on his way to victory. Other finishers were: Paul KoSecakovich, 11,050 calories; Wayne Patrick, 10,000 calories; Jim Mattern, 7,700 calories; Tom Rinehart, 5,100 calories; and John Boll, (who also can't see). Mattern will also appear on the Wheel of Fortune on Feb. 7 at 7:30 p.m. — The Observer

Stock prices tumbled into a sharp decline in late trading yesterday as traders awaited President Reagan's State of the Union message. Analysts said the selling was prompted by speculation that Reagan might pull a surprise in the next few days and decide against running for re-election. The White House, however, said shortly after the market closed that there had been no change in the plans calling for Reagan to announce his intentions for his political future on Sunday night. — AP

A small disruption in sugar metabolism during the first month of pregnancy may be responsible for a variety of birth defects, a major university research project has shown. Scientists found that high levels of one form of sugar could disrupt glycolysis, the process of breaking down sugars and other carbohydrates which produces the energy which embryos need to form major organs early in their development. — AP

A LaPorte County man who was sexually abused while incarcerated as a juvenile was sentenced to death yesterday for the sexual assault of a teenage girl. "I think he's a contemplated person," said defense attorney Gregory Hofer of Michigan City. "As of today, he's at peace to be at death." Asked if Davis wants to do in Indiana's electric chair, Hofer replied: "He is indicated that he does. He is indicated that the victims (families) will feel better if he is dead." Hofer said he did not know what he would do if Davis refused to appeal. — AP

Woman SBP must promote controversy, not cooperation

Women have attended Notre Dame for more than 10 years, but a woman has never been elected student body president. As the deadline for student body president application approaches, one can only hope that a strong woman candidate will enter the race.

Why?

Male student body presidents misunderstand their roles—instead of serving as cattle prods to keep administrators honest, they generally cooperate with University officials for the sake of unity.

Take the present student body president as an example.

This time last year, The Observer made a grave mistake. The Observer for the first time endorsed Callaghan for student body president.

To no one's surprise, Callaghan won. The precipitation on the student body president, however, was by no means the last one could predict. Callaghan, so far, has been unable to change the laundry policy to allow men to use washers and dryers in women's dormitories. Also, the D-6 parking lot next to the JRTC, building was paved last summer, in part to Callaghan's efforts.

But Callaghan has never doubted the potential of administrators and has repeatedly balked at any possible confrontation. Then again, that's exactly what we and Student Body Vice President Peggy Prezeworski promised to their platform.

Both sides (students and administrators) look upon each other as opponents," said Callaghan. "100% cooperation is not important. Those students fail to listen to and understand administration policies. Furthermore, the administration claims that students don't seem to consider the effect of their (administrators') programs over a long period of time. "The best way to accomplish our (Prezeworski) plan to eliminate these feelings by dealing directly with the administration face-to-face. This avoids issues being brought out of proportion, good intentions must be open-minded. With such cooperation and communication, we can accomplish much." Callaghan went on.

One might suspect any critique of Callaghan by The Observer to be a knee-jerk response to his failure to stick up for the paper in its fight with the administration. And in large measure such an observation is correct. As such, conflict should be Callaghan's middle name.

There are many burning issues with which to cont-aminate administrators. An attack on campus is not an burning issue.

Notre Dame is no shining example of virtue and openness. Among other things, the University aside apart in South Africa through its investment policy opposes ministration of its employees and encourages unethical attitudes toward sexuality by insisting on single sex dormitories.

Callaghan should be at the forefront of the fight against such inconsistencies. In stead, he wants to join Notre Dame President Father Theodore Hesburgh's so-called Notre Dame family.

As a man, it would seem quite logical for Callaghan to support cooperation within such a male-dominated household.

Notre Dame women, on the other hand, are the bastards of the Notre Dame family. They know what discrimination is first hand. As such, conflict should be Callaghan's middle name. Until a woman becomes student body president, women students will face obstacles to serve as leader of conscience. As women, Notre Dame students are tired of passively cooperating with a sexist University. Until a woman becomes student body president, women students can expect little change in University policy. After all, confrontation brings nothing out into the public. And administrators sure hate looking bad in public.

PHONE LINE DELAYS TELLER OPENING

By KAREN THOMPSON

An incorrectly installed telephone line was blamed for the delay in opening the new Resource Center at Saint Mary's. The automatic banking teller, located in the Haggar College Center, was originally scheduled to open during the beginning of January.

"We hope that students will be able to use the teller by next week," said Branch Supervisor Rosemary Remble. "It could take as long as a couple of weeks to fix the telephone line itself," she added.

Students who chose to receive a Resource card paid an installment fee of $10. Freshman Bernice Young claims she "didn't pay that much money to use the card the last week of school." She continued, "I would like better service for the students, because it's about the only bank we have access to."

Students wouldn't personally notified of the delay because First Source couldn't give a definite date as to when the automatic teller would be operating.

"A lot of good the sign does for those who have a card," said Freshman Sue Ness. "The students should have been personally notified to avoid wasting time walking to the bank."

When the teller begins operation, money will be available in denominations of $5 and $20. Students will be able to withdraw up to $200 every three days and will have the option of using the banking service whenever the College Center is open.

Student activities asks clubs to list members

By MICHAEL J. CHMIEL
Staff Reporter

Each of Notre Dame's 174 clubs is being asked to submit a roster of club members and their student identification numbers to the student activities office by the end of the month. Student Activities Director James McDonnell, who made the request last week at the Notre Dame President's Dinner, said this information will serve as "concrete data to make statements about student involvement at Notre Dame."

With this information in its new computer system, McDonnell's office hopes to do direct programs toward involving all segments of the Notre Dame community in university life. McDonnell said his office will not solicit individuals for lack of participation, but will study "classes and college proportions proportionately under the average level of involvement," and target programs toward these groups.

"Right now we act on myths," explained McDonnell; the computer will help us come up with important factual information. "It could assist in planning programs and activities while allowing us to come to an understanding of where we are at Notre Dame," continued McDonnell.

Many schools across the country are now developing activity transcripts on each individual student, similar to academic transcripts such as those found in the school's registrar's office. According to McDonnell, this is not the goal of this project.

Instead, McDonnell's office has devised this system to study, for example, how many students from the College of "X" take part in club "Y" or are there significantly less "Z" year students involved with community groups than the overall average should indicate.

"New identification cards with all kinds of users" will be introduced next year, explained McDonnell. The new cards will help the University determine how many students participate in specific events such as the basketball "Z" year students to attend a concert, dance or lecture.

According to McDonnell, an alphabetical listing of each Notre Dame student and his or her activities will not be kept. Rather, a listing of each club and its members will be developed enabling the Student Activities Office to make general claims about a certain group's participation in a club or area.

Also, the admissions department could use the listings to determine the percentage of Notre Dame students involved in activities on the whole. McDonnell is requesting that each club submit a roster of its members except geographical clubs, since their main aim is to organize rides and happenings pertaining to their hometowns, and varsity sports, since they are charted through the athletic department.

McDonnell, who hopes to have all of this information in his office by the end of this semester, realizes problems may arise within the various clubs, and therefore will plan to provide listings of the Notre Dame student body and their student numbers for the use of the clubs in the Student Activities Office.

McDonnell believes it will probably take most of this semester to establish this system, but feels the long-term benefits will be well worth it.

Student Health Center to sponsor self-help sessions starting Jan. 30

By RICH INGRASSIA News Staff

How to cope with the tensions and aggravations of college life will be the topic of self-help sessions being made available to members of the Notre Dame community by the Free University program.

Sponsored by the Student Health Center, the sessions will begin Jan. 30 and will be led by Luis Valdez, a counseling psychology graduate of Texas Tech University.

The program will include a number of self-help and Out Reach groups and will be open to students, staff, and faculty of the Notre Dame community.

The Out Reach groups will address the problems confronted in everyday dealings with people and events. "The groups really have no thing to do with illness," said Valdez, "nothing to do with serious psychological problems, only with general coping with day-to-day issues. The program is wholly devoted to the normal student."

The sessions offered this semester are in three concentrations. The first, beginning Jan. 30, will focus on stress management. On Jan. 31, a group on building self-esteem will start and finally on March 26, there will be an assertiveness training course. Each group will meet for two hours, once a week for six weeks, at the Student Health Center.

Valdez was the coordinator of a similar program at the University of Texas at Austin, which experienced considerable success the two years he worked there. In fact, such Out Reach groups are offered at most American Universities.

As in the past, the program at Notre Dame will be run by a professional staff of doctorate level psychology professors as well as Notre Dame psychology graduate students presently at work on their Ph.D.'s.

Valdez emphasizes the program is for "anybody and everybody." Last semester there was a slight public problem, which resulted. Valdez explained, "in small, yet very workable groups. We would like to see a bigger turnout this semester."

He said he would like students, faculty and staff to understand exactly what the groups do and what kind of unique interaction is possible between intelligent, concerned people focusing on building and fortifying their characters.

"The groups are quite structured yet experiential and very education at based entirely on the exchange of ideas and experiences of the participants," said Valdez. The first week of each session will be devoted to clarifying some definitions of esteem, assertiveness or stress and their associated terms and concepts. For everyone to get to know each other.

For the remaining weeks, Valdez said the groups will concentrate on what factors in your own day-to-day ords contribute to your interpretation of the personal pitfalls you may have. Finally, the groups will discuss the program will what you say inside to yourself as a guide to your feelings and behavior.

Sign ups for the Out Reach groups will be conducted in two ways first, through the Free University registration from January 23-27 at the Lafortune Resource or by going directly to the Student Health Center and contacting Luis Valdez.

tion of a mishap was the sound of books that dropped from his hands to the floor. The guard had equipped himself with a silencer to muffle the explosive crack of his 7.65mm pistol, but paid no heed to what his unsuspecting man had equipped himself with a sile nce to.

In fact, this latest act of terror is extraordinary. It stands quite apart from the carnage inflicted upon diplomatic and military targets.

To ignore this essential difference is to grant, although unwittingly, a high degree of respect and even rationality to those who carried out this senseless and brutal slaughter. To call loud attention to this difference, on the other hand, is the humblest debt of honor due to the memory of this man and what he represented.

The explanation for this crime as stated by the anonymous caller who claimed to speak for the killers was that Kerr "was a victim of the American military presence in Lebanon."

But this claim so squarely disavows the whole character of the person involved that it asserts only a ridiculous own cause and it exposes them to plain view as merely desperate and fanatical men.

From all the bloodbath brought on by this shadowy group known as Islamic Jihad, there is certainly no one who can doubt their intense zeal.

But if the shortsightedness displayed by their earlier attacks has provoked such retaliation, it only proves their lack of political responsibility. This cold-blooded killing of Malcolm Kerr now destroys any credibility for their religious idealism.

Over the recent months, the sobering reservations that many expressed about the advantages of dispatching American and Allied troops to Beirut in the first place has grown in scale and in measure of conviction. There is now an increasing pressure on Washington from practically every quarter to arrange quickly for damage control rather than prolonging the costly illusion of a reconstituted Lebanese state in the near future. Evidence in Congress, the State Department and the Department of Defense abounds.

It is in this same light that the great masses of Americans will almost inevitably interpret whatever is the daily press informs them is occurring over there.

These murderers, for all their dangerous confusions are nonetheless fully aware of this obscure perception on the part of the American public. Their attack on Kerr was deliberately calculated as an act of propaganda and intimidation. It has probably done more damage than it would have otherwise.

Campus comments: What do you think of people smoking in public?

A my action that a an is a that in this is offensive to other people is a violation of their rights.

If people want to smoke that's their own business, but when they blow smoke in your face it tends to be obnoxious.

If we assume that Mondale will be the nominee it follows that the Democratic game plan will be the economics of the AFL-CIO, the educational programs of the National Education Assn., the "social issues" of the NOW (National Organization of Women), the foreign policy of the Democratic liberals in and out of Congress, and the defense policy of the anti-defense and nuclear freeze groups.

If the speeches based on this strategy were delivered by an impounded Ted Kennedy, whose exit from the race cleared the way for Mondale as front-runner, the Democrats would stand a chance of winning. Delivered by Mondale they will generate widespread enmity.

If we talk not of particular programs but of broad strategies, then the election strategy of the Democrats - whoever runs - has narrowed down considerably. The economic focus used to be on the jobs, but the Reagan recovery has undercut it. What the Democrats have left is the swollen Reagan budget - and they don't know what to do about it.

Kerr assassination not just another attack

So what if Mondale can't be stopped

The vanishing of the big economic issues has brought a shift to an attack on Reagan's foreign policies. Given the success of Grenada and the stubborn refusal of NATO to give in on the Pershing missiles, what remains for the Democrats is Beirut as a symbol of a possibly treacherous quarantine.

The third element in the Democratic strategy will be a constant barrage against Ronald Reagan himself, as "mean" in his lack of concern for the poor while he hobnobs with the rich, and as "trigger happy" in a nuclear age.

The Republican game plan will also be a triple strategy, but the difference is that the Republicans will point to viable accomplishments - the Reagan recovery in the face of all the Democratic attacks, and the new note of resoluteness both in foreign and defense policy.

The third axis of the strategy will be the popular appeal of Reagan himself. Even political scientists who are lifelong Democrats at least, however reluctantly, to the way Reagan has come through surprisingly as a leader-figure who has reawakened American confidence and resolve.

No one - not even the various entities and nonefficiens that have endorsed him - will say that about Walter Mondale. The fault rests only in part with Mondale and the others. It rests with the internal intellectual climate within the Democratic Party itself, which has become a number of pressure group federations associated only loosely with the party, operating on the principle of give and take, not in money but entitlements.

The Reagan administration is enacting policies that none of the party leaders seems to inspire.

Irish once again paced by Sluby in 59-56 OT win over Davidson

By CHUCK FREEBY
Sports Writer

Throughout 15 years of coaching, Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps' hair has become gray and grayer. Last night's game against Davidson helped speed up the process.

Behind 22 points by senior captain Tom Sluby, the Irish struggled to a 59-56 overtime victory over the aptly-named Wildcats before a crowd of 2,356 at the Convocation Center last night. For the Irish, it was their first loss in the last 12 games and raised their overall record to 12-5. Meanwhile, Coach Hussey's young and scrappy Davidson club falls to 6-11 on the year.

After playing every other night for the last week, Phelps realized his club was showing signs of fatigue. "I think it was obvious we were a little tired tonight," noted the Irish mentor. "We've played three games in five days, but we have to do that because you play every other day in post-season action."

Phelps may be looking ahead to tournament play, but he knows the Irish will have to perform better in post-season than they did last night. Notre Dame shot a meager 40 percent from the floor on the evening, including a dismal 9-for-27 first-half performance. Poor foul shooting continued to plague the Irish as well, as they only connected on 66 percent of their efforts from the charity stripe.

Nevertheless, on this evening the Irish were able to get by, thanks to strong efforts by the flu-stricken Phelps, who had just seven points in nine minutes of overtime. Meanwhile, Kerry缤纷 continued to emerge during the second half of the season, netting 14 points and collecting 11 rebounds while playing the entire game.

The visiting Wildcats did their best to keep the Irish at bay, but in the first half committing 15 turnovers in the first twenty minutes. Unfortunately, the Irish were unable to convert and needed six straight points to tie the game at 25-25 with 4:18 left in the half. Davidson managed to close the gap to three when the Wildcats leading scorer, Kenny Wilson, scored the first points of the second half. A jumper with 2:05 left in the half and a Kempton tip-in along with an impressive slam dunk by the Irish center widened the margin to 51-24 by halftime.

"We forced 15 turnovers in the first half, which should have meant a 16-to-18 point lead at a seven-point lead at half," said Phelps. "If you have that kind of lead, it's a different kind of game."

However, the Irish couldn't handle the prosperity of the lead they bad. Davidson chipped away at the lead in the second half, trailing by 25-21 with 9:32 to play. Beck McCombs threw home two of his 20 points with a jumper from the left baseline. The Wildcak finally caught the Irish, when Chris Heilman, who guided Converse College to the Indiana state prep championship last winter, converted a three-point play to tie the score at 40.

After trading baskets for the next five minutes, Davidson's senior forward Kenny Wilson gave the Wildcats their first lead since early in the first half by tipping in his own man with exactly four minutes left to make the score 50-48. Notre Dame knotted the score at 50 when reserve guard Joseph Price sank a pair of free throws at the 3:17 mark. However, it would take a trip to the charity stripe for Phelps to offset his ball-out in an attempt to pull the Wildcats out of their zone. "It was an unsportsmanlike decision to play for the last shot at the end of regulation," said Phelps. "I thought (Joe) Howard had the shot."

However, "Small Wonder," who earned his first start due to an injury to Jojo Buchanan, had his jumper fall short, and Davidson called timeout with five seconds remaining. Heilman let a jumper fly from 25 feet with three seconds left and missed the mark to send the game into overtime.

It was time for Sluby to take over, as he connected on two jumpers to give the Irish a 54-50 lead. Following a Wilson rebound goal, the Irish sank three pressure free throws, taking advantage of three Davidson turnovers in the final two minutes. Jim Dolan connected on both ends of a one-and-one to give Notre Dame a five point lead at 57-52 with 16 seconds left. But McCoskin answered with a jumper from the top of the key with 12 seconds remaining. Sluby iced the game when he was fouled on his way to the hoop and then converted both free throws. Sluby's dunk at the buzzer only served to close the final margin.

"We played poorly, but we won and that's the important thing," commented the Irish mentor. "I don't think we disappointed in our offensive and defensive rebounding, (but) that's what happens when a team isn't prepared."

On the other hand, Davidson coach Bobby Hussey always had plenty of praise for his young team. "Our guys played awfully hard," said Hussey afterwards. "That's what happens when you are made up of mistakes, but that's what happens when you are made up of mistakes, but defenses are able to make the shot and the best rebounding team in the country."

With that being the case, Digger might want to invest in some Grecian Formus stock before Saturday. If the Maryland game is any thing like last night's contest, the veteran Irish coach will have a white coat by the end of the weekend.

Career of ups and downs

Hockey team has leader in Bowie

By JOHN MENNELL
Sports Writer

Irish co-captain Joe Bowie has had his ups and downs with the Notre Dame hockey program.

In his three years with the Irish he's played in three different leagues with the Western Collegiate Hockey Association and the Central Collegiate Hockey Association at the varsity level and the Central States Hockey League at the club level.

The ice hockey veteran says he was going to go back to varsity "but there was a chance to go out of the events of his sophomore year to the high points in his career. It was great to make it to the CCHA finals."

Another high was winning the Great Lakes Invitational Tournament in Detroit. Although he played the last month of the season with broken bones in his hand, he was voted the most improved player by his teammates.

But he's had his down points too.

"One low point was not getting a shot in the NCAA tournament after doing so well in the CCHA," Bowie says. "The droop of the hockey program was also a disappointment."

I considered transferring I had a chance to go to Michigan State, but they couldn't guarantee anything," he said. "I decided that coming to Notre Dame was more important than going to another team for a year. I didn't want to lose any of the friendships I'd made since I'd been here."

Bowie has led the team in three objectives for this season. "We wanted to go undefeated and we wanted to go to back to varsity," he says. "The team has yet to lose a game and will return to varsity status next year."

Continuing the winning streak and winning the CCHA championship is what Bowie has in mind for the rest of the season. "It would be nice for Keith Smith and it would just prove we should have been varsity all along," he said. "We're a better quality than most of the teams we play."

The attitude this year has been excellent. We've had a few discrepancies but we're a very cohesive unit. Everyone is mature enough to take on their responsibilities."

Bowie first started skating at the age of three, and didn't begin playing organized hockey until he was six. He was a center and left wing until his final year of high school when he started playing defense.

"I was recruited by Michigan State and some Ivy League schools. My first visit was down here," he says. He finally decided to go to Notre Dame because of its "prestige and reputation for good sportsmanship."

Next year Bowie plans either to go to the town of Toronto or to play hockey in Europe. Coach Smith is helping him apply for a visa. "He'd give you the shirt off his back," says Bowie.

Bowie has little to complain about of his four years at Notre Dame. "It's been a good experience, meeting new people and being away from home. Sometimes it's been tough to keep both academics and athletics up, but it's got to be done."

Freshmen add spark

It was a busy weekend for the men's swimming team. On Saturday, the team defeated Valparaiso University 72-45. After last year's win over Ball State, the Irish have defeated all five of their opponents this season.

On Saturday, Devine won five events and tied in the 100, 200 and 100-yard freestyles. Suzanne Devine and Monica Walker. The win ups the Irish record to 12-5. See Chuck Freeby's account of the game at left.

Although the Irish never pulled ahead Saturday on the first day, the Irish were more competitive with Ball State than in past seasons. It was disappointing to lose, but we swam well and we're pleased because we were more competitive," said Tikka.
