More than 2,000 students gathered in front of the administration building Friday afternoon as student leaders rallied the support of their fellow students in favor of their rights at Notre Dame. (Students along with faculty, administrators, priests, doctors, psychologists, lawyers, and alumni have voiced their displeasure with the alcohol policy in an ineffective solution and one which was lacking in student input, said Staff Body President Bob Bertino.)

Freshman Dan O'Brien, one of the initiators of the protests to the new policy, explained, "Notre Dame has arrived. We've finally made it to the 1960s -- now we're only 20 years behind the times." O'Brien accused us to stand up for others' rights, speak out against nuclear arms, protest abortion, and fight to end world hunger. Then these same people must allow us the chance to speak for ourselves." O'Brien also expressed an deep concern among students against the new exam policy, the attempt to close down dorm food sales, elimination of the Irish Wake and Polish wedding and limiting the number of occupants in a student's room.

"How can we be a university of leaders if our mentors expect us to be followers?" said O'Brien. "We will not stand silent while they make student life worse than it already is." Following O'Brien to the podium was former student senator Dave McAvoy. McAvoy, a key speaker in last week's rally, explained the issue at hand is a student rights.

"Our basic right to assemble is being violated. I can think of no greater oppression," said McAvoy also alluded to a proposal that would give the student-free Campus Life Council power to override administrative vetoes and pass student policy by a two-thirds vote. According to McAvoy, however, the administration rejected this option. "They don't want us to have a vote on student policy," said the senator.

Junior Tom O'Leary, this year's Mock Convention Chairman, believes Notre Dame social life is being threatened by the administration.

"Social life is more than just beer," explained O'Leary. "It's copying the company of more than four people at a time." Former Student Body President Brian Callaghan also believes in a strong social life and he wants to see it as part with Notre Dame's strong academic life.

Callaghan, however, discouraged violent and childish acts. "The Chicago Tribune blasted us last week," explained the former president, "but as long as we can show that we are a close bunch of students, we can be proud of ourselves." Callaghan believes the university has a responsibility to educate its students outside, as well as inside, the classroom. He advocates expansion of the roles of the 30s and recents along with help from the administration.

"We need a new student center," said Callaghan. "We need facilities to carry on a healthy social life." Callaghan also called for a new commercialized student district with restaurants and shops within walking distance of the campus, an undergraduate club and open senior bar on a non-alcoholic basis, and a place to meet in student areas for those times.

"Life is being threatened by the administration," said Callaghan.

"We want to see students put up for others' rights, speak out against nuclear arms, protest abortion, and fight to end world hunger. Then these same people must allow us the chance to speak for ourselves."}

"How can we be a university of leaders if our mentors expect us to be followers?" said O'Brien. "We will not stand silent while they make student life worse than it already is." Following O'Brien to the podium was former student senator Dave McAvoy. McAvoy, a key speaker in last week's rally, explained the issue at hand is a student rights.

"Our basic right to assemble is being violated. I can think of no greater oppression," said McAvoy also alluded to a proposal that would give the student-free Campus Life Council power to override administrative vetoes and pass student policy by a two-thirds vote. According to McAvoy, however, the administration rejected this option. "They don't want us to have a vote on student policy," said the senator.

Junior Tom O'Leary, this year's Mock Convention Chairman, believes Notre Dame social life is being threatened by the administration.

"Social life is more than just beer," explained O'Leary. "It's copying the company of more than four people at a time." Former Student Body President Brian Callaghan also believes in a strong social life and he wants to see it as part with Notre Dame's strong academic life.

Callaghan, however, discouraged violent and childish acts. "The Chicago Tribune blasted us last week," explained the former president, "but as long as we can show that we are a close bunch of students, we can be proud of ourselves." Callaghan believes the university has a responsibility to educate its students outside, as well as inside, the classroom. He advocates expansion of the roles of the 30s and recents along with help from the administration.

"We need a new student center," said Callaghan. "We need facilities to carry on a healthy social life." Callaghan also called for a new commercialized student district with restaurants and shops within walking distance of the campus, an undergraduate club and open senior bar on a non-alcoholic basis, and a place to meet in student areas for those times.

"Life is being threatened by the administration," said Callaghan.

"We want to see students put up for others' rights, speak out against nuclear arms, protest abortion, and fight to end world hunger. Then these same people must allow us the chance to speak for ourselves."
In Brief

Gary Hart campaigned among the large Hispanic population in Los Angeles and Texas yesterday while labor leader Lane Kirkland blanketed the Colorado senator for gauging Walter F. Mondale into returning money contributed indirectly to his campaign by labor policy disablers. King asked Kirkland whether he is suggesting there is a double standard somewhere in the Constitution — one for sitting senators and another for presidential candidates that punish the one but not the other? The Rev. Jesse Jackson was campaigning in Ohio and Indiana — states with May 8 primaries — and Mondale was in Washington meeting with delegates pledged to him in the District of Columbia's May 1 primary. — AP

The Senate has moved barely an inch since Tuesday, when it first took up the three-year, $14.4 billion deficit-reduction package supported by President Reagan. Cuts in federal programs are politically sensitive in a year in which one-third of the seats in the Senate are up for grabs. With some 58 amendments still pending, it seems likely the Senate will spread this entire week on the bill. The Reagan plan for deficit growth grows each year by more than 7 percent above the rate of inflation. It would freeze most discretionary spending in 1984 and cut it by the rate of inflation in 1985. It would not touch Social Security and other guaranteed-payment benefit programs. The $14.4 billion plan includes a $4.7 billion tax increase already approved. Debate this week likely will center on a bipartisan effort by Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., Joseph Biden, D-Del., Gary Hart, D-Colo., John Glenn, D-Ohio, and Deneen B. Borelli, D-N.Y., to freeze all federal spending across the board for a year. Sponsors claim the measure would reduce the deficit about $2.5 billion more than the administration plan. — AP

The United States secured a new nuclear cooperation agreement with China on Monday, launching a new dimension of peaceful cooperation between the two nations. The move increased the international importance of the United States in the past three years in the making, that opens the door for the sale of U.S. nuclear energy sales to China. Before his departure for Shanghai and Beijing, President Reagan termed "a new dimension of peaceful cooperation" between the two nations. Reagan said in remarks prepared for delivery at the signing ceremony in the Great Hall of the People, "Our agreement is based on our shared desire to prevent the dimension of peaceful cooperation to our relationship." Although differences over Taiwan cast a shadow over the president's visit, Reagan's last act in Peking was to sign agreements ending a year-long chill in cultural relations and averting double taxation for U.S. firms operating in China. — AP

Of Interest

A letter to all students stressing the course of action to be taken regarding the alcohol policy will be distributed tonight throughout all the dorms. Students are requested to sign this letter which asks them to support the efforts of student government and return it by tomorrow night in their respective halls. Student government representatives will present them at the Campus Life Council meeting Wednesday as a sign of student support. — The Observer

Weather

Watch your head! A chance of severe thunderstorms is possible today. Temperatures will be cool with a high of 55. — The Observer

Final exams: Another issue to protest?

Lately the campus has been in an uproar over the new alcohol policy. Notre Dame is absorbed in banners, freezruckers, sit-ins and rallies Amid they protest and the administration's "no option" administration, another example of paternalism has been largely overlooked — the new final exam policy, passed on April 10 by the Academic Council.

The passage of the exam policy just before the new rules on alcohol indicates a brilliant sense of timing. Surely if it hadn't been for the "double whammy" students were being subjected to, there would have been an energetic battle against the council's decision. As it is, exams have taken a back seat to alcohol. Students can no longer afford to ignore this issue and expect to test well, while simply attending a very bad day. From now on they will often be judged less on the accumulated work of a semester, which averages out over time, and more on a chaotically, two-hour-test pressure. One day should not have such an unbalanced influence on the evaluation of an entire semester, and many teachers, those who up to now have scrapped finals or made them non-cumulative, feel it should have very little. Sensible exceptions are a long-standing and time-honored tradition at the University. They have now been taken away for no obvious reason other than that exams are "important." This change will cause a multitude of problems and in conveniences for future seniors. The end of senior year is one of the busiest annals of people's lives. Many have MCAT, LSAT, GMAT, or GREs to worry about, as well as job applications and worrying about where to go. Final exams will indeed be a heavy and unnecessary burden.

The justification for all these changes appears weak, if nonexistent. Notre Dame simply trying to enhance its academic prestige, in fact, ineffective ways, at the expense of fairness to students. The student body President Rob Bertino agreed that any appeal would be worthless. But the same was said of the alcohol directives, which are even now being revised. Students must at least examine the worth of the new policy, which has been out of the limelight so far, for they make their opinions heard to an administration which would be much more comforting making policy with out the annoying objections of its students.

COUNSELING
A service to the ND community

COUNSELING IS AVAILABLE BY APPOINTMENT ONLY

239-7793
HOURS: 9-5 Monday-Thurs. (April 30-May 2) in the Student Activities Center

Applications due Thurs., May 3 by 5pm

Another issue to protest?

Counseling is a comprehensive, confidential service offered by licensed professionals at the Psychological Services Center. We are here to help you cope with the stresses of college and beyond. Counseling services are available for students with personal, academic, or vocational concerns. All information is kept confidential, and your name will not appear on any counseling record. A counselor will help you clarify issues and help you decide on possible solutions to your problems.

Counseling is a comprehensive, confidential service offered by licensed professionals at the Psychological Services Center. We are here to help you cope with the stresses of college and beyond. Counseling services are available for students with personal, academic, or vocational concerns. All information is kept confidential, and your name will not appear on any counseling record. A counselor will help you clarify issues and help you decide on possible solutions to your problems.

KITCHEN STAFF APPLICATIONS

Applications due Thurs., May 3 by 5pm

Applications due Thurs., May 3 by 5pm

Counseling is available to the students at the Psychological Services Center. We are here to help you cope with the stresses of college and beyond. Counseling services are available for students with personal, academic, or vocational concerns. All information is kept confidential, and your name will not appear on any counseling record. A counselor will help you clarify issues and help you decide on possible solutions to your problems.
Monday, April 30, 1984 — page 3

Tea or Coffee

"Got to tell somebody!"

MAL I N I F U N D C O L L E C T I O N C O N T I N U E S

By PAT SAIN
Senior Staff Reporter

More than 100 hours of Shakespeare's plays have been read during the past week to raise money for Adam Milani, a high school senior critically injured in a hockey game on December 9.

Milani is the son of accounting Professor Kenneth Milani and Joan Milani. Pre-Ca's coordination, for Campus Ministry. He has been undergoing physical therapy at the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago since the accident. Milani was injured in a hockey game against Culver Military Academy when he went after a puck and was knocked down against a ledge inside the rink. The impact crushed a vertebra in his neck, leaving him without movement from the chest down.

Milani, a senior at St. Joseph's High School, plans to attend Notre Dame next year. He has been named a National Merit Finalist, and a Notre Dame Scholar. Currently, he is finishing one course he needs to graduate.

Money raised by the Shakespeare marathon will be used to help pay for therapy, two wheelchairs, a modified van, and an addition to the first floor of the Milani house.

In an interview with the South Bend Tribune in February, Milani said: "I'm working on things like brushing my own teeth, brushing my own hair... mainly fine motor skills." He is also practicing using tools for writing and typing.

The physical therapy lasts three hours a day. Professor Milani said, and emphasizes strength and balance. "He can now transfer himself from his wheelchair to his bed," Milani said.

"The Shakespeare reading is an outpouring of affection and love, it would be impossible to thank everybody involved," Milani said. "We want to extend our appreciation to everyone involved."

Spinal cord research is still in its infancy, said Milani. "There is still hope that some of the techniques that will be perfected in the next few years will be of benefit to Adam," he said. "Along with the technology and techniques there is the Maker, also."

Milani plans to live in St. Edward's Hall on campus next year, where his brother Michael lives. An advantage of St. Ed's, Milani said, is that renovation is almost complete. The last four years ago made most of the building accessible to handicapped people... such as an automated front door, are still being proposed to student housing.

Money raised by the Shakespeare marathon will be put in the Adam Milani Fund to help pay for his therapy and manual and electric wheelchairs. The electric chair will be used by Milani to go to classes.

The money will also help buy a modified van with an extended roof and a lift for Milani's wheelchair. Professor Milani. The van will eventually be modified so his son can drive.

The Fund will also offset the cost of an addition to the Milani house for Adam.

CILAs can be given to the Bethany Guild/Adam Milani Fund at Sacred Heart Parish.

ATTENTION SENIORS

Senior Formal candidis will be on display TODAY in the North Dining Hall from 4:30-6:30 and TUESDAY, MAY 1, in the South Dining Hall 4:30-6:30 and in LeMan's Hall at SMC from 7-9 P.M.

PAY WHEN ORDERING-$1.85

THE OLD HOUSE PIZZERIA & PUB

"BRUNOS"

TUESDAY, MAY 1

11:30-1:30

Alicia Garcia invites you to a Spanish LUNCH at the Center for Social Concerns

Ensalada Pan Salad Bread
Carbonada Macedonia Vegetable Soup
Te-Cafe Dessert
Cost: $2.50 Tea or Coffee

Served on the Patio (weather permitting)

CILA to protest dining hall firings

AMY STEPHAN
Assistant News Editor

CILA will sponsor a protest of the allegedly unsubstantiated firings of five dining hall workers last November in front of North Dining Hall tomorrow at 4:30 p.m.

Fifty or 60 students are expected to picket and distribute fact sheets tomorrow during lunch hours, said Nancy Brennan, a CILA educator of food service and co-organizer of the event.

An organizational meeting for those interested in participating will be held tonight at 7:30 in the Center for Social Concerns. CILA also intends to invite interested dining hall workers to picket, said Brennan.

Student awareness and education are the main goals of the display she said, adding the protest is intended to demonstrate solidarity with the fired workers. CILA is also drafting a letter to Father Theodore Hesburgh, University president, which they hope will encourage him to re-examine the issue, said Brennan.

Two pastry workers and three managers were fired last November for their role in an alleged plot to extort money from anonymous workers. The pastry workers were accused of the actual extortion, while the managers were fired because the dining hall administration claims they knew of the existence of no measures against it.

But in a March 16 Observer article, William Hedley, a University security investigator assigned to the case, said there was "no evidence of any wrongdoing" on the part of the workers. "For five years, not involved at all" in examining the role of the three managers.

There are court cases pending against the University because of the firings, Brennan said. Ron Athey, assistant director of Notre Dame Food Services refused to confirm or deny this.

Brennan said the protest is intended to "expose the injustice to the people in the dining hall," claim they were denied rights guaranteed by the University.

The official employees relations handbook of Notre Dame states all workers are entitled to an oral warning, a written warning and a suspension before being fired.

"The issue has been lagging," said Brennan. CILA tried to organize a discussion group on the issue, but had difficulty convincing interested faculty members to participate, she said.

Brennan does not foresee any conflicts over the demonstration. We're not going to storm the dining hall," she said.

Today was chosen for the protest because it is International Worker's Day, Brennan said. Fifty-one years ago tomorrow Dorothy Day distributed the first copies of The Catholic Worker in Washington Square in New York City.

William Hickman, director of Notre Dame Food Services was not approached for comment because he is recovering from a heart attack suffered last week.

After the assistant director refused to comment on the protest because of legal complications, because "he says he is not involved that much in the firings."

Rally continued from page 1

discuss the issue before anyone gets killed.

For the near future, Bertino hopes to meet with University President Father Theodore Hesburgh early this week. He also hopes to present an appeal to the Board of Trustees before the semester ends.
Viewpoint

ROTC is the service of war-making

Dear Editor:

It is with relief and hope that I receive the University's new policy concerning alcohol and ND students' social life. My relief that marital interaction has finally been overcome by the solution of limiting the number of parties and the mingling of fraternities, is not unclouded, however, by the fact that the administration will strike at the heart of the problem: alumni drinking at tailgates before football games. Hasn't the policy been in effect? It appears to be a simple act by Stephen Ren and Mark Kaschins, with little impact other than to make people feel better.

The sooner this across-the-board policy is implemented, the quicker the University can get on with the real problem. Let's not put our sense of right on hold during certain football weekends or the pen that signs the donation checks mightier than the wrong of having three people in a single room.

Richard Cohen

P.O. Box O, Notre Dame, IN 46565

Michael Welch
ND class of 1983

Rector bans banners

Dear Editor:

We, as members of Saint Edward's Hall, would like to show our support for the students who, by openly warning others against the dispersal of the administration's alcohol policies, have made us feel as though we are being threatened by an all-out war against our own defense, but with active love (Mt. 5:38-48). Jesus killed no one but was killed (as were Gandhi and King). Nonlegalistic protest will alter the truth that the Christ of the Church means to live a radically different life than the one the military calls us to live.

Just across the hall was a poster on the wall which read “God bless America” with a picture of the American flag. As we accompanied our son to his room on his first day, we visited the place and, of course, noticed the large statue of Jesus in the “sacred heart” mood standing by the entrance. Just across the hall was a poster on the wall which read “God bless America” with a picture of the American flag. As we accompanied our son to his room on his first day, we visited the place and, of course, noticed the large statue of Jesus in the “sacred heart” mood standing by the entrance. It is irrelevant that we are threatened by communists. For our security lies not in the military of any nation but in the Kingdom of God. If we wish to live in the Kingdom, we must return good for evil, not resisting the evildoer with violence, even in our own defense, but with active love (Mt. 5:38-48). Jesus killed no one but was killed (as were Gandhi and King). Nonlegalistic protest will alter the truth that the Christ of the Church means to live a radically different life than the one the military calls us to live.

The military does not condone anyone in the military. I once was there and did “good” things during my tour of duty. Fortunately, I was not ordered to kill anyone. My beliefs are not a criticism of individual military— we cannot judge their motives later, or can we judge such actions by the Gospel. In a way, we are called to choose between “services” — the service of war-making and the service of peace-making. If there is indeed an anti-military attitude at Notre Dame, including that military service is incongruent with good Christian living (The Observer, Hamilton, March 12, 1984, p. 63), then it is not a matter of a fault with Christ and the military.

Those who teach otherwise on our Catholic campuses must keep in mind the words of Jesus concerning the teaching of young people (who may well be the future innocent victims of our nuclear holocaust involvements) (whenever causes one of these little ones who believe in me to sin, it would be better for him to have a great millstone fastened around his neck and to be drowned in the depth of the sea). The military has made us forget that also. For weeks, everyone forget what he said in the campaign. It is one Americans seem to like, even love. Ronald Reagan is now a $29 billion deficit. It will be a long time before the American public forgets.

The Cohen column

anyway and popped up in China. Welcome the Great Rondini.

Reagan has become the Great Escape artist of our times. He has two basic tricks. The first is your basic burn—now you see him, now you don’t. The President brought down the house with that one when he first ordered the Marines withdrawn from Nicaragua. The audience, knowing that the Great Rondini had said that he was not going to be pushed around by terrorists, thought they were watching a trick. But suddenly the Marines were gone. And so was the Great Rondini. He popped up in Santa Barbara. When he returned to Washington, it was as if nothing had happened.

The President pulled off the same trick again. The next time it was reported he had won, it was only later. It appeared that the CIA had directed the mongeurs de guerre in the Middle East, and which, if it were going to topple dominoes down to Saudi Arabia. Suddenly, though, he found that he had gone too far. He was no longer anywhere and Saudi Arabia — as opposed to American interests — stands tall.

The Great Rondini apparently learned some tricks back in his days as a motion picture and television acrobat. What matters is the establish-ment of character — not continuity from other picture to picture or episode to episode. And the President has certainly established his character: it is one Americans seem to like, even love. Being a masterful magician, the President keeps our eyes on him and not what he does. Call it sleight of policy.

And so now the Great Rondini is now performing in China. By the time he returns, Congress will have forgotten it is angry with him over Central America. But even if it is still, the Great Rondini will redirect it. Maybe he’ll declare war on terrorism.

Reagan is the great escape artist

WASHINGTON — Harry Houdini, the Great Escape artist, has been upstaged by Ronald Reagan. Houdini — at least in the movie I saw — went into a river encased in something like a safe, his hands-cuffed behind his back. Moments later, he emerged.

Reagan through bound and gagged by two congressional resolutions voted, got more money for his Central American adventures than the one the military calls us to live.

Richard Cohen

The Cohen column

anyway and popped up in China. Welcome the Great Rondini.

Reagan has become the Great Escape artist of our times. He has two basic tricks. The first is your basic burn—now you see him, now you don’t. The President brought down the house with that one when he first ordered the Marines withdrawn from Nicaragua. The audience, knowing that the Great Rondini had said that he was not going to be pushed around by terrorists, thought they were watching a trick. But suddenly the Marines were gone. And so was the Great Rondini. He popped up in Santa Barbara. When he returned to Washington, it was as if nothing had happened.

The President pulled off the same trick again. The next time it was reported he had won, it was only later. It appeared that the CIA had directed the mongeurs de guerre in the Middle East, and which, if it were going to topple dominoes down to Saudi Arabia. Suddenly, though, he found that he had gone too far. He was no longer anywhere and Saudi Arabia — as opposed to American interests — stands tall.

The Great Rondini apparently learned some tricks back in his days as a motion picture and television acrobat. What matters is the establish-ment of character — not continuity from other picture to picture or episode to episode. And the President has certainly established his character: it is one Americans seem to like, even love. Being a masterful magician, the President keeps our eyes on him and not what he does. Call it sleight of policy.

And so now the Great Rondini is now performing in China. By the time he returns, Congress will have forgotten it is angry with him over Central America. But even if it is still, the Great Rondini will redirect it. Maybe he’ll declare war on terrorism.

Reagan is the great escape artist

WASHINGTON — Harry Houdini, the Great Escape artist, has been upstaged by Ronald Reagan. Houdini — at least in the movie I saw — went into a river encased in something like a safe, his hands-cuffed behind his back. Moments later, he emerged.

Reagan through bound and gagged by two congressional resolutions voted, got more money for his Central American adventures than the one the military calls us to live.

Richard Cohen

The Cohen column

anyway and popped up in China. Welcome the Great Rondini.

Reagan has become the Great Escape artist of our times. He has two basic tricks. The first is your basic burn—now you see him, now you don’t. The President brought down the house with that one when he first ordered the Marines withdrawn from Nicaragua. The audience, knowing that the Great Rondini had said that he was not going to be pushed around by terrorists, thought they were watching a trick. But suddenly the Marines were gone. And so was the Great Rondini. He popped up in Santa Barbara. When he returned to Washington, it was as if nothing had happened.

The President pulled off the same trick again. The next time it was reported he had won, it was only later. It appeared that the CIA had directed the mongeurs de guerre in the Middle East, and which, if it were going to topple dominoes down to Saudi Arabia. Suddenly, though, he found that he had gone too far. He was no longer anywhere and Saudi Arabia — as opposed to American interests — stands tall.

The Great Rondini apparently learned some tricks back in his days as a motion picture and television acrobat. What matters is the establish-ment of character — not continuity from other picture to picture or episode to episode. And the President has certainly established his character: it is one Americans seem to like, even love. Being a masterful magician, the President keeps our eyes on him and not what he does. Call it sleight of policy.

And so now the Great Rondini is now performing in China. By the time he returns, Congress will have forgotten it is angry with him over Central America. But even if it is still, the Great Rondini will redirect it. Maybe he’ll declare war on terrorism.

Reagan is the great escape artist

WASHINGTON — Harry Houdini, the Great Escape artist, has been upstaged by Ronald Reagan. Houdini — at least in the movie I saw — went into a river encased in something like a safe, his hands-cuffed behind his back. Moments later, he emerged.

Reagan through bound and gagged by two congressional resolutions voted, got more money for his Central American adventures than the one the military calls us to live.

Richard Cohen

The Cohen column

anyway and popped up in China. Welcome the Great Rondini.

Reagan has become the Great Escape artist of our times. He has two basic tricks. The first is your basic burn—now you see him, now you don’t. The President brought down the house with that one when he first ordered the Marines withdrawn from Nicaragua. The audience, knowing that the Great Rondini had said that he was not going to be pushed around by terrorists, thought they were watching a trick. But suddenly the Marines were gone. And so was the Great Rondini. He popped up in Santa Barbara. When he returned to Washington, it was as if nothing had happened.

The President pulled off the same trick again. The next time it was reported he had won, it was only later. It appeared that the CIA had directed the mongeurs de guerre in the Middle East, and which, if it were going to topple dominoes down to Saudi Arabia. Suddenly, though, he found that he had gone too far. He was no longer anywhere and Saudi Arabia — as opposed to American interests — stands tall.

The Great Rondini apparently learned some tricks back in his days as a motion picture and television acrobat. What matters is the establish-ment of character — not continuity from other picture to picture or episode to episode. And the President has certainly established his character: it is one Americans seem to like, even love. Being a masterful magician, the President keeps our eyes on him and not what he does. Call it sleight of policy.

And so now the Great Rondini is now performing in China. By the time he returns, Congress will have forgotten it is angry with him over Central America. But even if it is still, the Great Rondini will redirect it. Maybe he’ll declare war on terrorism.

Reagan is the great escape artist
Memories or disillusionment?

by Chris Fraser
features columnist

I remember when I was a new freshman nearly four years ago, a senior in my hall took a bunch of us out to buy some beer. More precisely, he went into the liquor store while we waited eagerly in his car. Upon leaving them to campus, the senior wanted us to be careful because we might get in trouble if caught bringing in cases of Lager. As green as we were, we slyly scanned it, carefully checking each corner for RAs and rectors on the prow.

Well it was a few days before we understood that the wool had been pulled. The Notre Dame Police force, and that, this means that the barracks was in as much alcohol as we wanted so long as we did not attempt to consume it in the hallways.

Even so, we were certain that the administration was too restrictive and paranoid. We were distraught because we couldn’t keep legs and many of us were surprised by the concept of partisanship. But one thing we were optimistic. We thought things would change for the better. We believed some of the rules would fade as Notre Dame entered the 90s.

Little did we know a few days would come when a beer run might well have to be a clandestine operation, a day when students would be told what they could and could not do during spring break in Ft. Lauderdale.

I tell this story not to make another passionate argument about whether the administration’s new alcohol policy is a mistake (although I could) but rather to point out what a friend of mine calls the dilemma of Notre Dame.

The dilemma is that Notre Dame is something senior citizens begin to face as graduation nears. On one hand, we have may begin to look at our school nostalgically. We remember the many good times we’ve had and the many close friends we’ve made. We want to look at our college days as a fun and exciting period. We want to call the Fighting Irish a team we are proud of our great school.

On the other hand, the administration certainly forces many of us to leave with a bad taste in our mouth. And sadly, the new alcohol policy is representative of the problem. At a time when social life is approaching a low, we have seen the administration reissue a demand for harsh punishments for partisanship violations. Of course, this is not new. We have never wanted the clever couple from spending the night together but it surely does stop a co-ed study session or a round of hoops from extending beyond the bedding hour.

As well, we have seen any hope for co-ed dorms — a responsible solution to many of the real social problems on campus — fade into oblivion.

We see that women are still treated as second-class citizens, admitted to smaller classes. More than a few of us have seen our favorite professor denied tenure and forced to move on — sometimes for questionable reasons. And above all, we have constantly sensed an administration attitude toward us that suggests we are incapable of dealing with the world, that we must be sheltered, protected, and, when necessary, fighters. Such an attitude can bring advantages. We would often rather deal with the administration than the South Bend police and few of us have complained about receiving maid or laundry service. But finally, it is a degrading and insulting attitude to take toward college students.

The dilemma, then, is one of memories versus disillusionment. A look at past graduates tells us that the memories will be embalmed and the disillusionment will fade. We want to come back and enjoy the football games and see our old friends. Problems with student life and administration attitudes will no longer affect us. And so we will come back with green pants, visit our old rooms and tell the students how they will never have it. We will laugh about the tricks we used to use on the professors or paternal rules and we may even encourage our kids to follow us to at Notre Dame.

The University understands all this and they have wasted no time in asking the seniors for their first alumni contributions which are necessary in order to receive any football tickets. And many of us will give because we want to see our friends and remember the good times. Eventually, we will provide the lifeline for the perpetuation of the University’s attitude toward the students. As the years go by, the dilemma becomes less difficult to confront: we remember less and give more.

Unfortunately, forgetting one of the horns does not really resolve the dilemma at all but rather to point out what a friend of mine calls the dilemma of Notre Dame.

I would like to thank anyone who has given my columns a bit of attention over the past two years. I wish all the seniors the best of luck in the future.

---

Owing up to an age-old crime

by Keith Picher
features staff writer

Thirty-two years after capturing a four-foot bronze statue of Notre Dame founder Father Edward Sorin and hiding it for a sentence, two pranksters have finally admitted to the crime, prompted by a recent article in Notre Dame Magazine.

The mastermind, William Manier ’53, had just off the caper on a frigid moonlit night last spring, according to a news story in 1952. A former resident of Alumni Hall, Witzeleben is now Chief of Pathology at Children’s Hospital in Philadelphia and a professor at the University of Pennsylvania.

Witzeleben was on his way to the post office (now the Knights of Columbus building) to mail some Christmas cards when he spotted the 1955 Blondi masterpiece sitting on the steps of the building.

His accomplice, Edward Manier ’53, was studying physical chemistry at his desk in 384 Dillon when he heard the noise of the statue. They buried Sorin in a sand trap on the Burke Memorial Golf Course since it was the easiest place to dig in December.

During Christmas vacation, Manier ran into an old high school friend who was headed for Korea. He told the friend he was only leaving the couple from spending the night together but it surely does stop a co-ed study session or a round of hoops from extending beyond the bedding hour.

As well, we have seen any hope for co-ed dorms — a responsible solution to many of the real social problems on campus — fade into oblivion.

It was a thing of the past, the days of co-ed dorms, the days of campus life as Notre Dame entered the 80s.

One th ing we were was optimistic. We thought things would change for the better, we believed some of the rules would fade as Notre Dame entered the 90s.

In the end, they were never caught.

At about 11 p.m. Manier began to film the event. They wrapped the body in a blanket and decided it was time to dig up the statue.

Witzeleben joined him and they cut the bonds. As green as we were, we slyly scamper ed in, carefully checking each corner for RAs and rectors on the prow. They cut the bonds.

“W e gained a profound sense of the ludicrness of life at Notre Dame,” recalls Manier. He does not remember having met Witzeleben, and says he was not too well ac­ quainted with Manier until he joined the Notre Dame faculty several years later.

Spring arrived and the pranksters decided it was time to dig up the statue. Fearing that someone would hit the figure on an explosion shot or that the statue would be uncovered when the golf team relocated the sand traps, Sorin was encased in a dark and stormy night.

William Santoro ’53, now a portrait­ haking in Beverly Hills, offered the use of his car. They dumped the statue in the trunk of the car and headed for Homewood, Ill. to drop Sorin off at Manier’s girlfriend’s house. Her parents were also there in the garage. He too was a joker who had joked for years about the statue, which the Stanford and California football teams awarded to each year’s winner.

Just before finals week the three decided to return Sorin to the campus. After bringing the statue back to South Bend on a box, they hid it in a locker at the station.

They sent one last telegram from Washington D.C. announcing Father Sorin’s triumphant return to graduation. “We planned a Friday night bash, to avoid the crowds of parents on the weekend. There were only 500 in our senior class, and everyone else had gone home. Come Friday and everyone was at the Dunes, including Jim.” (Witzeleben) and I (Santoro),” said Manier.

Manier went back to campus and waited for Witzeleben and Santoro to return from the Dunes. They didn’t. At about 11 p.m. Manier began to panic. He got aclassmate to give him a lift to the bus station, quickly snatched the statue from the bus sta­tion officer, and put it into the car’s trunk.

The crowds at the South Bend and had been building a few minutes after midnight. They wrapped the statue in the same blanket in which they had hidden it months before and secluded it past the Law School and behind the crowd at the Main Campus. Suddenly, it was fixed on Notre Dame Avenue.

“We snatched to within 100 yards, the statue down, screamed a primal scream — HEY SORIN! — and ran back to the dorm,” it said. “We thickened and our immortal souls.” They hinted away from the crowd and walked with their heads in their hands.

“Our only goal was to be happy and laughter to a dry and humorless place,” said Manier. “We gained a profound sense of the ludicrness of life at Notre Dame, and that sense, which has deepened with age, has been our only reward until now.”

Owning up to an age-old crime

by Keith Picher
features staff writer

A larger statue of Father Sorin, also by Blondi, which has never left the place overlooking South Quad.

It was a thing of the past, the days of co-ed dorms, the days of campus life as Notre Dame entered the 80s.

“As green as we were, we slyly scamper ed in, carefully checking each corner for RAs and rectors on the prow,” said Manier.

Witzeleben joined him and they cut the bonds. As green as we were, we slyly scamper ed in, carefully checking each corner for RAs and rectors on the prow. They cut the bonds.

“W e gained a profound sense of the ludicrness of life at Notre Dame,” recalls Manier. He does not remember having met Witzeleben, and says he was not too well ac­ quainted with Manier until he joined the Notre Dame faculty several years later.

Spring arrived and the pranksters decided it was time to dig up the statue. Fearing that someone would hit the figure on an explosion shot or that the statue would be uncovered when the golf team relocated the sand traps, Sorin was encased in a dark and stormy night.

William Santoro ’53, now a portrait­ haking in Beverly Hills, offered the use of his car. They dumped the statue in the trunk of the car and headed for Homewood, Ill. to drop Sorin off at Manier’s girlfriend’s house. Her parents were also there in the garage. He too was a joker who had joked for years about the statue, which the Stanford and California football teams awarded to each year’s winner.

Just before finals week the three decided to return Sorin to the campus. After bringing the statue back to South Bend on a box, they hid it in a locker at the station.

They sent one last telegram from Washington D.C. announcing Father Sorin’s triumphant return to graduation. “We planned a Friday night bash, to avoid the crowds of parents on the weekend. There were only 500 in our senior class, and everyone else had gone home. Come Friday and everyone was at the Dunes, including Jim.” (Witzeleben) and I (Santoro),” said Manier.

Manier went back to campus and waited for Witzeleben and Santoro to return from the Dunes. They didn’t. At about 11 p.m. Manier began to panic. He got aclassmate to give him a lift to the bus station, quickly snatched the statue from the bus sta­tion officer, and put it into the car’s trunk.

The crowds at the South Bend and had been building a few minutes after midnight. They wrapped the statue in the same blanket in which they had hidden it months before and secluded it past the Law School and behind the crowd at the Main Campus. Suddenly, it was fixed on Notre Dame Avenue.

“We snatched to within 100 yards, the statue down, screamed a primal scream — HEY SORIN! — and ran back to the dorm,” it said. “We thickened and our immortal souls.” They hinted away from the crowd and walked with their heads in their hands.

“Our only goal was to be happy and laughter to a dry and humorless place,” said Manier. “We gained a profound sense of the ludicrness of life at Notre Dame, and that sense, which has deepened with age, has been our only reward until now.”

---

Light metal music

The Northwestern University Foundation Brass Quintet performed at their numbers at the second annual Festival of Brass this weekend in Washington

Hall. Eleven college and university brass ensembles ranging from quartets to large brass ensembles performed at the festival. As a special highlight, each played one or more pieces of music for brass, as yet unpublished.
A timid start and a serenely frivolous and frolicsome An Tostal, which means "spring festival" in Gaelic, continued its illustrious tradition at Notre Dame last week, judging from the overwhelming amount of participation by the students.

Timed Tuesday's golf tournament teed off a week-long celebration of springtime on the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's campuses. The golf outing took place on the Burke Memorial course.

Events such as the Slam Dunk Contest and Air Band competition highlighted Wicked Wednesday's activities. The Decathlon, with such events as the dining hall tray run and the "Simon Says" contest, made the sunny afternoon seem all the more enjoyable. Commented Engineering major Greg Brehm, "I liked the Slam Dunk Contest because I took second place."

As the week progressed, so did the number of An Tostal events. On Thirsty Thursday, students from both campuses flocked to Saint Mary's for such events as the Tricycle Race, Twister, Jail, Dorm Feud and the ever-popular Mr. Campus contest. This year's winner was Mr. Zahn, Tom Fanning. "Mr. Campus" was one of the more popular events of the day, according to Grace Hall resident Jeff Griffin. "It was pretty fun. I liked seeing (Mr. Grace) Leo Gomez make a fool of himself on stage," he commented.

Terra Carrigan, a McCandless freshman, cited Jail as one of her least favorite events. "I nearly got hit by a couple of pies because guys kept throwing me in jail," she said.

Frivolous Friday lived up to its name with its scheduled 18 events. The South Quad featured such events as the Jello and Egg Tosses, the Bucket Brigade, the Licorice Eating Contest and the Tire Roll, while Green Field hosted the Mattress Race and the Keg Toss. Among the most popular events in front of the Sorin statue were the Serf Auction, the Loudmouth Contest, and the Trivia Bowl, won by Cavanaugh Hall. Recess 101 and the midnight movie, "Polyester," brought the busy day to an appropriate close.

Some students, however, were disappointed with the film, which
Not exactly a victory march

The Coliseum never saw chariot races like these.

The annual chariot race was won by Cavanaugh Hall for the second year in a row.

The traditional Irish Wake closed Saturday's "An Tostal" events. The event was touted as "A Victory Dance at Stepan." Famous Chicago band Arien provided the music for the party, which lasted until after 2 the next morning.

Bookstore Basketball was the final event of An Tostal, with Mac's Deli taking first place for the second year in a row in the men's division. The well-attended game took place behind the ACC late yesterday afternoon.

Organization for the festival was left to the students, who did an excellent job, looking at the success of many of the events. "We got all the material we needed. It went well," said John Finnerty, who organized the Jail event at Saint Mary's.

Freshman Poni Smith of McCandless summed up the overall sentiment of the week when she commented, "I loved the whole thing. There were so many different events. It really gave students the opportunity to get involved and meet one another. I can't wait until next year!"

One finish, but the days in between

The Observer
Monday, April 30, 1984 — page 7

featured a revolutionary new concept in moviemaking, scratch and sniff, as well as a 200-plus pound transvestite, Divine, as the star. Viewers were given cards with ten numbered scratch and sniff circles. When a number flashed on the screen, the appropriate circles were scratched and sniffed. "I thought it was stupid," said sophomore Lisa Fitt. "I think the idea of a scratch and sniff movie was okay, but the movie was horrid. The smells were gross." The smells on the cards included skunk, stove gas and body odor. "Thank goodness there was no charge," commented one student.

"Sunny Saturday" proved to be the perfect name for a near-perfect day. The warm weather and the positive attitude of the participants made this day one to be entered among the best in the annals of An Tostal history. The picnic and the Mud Pit Games attracted the most students for the entire festival. Rob Richsmelegger, who organized the Mud Pillow Fights, said he was "surprised at so much participation. Registration was at the site and we were unsure of how many we were going to get. But we ended up having to turn teams away."

"Bachelor Number Three..."

photos by Thom Bradley

UMOC Candidate Brian Crouth

"The Observer"
NBA playoff action
Celtics, Nets, and Jazz lead series

Associated Press

Darryl Dawkins scored 32 points, including two three-point plays in the final 90 seconds, to lead the New Jersey Nets to a 106-100 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks in the first game of their National Basketball Association playoffs yesterday.

In other playoff games yesterday, Boston defeated New York 110-92 and Utah stopped Phoenix 105-95.

Larry Bird, playing on a sprained ankle, scored 28 points, handed off 12 assists and grabbed nine rebounds to pace Boston’s victory over the Knicks. Bird also had three steals and blocked two shots.

New York’s Bernard King, who had scored more than 40 points in each of the Knicks’ last four games, was held to 20.

The winners all took 1-0 leads in their best-of-seven NBA quarterfinal series. On Saturday, the Los Angeles Lakers defeated the Dallas Mavericks to grab a 1-0 lead in their series.

The playoffs resume tomorrow with New Jersey at Milwaukee and Dallas at Los Angeles.

Football

continued from page 12

Grieff, Greg Dingens, Eric Dorsey and Mike Gann. Linebackers Rick DiBernardo, Tony Furjanic, and Mike Kovaleski also played well for the Blue team.

Now that spring practice is over, the players will work out on their own until regular season practice begins in August. The squad will then start gearing up for the season opener against Purdue, scheduled for September 3.

The following players were presented with Herig Awards at halftime Saturday. The awards are given to the top individual performer at each position: Larry Williams (offensive lineman), Mark Bavaro (receiver), Steve Beuerlein (offensive back), Mike Gann (defensive lineman), Tony Furjanic (linebacker), and Joe Johnson (secondary). Awards for Most Improved Player went to Mark Brooks on offense and Wally Klein on defense. The Coaches Award for inspirational play was awarded to fullback Tom Monahan and defensive tackle Tom Boggom.

IRISH ITEMS — Pinckett underwent arthroscopic surgery last week to remove slightly torn cartilage on his left knee. Offensive tackle Mike Perrino and outside linebacker Mike Golic both had arthroscopic shoulder surgery last week and were also out of action Saturday. Also sitting out with injuries were inside linebackers Dave Butler (neck strain) and Kevin Jennings (torn hamstring), offensive guard Tony Piccin (monosynovitis), free safety Van Pearcy (tendinitis in knee) and cornerback Trey Coleman (hamstring). Strong safety Larry Williams was a last-minute scratch because of back spasms. Mike Haywood was the only injury victim Saturday, suffering a sprained ankle that will require a cast for three weeks.

A.I.S.
Shipping and Packaging
You wrap or we wrap 3617 Mishawaka Ave.
Mishawaka at Logan
Mon. - Fri. 8:30 - 5:00
We Ship Exclusively
UPS

Cordially Invites You to Attend Our "Study Break Social"

May 1
Chautauqua
7:30, 9:30, 11:30
Adm: $1

Take a Study Break & Join Us
* Learn about our Test Prep Programs.
* Talk with our Instructors and Staff.
* Refreshments will be served!

WAT
MCAT
DAT
MCAT
LSAT
GRE
GRE

When: April 30, 7-9 pm
Where: South Dining Hall, 2nd fl.
Notre Dame Campus
Generals, Stallions, Invaders win
Associated Press

Quarterback Brian Sipe ran for one touchdown and passed for another as the New Jersey Generals handed the Michigan Panthers their fourth consecutive United States Football League defeat.

Sipe scored on a one-yard bootleg run and threw two yards to tight end Jeff Speck for a touchdown as the Generals defeated the Panthers 31-21 before a crowd of 50,908 at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J.

In other USFL games yesterday, Birmingham trounced Denver 31-14 and Oakland edged Chicago 17-13.

The Panthers, the defending league champions, fell behind 24-14 at the half as the Generals went on to boost their record to 8-2 to remain one game behind first-place Philadelphia.

Looking for something to fill those long dull evenings?

The Observer is seeking a limited number of nighttime production workers for next semester. No previous experience is necessary, but enthusiasm and a sense of humor are both essential. Learn valuable layout skills and have fun too. Stop by the LaFortune office this week for an application and more info. Questions about this fantastic opportunity? Call Margaret at 239-5303.

ON THE MOVE TO INDIANAPOLIS

The "Apartment Guide of Greater Indianapolis", published by the Apartment Association of Indiana, is the OFFICIAL source of information for choosing the apartment that's JUST RIGHT FOR YOU.

Information on rental ranges, security deposits, features and recreational facilities are all easily indexed for your convenience. And detailed maps show the exact location of over 85,000 apartments.

LET OUR GUIDE BE YOUR GUIDE

While in Indianapolis, pickup your copy at the nearest newsstand for only $2.00...or contact:

The Apartment Association of Indiana
1811 Executive Drive, Suite R
Indianapolis, IN 46241
(317) 241-9080

SUMMER STORAGE SPACE
Special discount for HD/SMC students
(5 x 10 spaces and larger)

CALL 259-0335 to RESERVE SPACE
SELF LOCK STORAGE OF MCKINLEY
816 East McKinley
Mishawaka

The 1984 DOME is Here!!

Undergraduates can pick up their book on the Stepan Courts Mon. April 30 - Thurs. May 3, form 12:00-5:00 p.m. Must present ID to get your yearbook!!

MONDAY MADNESS

Fast, Free Delivery™

Throbbing head? Quaking body? Has Monday dealt another crushing blow? Revive yourself with a well-rounded meal from Domino's Pizza. We'll help smooth the wrinkles out of your day.

Call us.

277-2151
1835 South Bend Ave.
Plaza 23 Center

233-3133
1426 Calvert St.

289-7100
4533 W. Western

277-8700
51400 U.S. 31 North

Our drivers carry less than $20.00. Limited delivery area. ©1984 Domino's Pizza, Inc.
Today

Bloom County

Mellish

Guindon

The Far Side

Dave

TV Tonight

6:30 p.m.  16 MAHI
22 Family Feud
28 Wheel of Fortune

7 p.m.  16 TV Bloopers and Practical Jokes
22 Billy Graham/Sacramento
28 Blue Thunder

8 p.m.  16 Morse "Adam"
22 "Kot and Allie"
28 ABC Monday Night Movie

8:30 p.m.  22 Newhart
9 p.m.  22 Cagney and Lacy
10 p.m.  16 NewsCenter 16
22 "22 Eyewitness News"
28 Newswatch 28

11 p.m.  28 Eye on Hollywood
11:30 p.m.  16 Late Night With David Letterman

---

The Daily Crossword

Friday's Solution

---

REFRIGERATOR RETURNS

* Saturday, May 5
* 12-4 p.m.
* at Stepan Mall

---

EARN MONEY

The Student Activities Board needs poster hangers for the 1984-85 school year. Applications available at the Student Activities Board Offices on the 2nd floor of LaFortune
By PHIL WOLF
Sports Writer

It was teamwork that did it last year, and it was teamwork that did it again this year.

Macri's Deli downed Tequila White Lightning IV, 21-15, yesterday in the rematch of last year's final to become the Bookstore Basketball Champion for the second straight year.

Macri's Deli once again exhibited the excellent teamwork that led the team to the Bookstore XII Championship last year. In that game, Macri's Preferred Stock defeated the favored Tequila White Lightning, 21-15.

The two teams took to the Bookstore court painted in the ACC parking lot yesterday afternoon at 3 p.m. with introductions by Jack Lloyd, ACC basketball announcer.

Brian Gough, whose nine points in the final game helped to convince the Bookstore commissioners to give him the Golden Hatchet Award for the tournament, put Tequila White Lightning IV on the scoreboard first with a jump shot on which he also drew a foul. The score remained at 1-0 for several minutes, as both teams shot poorly every time downtown the court.

Bubba Cunningham finally was able to get a basket, but only with his first point of the game, about which announcer Lloyd commented, "Cunningham has now matched his season average."

He didn't. But the assistant leader for Macri's showed that he also can score when he wants to. Cunningham was the only scorer for his team in the opening minutes, as he hit two jump shots and a driving layup to go three for four in the first half. He finished the game at three for eight.

Both teams continued to have trouble finding the hoop in the first half, more because of lousy shooting than pressure from the zone defenses employed by the two teams. Neither team was able to build a lead of more than one point. Macri's Deli answered every point Tequila Lightning scored until the game was tied at four.

It was Joe Sweyne who tied the game at that point with an 18-foot jump shot from the left side of the court. Cunningham then came up quickly on court following a Cunningham steal, and Sweyne scored on the fast break. The 5-4 lead was Macri's Deli's first of the game, and Tequila White Lightning IV never led again.

Macri's could not widen the margin to two until another fast break gave the team two quick baskets. Steve Toohill hit a layup with a steal from Cunningham, who then came up with another steal. Larry Cascio scored the rebound goal on the break, giving Macri's the 10-8 lead. Cascio, the tournament MVP, grabbed nine more rebounds in the game to lead both teams in that category.

For the record, Steve Beverlin scored on a 20-foot jumper from the right side for Tequila, but Macri's still held a two-point advantage at halftime, 11-9.

Macri's really started to roll in the second half, though, as the score was 14-9 before Tequila White Lightning IV caught its breath. Mike Cantin scored a rebound goal to bring his team within four, but that was as close as Tequila came the rest of the way.

Macri's Deli then reeled off five consecutive points, thanks especially to three free throws and a rebound goal by New Trolley, who scored his team's last six points.

Tequila then managed its final points of the game off a Bunch Five steal. Beverlin hit a 20-foot jump shot from the left of the circle for the 20-12 Macri's advantage.

A moment later, it was Toshih that took a pass from Bubba Cunning ham on the three on two fast break.

By the way, Cunningham had no match his team's last six points. Tequila then managed its final points of the game off a Bunch Five steals. Beverlin hit a 20-foot jump shot from the left of the circle for the 20-12 Macri's advantage.

A moment later, it was Toshih that took a pass from Bubba Cunningham on the three on two fast break.

The high scorer in the final game was Toshih, who put up seven on five-of-10 shooting, holding the gold team to the line. Mike Conlin was high point man for the losers, shooting five-for-nine in the field and one-for-two from the charity stripe, while also putting in eight defensive rebounds.

Both teams shot far below their season averages, perhaps because of the extreme wind during the game. Macri's Deli, which had 56 percent of their shot attempts, shoots far below its season average. The loss to the wind.

Saturday's Blue-Gold game officially ended the spring football season. Larry Burke's story has a complete wrap up at left.

The Observer / File Photo

Steve was very impressive," said offensive coordinator Ron Hudson of Beverlin's performance. "He didn't force the ball on his passes, and he felt very much in charge on the field. He conveyed that feeling to the rest of the team."

Classmate Alvin Miller was Beverlin's favorite target, catching six passes for 117 yards. On one play, Miller twice turned a bubble screen completion into a 50-yard gain by cutting back across the field and outrunning several defenders.

"Alvin's been improving as he's learning more about pass patterns and defensive coverage," said Hudson of the 6-4 split end. "He's going to be an effective weapon for us, along with Joe Howard and Milt Jackson. It's easy to get the ball to him because he provides a big target for our players."

The Blue offense was just as successful on the ground, rolling up 161 rushing yards on 35 attempts, as compared to the negative 29 rushing yards which the Gold team amassed (most of that is from four quarterback sacks). First-year tailback Almon Jefferson, who is running a lot like All American Allen Pinkett these days, keyed the ground game with 55 yards and three touchdowns on nine carries. He scored the Blue team's third touchdown on a tackle-breaking, 25-yard run that was set up by a fake, 24-22, in St. Patrick's Day.

Alvin Miller also scored the game's first touchdown on a two-yard run, and made it 21-0 with a 1-yard score just before halftime.

"He's fitting in to our overall picture very well," said Hudson of Jefferson. "He's made a great adjustment from the wide receiver position this spring, and he's done very well. He possesses a lot of experience. He gives us another dimension. We're confident that he's able to step in now and fill Allen Pinkett's shoes."

Although it was slightly less than a month after Saturday's 54th annual Blue-Gold Game at Notre Dame Stadium did at least serve as a big confidence builder for the Irish starting team, while also providing a chance for some reserve players to step into the limelight.

For the record, the Blue team (which includes the starters and the majority of the second-string players) rolled to a 57-0 victory over the Gold, with a performance that was nothing short of dominant. Offensively, they moved the ball practically at will, en route to 599 total yards of offense, while their defense allowed the Gold team to cross the 50-yard line only once.

Despite the outcome of the game, many were pleased with the situation at tailback, where there is plenty of depth. Besides Pinkett and Jefferson, Hudson has second-year man Lester Freemont (eight carries for 39 yards and a touchdown Saturday) and sophomore-to-be Byron Abraham (four rushes for 25 yards). There is also a possibility that Hiawatha Francois might return to the tailback position. Francois has been working as a free safety since the team's third scrimmage, and the defensive coaches have not yet determined whether or not he will stay there.

Francois performed well, as he played one half with each team, registering six tackles for the Gold team in the first half, and returning an intercepted pass 22 yards on the game's final play.

The defense was even more impressive, holding the Gold team to 5 yards of total offense on 47 plays (that's an average of 0.11 yards per play). Defensive tackle Wally Kleine, who had two quarterback sacks, was a big factor. He registered a great block on the defensive line, but plenty of other players turned in solid performances as well.

Hudson is delicate as his partners on the defensive line, Mike see FOOTBALL, page 9