Candidates for Senate disagree on alcohol, agree on finals policy

By BARBARA HARDIN News Staff

The two opponents for the District 1 Senate seat hold differing opinions about the administration's proposal to ban alcohol from campus.

St. Ed's junior Paul Healy states there definitely should not be a designated drinking area on campus. "Students at the University of Notre Dame should be responsible for themselves," he says. "The University shouldn't have to hold the hands of students and make their decisions for them not to drink, he continues. Freshman Doug Wurth states "there is not enough information" to take a position now. He says he hopes, however, that the student body will make the necessary adjustments whatever the decision is and that the decision will not reflect from the social aspects already present on campus.

With regards to the proposed final exam policy change, Healy presents his feelings that "after four years seniors deserve to and should be exempt from exams. As a member of the Special Committee for Academic Affairs, Wurth is an opponent of a final exam policy change also, protesting specifically the proposal that exams will comprise one-half to two-thirds of the final grade.

Service to the students is a primary concern for both Wurth and Healy in their campaigns, which will culminate in the election next Tuesday April 3. Both candidates agree availability and responsibility are important in serving their district. Healy has served on a wide range of committees this year, including the Student Senate Committee, Teacher's Evaluation Committee, the Student Transfer Committee and the Mardi Gras Committee. A government/ALPA major, he says he would work hard to provide the students with what they want to see happen. A native of Daytona Beach, Fl., he is sponsoring a spring break trip this year which he claims is $100 cheaper than the Student Union sponsored trip to Fort Lauderdale.

Wurth is President of the Freshman Advisory Council, a position which earns him a place on the Student Senate this year.

Wurth is a member of the senate, Wurth said he is "aware of the issues faced by this year's class" as well as others. "It's not that anything, thus, if elected senator, he will be well-informed.

However, some of his ideas haven't been received. "I think this year instigated a nursing home visitation program for his class in which there are approximately 100 freshmen participating. Wurth would like to involve his district in more service projects and improve some of the already existing ones himself.

The expansion of social space is something Wurth would like to help with. "You know like you would like to set up a lounge at a local community," Wurth explained. "I think I would like to set up a Learning Center Student Center renovated and the environment changed from a study area to one of student social interaction. He suggests transporting the television to the main area of LaFortune.

He would also like to establish a "dorm olympics" within his district and he would like to get a student or recent graduate on the board of trustees.

Wurth feels that too often freshmen are intimidated by the lack of power when they actually "fail to realize where the power is."

Lebowitz leaves crowd entertained

By JAMES JANSEN News Staff

Best-selling author Fran Lebowitz opened her humorous talk last night at Saint Mary's College by saying, "after being expelled from high school I decided to pass up both college and medical school."

Some of her targets included adolescence, algebra, smoking, and household pets. The talk included anecdotes from her latest book and a question and answer session with an enthusiastic audience.

Speaking about adolescence she said, "there is much mystery in it, you go through 12 years of cuteness and now you are a big fat girl or a boy who is short."

In regard to algebra she noted, "in real life there is no such thing as algebra," while later noting, "football in her eyes is algebra in motion."

"Smoking if not my life, it's my hobby. It makes growing up more worthwhile. She also said, "smoking is hazardous, downright dangerous, it leads to a fatal disease but at least they don't brag about it in the end."

"In some hospitals smoking is banned. Why? Everybody there is already sick. Smoking is part of being in public. The public is putting up with people's bad habits."

Some of her favorite anecdotes dealt with people themselves. Lebowitz observed, "today the average Joe is now like the average Jennifer, in more ways than one."

Lebowitz is now a senior on the board of trustees. "I never use think and Reagan in the same sentence."

Howdy Doody."

Concluding the informal talk Lebowitz opened it up to questions from the audience to a response to a question about her childhood, "I liked it but my parents didn't. I've spent my entire adulthood trying to get back to that state."

When questioned about President Reagan she said, "I wouldn't use think and Reagan in the same sentence. You can't hate him though, he looks so much like Hoagy Carmen."

The execution of a man sentenced to death for killing a U.S. Army chaplain shoveling his walk was halted Tuesday by a Marion County, Indiana, Criminal Court judge. Michael Daniels, 25, was sentenced to be executed Monday in the electric chair at the Indiana State Prison. Judge Patricia Gifford granted a defense motion to order a new trial for Daniels. Daniels was sentenced to death by electrocution by the Student Union of Notre Dame for Jan. 16, 1978, shooting death of a fellow student. — The Observer

Most bars and liquor stores would be prohibited from selling alcoholic beverages to anyone under 21 under a bill which has passed the House Energy and Commerce Committee. The bill uses the federal power to regulate interstate commerce to forbid an establishment which sells anything made in another state from selling alcohol to those under age. Presently 10 states have drinking ages lower than 21. The bill would not affect those bars and liquor stores which serve liquor made in the same state. During hearings on the idea, the Reagan administration opposed the bill. The White House prefers that states deal with the drinking age. A similar measure has been introduced in the Senate, but no hearings have been held. — AP

Ray Kroc and his Big Mac dream

Dinner at Notre Dame is a 4:30 phenomenon, and if those fry award winners ever began serving supper at 3, people probably would start lining up at 2:50 just to beat the crowds.

Ray Kroc never won an Ivy Award, but that didn't stop the high school dropout from realizing that people hate waiting. And before Kroc died last month, he had turned his dream of quick food into an $8 billion business known as McDonald's.

His business was offered with little more than an obituary in the inside pages of local newspapers, which some McDonald's managers tore out to hang next to the French fry machine.

But Kroc's impact on American dining deserves much more attention than any one person, Kroc changed what America — and much of the world — considers good manners in restaurant eating.

With the golden arches offering a 45 billion served, theoretically every person in the world has eaten at McDonald's at least 10 times.

Kroc's empire began in 1953 when he obtained the exclusive rights to the Prince Castle Multimixer, a contraption that could make up to six milk shakes at the same time.

Seventeen years later, Richard and Maurice McDonald of San Bernar dino, Calif. — operators of a clean, well lit, topped with golden arches — ordered eight Prince Castles to serve the hundreds of people clamoring for hamburgers and milk shakes.

Kroc persuaded the brothers to let him merchandise their operation nationwide, and on April 15, 1955, Des Plaines, Ill., became home to the first of what would become one of 7,500 McDonald’s in 32 nations. In 1963. Kroc bought out the brothers' interest for $2.7 million, borrowing the money at interest rates that eventually cost him $14 million.

McDonald's became a staple of American life in the 1970s, promising the so-called Mr. Generation that at least one restaurant did it all for you. Fast food had become a way of life, "slow" food in sit-down diners that sported jukeboxes had gone the way of the dinosaur.

Kroc was successful because he saw McDonald's as a rare art form. "It requires a certain kind of me to see beauty in a hamburger bun," Kroc writes in his autobiography, Grindin' It Out. "Yet it is any more unusual to find grace in the texture and softly curved silhouette of a bun than to reflect lovingly on the arrangement of textures and colors in a butterfly's wing."
As head of both departments, Fuchs sees a merger as a possibility. "One of the reasons I was appointed," said Fuchs, "is to explore the possibility of a merger." He said a merger will allow both departments to "utilize their human resources more efficiently." However, he also noted that curricular difficulties might develop and that he would not recommend a merger unless both departments assented.

Fuchs prated the work of both departments, such as insect biology in conjunction with the Vector Biology Laboratory, aquatic ecology, and parasitology.

Theologian begins lecture series

By FRANK LIPO

A new lecture series to be conducted by nationally renowned theologian Martin E. Marty will begin tomorrow night in the library auditorium.

Martin E. Marty, "perhaps the most preeminent authority on religion in the United States," is coming to Notre Dame to launch a new lecture series on religion and public life, said Professor Jay Dolan, director of the Cushwa Center for the Study of American Catholicism.

Marty's lecture, "Public, Political and Private Faith: Options for America," will be given tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the library auditorium.

Marty is a Lutheran minister with a national reputation as an ecumenist and historian of American religion. He is the author of several books, one of which, "Empirehouse WON the National Book Award in 1972."

He is presently the Fairfield M. Cone Distinguished Service Professor of the History of Modern Christianity at the University of Chicago, where he earned his Ph.D. in 1956. He is also working on a four-volume history entitled Modern American Religion.

Dolan said the new lecture series will examine the role of religion in public life. It will consist of approximately one lecture a year. Marty, "a recognized nationally known scholar and lecturer," will open the series by examining the public and political issues of our society, such as poverty, unemployment and nuclear weaponry. He will relate these to matters of public faith. Marty will also examine American religious trends in both public and private life. He will discuss the religious options we present as Americans to our public, political and private lives. Marty will also look at purely private and individual religion versus religion in the sphere of public life.

The lecture is open to the public and admission is free. A reception with Marty will follow the lecture.

Lent offers SMC a chance to fast

By KEITH E. HARRISON

Many Saint Mary's students will skip lunch once a week for the six weeks of Lent this year as part of Saint Mary's World Hunger Coalition's Wednesday Luncheon Fast.

"We don't eat lunch on Wednesday during Lent," said Jacques Miech, head coordinator of the group. "Then Sage Food Service donates a certain amount of money for each person passing in the fast."

This is the second year for the Lenten Luncheon Fast. Last year, we were able to raise $1,000, and we hope to top that this year," said Miech.

Although formal permission and specific dollar figures have yet to be announced by the food service, the hunger coalition has announced sign-up days for the fast. Registration for the fast will take place Monday, Feb. 27, through Wednesday, Feb. 29 in the canteen.

Wednesday Fast coordinator Rosy Moluch, head coordinator of the World Hunger Coalition, said, "...last year we sent money to a Bangladesh hunger collection, the Emergency Relief Fund in South Bend, and several projects sponsored by the Sisters of the Holy Cross. The amount of this year's funds will be decided after Easter, according to Drake.

The Wednesday Luncheon Fast is the second major project of the year for the Saint Mary's World Hunger Coalition. Last November they sponsored Saint Mary's participation in the International Ordeal Fast.

defois lectures to study religion

By JOHN NEBLO

"We need to build a strategy for peace together," concluded Father Gerard Defois in his lecture "Peace Movements and U.S. Nuclear Policy." Defois, professor of sociology at the Institute Catholique de Paris, was one of the main authors of the peace statement of the French Bishop's recent declaration on nuclear war and disarmament.

According to Defois, the peace movement cannot be examined accurately outside the context of the socio-economic conditions in which it was born. He maintained that Europe has undergone a series of crises which have left the European communities dispirited and confused. Defois stated that the economic recession of the 1980's had a particularly severe affect on a European society which had come to identify itself with economic prosperity.

In addition, Europe faces every day the reality of a huge Soviet army just miles away. According to Defois, the immencity of the Soviet threat puts East-West conflict in a different perspective for Europeans. They feel that Soviet-American relations determine their fate, and that they have no control over the decisions which will affect their lives.

Defois said that the European peace movements are a reaction to this fear and confusion. He referred to many of the movements as a manifestation of "moral indignation" and suggested that many offer no alternative programs.

Defois concluded by saying that Europe must first decide "what they want to defend and what kind of peace they want to establish."

Defois will give a lecture today at noon at the Center for Social Concerns discussing the differences between the American Bishop's pastoral letter and that of the French Bishop."
Marines to redeploy from airport to ships

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Triumphant Moslem rebels in command of west Beirut declared a cease-fire yesterday in their six-day war with the Lebanese army and said they were withdrawing from the city's devastated streets.

President Reagan, vacationing in California, announced that U.S. Marines would be moved from their beleaguered positions at Beirut's international airport to warships operating along the Lebanese coast. He said the redeployment of the 1,600 Marines "will begin shortly and proceed in stages."

A Christian militia commander, Fadi Frem, called on his fighters to confront the Moslem-leftist challenge. Declaring, "We will see them at the battlefield." But no major new clashes were reported.

The future of Lebanon's Christian president, the U.S-backed Amin Gemayel, hung in the balance, his army weakened by Moslem defections.

Off Beirut, the five-inch guns of the mighty U.S. battleship New Jersey loomed to life at midday yesterday, shelling what was believed to be a rebel position after the U.S. Marine base at the airport again came under fire. One Marine was wounded.

In west Beirut, 39 employees and dependents of the U.S. Embassy were airlifted out by helicopter because of "the current untenable situation," a Marine spokesman said. State Department officials in Washington said the evacuees, considered non-essential for the embassy's operation, were taken to a 6th Fleet ship for later transfer to Cyprus. Thirty-six U.S. Embassy personnel remained in Beirut, they said.

Two U.S. warships — the carrier Independence and destroyer Ecker — cut short a port call in Turkey and were steaming back to rejoin the flotilla off Lebanon.

The new explosion of fighting, which began last Thursday and climaxed Monday with the rebel takeover of Moslem west Beirut, has put the multinational Beirut peacekeeping troops in a difficult position — cut off from the Lebanese government they are here to support.

One French soldier was killed and at least 15 other members of the multinational force were wounded — including two Marines — in the fighting Monday and yesterday. About 200 Lebanese were reported killed and more than 260 wounded in the six days of fighting, police said.

Reagan on Monday reaffirmed U.S. support for Gemayel and blamed the violence on Syria, which backs anti-Gemayel forces. Western governments repeatedly represented in the Beirut peacekeeping force — the United States, France, Italy and Britain — were consulting urgently yesterday on "what our mission should be."

U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz told reporters traveling with him from Brazil to Grenada that public pressure was mounting in Britain and Italy for a withdrawal of those countries' forces from Lebanon, and in Washington House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. called again for a pullout of the Marines.

Premiers Francois Mitterrand of France and Bettino Craxi of Italy suggested that U.N. peacekeepers take over the Beirut duties.

The sound of small arms fire and rocket-propelled grenades could be heard coming from the port area yesterday. The army and Christian militiamen also still fought near a crossing point between east and west Beirut. But artillery shelling from both sides broke off in mid-afternoon, amid a heavy rain, a Western military source reported.

Berti and Jumblatt called on their forces to observe a 2:15 p.m. cease-fire, and the Lebanese army command said it would join in the truce. But gunfire continued beyond the deadline, though it was less intense.

Phalangist militiamen had fought alongside army troops as they were routed from west Beirut Monday.

At Beirut airport, Marine spokes­man Maj. Dennis Brooks said the Marines came under fire before noon from mortars, and the battleship New Jersey fired its five-inch guns at the source of fire — he did not specify whether the attackers were Druse or Shiites.

The Marines came under fire again at 11:35 a.m. he said, and one was wounded, seriously enough to be taken by helicopter for treatment aboard the amphibious assault ship Guam. Another Marine had been wounded Monday.

An Italian communique said three Italian soldiers were wounded by stray bullets at their base in south Beirut Monday, bringing to 11 the number of Italians wounded in two days.

The U.S. special Mideast envoy, Donald Rumsfeld, met with Gemayel for two hours yesterday.
Abortion choice

Dear Editor,

This letter is in response to the letter written by Brian Groot on Feb. 2, 1984. Since the Roe v. Wade decision, abortion is a choice women can make. In certain cases, such as rape or incest, the trauma and shame contribute to the choice to abort. The fetus inside the woman is not a result of her promissory behavior, but it is a direct result of a violent, degrading action taken against her.

How can any woman want to love a child brought about by such unlavishing circumstances? The trauma of a rape or an incestuous experience is enough to live with, without carrying a fetus, a constant reminder of the episode to full term.

If a woman were to carry such a fetus to full term, does she give it up for adoption or wonder if she will want to find its natural mother someday and show up on her doorstep? In the event of an accidental pregnancy, the choice to abort or not to abort is the choice of the woman. The woman should be informed of all the options: keeping the baby, putting the baby up for adoption, or abortion. Once informed, the woman can weigh the options in her mind and arrive at the most acceptable solution. The only person who must defend the action is the woman. She alone has the choice, and she alone has the responsibility for her actions. If others feel she is morally wrong and will burn in hell, they are entitled to their opinion, but shouldn't dictate their beliefs upon her.

Those people who can and will opt for no abortion, that is their choice. Roe v. Wade gives women a choice. That choice should not be revoked.

Dear Miss Manners — I have been divorced for two years and have not lived with my former husband for four years. We are not close and have communicated infrequently.

In October, he called to ask if I wanted the dog and cat, since he was planning to move to the South. I declined the offer, gently reminding him that he had kept the pets against my wishes and that apartment living would not be suitable for suburban pets.

Last week, I received a printed announcement of his marriage. I believe this is an appropriate time to extend my best wishes to the couple. Do you have any advice on how to do this or should I simply ignore the whole thing?

— Miss Manners — Not died of embarrassment, that is for sure. Neither would Miss Manners have committed the gross error of telling a gentleman what he was "supposed" to do (although she might have said pleasantly, "I think he wants to make sure the wine hasn't gone bad before he poses the rest.") Miss Manners is far more interested in the feelings of gentlemen than she is in what impression they may take upon waiters, which may explain why she has so much experience with "finer dining.

Dear Miss Manners — Last night I had the unfortunate experience of dining with a gentleman who had absolutely no experience at "finer dining." When the menu d' brought out wine, he poured a small amount of champagne into his wine glass, of course, for approval of the wine. My date embarrassedly told the waiter, "Don't be stingy, fill it up," I then had to tell him (in front of the waiter) that he was supposed to taste it and give his approval. Did I do the right thing? I was totally embarrassed, as was the waiter. Would you have done the same?

— Gentle Reader — Not died of embarrassment, that is for sure. Dear Miss Manners — You may remember the letter I wrote about the March of Dimes that I received 13 years after it was posted (I've been happily married for 8 years) and the mental gymnastics I went through deciding how to respond to Richard's griping.

You called my bluff on that one, Miss Manners. It's true that the confusion I felt came not from the etiquette problem of social kissing, but a moral one. I am going to act on the way that I feel. I thought about it long and hard, Miss Manners. But then I did act.

The friendship that Richard and I took up again has since matured, and we have communicated infrequently. What a shock that the way it is.

Dear Miss Manners — For example, I'm more considerate of my husband than I was one. For example, I'm more considerate of my husband than I was. She will only go so far as to agree with you that if you have told me that you don't want to get married, I would not have gotten married.

— Gentle Reader — Certainlly not with a gift. I considered writing "tacky, tacky, tacky" across the announcement and returning it. Silence may be most appropriate but hardly emotionally satisfying. You might be interested to know that I was wise tribe, and she is wise quare.

DePaul loses to St. Joe’s

Just think of it. This Saturday, the second weekend of the season, DePaul Blue Demons would visit the ACC where the Irish would give them their first All-American and jump into the Top 20. If that is what Ray Meyer was imagining, forget it. St. Joseph’s (Pa.) beat the Irish in the punch last night by jumping into the Top 20, before losing to the Paladins in Philadelphia.

Whether or not Ray Meyer’s squad was looking ahead to Notre Dame is unknown, but the loss means that an angry Fighting Irish team will visit the ACC, making Digger Phelps’ job that much harder.

Meanwhile, Phelps can only hope the same fate will not lie in store for his DePaul team. As Phelps heads to the Meadowlands in East Rutherford, N.J., champions are already jockeying for position. More details on both games will follow this week.

Irish defeat overmatched Belles

By MARY SIEGER

Sports Writer

It was a loud and enthusiastic crowd that assembled to watch the Notre Dame women's swim team defeat the Saint Mary's Belles, 84-38, last night in the Rockne Memorial Pool.

The Irish took first place in every event except the 100-yard backstroke, which was won by Billy Hall of Illinois State, setting a new ACC record.

For more on the game, see Mike Batters's story on page 12.

"We're not too disappointed, because they're scholarship schools," said McCaffery.

Freshmen Suzanne Devine and Monica Walker established several new varsity records at Bowling Green, and Mark 13-5 record with the results of the meet.

The Belles rely on good outside shooting and strong bench play.

Center Marta Maupin has taken up a good deal of the slack after the loss of Brian. The 6-2 junior does not see much action against the Irish last year, but she is averaging almost 15 points a game this season, so Notre Dame must keep her away from the basket as much as possible.

Maupin is not the only person that must be stopped. Senior forward Dawn Halley has been scoring more than 14 points each game, making her one of four Redbirds scoring in double figures. Cathy Beesley, the other forward, leads the team in assists and steals, as well as scoring 17 points a game.

The backcourt tandem of Vicki Vaughan and Tammy Turner provide most of the outside shooting, averaging more than 20 points a game between them. They get little help off the bench from freshmen Lisa Brunin. But they generally play most of the game without rest.

If Notre Dame is a major weakness on the Redbird team, it is their lack of depth. Maupin, Halley, Beesley, Vaughan, and Turner play nearly the entire game. Jill Hutchison and Fischer have been the mainstays of the five.

"On paper, they don't have a great deal of depth," explains DiStanislao, "but their players are great athletes who can play for 40 minutes."
Fencers take three over weekend

By MICHAEL J. CHIMIEL
Sports Writer

Over the past weekend, the Notre Dame men's fencing team increased its record to 11-2 and the women's team improved its record to 9-2 as both teams were undefeated in Angola.

The men, who kept a winning streak that currently is the longest in the nation undefeated in their last 19 meets, dominated Washington & Lee, 25-2, Tri-State, 24-3, and Cleveland State, 21-6.

In the saber, the Irish have boosted their record to 10-1-4. Junior Brian St. Clair, who went 5-0 on Saturday (26-1 on the season), improved his lifetime record to 10-2-2. His average victory percentage (83.3%) places him fifth on the all-time fencing list.

Sophomore John Edwards continued his unbroken streak over the weekend as he improved his season mark to 20-0.

Presently all sabre men on the Irish squad have records at or above the 500 mark (Don Johnson, 17-4; Kevin Stoufer, 15-3; Tony Convall, 12-9; Mike Dyson, 8-1, and Sean Reardon, 2-1). Junior captain Andy Quarnstrom (23-1 on the season) led the epee squad to a 22-5 mowing of the three Irish opponents on Saturday. Quarnstrom, who is 40-15 lifetime (.690) is currently fourth on the all-time Irish epee list.

The young epeeists have been gaining confidence and notability while winning consistently. Led by sophomore Brian St. Clair (18-5, 4-0 over the season) and freshman John Haugh (16-2, 4-1 over the weekend) the squad has improved its record to 9-2.

"Our young fencers have made us a good team," commented Toth-Fejel. "They also beat Tri-State, 13-3, and Cleveland, Ohio, who are traveling to Illinois today.

In the foil, the Irish have been spectacular in the foil (and epee) as Mikal VanderVelden has been consistent," commented DeCicco. "I can't say enough about the saber squad. We have talented starters and tremendous depth. The sabre squad could be as good as any in the country.

The women's squad undefeated in its last 5 meets, dominated Wisconsin-Parkside with more touches scored. They also beat Tri-State, 15-3, and Cleveland State, 9-7.

Freshman Pia Albertson leads the squad with a 19-2 record (5-1 over the weekend).

Also impressive have been senior co-captains Sharon DiNicola (16-11, 4-2) and Mary Shills (14-9, 3-2) sophomore Janet Sullivan (14-7, 2-1) and freshman Cindy Wecks (10-4, 3-1). Saturday the Irish men will return home after three consecutive meets on the road to face Chicago, Detroit, Ohio State, Purdue, Case Western Reserve, Washington and the defending national champs, Wayne State.

"We've been building all season long toward this meet with Wayne State," commented DeCicco. "We're fencing well right now and I believe that we'll give them all the competition they want."

The meet will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday in the Fieldhouse at the Notre Dame Athletic and Convocation Center.

The Notre Dame hockey team will be counting on a strong effort tonight from Brodsky as the Irish try to avenge the only loss of their season against Lake Forest. For more on the game, which will start at 7:30 in the ACC, see Ed Domansky’s story below:

Tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the ACC, the Notre Dame hockey team will be counting on a strong effort from Brodsky as the Irish try to avenge the only loss of their season against Lake Forest.

The Irish proved last weekend that any time they go on the road, it’s an important, and sometimes very difficult, task. The Irish prepared to bid Regionals farewell as they played St. John’s, St. Joseph’s, and St. John’s University.

"I’m not totally unhappy with the way things are going now, but this week is a good chance to put it together," said Dittman. "We play very good Illinois State and Valparaiso teams this week so it’s a very important week." The Irish would like to get back on the winning track after losing a tough game at Michigan State, 71-64.

Injuries a factor

Chicago Tribune

By JOE BRUNETTI
Sports Writer

Injuries have been a factor in the Notre Dame women’s basketball team last season, it was Notre Dame’s excelling 48-47 win over Illinois State at Normal, Ill. When LaTia Doughtery hit a jumper from the foul line with less than ten seconds remaining in the game, the Irish got the big boost they needed to help them win their last seven league opponents since the loss of Marquette this past weekend and Iowa State the weekend before. In the last four games, Notre Dame had only one win, but if it could have held on to its 14-1 record, it would have improved its opposition by a 24-13 margin.

"Once the loss we’ve realized that we must always be ready to play," says co-captain Brent Chapman. "We’re really looking forward to playing Lake Forest again so that we can show them who is the better team.

Lake Forest comes to tonight’s contest with a somewhat deceiving 8-1 record. The Foresters are a respected Division II power with an aggressive style of play that makes them a tough obstacle for any opponent.

Back in December, the Irish took over 52.5 victories from Lake Forest in a home-and-home series. Notre Dame currently holds a 6-1 advantage in the string of meetings between the schools that dates back to the 1969 season.

"Lake Forest has a fine team," says Head Coach Lely Smith. "And if we don’t become a bit too lackadaisical so we’ve been working on forestalling their defensive playway.

In a lineup change for Notre Dame, Tom Kelly moves up to play right wing on the first line with Chapman and Adam Parsons. Mike Metzler is now at right wing on the second line with Jeffradfolder and Steve Ely.

In a defensive switch, Mark Benning and Tony Bonadio will now make one pair, while Greg Duncan will skate with Rob Ricci.

Tim Lukanick is listed as the probable starter in the Irish goal. He has 2-50 goals against and a 10-1-0 record on the season.

Irish prepared to bid ‘The Coach’ farewell

Irish Items

Hello again, everybody!

This week is “showtime” for Digger Phelps and the Fighting Irish as they will play two games before important audiences. Tomorrow night, the Irish make the first of two visits to the New York area as they take on Rutgers at the Meadowlands. Then, on Saturday afternoon, 2:00 will be the clash between the Irish and Ray Meyer’s second-ranked DePaul Blue Demons.

How important is this week for the Irish cagers? Well, while the trip to the New York area may not carry as much weight as it did in the era before college basketball inundated the networks, an impressive win over the Rutgers in front of the New York writing staff would hurt the Irish in their search for an NCAA bid. Of course, with the nation’s eyes focused on Notre Dame on Saturday, a win over the Blue Demons would really impress the tournament committee. So, in answer to the question, this week is extremely important, and Phelps will have the Irish ready.

"The Coach" Bids Adieu...

...Unless you have been out of the country for a while, you have undoubtedly heard this will be the final year of coaching for DePaul mentor Ray Meyer. The 70-year old Meyer has compiled a 714-352 record, giving him more wins than any other major college coach.

Countless tributes to Meyer have already been made, and they have been composed much better than anything that could be said in this space. To DePaul fans, however, it would be inappropriate to bid him a fond farewell when his name is announced prior to Saturday afternoon play.

Regarding Rutgers...Coaching Young’s Scarlet Knights are a small and young club — two factors which don’t help much when you’re playing top-ranked teams. This week, the Knights, who are 13-9 this season, battled the Irish last year, the Knights compiled a 23-8 mark, but the record has dipped to 8-11 this season.

Nevertheless, Rutgers could give the Irish some problems. Junior guard John Blaze is a dangerous player, averaging 21.1 points a contest, and could give Notre Dame fits. Backcourt mate Brian Ellerbe and forward Charley Bently also hover near the double figure plateau and will have to be contained.

Overall, the size and depth of Notre Dame should prevail, but the Irish proved last weekend that any time they go on the road, it’s an adventure. A key factor in the Irish being 0-5 this year in the Meadowlands, and he badly wants to break that string this year.

Hopefully, the Irish will not be outdistanced by the Scarlet Knights and the Blue Demons.

Demon Doings...

...This is stop number three in what Meyer calls “Holy Week” for his DePaul team, as they play St. John’s (Pa.), Notre Dame, and Loyola in an 11-day stretch. With the talent on his team, though, Meyer hasn’t had to spend a lot of time at the bench. True, DePaul has not played well every time they’ve taken the floor, but they have just lost their first game last night to St. Joe’s. The 17-1 Blue Demons love to run, and the man who makes them go is Kenny Patterson. Patterson, whose 50-foot bucket at the buzzer the Irish last year, runs the attack from the point and has plenty of fine folks to whom he can dish off his assists. One of those players is 6-6 forward Tyroner Genbo, who leads the team in scoring with a 14.0 average. Other Demons to watch are explosive forward Kevin Holmes, and talented freshman Dallas Comegys, who comes off the bench to swat shots into pep band tubas.

This team always looks like they go for a look at the program with the score in the 60’s or 50’s. The Irish will have to play a good game, but maybe Digger can find one more “moment” to give the fans. Irish Ache...Skip Meyer straining room looks like he took out a branch office of the infirmary. The Irish are feeling some of the aches and pains that go with a 17-1 record. The man with the aches and pains against Vermont. Tim Keegan has an injury to his ribs (that’s a bone in the lower leg for those of us who aren’t pre-med), and the Irish staff is being careful not to have him turn it into a stress fracture. Meanwhile, John Buchanan continues to be plagued by tendinitis, and Jim Dolan is hampered by his big toe.

Pick of the Week...Engulfed...Yes, folks, this week’s pick involves the home team in this blog as the Rover’s coach Mike DeGuio’s Irish fencers will play host to six teams including defending national champion Wayne State in a meet beginning at 9:00 a.m. in the main building of the ACC.

For those of you who have never seen a fencing meet, it will not involve a bunch of folks who look like Errol Flynn running around and jumping on furniture. This is a sport that involves great precision, and the Wayne State Terrapins (that’s what they’re called) and the Irish are two of the best squads in collegiate fencing.

As mentioned earlier, the action starts at 9:00 a.m., but if you want to see the Irish put their 19-10-0 winning streak on the line against Wayne State, that match will take place at 7:30 p.m., after the DePaul game. Come on out to the ACC Fieldhouse and (are you ready for this?) watch the men try to make Tarzan
