"It is in the best interest of the student to fill out and turn in the form as soon as possible," he continued.

"If we could get 40 percent, that would be excellent," he said.

The committee plans to compile the evaluations over the summer and then publish it in the fall. Next year's committee will be headed by Paul Ruppe and Mark Roknick. "This is only a start," said Riley. "When the committee reconvenes we will get a lot of feedback. There should not be any problems as long as there is a smooth transition from his year to the next."

Riley said the student government believes this to be one of the most important and worthwhile projects it has undertaken in quite some time and as long as the students send their forms in, it will be a success.

Due to the system which the committee has been forced to use, Riley noted that a few problems have developed in administering and collecting the evaluations. "We have noticed problems with the collection of campus mail, lazy mail clerks in some of the halls, and a poor response from students."

Riley also noted that prospects looked good and the committee was confident they could reach their goal. "If we could get 40 percent, that would be excellent," he said.

The Peace Corps Director Loret Ruppe defended herself against any problem as long as the students send in their teacher evaluation forms but said, "we got the feeling from their teacher evaluation forms that any volunteer requesting a continuation of the Peace Corps policy who elect to have abortions, and, in fact, that the Peace Corps is not out of step with this administration's policy based on my personal conviction, testified, "I have been, and continue to be, an active opponent of abortion on demand. I believe I had no choice under the law to do so by the requirements of legislation and the decisions of the Supreme Court."

But Ruppe also told the committee that when she became head of the Peace Corps, the agency did not pay for abortion procedures, but did pay for the transportation and per diem to volunteers who wanted to return to the United States to have the procedure performed. She also said that at the time of her appointment, there was no established limit to the number of abortions a volunteer could have and remain in service.

"Current authorities appeared to require a continuation of the Peace Corps policy," said Ruppe.

Ruppe directed her General Counsel to obtain an opinion from the Justice Department on the issue. The opinion, returned Nov. 20, 1981, states, "We conclude that the Pregnancy Discrimination Act (PDA) would prohibit the Peace Corps from implementing any across-the-board policy of terminating volunteers who become pregnant while overseas or pregnant volunteers who elect to have abortions."

"With respect to the funding of abortion-related expenses, we conclude that the Peace Corps is not barred from using appropriated funds to pay travel costs and per diem to volunteers who are evacuated for the purpose of obtaining an abortion, and, in fact, that the Pregnancy Discrimination Act (PL-95-555) requires the Peace Corps to continue paying those costs, so long as travel and per diem expenses are paid to volunteers evacuated for other comparable medical disabilities."

Ruppe, in response to the Justice Department's opinion, testified, "Since we have full responsibility for any medical conditions developed by volunteers while overseas, many of which require evacuation, I believe I had no choice under the law but to pay similar expenses for pregnant volunteers returning to the U.S.

She told the committee in a response she issued a memorandum outlining a "three pronged effort to reduce the incidence of unwanted pregnancies among the volunteers."

"First, I instigated a training program for volunteers in family planning and sexual responsibility, and requested an upgrading of the counseling skills of our medical staff in this area. Second, I had the counseling of pregnant volunteers both in-country and in the United States redesigned to emphasize alternatives to abortions and the prevention of future pregnancies... Finally, I determined that any volunteer requesting a second abortion during her tour of service with the Peace Corps was acting with such a degree of irresponsibility that automatic separation from the Peace Corps was warranted."

"At the same committee hearing, Representative Henry Hyde (R-Ill), known in Congress for his strong pro-life stand, told Ruppe, "I have read the legal memorandum of your counsel and I don't see any problem, frankly, I am satisfied that you are following the law and you are not out of step with this administration, and you are doing a fine job in a difficult situation."

St. Mary’s Director of Campus Ministry Reid to relocate to Seattle

By MARY PADDEN
News Staff

Tom Reid, Saint Mary's director of Campus Ministry for four years will be leaving in June for Seattle where his wife has accepted a clinical internship.

During the past four years the department saw substantial growth in staff and student involvement. In addition, Reid said a "team orientation" developed within the department.

Reid’s wife, Molly, currently working on her Ph.D. in psychology at Notre Dame, has been accepted into a clinical internship at the University of Washington in Seattle.

Reid decided to make the move as this year marks a four-year cycle at Saint Mary’s. The area of relocation was advantageous as two of Reid's brothers are Washington residents.

"We knew the move would come eventually, but we weren’t expecting it to be so soon," Reid said.

Reid praised the quality of Saint Mary’s programs, and the accessibility of both faculty and administration.

His time at Saint Mary’s enabled him to gain new insight. "Working at a women's college has helped me to grow in a number of ways. Being a man in a predominantly female atmosphere helped me to become more sensitive to the needs of women."

Reid is pleased with the direction that Campus Ministry at Saint Mary’s is taking. He said increased involvement in programs such as the Fast for a World Harvest, Three Minutes to Midnight, and other peace-oriented functions of this spring show that Campus Ministry has become a vital part of the Saint Mary’s community.

After leaving, Reid plans to continue his work with Retreats International by offering spiritual growth programs and consulting with people in retreat ministry. He hopes to expand his work to include those of all ages.

Family and premarital counseling are two areas in which Reid would enjoy being involved. He believes by extending his ministry to these areas, he would be able to help people relate better to family needs.

His relationship with Campus Ministry as a specialization has come to a close, but he feels his work in human and spiritual development has only begun.

Both Reid and Sister Karol Jackowski, dean of student affairs at Saint Mary’s, have a great deal of confidence in his replacement.

Mary Feely has been named to the position, and will assume duties as director August 1.

Feely is currently director of Lay Formation, and associate professor of Pastoral Theology at the St. Francis Seminary in Milwaukee. She has had previous involvement in the South Bend area as director of religious education at Holy Cross parish and through teaching theology at Notre Dame during the spring semester of 1982.

Survey shows broad range of ND beliefs

BY RICHARD PILGER
Staff Reporter

A survey of Notre Dame students' moral attitudes has recently been conducted by a professor from Marquette University. The poll covered a broad spectrum of issues involving violence, sex, politics, religion, racism and drugs.

Dr. Daniel Maguire is a visiting professor of ethics this year. His poll is the starting point for his classes and has been developed over fifteen years of teaching at Marquette.

Currently, more than one hundred questions comprise the survey, which has often grown from the suggestions of Maguire's students.

The polling of 299 Notre Dame students occurred in three upper level theology and philosophy classes, but participation was not mandatory. Of the 299, 96 percent were male. Most questions required one of three answers: yes, no or don't know.

"The results," said Maguire, "indicate that students here are remarkably conventional and conservative." He added that the attitudes of most students point to class consciousness over social awareness, citing the overwhelming support for Reagan against the democratic candidates. In the survey, Reagan beat Jackson by 66 percent, Mondale by 56 percent. Those who considered themselves politically active, however, numbered only 25 percent.

Monauro also noted an ironic response to questions on abortion. While 98 percent of those surveyed consider themselves religious, and 99 percent wish their children to be raised in their religion, 56 percent found abortion morally acceptable in certain circumstances. Eighty-four percent found contraception acceptable; 51 percent believed that they could do so (although 24 percent raised in their religion, 56 percent of responding females considered themselves religious, and 89 percent wished their children to be raised in their religion, 56 percent of responding females agreed that violence can be morally acceptable, to 22 percent of the men. Fifty percent of the males could imagine circumstances in which they would take a human life, while only 17 percent of the women could do so (although 24 percent had contemplated suicide, to 22 percent of the men).

Men were consistently less religiously oriented than women, 85 percent of the males considering themselves religious, to 94 percent of the females. None of the women pictured God as feminine, while 12 percent of the men did.

Sixty-five percent of the men felt themselves in some way racially prejudiced, versus 22 percent of the women. Women were usually more conservative toward extramarital sex, but at the same time, more tolerant of homosexuality and masturbation.

Twenty-four percent of the males accepted casual sex between strangers to 4 percent of the women. Women were usually socially prejudiced, versus 52 percent of the men.

While 61 percent of those surveyed found themselves in some way racially prejudiced, 76 percent approved of interracial marriages.

Other results showed large differences in the opinions of men and women. Women were far less tolerant of violence than males, with 56 percent of responding females finding abortion morally acceptable in certain circumstances. Eighty-four percent found contraception acceptable; 51 percent believed that they could do so (although 24 percent raised in their religion, 56 percent of responding females considered themselves religious, and 89 percent wished their children to be raised in their religion, 56 percent of responding females agreed that violence can be morally acceptable, to 22 percent of the men. Pizza

"Domino's was too common," Monaghan said. "I thought we might have trouble with the name. So I picked Domino. It sounded Italian, and I didn't know anyone else with that name."

"The reason there's three dots (on the Domino's logo) is because we had three stores at the time. I was planning to add a dot for every store we opened. Could you imagine a dominio with 1,600 dots?"

After finding a niche in the pizza delivery business, Monaghan's store in Ypsilanti "became a little legend. It was the busiest pizza place in the country. But starting a chain is tough. Number two is five times as hard as one, and there is five times as hard as two," he said.

By the end of 1983, however, Domino's, Inc., reported sales of almost $370 million, or approximately $450,000 per store, and currently is planning to construct a 30-story corporate headquarters, using a design by architect Frank Lloyd Wright that was never built, in Ann Arbor.

And Monaghan sees no saturation point in sight. Pizza Hut, Domino's top competition, has 4,000 stores nationwide, and they're doing fine," he said. "We can build our stores closer to each other than they can."

Monaghan said Domino's doesn't concentrate on building franchises near college campuses. "We started out that way," he said, "but we used to lose a lot of money in the summer. Military bases are a different story, though. They're like campuses all year long."

The lecture was delivered free.

Some anti-abortion groups disagree with the Justice Department's interpretation of the PDA. James Bopp, Jr., general counsel to the National Right-to-Life Committee, stated in a letter to the NRLC's Legislative Director Douglas Johnson, "I have concluded that the Justice Department has taken an extremely narrow interpretation of the abortion exception in the PDA not warranted by the plain language of the statute. The PDA does not require the payment of travel or per diem expenses to Peace Corps employees seeking abortions."

Ruppe's Public Affairs Officer Hugh O'Neill told The Observer that Ruppe would not comment on the issue beyond the transcript provided of the Congressional hearing.

Who's in charge?

Father William Beauchamp says it is in concrete. Dean of Students James Roemer says it's only partly true. They both insist you aren't alone.

Two and a half weeks ago, the 28-page final report of the United Notre Dame Committee on the Responsible Use of Alcohol was released. Rundown at a two-hour meeting, from dawn to dusk, continuous hours.

united the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students in a united effort to stop the abuse of alcohol.

But what is the role of Notre Dame President Theodore Hesburgh? Hesburgh has his staff. He has the alumni. At last weekend's Student Senate meeting, he was present in a very forceful way. He completely took over the debate of the alcohol question.

The problem is not the drinking, of course, but the drinking culture. The problem is the attitude, the set of rules, the way in which Notre Dame has tried to deal with the problem.

The alcohol policy, according to Beaucamp, is a philosophy of enforcement, not a philosophy of education.

Few students - or anyone else in the Notre Dame community for that matter - seem to understand the difference between the two documents, and this undoubtedly has hampered the effective and responsible debate of the alcohol question.

The problem is not the drinking, of course, but the drinking culture. The problem is the attitude, the set of rules, the way in which Notre Dame has tried to deal with the problem.

in releasing drafts of the directive within a week that the administration had erred in releasing drafts of the directive, and this undoubtedly made the student body question the value of their Catholic character.

In the past few days, several articles have appeared discussing the role of ROTC at Notre Dame. Specifically, Father Beauchamp's role in stopping the alcohol use or not of Catholic ideals and values was compatible with those of the military. However, with technical phrases and bibliographic references, I would like to present a broader view.

Abigail McCarthy

Abigail McCarthy, the commencement speaker at Saint Mary's, outspoken proponent of Catholic women's colleges and women's rights activist, will serve as an ideal model for the graduates of 1984.

It is important to remember that a Catholic woman's college promotes women's rights, but she is first and foremost a graduate of a Catholic college.

McCarthy has made a name for herself apart from being the wife of former senator and one of the top candidates for the presidency, Eugene McCarthy. She does not need to ride on the coattails of prominent politicians because she has a sense of identity which she conveys to the Catholic women's college's students.

McCarthy's accomplishments demonstrate her strong sense of social responsibility. McCarthy shows leadership qualities in the world of church and politics.

She has five children, one of whom is a graduate of Notre Dame.

Student Union trip

Dear Editor:

I am writing in response to the letter that appeared in The Observer April 25, entitled "Student Union Fiasco, to Aspen, Colorado. The allegations made by three members of the Student Union Representatives were WRONG. This is a blatant example of their misinformation concerning the entire trip.

The participants of the ski trip received six nights and five days in the town of Aspen for $80 (per person). The trip included $129 fee plus airfare to Aspen. The trip was to be used at either Aspen Mountain, Snowmass, or Buttermilk ski areas. As a guide, each participant had to have skis, boots, poles, and skis. As for Summit Party Cards - no activities took place where cards were needed for admission.

In response to complaints of transportation, I must state each student was given the option of finding his or her own transportation. This was taken advantage of by a few people. Bus prices to Aspen were quoted at $125 per person, per trip. Transportation was needed by only 25 people.

Thanks for the opinion, Father, but it's a matter of finding his own transportation. This was the only way to travel to Aspen. The Observer Representatives Foreign Affairs Committee on Feb. 8, 1984. Ruppe is director of the Peace Corps and will speak at the Notre Dame commencement ceremonies on May 20.

I appreciate the opportunity to clarify some of the irresponsible and inaccurate charges which have appeared in the press regarding the Peace Corps and abortion policy.

First of all, I want to make it absolutely clear that, as an individual, I have been and continue to be an active opponent of abortion on demand. I believe my record in the pro-life position is clear. I am neither trying to promote abortion among Peace Corps volunteers nor attempting to subvert the administration's pro-life policy. The record shows, I have made every effort to reorient Peace Corps policy toward what I believe is a responsible and effective approach for prevention of unwanted pregnancy.

It is not my intent to request a second abortion during her tour of service with the Peace Corps was acting with such a degree of irresponsibility that automatic separation from the Peace Corps was required.

I hope that I have now my position clear. I am neither trying to promote abortions among Peace Corps volunteers nor attempting to subvert the administration's pro-life position. The record shows, I have made every effort to reorient Peace Corps policy toward what I believe is a responsible and effective approach for prevention of unwanted pregnancy.

But Catholic and Christian institutions serve sister communities and among those who have long been the figure of one who has already conquered the world without those who, if asked to defend it, would not, in the view of service with the Peace Corps was acting with such a degree of irresponsibility that automatic separation from the Peace Corps was required.

I get nervous with authority figures, a sign that I had a very strict father. He died when I was a college freshman, at a time when we weren’t talking much, because we disagreed on religion. I became a Catholic. I hurt him badly. He was a good father who deserved more from me than I gave. Joining the Holy Cross order, I found I had fathers in Christ. Religious authority often comes, like a deputy deity, in a father’s shape. The great blessing of my ordained life was learning to love my fathers more than I learned them. Now that I am old enough myself, I feel embarrassed to be treated as a father figure, though I am pleased when students treat me with affection and respect.

Nature has no law prohibiting children from being smarter than their elders. My father gave me an example to follow; though he would have died to make me happy, he wouldn’t consent to my making a mistake. It’s tough to love a child, if love means you have to stick by your guns as a way of protecting a fool from his folly. It turned out all right, because I was lucky. My dad wouldn’t have been so opposed, if he hadn’t thought I was burning myself. Who could beguile him, a love so paternal? A man pays a price for love means you have to stick by your guns. I am in these bricks. The love, sweat, and tears of working people, whose stone upon stone, making the place w hether you see dog eating dog. Paternalism is the fault of a gentler king of indifference of the real world, which you overlook the caring for you that goes on here at Notre Dame, piling dirty word on this campus. I say, three cheers for paternalism!

In the argument of paternalism versus freedom, I’m a traditionalist. The blood of saints and sinners, the name of the game is power. You can’t tell that you’re in the real world when you see dog eating dog. Paternalism is the fault of a gentler king of establishment subject to the insights of grace. Paternalism has become a dirty word on this campus. I say, three cheers for paternalism!

I hope the real world is good to you. It never did me any harm, but St. Paul in the Epistles never speaks of it. If it hurts you, you can always get together with a thousand others as injured as yourself, run through the streets shouting slogans, hang sheets covered with protexts over your windows, and hold a public rally telling off his leaders. Perhaps you will be patient with the real world, forgiving its faults, though you realize it offers you no hiding places.

An older generation gets part of its identity from trying to help you realize your potential for greatness. However limited you think their vision is, keep in mind that they wish you well. Have a happy summer. Darby O’Gill II and I never said we didn’t love you. After the middle of June, I will be at St. Joseph’s Church, 376 St. James Street in Manhattan’s Greenwich Village. Rectory phone: 212-741-1774, personal phone: 212-924-2110. I invite you to call or visit.

The case of ‘Godspell’

The construction of a colorful and movable set added special variety and enhanced the musical movement on a sometimes overbearing ‘O’Laughlin stage. The wooden blocks, cut like pieces of a puzzle, were moved about with ease by the ensemble composed in equally vibrant colors, although a clearer distinction between each in the individual’s costuming would have made more variety among the cast with much dimension.

Maintaining an upbeat through out the show, the ensemble kept the audience response changing as the mood swung from dramatic to humorous. The contemporary interpretation of the Gospel stories showed insight and creativity, as the actors used present day language and humor to tell a story written two thousand years ago. Although this could be awkward, it was received extraordinarily well. Even the dramatic crucifixion at the conclusion was paced well through the modern musical interpretation.

Throughout the show there is an evident identification with the music and the actors’ characterization, which synthesizes the ensemble creating a total performance. The color and energy on the stage creates a visual excitement well interpreted by Godspell. Godspell is showing at an O’Laughlin Hall May 4, 5, 17 and 18 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $1.50 and are sold at the door only.

The case of “Godspell”

I went to ‘Godspell’ expecting to see a 1960’s rendition of a modern religious interpretory experience. The familiar music of gospel refreshing under the direction of Betsy Quinn.

As part of an ensemble of ten characters, innocent and unastrum Bill Borack (Jesus Christ) coaxed to the stage the Gospel according to St. Matthew through musical parables and impressional vignettes. Throughout most of the show the energy generated by the ensemble was reflected in the audience response.

Incorporated on the stage was a five-piece band whose music kept the atmosphere upbeat and the production flowing. Under the choreography of Betsy Quinn and Ann Marie Janes the ensemble was strong and exciting in their dance. Though the music throughout the show was captivating and alive, the ensemble’s energy level during the first few numbers was not as high as in the rest of the performance. The energy seemed to be indefinitely forgotten by the receptive audience.

The show was even alive visually.

Full field for Kentucky Derby

Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Trainer Wayne Lukas will play a pair of queens — the fillies Althea and Life's Magic — in a full-house field for tomorrow's Kentucky Derby.

For the second straight year, the classic one-and-one-fourth-mile race drew its starting limit when 20 3-year-olds were entered yesterday. Actually, 21 horses were entered, but owner's image was bumped by the rule restricting the field to the top 20 money winners. Althea and Life's Magic entry was made the early 5-2 favorite for what will be the richest of 110 Derbys.

With 20 starters, the purse will be $712,400, with $557,400 to the winner. The old records were $550,100 and $483,850 in 1982. This year it cost $10,000 to enter and $10,000 to start, twice as much cost last year in either categories.

There have been 32 fillies in previous Derbys, and two have won — Regret in 1919 and Genuine Risk in 1980. Althea beats colts in two of three meetings in 1983 and again in a spectacular performance in the Arkansas Derby on April 21. Life's Magic finished fifth against colts in the Santa Anita Derby.

The second early choice at 3-1 is Swale while Taylor's Special is next at 7-2. Until Tuesday, Swale was expected to be part of a Woody Stephens-trained entry that probably would have been favored. But Stephens said he would not start Devil's Bag because the 1983 2-year-old champion, who has been vandicated for $36 million, had not shown that he could win at one-and-one-fourth miles.

Devil's Bag would have been ridden by Eddie Maple. But now Maple will be on longshot At The Threshold, who will ride contender Taylor's Special.

Althea and Life's Magic under score the strong female influence in the race, to start at 5:38 p.m. EDT. ABC will televise the event from 4:30 p.m. to 6 p.m. Patri Cooksey, who will ride setting outsider So Vague, will become the second woman jockey in Derby history. The other was Diane Crump, who finished 15th on Fathom in 1970.

Milwaukee defeats New Jersey

Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Sidney Moncrief scored 27 points and Marques Johnson added 19 as the Milwaukee Bucks defeated the New Jersey Nets 100-93, last night to take a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal series of the National Basketball Association playoff.

Alice Little added 12 points, and Mike Dunleavy and Junior Bridgerman 10 each for Milwaukee, which sank 19 of 20 foul shots in the fourth quarter. The victory overshadowed Darrell Dawkins' 31 points for New Jersey. Otis Birdsong added 20 for the Nets.

The Bucks went on a 10-1 tear to increase their 10-point halftime lead to 65-48 with 4:58 left in the third quarter. It was the first of four 17-point leads in the quarter. After Bridgerman's two free throws gave Milwaukee its final 17-point lead at 71-54, New Jersey outscored the Bucks 10-1 over the final 2:01 of the third quarter. Birdsong opened the fourth quarter with a baseline jumper, as the Nets cut the deficit to 72-66.

But Milwaukee retaliated with a 10-2 binge to go ahead 82-68 on Moncrief's layup with 7:27 to play. The Bucks kept the Nets at bay the remainder of the game.

The Nets cut the deficit to 80-80 with 3:15 to play, but Moncrief hit two technical foul shots after the Nets were penalized for an illegal defense and an obstruction by New Jersey coach Stan Albeck.

The Nets opened a 1-41 lead at intermission.

Baseball team remains in a rut

By ERIC SCHEUERMANN

The Notre Dame baseball team just can't seem to get out of the rut of playing .500 baseball.

On Tuesday, the Irish traveled to Kalamazoo to take on Western Michigan University in a doubleheader. As has been the story of late, the Irish split with the Bronchos, losing the first game 4-2, while taking the nightcap, 4-3.

In the first contest, the Bronchos quickly jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first inning on a two-run single by designated hitter Jim Markert. Irish starter Buster Lopes tied the game in the bottom of the first inning on a two-run single and three walks brought in a run.

But Western Michigan came back in the second, scoring a run when Mike Metzler's infield single drove in Jackie Moran. In the fourth, Steve Pasinault drove in David Smith to grab a 3-2 lead in the series.

But it was hurler Mark Clementz who truly surprised the Irish with his pitching. He allowed only four hits, one earned run, and three walks. The game was scoreless until the third inning, when Metzler doubled to bring in catcher Brian Gibbons with the game's first run. Carl Vuoio made it 2-0 in the fifth by driving in Gibbons again.

A single by Moran drove in Metzler in the seventh for one run and Vuoio came in from third base on a squeeze bunt by Ken Soos to make the score 4-0.

When Notre Dame's baseball coach Rich O'Leary traveled to East Lansing, Mich., on Wednesday to scout a possible potential Michigan State-Ohio Wesleyan game, he expected to get a good picture of the Spartans — Notre Dame's opponent tomorrow — as they were being dominated by conference leader Ohio Wesleyan.

O'Leary did get a good look at Michigan State, but he also received a pleasant surprise when the Spartans pulled off a big upset, beating Wesleyan 7-4, and putting Notre Dame in an excellent position to emerge as Midwest Lacrosse Association champion.

The Michigan State win left Notre Dame, Denison, and Ohio Wesleyan with identical 7-1 marks in the conference. A Notre Dame victory over tomorrow's Denison decision could well rest on the outcome of tomorrow's Denison-Wesleyan game. The second game of the twinbill, at 4:15 p.m. on Cartier Field, is a must to alter the probabilities for tomorrow's game.

As has been the story as of late, the Spartans at 1:30 p.m. on Cartier Field. To have a chance at the Midw est Lacrosse Association title, faces Michigan State tomorrow on Cartier Field. To have a chance at the crown, the Irish must beat the Spartans and Denison must defeat Ohio Wesleyan. Mike Sullain details the situation at left.
