McBrien re-appointed to theology post after receiving concessions

By JOHN NEBLO
News Staff

A new theology building and an increased theology department budget are among concessions Father Richard P. McBrien has received from the University in exchange for agreeing to stay on as theology department chairman for three more years.

McBrien joined the University as department chairman in the fall of 1980 after being heavily recruited by the University administration and by University President Father Theodore Hesburgh. His appointment three years ago was a major part of the University's effort to improve the theology department.

According to William Storey, director of the department's Master's program, the hiring of McBrien was "a tremendous coup" because "he knows personally every significant Catholic theologian in the United States and Canada and has a genius for recruiting. That is the most important thing he can do for us. It can be very difficult to get top scholars to come to South Bend."

Storey also praised McBrien's administrative skills. "This place was primitive organizationally," he said.

"He recognized that, sized things up; he's the best administrator I've ever worked for."

When first offered the position of department chairman, McBrien was not interested. "I was very happy back at Boston College running the Institute there. I wasn't interested in just another department chairman ship."

That was before Father Hesburgh prevailed upon McBrien to come out and visit the campus himself. "I came out to Notre Dame, met with the Provost and the Dean of the College, and interviewed some of the people in the theology department. By the time I left, they had convinced me that they really wanted me and were serious about improving the theology department. The University promised to make the necessary resources available so I accepted."

The resources to which McBrien referred included five additional endowed chairs giving the department a total of six, more than any other department in the University; three more teaching positions; several full-time secretaries and more office space. McBrien said see McBRIEN page 4

Organizers call a halt to the Nestle boycott

Special to the Observer

Leaders of a seven-year-old American boycott against Nestle, the world's principal supplier of infant formula, announced Friday, in a report published in New York Times, that they had suspended their protest after reaching an agreement with Nestle.

The agreement included Nestle's promise to introduce both American and international boycotts of Nestle chocolate and other products, said it was almost certain the other American groups that endorsed the boycott would now end their sanctions.

Lines a Keenan Revue tradition

By JOHN DREW
News Staff

The crowd of about 2,000, many of whom had been waiting for hours, rose to its feet when he entered LaFortune Student Center yesterday.

It was not, however, the short guy wearing the pinstriped suit and dark glasses that the crowd was waiting for. They were more interested in the contents of the heavily guarded suitcase he was carrying.

"What were the preciosus contents, you ask? Well, inside the suitcase were approximately 1,000 tickets for the Wednesday, Friday and Saturday showings of the ever-popular Keenan Revue.

The first student on the scene was David Zoldak. Zoldak, a senior, arrived at the record store at 10:30 a.m. Apparently Zoldak had no sooner rolled out of bed when he was headed for LaFortune.

Zoldak said, "I made up my mind that I was going to get tickets no matter what it took, but I came prepared with computer game, homework and a newspaper." Despite his plans, these activities were exhausted before the tickets arrived, leaving Zoldak patiently waiting.

Although Zoldak arrived first, it was senior Joe Jehring who managed to acquire the first ticket to the show. Jehring admitted he was knowingly maneuvered into the number one spot. After receiving the first ticket Jehring said, "This can only see KEENAN page 4

Problems nonexistent at mother's weekend

By MARY JACOBY
News Staff

The Junior Mother's Weekend at Saint Mary's held this past weekend, was successful despite earlier fears that it would be overcrowded.

Those fears were mostly rumors, according to co-chairpersons Patti Drabick and Lorrie Clark. "We were a little apprehensive at first," said Clark, "but it turned out fine."

Response was enthusiastic to all of the planned events, and Drabick and Clark were "very pleased" with the weekend overall. "I think it went great," said Drabick.

The most popular event seemed to be Saturday night's dinner at the Americana Hotel, with approximately 450 persons in attendance. The Shenanigans provided entertainment, performing in each of the two rooms holding diners.

The dinner was expected to be one of the more crowded events, but help from the Americans staff along with numbered tables and a seating chart averted any problems.

Other events included a welcome reception Friday night, a panel of women speaking on the subject of alternative lifestyles Saturday morning, and a fashion and beauty show Saturday evening at the Americana.

Saturday's panel consisted of four women who told the Carroll Hall audience of "75 about their lives and professions while offering their own advice. Those speaking included Dr. Mid DePaule, director of the career counseling department, Sister Traci Matherly, assistant to the vice president; Leslie Wilson, director of the alumni office; and Dr. Karilee Wat son, a professor in the education department.

In Brief

The Notre Dame Victory March written at most 80 years ago, has since been used for football, basketball, drink- ing, singing, and even for waking up the echoes. But rarely, for a fight from criminals. Milton and Lawrence Reiterman of San Francisco were returning from a Mexican dinner when they saw what appeared to be a burglar. My wife yelled, ‘That’s that,’ Reiterman told the San Francisco Examiner. The Reitermans gave chase with the Notre Dame fight song blasting out on the car’s musical horn to attract attention. When the suspect caught up with the suspect, he jumped out, grabbed him and punched him in the ribs.” Other passers-by helped corner the suspect who police believe had robbed a woman while she was making a night deposit of receipts. Todd Johnson faces two felony counts of robbery. As for Reiterman, he has been recommended for a citation by the San Francisco police: “It was a natural reaction,” said Reiterman, a non-alumnus of Notre Dame who owns the special car horn. “I didn’t think whether he had a gun, I was just outraged.” — The Observer

Should student government officials get paid? This question – along with questions about the upcoming report on alcohol – are on the agenda for tonight’s meeting of the Student Senate. The Senate, led by Student Body President Brian Callahan, will meet tonight at 6 in Room 11B, Hayes-Healy. — The Observer

Candidates for student body president and vice president will be meeting tonight at 7 in the Little Theatre of LaFortune Student Center to discuss election rules. Senate candidates will meet at 8 p.m. Petitions for office will be due on Feb. 6, and the elections take place on Feb. 14. — The Observer

The LaFortune Student Center has begun using a computerized scheduling system. All requests for space and room reservations are now handled in the Student Activities office. 1st floor, between 8 am and noon, and between 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. For meetings, reservations must be made at least three days in advance; for events in Guatuaqua and the Nazi, at least two weeks are required. The Little Theatre can seat 88 people, and the newly remodeled New Orleans Room (the South Alcove) is equipped to handle small group meetings, seminars and receptions. — The Observer

The national president of Women Exploited by Abortion, Lorejo Neral, will speak about the organization tonight at 8 in the auditorium of the Memorial Library. WEA is a group of women who have had abortions and have come to regret their decision. Neral herself had an abortion eight years ago and now calls her abortion “the most dehumanizing and degrading experience on the face of this earth.” Neral’s address kicks off the fund-raising campaign for the Women’s Care Center of South Bend. — The Observer

Father William Beauchamp, assistant to the University executive vice president, will speak tonight at 7 in Cavanaugh Hall about possible changes in the University alcohol policy. The talk is sponsored by the hall’s academic commission. — The Observer

Weather

A winter storm is a strong effort through this morning. A near 100 percent chance for snow with total accumulations 3 to 6 inches. Some blowing and drifting snow. Highs in the 20s. Falling temperatures in the afternoon. A cloudy and at night with a 40 percent chance for snow showers. Low in the teens. Becoming partly cloudy and cold at night with a 40 percent chance for snow showers. Low in the teens. — The Observer

Did you know that the seven-year-old boy who estáte was by its leaders Jan. 26? Or that prominent African Jew asked Pope John Paul II to investigate allegations that the Catholic hierarchy played a role in the execution of Nelson after World War II? Or that in Ann Arbor, Mich., the trial of a family accused of enslaving two retarded men for more than ten years on a Michigan farm began Jan. 26? If you read The New York Times last Friday you do.

Kathy, if you read The Observer on that same day, you know the Notre Dame Food Service won the b award, an outline of the University’s Mexico program, and the president of Notre Dame and the Fort Wayne News Sentinel pulled “The Far Side” from the paper because it is about the “what-if” world.

The New York Times contains “all the news that’s fit to print.” On weekdays it averages 40-50 pages. The Observer is the independent student newspaper serving Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s. Its length averages 12 pages.

Often it is questioned whether The Observer adequately covers the news. Should this student newspaper devote itself completely to local, on-campus news, or should the means be national and international news as reported by the Associated Press? With its readership in mind the management of The Observer has decided to have a policy somewhere between the two extremes.

Some major Notre Dame publications include Notre Dame Magazine, The LaFortune, Scholar’s Juggler, The Dag, and the local newspapers the Independent and the Student. Only of these, only The Observer provides students, faculty and staff with daily coverage of local news and sports, editorials, a space for letters to the editor, and features. Neither does The Observer ignore national and world happenings — it is an arm of the Associated Press. The Observer does include what its news and sports editors consider most pertinent to the paper’s readership.

Father William Beauchamp is an alumni of the only newspaper they read, and besides the five-minute news spots in the morning on the radio, the only news they receive all day. It is these people that request four more pages, if the budget allowed four more pages. — The Observer.

However, it is not the responsibility of the student’s daily publication of ND and SMC to handle the student body through such a complex world. Besides the fact that it is impossible to fit the world’s happenings of a single day on 12 pages, there are several hundred if not thousand reputable papers nationwide that do report on the world. No other publication reports on either of these two institutions of higher education in such depth and breadth as The Observer. At the other end of the spectrum are those who think The Observer should not include any AP articles in its opinion section. — The Observer

The Observer claims to be serving ND and SMC. It is the independent student newspaper serving Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s. Its length averages 12 pages. — The Observer

The Observer is the independent newspaper published by the students of the University of Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s College. It does not necessarily reflect the opinion of the editors or of either institution. The news is reported as it is written, and as objectively as possible. Unsolicited editorials represent the opinion of a majority of the Editorial Board. Letters to the editor, and the Inside Column present the views of their authors. Columns space is available to all members of the community, and the free expression of varying opinions on campus, through letters, is encouraged.

Temporary parking stickers for Lot D-6 have been issued to 40 South Quad students.

Sign-ups were held last week with the intention of holding a lottery, said Dave McAvoy, student senator for the district containing D-6. But there ended up being enough spaces to accommodate all those who signed up.

The students, from four men's dorms, need to pick up their permits at the Security Office behind Haggar Hall.

The 40 spaces became available when the golf shop closed for the winter. The permits are valid until April 19 when golf opens for the summer.

He had known for some time about the administration’s intention to reappoint him and was prepared not to accept the job if the University would not support his plans for the future. “Administration is so time-consuming that it can ruin you as a theologian,” he wanted to continue writing and teaching just as well. “I would love to do that, but it’s not enough,” he said. “I would love to do that, but it’s not enough. I want to continue a lot of things.”

According to McBrien, however, the University administration continues to be very supportive of his plans. The biggest and most costly of his plans, a new theology building, has been placed on the University building list and funding for it is now being sought in the interim, McBrien has been promised double the current administrative space for the department and a student faculty lounge for the next semester. A larger operating budget, including funds for more secretaries and staff and special scholarship money for M.A. students has also been promised by the administration.

According to McBrien, “Notre Dame is the only place I know that has the resources to become better than it is now. We have an opportunity here to serve the Church in a capacity that doesn’t exist anywhere else in the U.S. The support is there.”

McBrien has agreed to stay for an other three-year term with a one-quarter sabbatical. He stays a fourth year, he may extend his sab­ batical to a full year.

The wait was a long one for most, but those who were determined to get tickets were willing to endure the wait. Senator Marty Eilen said, “My friends and I are prepared to wait a couple of days if we have to. I’ve seen the show before and it’s worth the wait.”

Reagan confirms re-election plans

Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Ronald Wilson Reagan, 39th president of the United States, said in a paid political ad that he will stand for re-election.

His long-expected campaign announcement came as 1,000 Republican officials gathered in a nearby hotel ballroom to cheer a candidate who is riding high in the polls and has already amassed a $4 million re-election war chest.

Eight men are chasing the Democratic nomination to oppose Reagan.

In a statement, first lady Nancy Reagan said: "It was a mutual decision. I support him fully. I'm very proud of him, and all he's accomplished in a very short space of time."

Reagan, who took office vowing to stem the tide of ever-increasing government spending and to rebuild the nation's military, was coy to the last, telling GOP officials early in the evening: "We'll trust that everything comes together before the night is over."

The former actor and governor, who will be 73 Feb. 6, announced his fourth bid for the presidency in a TV broadcast from the Oval Office.

The Reagan-Bush campaign committee paid about $400,000 to air Reagan's 10:55 p.m. EST announcement, but the money couldn't buy suspense.

Though Reagan refused for months to declare his intentions, all going that early disclosure would prompt speculation that his decisions were colored by politics, he dropped many hints that he would run.

He made countless jokes about his age, defusing what had been a persistent non-issue. He hit into his Democratic opponents, focusing on frontrunner Walter Mondale.

He said George Bush again would be his running mate.

CSC class will visit Washington

By PAT SAIN
Senior Staff Reporter

The way to solve a problem is to go straight to the top, and students going on the Social Concerns Seminar in Washington, D.C., will be doing just that.

During spring break, from March 17-24, nearly 20 students will travel to the nation's capital to investigate the disarmament issue, urban poverty, and the problems in Central America.

Orientation for the group will be given by Congressman Romano L. Mazzoli, D-Ky., who will talk about the professional and personal aspects of a politician's life at the Capitol. A Notre Dame alumnus, Mazzoli was instrumental in setting up the first Washington Seminar.

The students will tour the Pentagon and will be briefed by a public relations officer about the government's position on arms and Central America when they look into the disarmament issue. They will also attend a seminar on Central America, and go to a training session for 2,000 people who will be working in Latin American countries.

The housing problem in Washington, D.C., will also be a subject of the seminar. "There is tremendous contrast between the federal district and the city itself," said Marcia LeMay, coordinator of the seminar.

Last year, the weeklong seminar included a personal session with Congressman Henry Hyde, R-Ill., on the Central American arms issue, and a talk with Peter Henriot, Director of the Center of Concern in Washington D.C. "Henriot is a very intelligent man who knows his material," said LeMay. "He has an amazing way of talking directly to each person."

An informational meeting for the Seminar will be held tomorrow at 3 p.m. in the coffee house at the Center for Social Concerns. The deadline for applying is 5 p.m. on Feb. 6. Applications are available at the Center for Social Concerns.

The program is geared toward sophomores, juniors and seniors of any major. "You do not have to be a political science major to go on the seminar," said LeMay. Students should have some interest in social issues, however.

The seminar is sponsored by the Center for Social Concerns and Student Government, and requires three preparation sessions with faculty members before it begins. The seminar is worth one credit in theology, and requires a five-page paper and an evaluation at the end of the course.

The seminar is sponsored by the Center for Social Concerns and Student Government, and requires three preparation sessions with faculty members before it begins. The seminar is worth one credit in theology, and requires a five-page paper and an evaluation at the end of the course.

An informational meeting for the Seminar will be held tomorrow at 3 p.m. in the coffee house at the Center for Social Concerns.

Pat's picks

Top 10 albums

1. Michael Jackson, Thriller — There are not many instances of an album that has appealed so successfully to both mainstream and alternative tastes. This album dominated the charts for years, and its influence is still felt today.

2. The Police, Synchronicity — An album that is as sound as its title. The Police's Synchronicity officially completes what many albums can't: a switch to a very serious approach without sounding saccharine or forgettable. Snare apparently hasn't lost a bit of his charisma this time out, and the group hasn't lost their hit-making ability as seen by "Every Breath You Take," and "Kung of Pain.""There are not many instances of an album that has appealed so successfully to both mainstream and alternative tastes. This album dominated the charts for years, and its influence is still felt today.

3. Def Leppard, Pyromania — With Undercover, the Stones can still make a valid claim as being the world's greatest rock band. "Too Tough" and "Undercover of the Night" have as much power as their early material, and other songs like "Wanna Hold You" and "She Was Hot" strengthen this LP. Even though Keith Richards' heroin decades are over and most of the Stones have settled their pay disputes, Jeffery's rock sensibilities should spark a few more great LPs in the future.

4. Prince, 1999 — Prince may not be the type of guy that girls should take home to their family, but his quirky antics, his musical style, and his artistic skill have all kept the public interested. This was a LP with a bagpipe like riff throughout the expense of fine music. The band's breakup when they released this album. "Back on the Chain Gang" — When the band's future looked its dimmest. The Pretenders removed all doubt of their ability as seen by "Every Breath You Take," and "Kung of Pain." It was a hit, a chart topper, and "Back on the Chain Gang" is the only hit from the album. The band's breakup when they released this album. "Back on the Chain Gang" is the only hit from the album.

5. David Bowie, Let's Dance — "Modern Love," "China Girl," and the title cut make this album one of the year's best. Bowie has reassured himself as a front runner of the music scene, and once again, he's letting the music speak for itself, which it does much better.

6. U2, War — One of the few new bands that know what they're doing has finally soared near the top. The success they deserve with this album, "Sunday Bloody Sunday" truly powerful, while "New Year's Day" and "Two Hearts Beat As One" drive furiously. This band should be watched in the near future. With a couple more albums like this, U2 will find the place right beside the Who in the annals of rock history.

7. The Kinks, State of Confusion — Maybe "Come Dancing" isn't a classic like The Kinks' first Top Ten hit, "Lola," but their latest album contains plenty of great rock tunes. "Young Conservatives" is as scathing and accurate a portrait of today's youth as possible. It proves Ray Davies still has his knack as a social critic. He first saw the "Well Respected Man." He also still has his ability for writing catchy songs like "Don't Forget to Dance." "Definite Maybe" and the title cut, which keeps the Kinks revival going full speed.

8. Various Artists, Flashdance...What a Feeling — The movie is about as exciting as watching your grandmother knit socks, but the soundtrack is a hit, a flop story by Irene Cara's "What a Feeling" and Michael Sembello's "Maniac" dominated the charts, but they are only the tip of the iceberg of this good LP.

9. Bob Seger, The Distance — If you can ignore "Gone" and "The Distance," this is a very solid album that exhibits more emotional breadth than he's shown in years. The energy in "Roll Me Away," "Making Thunderbirds," and "Even Now" would make any album proud.

10. Def Leppard, Pynomania — This is the band's comeback album, and it has just as much potential as the earlier albums. The Polices' Synchronicity ranked in the top ten in both Pat and Vic's picks. "Kung of Pain" found its way into Pat's top singles choices. Top 10 albums

1. Tears For Fears, The Hurting — The year's most stunning debut, this LP based on Sue Townsend's novel. It's a definite shame. The original Saturday Night Fever LP was one of the all-time biggest selling albums and clearly a trendsetter, but even the Bee Gees aren't a hit or a flop. Frank Stallone will find another career, or just climb under a rock.

2. The Hollies' reunion — A truly honed attempt — It's really a shame that this album contains more relocates, but it was released in 1983, and its future looked its dimmest. The Pretenders removed all doubt of their ability as seen by "Every Breath You Take," and "Kung of Pain." It was a hit, a chart topper, and "Back on the Chain Gang" is the only hit from the album. The band's breakup when they released this album. "Back on the Chain Gang" is the only hit from the album.

3. Asia's Alpha — Some of these songs are wilder than the band's previous work. "Fire" doesn't even come close to anything on their debut, and although they're still from Top Ten, the first supergroup of the '80s runs out of steam.

4. Michael Jackson's Thriller Mini Movie — It was a commercially huge flop for the album. The creatures from the deal couldn't frighten my puppy. About the only thing this droopy-dog video has going for it is the magic of Jack. Leave it. Then again, his magic starts to wear thin after such constant airplay.

5. Simon and Garfunkel's Reunion — It's a shame that this reunion never came about in album form. According to Simon, Garfunkel's vocal work didn't quite sound right with Britain's Sebastian and The Hollies' Mike. So he dropped them and switched the title to Hearts and Roses. A truly friendly move. His action disappointed their fans, but he knows, it might be better than blinding a reunion like the Hollies' did.
music of 1983

the band's earlier days. Except for some scaring of synthesizers throughout (most notably on "You Go To My Head"), the LP shows the band at its rock-n-roll best.

5. Michael Jackson, Thriller — What else can be said about this LP that hasn't already been said? Powered by six Top Ten tracks (and there more songs which could probably do the same), Thriller crossed all cultural boundaries like no album since Steve Wonder's Songs in the Key of Life. Twenty million albums later and it's still showing no sign of letting up.

6. Billy Joel, An Innocent Man — A brief survey in seriousness on last year's The Nylon Curtain, Joel resurfaced with an LP dedicated to the music of the 60s with which he grew up. Songs like "The Longest Time," "Crisis Lee" and "Tell Her About It" sound like updated versions by Frankie Valli and the Four Seasons. It's a fun romp through the 60s.

7. Culture Club, Colour By Numbers — The follow up to last year's Kissing to Be Clever, this LP firmly establishes the band as the latest sweethearts of pop. The band's catchy mix of reggae and Motown and lead singer Boy George's mesmerizing voice make this LP irresistible.

8. The Police, Synchronicity — "Every Breath You Take," the band's tribute to an Orwellian vision of society in 1984 was a huge hit for the band but far from the LP's best track. Fortunately, audiences did not shy away from the LP's serious themes, which was good since this was the band's highest performance to date.

9. The Moody Blues, The Present — For some unknown reason, this LP died a quick death. A shame, considering the fact that their last LP was a No. 1 smash. This LP, with its

Top ten singles

1. Tears for Fears, "Pale Shelter" — The best track on the year's best LP. Haunting lyrics and a fine performer on acoustic guitar framed the lyrics to this paranoic love song. MTV played this for a while but this was the extent of this song's popularity here in the states.

2. U2, "Sunday Bloody Sunday" — One of the band's hardest rockers on their War LP, this song's reflection on the turmoil in the band's native country.

3. Big Country, "In a Big Country" — If you think that a chorus of bagpipes you're hearing throughout this song, listen again. The first single from one of the year's surprise debuts spotlights the guitar in one of the most effective ways in a long time. A good party tune, too.

4. The Pretenders, "Back on the Chain Gang" — The band could have fallen apart after the death of their guitarist but Chrissie Hynde and The Pretenders surprised everyone with this moving tribute to their departed band member.

5. Culture Club, "Karma Chameleon" — Transvestite aside, Boy George has the smoothest, bluesiest vocals around. This song even has a funky, danceable bass line to boot.

6. Michael Jackson, "Beat It" — I doubt producer Quincy Jones knew how significant Eddie Van Halen's guitar solo on this song would be, but it helped the song become one of the first by a black artist to crack FM airplay. One of the year's most significant singles.

7. Men at Work, "Down Under" — The calypso beat of this song was too irresistible to pass up. And to think that the record company almost passed up this group because they thought audiences weren't ready.

8. Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers, "Change of Heart" — Tom Petty doesn't have the strong cut vocals in rock but so what? One of the most appealing things about TP and the band is their unpredictability. This one is pure rock-n-roll, the way only they can play it.

9. Carly Simon, "Hello Big Man" — I've always liked Carly Simon's voice, hearing this only helped confirm my belief that she was and is still one of the best around. This one's tribute to her father. A video that accompanies the song is like a trip through the family album. This song hits the heart.

10. Journey, "Separate Ways" — I've always liked Carly Simon's voice, hearing this only helped confirm my belief that she was and still is one of the best around. This one's tribute to her father. A video that accompanies the song is like a trip through the family album. This song hits the heart.

Top three disappointments

1. Asia's Ages — A classic case of the sophomore jinx. Vocalist John Wetton took the group too far in the pop direction this time around and the results show in one of the stickiest efforts in recent memory. There is hope for the future, however; Wetton is no longer with the band and the group's single, "Pale Shelter," also ranked no. 1.

2. Stevie Nicks — What happened on The Wild Heart is a real mystery. After the semi-autobiographical Fall лидома, Nicks took off in a completely different direction. Arrangements were much more complicated this time out — from the extensive use of synthesizers on the LP to the pretentious string section on "Beauty and the Beast." In addition, her lyrics were at their most abstruse ever. Granted, Nicks has always lived in a fantasy world and at times has made sense to no one but herself, but she may have been too abstruse this time around.

3. Female lead singers — They may try to sound like Pat Benatar but ladies like Darby Mills and the lead singers of Toronto and Girlschool can't hold a note to save their life. There's a difference between screaming and singing — these women need a lesson.

It may be a new year, but if 1984 proves as successful as 1983, U2 will once again be high in Vic's albums and singles selections.

seconds later but could convert only one of the two shots. The Irish held the ball until Sluby saw the whole right side of the court open and made his break to the basket. He got the layup, fouled by Veal, and sank the free throw to complete the three point play. "We were just trying to milk the clock," said Sluby of Notre Dame's strategy in the final minute. "I really wanted to hold the ball a little longer so that if I missed they wouldn't have a chance to score, but once I saw the whole side open, I had to go to the basket."

"They probably thought we were going to slow it down and wait for the last shot with three seconds left." They outstaned us at the end," lamented a dejected Maryland coach Lelly Drewes afterward.

"The three of us ..." said Phelps, "concentrated our defense on them until they missed a free throw that would have tied the game at 59-59. Then we were able to break for the win.

"They cleared out a side and Sluby drove to the basket on a one-on-one and our other four guys just stood there and looked at him."

"When you clear out a side like that you know he's going to the hoop. We've seen that in the films. The whole team should have gone after him."

Barlow, who had 16 points in the game on perfect shooting (5-5 from the field and 6-6 from the line), and Tim Kempton each hit on both ends of a one-and-one situation as Maryland was forced to foul after Atkins missed a jumper. team's performance declined, suddenly found a groove. Taking advantage of her height — Evansville's tallest player was 5'9 — she pulled down a team-high nine rebounds and scored 16 points, also leading the team. Her six rebounds and 13 points in the second half alone was a major factor as the Irish pulled away.

The second-half surge came at exactly the time Notre Dame needed it. The pesky Aces had used the outside shooting and speed of their excellent guards, Shelly Brand and Barb Dykstra, to stay even, 35-35, through the first half. Brand poured in 16 and Dykstra added seven as Evansville forced Notre Dame into a fast-paced tempo.

Arkansas also lost for the second straight game. Dwayne McClain scored 20 points, including a tip-in with three seconds left, to pace Villanova over LSU, which dropped a second half burst for DePaul against UCLA. With the score 61-52, DePaul went on a 15-4 binge to take a 20-point lead, its biggest advantage of the game. Kenny Fields had 16 points for UCLA.

Frank James hit two free throws in overtime to help Nevada Las Vegas beat Fullerton State.

Ellen Winters scored 23 points and keyed a flurry of free throws in the fourth overtime period, carrying Illinois to its marathon victory over Marquette. The four overtimes were short of the Big Ten Conference's record of six overtime periods, set by Minnesota and Purdue in 1975.

Kerry Trotter's three-point play capped a Marquette comeback and the Warrins hit a 12 free throws in the final minute to upset Louis-vile. Trotter's play gave Marquette its first lead of the second half at 55-50 with 3:50 left in the game, and the Cardinals couldn't catch up.

"When the game is on the line, you have to stop the other team and we didn't," Louisville Coach Denny Crum said.

Melvin Turpin scored 18 points and grabbed nine rebounds, leading Kentucky past Georgia. The Wildcats scored 18 straight points in the second half, holding off Georgia for 10 and a half minutes with a tough zone defense.

Keith Lee broke out of a scoring slump with 22 points and grabbed 18 rebounds, leading Memphis over Oklahoma. Lee, a 6-foot-10 senior who had scored only four points in each of his last two games, outplayed Oklahoma All-American Wayman Tisdale, who was limited to 12 points.

Las VegasBeatFullertonState82-75 in overtime, seventh-ranked Houston beat Baylor 84-59, No. 8 Texas ElPaso beat New Mexico 60-59; No. 9 Illinois beat Michigan State 75-66 in four overtimes, No. 11 Oklahoma lost to No. 13 Memphis State 69-65, No. 17 Wake Forest beat No. 19 Virginia 84-76, and No. 20 Syracuse beat St. John's 78-74 in overtime.

Maryland becomes a Notre Dame moment

By JEFF BLUM

Call it a "Notre Dame moment." Call it an upset. Call it whatever you will. But most of all, call it the game that finally gave the 1983-84 Notre Dame basketball team some credibility.

It is the 52-47 triumph over Maryland Saturday, and the respectability that goes hand in hand with beating a No. 5 ranked team like the Terrapins is unmeasurable.

However, it's not time for joy in Mussville or talk of the NCAA Tournament. Although the win is big, let's not forget the heat of the game, the people and the strong basketball performance, the first of its kind over the Terps.

But, the Terp's star and leader, someone the senior swingman has emerged as the charity stripe. More importantly, Carolina, DePaul, Pitt, BYU, Marquette, and Dayton, and win at least a couple to have any hope of reaching the tournament still has not been the game for the Terps.

Now, the Terps are 3-4, and behind the likelihood of the second half, but instead 135 Veria's layup off a loose ball in the lane, the two seconds left gave the Terps their halftime lead.

Maryland, 13-5, jumped out to its second half lead of 52-29 as Jeff Adkins drove the length of the court for an uncontestered layup less than four minutes in. That was the last lead the Terps would know until just over three minutes left in the game, though.

Joeseph Dolan got a layup for the Irish, then followed his own miss of a Dolan midrange, and the Irish were back in the game at 53-52. Joseph Price grabbed the rebound of a Dolan missed shot and took it down court to hit a jumper and widen the Notre Dame lead to three points.

From that point on, the two teams traded baskets until Dolan hit a key 18 foot jumper with 1:48 to play to give the Irish a narrow 45-44 margin. Ben Coleman missed shot and took it back for the Terps was the final entry in the act of shooting by Moby 34.

Roundball Classic

Saint Mary's takes third place

By DAVE WILSON

In what was one of its finest basketball performances this season, Saint Mary's College scored a 70-62 victory over the University of Michigan-Dearborn Saturday, capturing third place in their own Roundball Classic, and halting a losing streak at three.

Paced by a season-high 19 points from senior forward Cyndy Short, the Belles averaged Friday's 86-61 setback to Marquette Janette College in the tournament's opening round. Purdue Calumet, the tournament's final entrant, claimed the championship trophy with a close 61-58 triumph over Moraine Valley on Saturday.

"We really needed the win," said a pleased Mike Ross, SCM head coach. "I guess the best part of the victory was in our ability to come back after Friday night's loss. To me, that's the mark of a successful team.""The Belles, who will compete against both Dearborn and Purdue again this season. Really-produced the team effort they have been looking for this season. Capitalizing on sloppy play by the opposing lady wolves, the Belles opened up an eight-point lead midway through the second quarter, and were ahead 35-26 at halftime.

"Our turnovers were not nearly the problem they usually are for us," commented assistant coach Jeff Roberts. "One more thing, we usually don't lose three straight games. But we were able to come back after Friday night's loss. To me, that's the mark of a successful team.""For Coach Mary DiStanislao's team. The team had been struggling badly heading into the game. Losing to Dist.
