Seniors denied football tickets on basis of ineligibility, junior status

Not all seniors are what they appear to be. The Registrar’s office says some seniors who were listed as juniors are now seniors. When some seniors asked for their tickets, they were told they were not eligible, because they were listed as a junior by the Registrar’s office, said Laura Stetlofo, a Walsh senator.

The problem was caused because the seniors were short credit hours, said Assistant Registrar Beverly Finette. If a senior’s total credit hours fall below a certain cut-off point, Finette said, they are given junior status by the computer.

“We stood in line from 3:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.,” said Sarlofo. “Even when one of my friends (Susan Hartzell, a Walsh senior) presented them with a valid (senior) ID, they told him he was not eligible. The ticket office said she was not eligible.

They (the ticket office) were ‘really rude’ about the problem,” Stetlofo said.

The ticket office would not hold football tickets for those seniors who were mistakenly listed as juniors, said Joan Avery, also a Walsh senator. “Some will have to come back on Wednesday with the juniors to get their tickets,” Avery said.

Kevin Finger, a senior in St. Edward’s Hall, said he stood in line from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. when he had to leave for class. Finger said he gave his ID to a friend, who was unable to obtain a ticket for him because he was listed as a junior. Finger said he went to the ticket manager, Michael Bobinski, with a transcript from the Registrar’s office. Finger said he was told he had to get a handwritten letter from the Dean, and come back the next day. Finger said he would not have to wait in line, but would be unable to get a ticket to his friend’s senior section.

Bobinski said there were 15 to 20 seniors who were listed as juniors, but claimed to be seniors. “The ticket office has a policy to interpret transcripts,” said Bobinski. He said he did not see Finger’s status as a senior listed on his transcript.

“The students have to see the other side of the story,” said Bobinski. “We have to give out Purdue game tickets, Purdue bus tickets, and season tickets. Each application must be checked for all three tickets.”

The students are checked against a list provided by the Registrar, said Bobinski. “We used the most current information available — the list was printed August 23.”

Students who are incorrectly listed must get a letter in writing from the dean of their college, or the Registrar’s office in order to get a ticket, said Bobinski.

Hesburgh invites candidates to talk to Notre Dame students, faculty

Invitations have been sent to the 1984 presidential and vice presidential candidates asking them to speak at Notre Dame. As he has done every election year since becoming University president, Father Theodore Hesburgh, C.S.C., sent telegrams to each of the candidates asking them to “visit the University of Notre Dame before the election and address the faculty and students concerning the moral issues of the campaign.”

“I suggest that they discuss the moral issues of the campaign,” Hesburgh said Tuesday. But I can’t tell them where to talk about them,” in the past, some candidates have discussed moral issues while others have not.

Hesburgh would not comment on which issues he wanted the candidates to discuss, saying he wanted to let them decide for themselves which issues are important. Jimmy Carter, who accepted Hesburgh’s invitation in 1976 discussed human rights.

Although the content was the same in all four of the telegrams the heading varied from formal to personal as the Associated Press reported. “Mrs. Ferraro” was addressed “Mrs. Ferraro,” while the one to Geraldine Ferraro was addressed “Mrs. Ferraro.” But to Vice President Walter Mondale it was, “Dear George,” and to Walter Mondale it was, “Dear Fritz.”

Hesburgh said he would be surprised if none of the candidates came to Notre Dame this election year, although the last to accept his invitation was Carter and Mondale in 1976.

Judicial Coordinator Zahn attacks OBUD, criticizes election handling

Student Body Judicial Coordinator Joe Zahn began the new school year by saying, “We’re not going to accept any baloney from the Administration on the plans we’re going to implement for the benefit of the community.”

In an interview last night, Zahn also attacked the Umbushman Organization as “a disorganized group of 25.” Zahn said he intended to form a committee to review the fight for control of student elections against the Umbushman Organization which now has control over the student electoral process.

Zahn said, “The National Umbushman Organization clarifies Obud as a complaint bureau. The Judicial Council will be taking back the counting of the ballots.”

Student Body President Bob Bertino responded with a flat no to Zahn’s suggestion of a takeover of elections by the Judicial Council. “That’s already been settled for this year,” said Bertino.

Henry Senikiewicz, head of Obud, refused to comment directly on Zahn’s remarks but said, “The issues should be brought through the proper channels of student government and not through The Observer.”

Bertino said he did support the creation of BACCHUS on campus which is a national organization sponsored by the Distilled Spirits Council of the United States. The Notre Dame BACCHUS organization would serve as a division of the Judicial Council and would be under the direction of the Judicial Coordinator.

DALLAS Federal agents believe they foiled a pair of terrorist plots against the Republican National Convention, including a plan for an ultralight aircraft attack, by arresting nine Iranians and Palestine Liberation Organization supporters, officials said yesterday.

The nine were arrested before the counting of the ballots, said Laura Stetlofo, a Walsh senator. “That’s already been settled for this year,” said Bertino.

The typical Indiana summer weather is expected to moderate today. Lower temperatures with a high of 81 are forecast. Possibility of an afternoon shower.

Complaints. Even if these relatively carefree days before fall break has a chance to be like the drudgery of routine has begun, there are no smiles and plenty of grumbles under the Dome.

And there is no lack of material. Students are initiated by everything from a dry campus to incredible humidity (and the fact that it now costs 50 cents to cool off with a pop from a vending machine).

As usual, the dining halls are an easy target for critics. But this year in addition to tasteless food and endless lines, students are gratifying about the dining halls within themselves. For those who live in Pangborn and seldom rear into the architecture wonder, the North Dining Hall, the two large dining areas in the hall have been divided into four smaller rooms.

This seemingly innocent change has attracted all sorts of criticism. Some say the new arrangement cuts service. The decision is to launch tomorrow, says David Gar­

Hickey says he has requested (but not yet received) money to add round tables and transform the dining hall into something resembling a college eating facility instead of a high school cafeteria.

All this sounds great, but for those less visionary stu­

PHILADELPHIA — A man was arrested yesterday and charged with throwing a corrosive liquid on six dogs in his neighborhood, burning one “down to the bone,” after a week-long series of maimings caused four of the animals to be killed.

Charles V. Dukes, 20, a resident of the Mount Airy section where the pets were attacked, was arrested at Municipal Court when he appeared to answer unrelated charges of theft and carrying firearms.

At least two other suspects, both juveniles, are being sought, officials said.

The corrosive material was thrown on the dogs in their owners’ back yards, burning four of the pets so severely they had to be killed and one partially blinded, said police Inspector Joseph Stasnik.

“He has a reputation of being an all-around criminal, waiting to come of age,” Stasnik said of Dukes.

Dukes was charged with six counts of conspiracy and six counts of cruelty to animals, police said. The cruelty counts are misdemeanors, carrying a maximum penalty of a $5,000 fine and two years in prison on each count, said Elaine Newton, spokeswoman for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Stasnik said reports from witnesses led to the arrest. The SPCA had offered a $1,000 reward after the attacks were discovered Aug. 21.

Authorities are awaiting autopsy results to determine what the corrosive substance was, but Stasnik said it was something like a commercially available drain cleaner.

One of the dogs that had to be destroyed was Troubles, a pit bull terrier belonging to Sharlita Stivender, 17, and her family. Troubles, who was 27 months old, had been put in the Stivenders’ back yard to keep cool, Miss Stivender said.

“We first noticed he was sick a few days ago. My brother heard him making unusual noises,” she said. “Then the hair started coming off on his back. It made you sick just to look at it.”

Troubles was killed Tuesday at the SPCA shelter. Sam McClain of the SPCA said the dog had been burnt “down to the bone.”

“It’s just pitiful, doing that to these dogs,” Ms. Stivender said. “And the dogs didn’t do anything to them.”

James Street’s dog also had to be killed. He noticed Saturday morning that Abdul, his Doberman pinscher, wouldn’t eat.

“I couldn’t get close to him, because it made me sick,” Stasnik said.

At Farmount Veterinary Hospital, veterinarian Stevenios said Street’s dog had burns over about 40 percent of its body. Although police received about 20 calls about attacks on dogs only four could be documented, said Ms. Newton.

“We were informed that police had received other calls about animals being hit by acid, but we didn’t see the animals,” she said. “We would need to see some proof that other dogs were killed.”

“I personally believe the guy who did this is a sick person,” said Stasnik. “I guess it was just a matter of time before he got around to humans.”

Dozens of fires continue to blaze in Montana hundreds driven away

HELENA, Mont. — Boiled over by 5,000 firefighters from at least seven states, diminished winds and cooler temperatures, officials unleashed large-scale air attacks yesterday against dozens of fires that have blackened 150,000 acres of forests and rangeland and driven hundreds from their homes.

For the first time since most of the fires broke out Sunday, officials spoke of possible containment of some of the blazes.

The reinforcements, aided by slackening winds and cooler temperatures Tuesday night, held most of the fires to smaller gains Wednesday than earlier in the week, when they were fanned by powerful winds.

But forecasters said the bulk in the winds was not expected to last.

The 5,000 firefighters on the lines Wednesday were being supported by 42 air tankers and 21 helicopters spraying fire retardant chemicals, said Dick Guth, a Forest Service information officer in Missoula.

“We really anticipate increasing the air support today,” Guth said.

The winds that fanned the fires earlier in the week also had grounded the air support in most areas.

President Reagan declared three of the biggest fires disaster areas Tuesday, qualifying the state for federal aid to fight them. The designations went to the Hawk Creek fire, 75,000 acres between Billings and Roundup, the North Hill fire, 22,140 acres north of Helena, and the Houghton Creek fire near Libby, 10,000 acres.

“We’ve got new crews from all over the West,” said Dorothy Terry at the Interagency Fire Dispatch Center in Helena. She said they came from at least seven states — Colorado, New Mexico, California, Utah, Oregon, Washington and Idaho.

“We’re in good shape as far as resources, and we have adequate manpower,” said Department of State Lands spokesman Don Kendall. “Weather is still the deciding factor.”

He said lines might be completed around the fire late Wednesday “with a little luck.”

That containment. Kendall stressed, “Control is several days away on something this size.” Containment is when firefighters prevent the fire from spreading, control is when they start putting it out.

Aerial infrared measurements showed the North Hill fire near Helena expanded by about 5,000 acres Tuesday night.

“Our major concern is north of Helena,” said Roger Bergstrom, a forecaster with the U.S. Forest Service. “The potential is there. There are houses all along the (Missouri) river.”

That fire also burned several miles into the Gates of the Mountains Wilderness.

Khadafy accuses U.S. of plans to murder him

TRIPOLI, Libya — Moammar Khadafy called the United States an annihilator of races yesterday and said it has even tried to kill him with poison and “electronic equipment.”

The 42-year-old Libyan leader made the charges during a brief speech to delegates from around the world who are in town to help commemorate the 15th anniversary of the coup that brought Khadafy to power on Sept. 1, 1969.

Khadafy, wearing a dark green safari-like suit and using reading glasses, began the speech describing the efforts made by his revolution to turn the yellow desert of his country into a green garden. Green is the color of Islam and of his revolution.

“But the enemies of the color green, of freedom and life... beheaded by enemy of humanity, the murderer of peoples and annihilator of races, the United States, is working day and night to liquidate the Arab nation,” he said in Arabic.

The radical Arab leader accused the United States of trying to destroy American Indians, black nations, Palestinians and the Lebanese.

The United States has sent “terrorists and assassination teams, as you have heard, under the instructions of the Central Intelligence Agency to freely move to get rid of the leadership of this revolution.”

He gave no specifics but apparently referred to a May 14 attack in Tripoli aimed at him. He previously accused the fundamentalist Muslim Brotherhood of making the attack with American aid.

Khadafy and 11 other junior officers seized power in a bloodless coup when King Idris was out of the country. He has transformed this former Italian colony into a socialist stronghold where education and medicine are free.

Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, joins the Notre Dame faculty this fall thus ending a 12-year career in Parliament.

Monique Begin, Minister of National Health and Welfare under Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, joins the Notre Dame faculty this fall thus ending a 12-year career in Parliament.

She leaves politics after successfully sponsoring the controversial Canada Health Act, which penalizes provinces for allowing extra billings outside the Medicare framework.

Proponents claim this legislation protects the sick and disadvantaged. Critics warn it could downgrade the nation's medical care and cause some doctors to leave the country.

Although Begin's career has been in the public rather than academic sector, Dean of the College of Arts and Letters Michael Loux says her appointment is "not at all uncommon. We want strong people who have held important roles in public life to offer insights...only gained from experience.''

Begin will spend this semester in independent study and research as she steps out of public life in Canada, said Loux. During the spring semester she will teach courses on topics which might include themes in Canadian studies and policy-making in the public and private sector.

Begin was elected to Parliament in 1972, one of the first two women elected from Quebec. In 1975 she was cochairman of the Canadian Liberal Party's national convention, and became a delegate to the United Nations the same year. She was appointed Canadian Minister of National Revenue in 1976, and Minister of National Health and Welfare a year later.

Begin will hold the G. Shaffer Professorship in Arts and Letters. Provost Timothy O'Meara made the one-year appointment.

Boy commits suicide to help out his family

Associated Press

MARINA, Calif. - A shocked community sends food and money yesterday to the Army family of a 15-year-old boy who hanged himself after telling his mother, "If there was one less mouth to feed, things would be better."

The death of Danny Holley, who collected cans for a penny apiece to help buy food for his sister and two brothers, touched thousands of families at Fort Ord and brought hundreds of sympathy calls.

The troubles of the Holley family were not much different than those of many other Army families, said Cynthia High of the Army Emergency Relief office, who had worked with Jennifer Holley, Danny's mother.

The family of Army Sgt. Johnnie Holley, stationed until next year in South Korea, had moved in June from West Germany to Fort Ord, 100 miles south of San Francisco, and was beset by bureaucratic problems.

Promised housing was unavailable, funds from their bank account were held up in transfer and their car hadn't arrived, said Ms. High, who began helping the Holleys July 1.

"The army was providing services as much as possible," she said. "There are many, many cases of families who have financial troubles when they arrive at a new post."

Mrs. Holley had received an interest-free loan of $1,300 from the relief office, emergency food supplies and assistance from an elderly volunteer in a Foster Grandmothers program. Still, it was difficult for the family to cope, and Danny took it very hard.

"He didn't know anyone here," Mrs. Holley said, her eyes red from crying, as she sat in her kitchen. "And we couldn't go anywhere. Mrs. High gave us a little book of bus tickets that I'd use when I had to go to the doctor or something like that, but when they ran out, there was nothing. We just stayed home.

"It was hard for him to understand why this was happening to us. I guess he just didn't have the patience."

Danny used to roam the neighborhood collecting cans, which he sold for a penny apiece to the supermarket. Neighbors showed compassion and saved their cans for him. Sometimes he gathered enough to bring home nine dollars.

The money helped buy food for his sister Erin, 4, and brothers Johnnie, R. and Christopher, 2. Mrs. Holley said the children often went to bed hungry.

She called Danny "a very responsible child; he was so good-natured. He used to get up in the morning and make me a cup of tea and bring it to me in bed. He would write little letters for me."

But several times, in moments of despondency, Danny would tell his mother, "If there was one less mouth to feed, things would be better," Mrs. Holley said.

On Monday morning, Danny hanged himself in the backyard of the house his mother had rented. His brother Johnnie found him and called his mother, who cut him down and called an ambulance. An hour later, Danny was pronounced dead at the hospital.

Foreign deficit soars

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a sobering batch of new economic signals, the government yesterday reported that the main gauge of future economic health sank for a second straight month. Party while the nation's foreign trade deficit soared to an all-time high.

The 0.8 percent drop in the index of Leading Economic Indicators followed a sizable 1.4 percent June decline. It marked the first back-to-back setback in the forecasting gauge since the depths of the recession 25 years ago. The Reagan administration said the declines were no cause for concern. It noted that the economy was slowing to a more sustainable rate of growth. Private economists agreed.

"No one should conclude the economy is in recession," said Allen Sinai, chief economist at Shearson Lehman American Express. "The two months of declines do not suggest a recession, but they do suggest a decided slowing in growth."

On the trade front, analysts were less optimistic. The Commerce Department said the deficit hit $11.4 billion in July as a 20.6 percent surge in imports outpaced the hoped-for exports for imports in nearly three years.

The deficit for the first seven months of 1984 totals $73.8 billion, already above the $46.9 billion record set in 1983. Analysts are predicting the deficit this year could easily reach $130 billion, dwarfing the clamor from a variety of American industries for protection from foreign competition.

The July import surge was led by a sharp upswing in shipments of Japanese autos, oil, clothing, iron and steel products, telecommunications equipment and agricultural commodities.

The flood of imports overpowered a 10.3 percent rise in exports as U.S. sales overseas reached $18.1 billion, their highest level since September 1981.

In another report yesterday, the government said sales of new single-family homes were flat in July at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 350,000 units. This represented an 11.3 percent drop from the February peak as the housing industry continued to be battered by rising mortgage interest rates. Housing officials said they expected sales would drop further in coming months.

Analysts also blamed much of the June and July declines in the index of leading indicators on rising interest rates.

"All during the first half of the year when we had super heated growth, a lot of people were saying interest rates don't matter any more. That's turned out to be nonsense," said Michael Evans, head of his own private forecasting firm. "All of the lift in the 1970's, when a copy was slipped under every student's door, Garbland said, "Informally, it was referred to as a letter from God" and many a note home to a girlfriend was scrawled on its blank backside. Soon other colleges and nearly every Catholic high school in the country wanted a copy. By the time it infiltrated from Father John Cavanaugh (later Notre Dame's fourteenth president), in February, 1936, it had a circulation of 18,000. Much quoted, it grew into a national apostolate.

The first issue of the new "Bulletin" contains a schedule of campus liturgies and confessions, a brief essay welcoming the University's incoming freshmen, and a quiz on Catholic doctrine regarding Mary, the mother of Jesus.

Deputy Police Chief William Gartland, C.S.C., edited the book Heart Church and posted in all 26 of the University's residence halls.

The Observer Bulletin, a weekly in its resumed form, will be distributed to students at Sunday Masses in Sacred Heart Church and posted in all 26 of the University's residence halls.

Between 1921 and 1965, the newsletter was a prominent feature of Notre Dame's decline life. Its first appearance was as a daily single-sheet mimeographed message from the law school. John O'Hara, C.S.C., O' Hara was Notre Dame's perfect of religion before becoming the University's twelfth president.

The Reagan administration said sales of new single-family homes were flat in July at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 350,000 units. This represented an 11.3 percent drop from the February peak as the housing industry continued to be battered by rising mortgage interest rates. Housing officials said they expected sales would drop further in coming months. Analysis also blamed much of the June and July declines in the index of leading indicators on rising interest rates.

"All during the first half of the year when we had super heated growth, a lot of people were saying interest rates don't matter any more. That's turned out to be nonsense," said Michael Evans, head of his own private forecasting firm. "All of the lift in the 1970's, when a copy was slipped under every student's door, Garbland said, "Informally, it was referred to as a letter from God" and many a note home to a girlfriend was scrawled on its blank backside. Soon other colleges and nearly every Catholic high school in the country wanted a copy. By the time it infiltrated from Father John Cavanaugh (later Notre Dame's fourteenth president), in February, 1936, it had a circulation of 18,000. Much quoted, it grew into a national apostolate.

The first issue of the new "Bulletin" contains a schedule of campus liturgies and confessions, a brief essay welcoming the University's incoming freshmen, and a quiz on Catholic doctrine regarding Mary, the mother of Jesus.

Making a point

Citizens Party presidential nominee Sonia Johnson, the first alternative candidate in U.S. history to receive primary matching funds from the federal government, raises her hand to emphasize a point at a press conference Tuesday in Los Angeles. She called the conference to discuss her exclusion from presidential debates and issues.

However, he said, agents "never confirmed or substantiated anything in the investigation" and "it was substantially resolved... by the last day of the convention..."

ABC special agent U.H. Specht declined to comment Wednesday. "We didn't make any arrests and beyond that, I can't give you any comment. In that area of our work, we can't make much comment."

I served a farewell dinner last Thursday with my parents at The Morris Inn, and like any well-mannered young man, I immediately tried to find out what was happening at the tables around ours.

That night I was lucky, I had the choice between straining my ears to overhear this old man, but my doctrine of etiquette told me to ask him to speak up or move my table closer to his, but my doctrine of etiquette was neither funny nor significant. To him, the spirit of Notre Dame is the fervor of a student full of admiration for his or her university.

At Anheuser-Busch, brewing is an art. No one takes more time or goes to more effort or expense than we do in brewing the most popular family of beers in the world.

We take great pride in this distinction, yet this distinction carries with it certain responsibilities.

Beer is a beverage to be enjoyed by adults socially—with family and friends at home... in your clubs, restaurants and at special events. It is also the beverage of moderation, and good judgment should be used when you drink.

Thankfully, the vast majority of those who consume beer do so in moderation. Nevertheless, anything less than responsible consumption of alcoholic beverages is detrimental to the individual and society. We at Anheuser-Busch certainly are concerned about you, our valued customer. Accordingly, we are dedicated to the support of research, education, and treatment programs aimed at combating alcoholism and alcohol abuse.

They told me you were wanted to try something new. Jackson, so I caught the first plane out here. I'm in here, your account's available! BOO HISS!

Anyways, I know you had your heart set on something, so I made them an offer of 45 million. NO 60?

He says that 67 million. But if we pull the balance from your check account, the European economy will collapse. But I got another property I could get the money from.

ACTUALLY, ALL I wanted was a feeling about 'tinkers."

Irish football fans will see both a new philosophy and a new formation on this year's defensive line. While the philosophy of defense may not be easily distinguished from last year's conventional 3-4, the new aggressive style of the defensive line should be both noticed and felt by opponents.

The key to this year's defensive line will be "aggressiveness," said Lantz. "No longer will the Irish rely on a read-and-react defense as they have in the past. Instead, a new emphasis on attacking the line will be utilized.

"Our defensive linemen are going to be more attack-oriented this year," said Irish defensive line coach Rick Lantz. "We want our linemen to attack the football more and to become more involved with the play."

This change will put more pressure on the offensive linemen because they will no longer have as much time to set the offense. This new aggressive philosophy requires each player to have a greater amount of confidence at all times. Even Irish defensive end Shane Lantz, however, does not think this should be a problem.

"The players have been developing in confidence in their ability to attack the line of scrimmage and not react properly when they are out of position," said Lantz. "I have really seen great improvement in their confidence in the last few practices."

Going into the Purdue game, Lantz has finally come to grips with the linemen's ability, but only three positions to fill.

Senior Mike Griffin is the veteran of the quintet with three monograms under his belt. The 6-5, 270-pounder will be lining up at left tackle for the Irish this fall. Last year, Lantz led the squad in sacks while starting all ten games for the Irish.

"Mike is really playing like a senior," said Lantz. "He has always been a good football player, and he is really working hard to become a great one."

The other two starters are both sophomores: Wally Kleine and Mike Griffin. The 6-8 Kleine was forced to sit out the entire '82 season with knee problems, but returned strong in '83, playing in every game. Kleine earned his starting right tackle spot by having excellent spring and summer camps.

"Wally has unlimited potential," said Lantz. "He has shown us in the spring and summer that he wants to fight to reach this potential."

Griffin, however, has the name tag for the position this year. The Irish defensive line coach will replace Jon Austry, who was lost to graduation. As a freshman, Griffin earned starting spots against Colorado, USC, Penn State, and Air Force while replacing the injured Austry.

Griffin is a throwback to the days of old. He likes to line up on the center. He revels in being double-teamed," said Lantz.

"He really makes it easy for the linebackers behind him."

While Griffin is the muscle nose tackle for the Irish, junior Eric Dorsey is a finesse-type lineman. The 250-pounder utilizes his superior speed on the field and will provide the Irish with another dimension at nose tackle.

"Dorsey and Griffin give us a positive combination," said Lantz. "Sometimes we will have Griffin go through our opponents, and then we can switch and have Dorsey go around our opponents," said Lantz. "Eric is the fastest off the ball of any of our defensive linemen. He is really playing well, and he has complete confidence in his ability."

Schools to get less money

Fans will see more games this year

Editor's note: This is the second part of a three-part report on the repercussions of the Supreme Court ruling that the NCAA's control of college football television coverage is illegal.

By MIKE SULLIVAN

Sports Editor

The Supreme Court's decision that individual colleges can organize their own television packages, thus breaking up the NCAA's control of all college football telecasts, has had mixed blessings.

For the most part, schools will be losing money because the networks are not going to be paying nearly as much for each game as they have in the past. Until this year, the major networks - namely ABC and CBS - were paying $800,000 per game because they were the exclusive carriers of live college football telecasts. Now, with the schools scrambling to make regional deals of their own, the College Football Association and the Big Ten Pacific 10 conference alliance - presenting packages that call for competing games on ABC and CBS, there is no such thing as exclusive.

However, what is bad for the colleges is good for college football fans all over the country. They will now be able to watch college football almost non-stop from 12:30 p.m. (EST) to almost midnight.

Someone in a larger city like Chicago will now be able to see as many as seven or more games on any given Saturday. For example, someone sitting at home in Oak Lawn can turn on the television at 11:30 in the morning (12:30 on the East Coast) and have a choice of one of three games. One station may be carrying a Big Ten conference game, another may be carrying a Notre Dame game, and still another could be carrying another syndicated game. In the Northeast, even the local PBS station will be carrying an Ivy League matchup.

The day is just beginning, though. By 2:30 p.m., the major networks get into the action. CBS will be showing an important Big Ten or Pac-10 game (or a game between Big Ten and Pac-10 teams), while ABC will be carrying the CFA game that should be of the most interest.

The prime-time slot wraps up what has already been a long day of football. Occasionally, one of the major networks will show a game late (for instance, ABC will be showing the September 8 Boston College-Alabama game in prime time), but usually the late time slot will be filled by the cable networks like ESPN or WTBZ. Assuming that the fan in Oak Lawn is still conscious (and has cable TV), he can see another CFA game on ESPN or maybe a Southeastern Conference game on TBS.

By the time the day is finished, our viewer will have watched almost 12 hours of football without even leaving his house.

Meanwhile, the checks coming in from the telecasts will not be as large as some expected. There will be a few schools that do benefit somewhat - the lesser lights and the independents, in particular - but the smaller Division I-AA, Conference USA, and the independents will find that more television money for regional broadcasts. And even the independents will have to forego the scatamphora in order to be completely independent.

"Every coach wants to start all the juniors and seniors, but all of them have got to learn to live with the fact that the Irish are starting a lot of players," said Lantz. "We want them to make something happen. They are going to be turned loose."
