Mondale releases budget plan, asks Reagan to do same

Associated Press

Walter F. Mondale put his cards "on the table - face up" yesterday with a plan to reduce the budget deficit to $86 billion by 1989, largely by raising taxes, and challenged President Reagan to show his hand.

At the White House, Reagan said he was going to raise people's taxes - with a plan to reduce the budget deficit by $86 billion by 1989, largely by increasing $30 billion in funds cut by Reagan's military buildup by cutting the MX missile, B-1 bomber and "Star Wars" defense program.

Mondale also proposed reducing spending by $54 billion and restoring $30 billion in funds cut by Reagan for education, environment and aid to the needy.

The proposed renovations and building improvements that were to have been completed this past summer were discussed. Lee Ann Franklin, student body president, explained that the $3,500,000 loan from the U.S. Department of Education has not been fully approved yet, and renovations cannot take place until this is done.

The tax increases would come mostly from deferring indexing, designed to protect wage earners from inflation, for families making $25,000 or less, and imposing a 10 percent surcharge for individuals with incomes over $70,000 and couples earning more than $100,000.

Rockne visits the Hoosier Dome

By MARGARET FOSMOE
Executive Editor

The stolen bronze bust of Knute Rockne made the trip to the Hoosier Dome last weekend, according to a note delivered yesterday to The Observer office.

Accompanying the note were several photos displaying the bust of the famous Notre Dame football coach. The figure was dressed in a Purdue University jersey. (See photos at right.)

The note was the first information received by The Observer since last May concerning the whereabouts of the stolen bust.

The type note, addressed to The Observer, stated: "I went on a long road trip to see this game and I'm really disappointed. The football team has never scored this poorly, even after Rule 8 went into effect. P.S. Say hello to my good friend Eddy down at The Rock." The message was signed "Knute Rockne".

"Rule 8" apparently alludes to the University regulation in Du Lac concerning premarital sex.

The statue, approximately two feet tall and two feet broad at the base, disappeared from its pedestal in Rockne Memorial on May 5. One photo shows the bust posed outdoors in front of a road sign marked "Welcome to West Lafayette, Purdue University." The other two photos display the bust seated indoors at a table. In one, two arms from behind the statue grasp an axe on the table while a voice balloon above the figure contains the words "Where's Gerry?" In the third, two arms reach around the figure for an unidentified object on a plate.

Notre Dame Security has received information concerning the stolen bust, according to Assistant Director of Security Rex Rakow. "We received some information we forwarded to the L.A.P.D. (Los Angeles Police Department), which is supposed to be running down that lead."

Rakow refused to tell what the information was, saying only "it involves some people on campus."

On May 18, a single photo of the bust appeared on a ransom note that was delivered to The Observer office. That note alluded to the new alcohol policy and indicated that the bust would not be returned "till the students have their beer." It was addressed to "Father Ted" and signed "Rock." A photograph accompanying the May note showed the bust, in sunglasses, sunning on a beach surrounded by a beer keg, a portable stereo and a frisbee.

The Rockne figure was taken last spring after articles in The Observer, Notre Dame Magazine, and the South Bend Tribune described the history of the Father Sorin statue located in Sorin Hall. The Sorin statue was the victim of several abductions during the past 30 years.

Saint Mary's Board reopens discussion of dormitory lofts

By ANNE GALLAGHER
Staff Reporter

There is a strong possibility that lofts will finally become a reality at Saint Mary's after a discussion at last night's Board of Governance meeting.

Although the subject of lofts was thought to be a closed issue, Anne McCarthy, Holy Cross Hall president, stated to the council there is a strong possibility lofts will be allowed in Regina, as well as in the other dorms. "Our hope is to get them through by next year," she said.

McCarthy is heading a committee made up of resident assistants, student representatives, and Director of Residence Life Pat Rintemaker, to attempt to formulate a policy that will make lofts a feasible part of dorm life.

Previously, architects had decided lofts would be unsafe in Regina. However, College Architect Tom Horner has developed three plans for horizontal, vertical, and free standing lofts that will work very well in Saint Mary's dorms, according to McCarthy.

The Rockne figure was taken by Hall stewards.

Life of service from the workroom at Saint Joseph’s College.

At the insistence of Father Sorin, who remained her spiritual advisor, her community became officially recognized as an order in 1888.

Mother Leonie continued to think of herself as a Holy Cross nun and wore the habit of the congregation most of her life. In 1994, on order of her archbishop, she took on the habit of the congregation she founded, just eight years before her death.

In 1983 there were 83 Little Sisters of the Holy Family in the United States. The community is finding it difficult to grow in numbers because “the woman’s movement made housework a dirty word,” said Sister Campion. “Nothing’s sacred anymore, literally. The beatification of Mother Leonie has become something for Canadian and American feminists, who criticize the Pope for honoring a woman dedicated to domestic work.”

Sister Campion says this upsets her “because it’s a woman’s choice. Critics should not judge one’s worth according to how much he or she furthers the woman’s movement but instead should look at the one’s accomplishments in light of the times. Mother Leonie was a champion of the woman’s movement (for those too busy criticizing to notice). She was a superb woman of the 19th Century, and a source of inspiration for the woman of the ‘80s.”

Law students debate
Okla. Congressman

By TERRY BLAND
Staff Reporter

Congressman Mickey Edwards of Oklahoma defended his opposition to the proposed line item veto amendment in a debate yesterday af- ternoon in the Law School.

"Concentration of power in the hands of a few is dangerous to our democratic system of government," Edwards said.

The line item veto is a proposed bill that, if passed, would give the president power over certain aspects of a bill. If the line item veto were passed into law, the president would have the power to "enact or defeat parts of it.

There are many legislators in Congress that believe in limiting federal spending. "If the only issue is to limit federal spending, then I would be at the head of the line advocating such powers," said the congressman.

However, Edwards does not see the limiting of federal expenditures as the only issue regarding the line item veto. "The real issue is the expansion of presidential powers of the president," he said.

"The two most important promises in the Constitution of the United States is the separation of power and the system of checks and balances," cited Edwards. "The framers of the Constitution did not intend such power to be constituted in the hands of one or two people."

If the line item veto were passed, the balance of power would be disturbed," Edwards said.

Most conservative proponents of President Reagan are in favor of the line item veto. However, Edwards cited an example of a "non-conservative president striking things with this power that conservatives would want."

"The president would have the power to "enact or defeat parts of it," Edwards said.

"The line item veto is a proposed bill that, if passed, would give the president power over certain aspects of a bill. If the line item veto were passed into law, the president would have the power to "enact or defeat parts of it."

Brown also argued the line item veto would save the federal government billions of dollars. He stressed his hands would be tied," said Lupo.

"I would have to pass the whole bill or none of it." Brown also argued the line item veto would save the federal government billions of dollars. He stressed the line item veto would be "a good model to follow" and by the president vetoing just certain parts of a bill, "Congress would be able to take a second look at things and look at a bill in its individual merits."

Lupo used the example of a housing and water works bill to illustrate his point more clearly. "If a house and water works bill came before the president and he didn't agree with the water works part of it, his hands would be tied," said Lupo.

Thomas Lupo and Walter Brown, both law students, presented arguments countering those of Edwards.

Lupo argued government would not be consistent for them to do all elections," it would have to do all elections for the student body as well.

"I see nothing which says... the democratic process has been negated. "I see nothing which says... the democratic process has been negated."

Zahn promised his organization would be "in no way is this the fault of the students."

"We will force resignations." Zahn promised his organization would be "in no way is this the fault of the students."

Zahn also said student government should be responsible," he concluded, "The line item veto is a proposed bill that, if passed, would give the president power over certain aspects of a bill. If the line item veto were passed into law, the president would have the power to "enact or defeat parts of it."

If the line item veto were passed, the balance of power would be disturbed," Edwards said.

"I see nothing which says... the democratic process has been negated."

"I see nothing which says... the democratic process has been negated."

Executive Coordinator Doug Wurth disagreed with Zahn, saying "I see nothing which says... the democratic process has been negated."

Regarding spending limits, he said, "admittingly, rules were not strictly enforced," while adding "some of you (senate members) were caught." In the case of conflicts-of-interest, Senikiewicz affirms "we will see that there is a disassociation upon command," adding "we will force resignations."

Hunger coalition begins tenth year

By CINDY RAUCKHORST

Remember the shocking sight of the food storage bins outside of the dining halls last year? The purpose of the bins, according to World Hunger Coalition Chairman Mark Storen, was to create an increased student awareness of the food waste in the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's community. The results were eye-opening for many students.

Many additional world hunger awareness programs are being planned this year by the World Hunger Coalition, which celebrates its tenth anniversary this spring.

Founded ten years ago by a committee headed by Father Don McNeil of the Center for Social Concerns, the coalition's main purpose was to learn more about world hunger and to do something about it.

This year, an additional emphasis will be placed on the education of WHC members and students about many hunger-related problems.

"We're going in to try to educate our members, and encourage a change in attitude of students," Storen said. "Just a look around shows that there is a need to educate the students about world hunger." He hopes that what the members learn through meetings and discussions can be applied directly to projects sponsored by the group.

Many projects are being planned by the WHC this year. One of the most well-known is the Wednesday crop walk, as it exists today.

Last year, over $10,000 was raised for the cause by the fasting. The Dining Hall administration donates a dollar per person per meal to the WHC. Most of the money is sent overseas as direct aid for various programs in underdeveloped areas, and the rest is used to help the poor in the South Bend area. The WHC does not use any of these funds for operating costs.

Other projects include volunteer work at the St. Joseph soup kitchen in South Bend, which provides meals for over 600 people per week. A mass and dinner will be held October 16, designated as World Food Day across the country. A Run For Hunger is planned for late October, as well as the annual Crop Walk, held in South Bend in the spring.

According to WHC member Bill Jordan, "There are many misconceptions about world hunger, primarily the idea that we can't do anything. That's not true. Each individual can play a role in defeating the problem as it exists today."

The WHC meets twice a month to discuss problems, view films, and interact with speakers from various viewpoints. The WHC will meet on September 24 at the CSC.

Saint Mary's senior part of Olympics

By CLAIRE KNEUER

Many Americans gathered around the TV set to watch the summer Olympics. But Maureen Meagher, sister of gold medalist swimmer Mary T. Meagher, experienced the excitement of the Olympics firsthand.

Maureen, a senior at Saint Mary's, accompanied the U.S. team on their victory tour. She had worked as an intern with the press operations of the Los Angeles Olympic Committee during the summer.

Maureen's sister Mary qualified for the 1980 Olympics at the age of 15. President Carter's boycott of the 1980 Games was a blow to Mary and her family, according to Maureen.

"We didn't realize the effect the boycott would have on her until we had experienced the past four years," Maureen said. "Right after the boycott Mary said she'd quit... From 1980 to 1981 she kept her toes out of the water, not swimming seriously," Maureen said.

Despite this time out of the water, Mary easily qualified for the 1984 Olympics, and then went on to national fame.

The two sisters returned home to Louisville and after hometown celebrations, life returned to normal. Mary went back to the University of California at Berkeley to complete her swimming scholarship; she will maintain her amateur status.

In answer to the frequent question concerning the 1988 Olympics, Maureen says "only time will tell," whether Mary will compete or not.

But she adds if at the Easterns competitors are concerned, in the boycotting nations, no one could touch her sister's scores.

Do you know someone who is dying to be thin?

Nearly one-third of the world's population goes hungry because of poverty. And nearly 20% of the young female population in the United States also starves - but by choice. Because they're dying to be thin.

Anorexia Nervosa. Bulimia. Two serious eating disorders. Illnesses that can affect people of all ages... and are most common among young women.

And the effects can be life-long or even fatal.

Now there is HOPE - Healthy Options for Problem Eaters. A therapeutic program developed by Memorial Hospital of South Bend. HOPE is designed to help those with eating disorders return to a normal, healthy lifestyle, because Anorexia and Bulimia can be cured. But early detection is vital.

If you know someone who is a victim of an eating disorder, you can help. Register by September 14 for HOPE's next 10-week session which begins September 18. Call 284-7308 for further information. Because HOPE can help.
Archbishop opposes Ferraro view on abortion and politics issue

Associated Press

NEW YORK - New York Archbishop John J. O'Connor, whose championing of the anti-abortion bishops has stoked debate over the rule of religion in politics, charged Sunday that Geraldine Ferraro had created an incorrect "impression" that Roman Catholic teachings on abortion are flexible.

But Ferraro, the Democratic vice presidential nominee, said she had "never made a statement relative to the church's teaching on abortion."

And she said she would try to reach the archbishop for clarification of his comments.

In an interview after he cele­ bated Mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral, O'Connor said the "impression has been created (by Ferraro) ... that there are a variety of positions that can be held in consonance with Catholic teachings."

"Anyone who says that this is open to interpretation ... is simply not expressing what the Catholic Church teaches," he added.

When asked to specify what Ferraro has said in regard to the Catholic stand on abortion, O'Connor said he had no time to discuss the matter further.

O'Connor had also mentioned Ferraro's views on abortion on Saturday, when he talked to reporters at an anti-abortion convention in Altoona, Pa.

"I will never tell anyone ... to vote for her or against her," he said at that time. "The only thing I know about her is that she has given the world to understand that Catholic Teaching is divided on the subject of abortion. Geraldine Ferraro doesn't have a problem with me. If she has a problem, it's with the pope."

The archbishop said he gets upset
when politicians "misrepresent Roman Catholic teachings on abortion" by endorsing legislation that supports abortion.

Ferraro "may have very sacred beliefs, may be intensely sincere on everything she's doing," he added.

U.S. accuses Soviets of agreement violations

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The White House plans to issue a report within a week accusing the Soviet Union of repeated violations of nearly a quarter-century of arms control agreements with the United States, congressional and administration sources said yesterday.

The report, prepared by a presidential advisory committee, is likely to contribute to the campaign debug President Reagan's methods of dealing with the Soviets and the lengthening suspension of negotiations between the two sides.

Reagan, stressing the difficulty of verifying Soviet compliance, has taken a skeptical stance toward dealing with Moscow. The Democratic challenger, Walter F.
Mondale, has urged a new effort to work out agreements aimed at curbing the nuclear arms race.

The report was submitted to Reagan last November by his General Advisory Committee on Arms Control and Disarmament and kept secret. Conservative Republican members of Congress have urged its release to bolster their claim that the Soviets are threatening U.S. security interests.

A member of the committee, weapson expert Colin Gray, urged Reagan last week to share the evidence with Congress. He said it challenges "the very notion that the superpowers have certain enough common interests in arms control to warrant continuing negotiations."

"The release of the MAC report is in fact a vital necessity to rebut the 1984 Democratic platform on arms control," Sens. John F. East, R-N.C., and Steven D. Symms, R-Idaho, wrote Reagan on Saturday.

Otherwise, they said, "the Carter-Mondale concept of Soviet violations of SALT I and II remains in effect and has not yet been fully revealed."

Reagan informed Congress in January of seven claimed or probable violations of six agreements, including the 1972 and 1979 Strategic Arms Limitation Treaties. The report adds 11 others, beginning with violations in 1981 of a U.S.-Soviet moratorium on nuclear weapons tests in the atmosphere, said a congressional source.

Other agreements the advisory committee found to have been breached over the years, according to the sources, include a Soviet commitment in 1962 not to send offensive nuclear weapons to Cuba; bans on chemical and biological weapones, the 1975 Helsinki agreement, and a pledge by the late Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev in 1982 not to add to the Soviets' array of SS-20 intermediate-range missiles trained on Western Europe. All the sources spoke on condition they not be identified.

The principal findings will be made public, probably next Monday, when all members of Congress are provided with the full report. According to the sources, the State Department was opposed to disclosure because of the potential effect on already poor relations with the Soviet Union, but Robert C. McFarlane, the president's national security adviser, argued for release and prevailed.

Diana gaining power along Atlantic coast

Associated Press

SAVANNAH, Ga. - Generating 95 mph winds and gaining strength, hurricane Diana crept threateningly northward along the Atlantic Coast yesterday as officials evacuated low-lying areas and complained that some people refused to leave.

School was canceled in South Carolina and Georgia, beaches were closed from Florida to North Carolina, rescue boats were towed inland and military planes were flown to safer fields. Banks in Savan­ hah closed at 2 p.m. yesterday and sent employees home.

At midnight EDT, the first Atlantic hurricane of the season was about 100 miles southeast of Savannah, drifting at about 5 mph to the northeast, the National Weather Service said. The crew of an Air Force plane reported "a well-defined eye has formed."

"Even though the hurricane is now moving toward the northeast, steering currents are weak and only a slight change in track could bring the hurricane on shore in just a few hours," cautioned forecasters at the National Hurricane Center.

Forecaster Hal Gerrish of the Hurricane Center said the storm could continue its very slow drifting into today, and cautioned that an official build strength when they are moving so slowly.

The eye of the storm was located at latitude 31.5 north and longitude 79.0 west.
of the free market claimed. Long-distance rates would fall to such an extent that the expected rise in local telephone charges would be more than offset. The "invisible hand" would improve the nation's telephone network that was already the best in the world.

Unfortunately this wonderful scenario has not taken place. Long-distance rates have dropped, especially now that many long-distance carriers such as MCI and Sprint are vying for pieces of the long-distance pie. A pie, until recently, almost entirely controlled by AT&T. These decreases, though, have not offset the dramatic rise in the cost of local services set by the breakup of AT&T. These decreases, though, have not offset the dramatic rise in the cost of local services set by the breakup of AT&T, now heard when a caller uses that service has doubled since the break-up. Furthermore, AT&T is competing in a supposedly unregulated industry.

A consequence of the break-up, which has mostly been overlooked, is the fact that as the market becomes more competitive some people may not be able to afford a phone. This may sound confusing since competition usually lowers prices but one AT&T executive I talked to put forth an interesting view:

Before the break-up local service was subsidized by profits from long distance service. Therefore, the cost of local service was basically the same across the nation. Even though it is cheaper to install and provide service to a phone in Los Angeles then to a small town in South Dakota, both customers paid generally the same rate. Now, actual costs will be passed onto the consumer and people who live off the beaten path and want a phone may find the price of one an insurmountable need.

Indeed, in Portland, Oregon a new type of "soup kitchen" has developed. At a local YMCA, a free phone is being provided for people of work who have had their phone service cut off. To these people, who may have never thought of a phone as anything special, the reality of losing one emphasizes one effect of saying good-bye to "Ma Bell."

It may be true that in the long run every-

lege of Arts & Letters at Notre Dame.

Vote on that

Dear Editor,

I never thought that I would see the day. I used to think that there was no justice in this world, but now I know that just isn't true. I don't believe it or not, the HPC has voted in favor of the Off-Campus Representative and he or she will take his place in the HPC. That's great, but who will the hell cares. I am all for a more democratic society, but I believe that there has to be something to vote about first. When was the last time a vote in the HPC had a genuine effect on what we vote for? I believe that I can think of in his vote to raise the Student Activities Fee, and I am only aware of it because it showed up on my tuition bill this fall.

This is what I cannot understand. According to the Senate Representative in my hall the student government always has money left over at the end of the year. Every fall, the University gives the student council a number of funds to spend on student activities. By the end of the year, the student council returns thousands of dollars, money that is not given back to the student council. On the other hand, the Student Services Fee, and I am only aware of it because it showed up on my tuition bill this fall.

Regan wrongs

Dear Editor,

I read with Bill Healy's recent analyses of the "Regan success" in that he neglects to mention any of the 73-year-old's errors. To measure a success one needs to look at what didn't work as well as what did. Healy fails to note:

• A budget deficit whose downward momentum might be made by 1989 — such a borrowing against the future will only compound the government's options in the future.

• 269 dead Marines in Lebanon if such is the result of "coherent foreign policy," then give us incendiarism.

• 55 percent of Americans with incomes below the poverty level in 1982, a rise from 28.9 percent in 1980 (Economic Report of the President, 1983).

• An administration that has seen more top-level resignations due to conflicts of interest and other scandals than any other since Richaard Nixon's Watergate administration.

• An increase in military spending unmeasured in peace time — so many dollars chasing around the walls of the Pentagon that defense officials did not even blink at spending $421.00 for a generic hammer.

These are just a few of the points Healy chose to ignore. There are many more. Of course, the fact that the United States suffered its worst recession since the Great Depression during Reagan's term only seals Healy's point that the choice is indubitably clear.

Come on Paul

Dear Editor,

So, Paul Cimmou wants to bring back the death penalty. His argument has a lot of history behind it. Yes, an eye for an eye. The kind of justice that made our American frontier such a safe place to bring up the kids. Come on Paul! The death penalty is gone because it just doesn't work. A great deterrent to crime? Check the last year? I'll find that murderers aren't exactly the most reflective of people in the world.

I don't know what the answer is or if there really can be an answer, but I do know how I would handle the situation if it were in my hands. We're sorry for your uncle, Paul, but don't be so quick to throw the switch.

The mighty Goliath AT&T was cut down to size and his siblings the local telephone companies were cut loose to fend for themselves. Everybody was going to benefit, the prophets of the free market claimed. Long-distance rates would fall to such an extent that the expected rise in local telephone charges would be more than offset. The "invisible hand" would improve the nation's telephone network that was already the best in the world.

Unfortunately this wonderful scenario has not taken place. Long-distance rates have dropped, especially now that many long-distance carriers such as MCI and Sprint are vying for pieces of the long-distance pie. A pie, until recently, almost entirely controlled by AT&T. These decreases, though, have not offset the dramatic rise in the cost of local services set by the breakup of AT&T. These decreases, though, have not offset the dramatic rise in the cost of local services set by the breakup of AT&T, now heard when a caller uses that service has doubled since the break-up. Furthermore, AT&T is competing in a supposedly unregulated industry.

A consequence of the break-up, which has mostly been overlooked, is the fact that as the market becomes more competitive some people may not be able to afford a phone. This may sound confusing since competition usually lowers prices but one AT&T executive I talked to put forth an interesting view:

Before the break-up local service was subsidized by profits from long distance service. Therefore, the cost of local service was basically the same across the nation. Even though it is cheaper to install and provide service to a phone in Los Angeles then to a small town in South Dakota, both customers paid generally the same rate. Now, actual costs will be passed onto the consumer and people who live off the beaten path and want a phone may find the price of one an insurmountable need.

Indeed, in Portland, Oregon a new type of "soup kitchen" has developed. At a local YMCA, a free phone is being provided for people of work who have had their phone service cut off. To these people, who may have never thought of a phone as anything special, the reality of losing one emphasizes one effect of saying good-bye to "Ma Bell."

It may be true that in the long run every-

The inside story on the theology requirement

When the department of theology announced a curriculum change in the courses designed to fulfill the University requirement for six credits in Theology, the point and purpose of the changes were obscured by the cloud of controversy which immediately encompassed it. Now that the dust has settled (and the grittiness of the cloud leads us to believe there was more dust than usual) I would like to state plainly why and how the changes were made and exactly what it entails. What leads me to believe this effort will not be in vain is that last spring when I spoke directly with students who were disturbed about the changes, my explanations set the students at ease.

F. Ellen Weaver
guest column

1. It was the University Curriculum Committee which mandated the departments of theology and philosophy to rewrite the content of their two-course requirement. This committee was formed by the provost to implement a recommendation in the 1982 Report on Priorities and Commitments for Ex­ collegiate education. The Ad Hoc Faculty Curriculum Committee for theology had already begun their study and was asked to submit its report to the Curriculum Committee. While we have drawn up the philosophy and theology in general education requirements to the Curriculum Committee, the self-understanding of the Roman Catholic tradition and its expression in academic study must be defined and evaluated.

Such an examination of the theology requirement needs to be made parallelly because the changes are not only in the academic content, but also in the self-understanding of the Roman Catholic tradition and its expression in academic study. When one asks what the self-understanding of the Roman Catholic tradition implies, one is led to ask if the theology requirement is still valid and how it is relevant to the new curriculum.

2. The department of theology formed an ad hoc curriculum committee for this task. The committee met several times from May 1983 until they submitted a proposal for curricuum changes. The committee was formed in May 1983, the faculty had also consulted amongst themselves. It should be noted that not all members of the committee have taught the introduction to Theology course, most of them many times. They have been asked to examine the present theology requirement and to evaluate the need for the students who are students.

biers of the committee have taught the introduction to Theology course, most of them many times. They have been asked to examine the present theology requirement and to evaluate the need for the students who are students.

In sum, the change was not so radical as to have affected the student body. The new course focuses on the Catholic tradition, in the first four centuries, treated in the Foundation to Christian Tradition course.

Second, the "adequate background" mentioned in the third paragraph of the Bulletin description must be in Catholic theology for Catholic students, and a broader Christian theology for other students. Exceptions are made only on the second course for certain conditions, for example, a non-Christian student may choose a course outside the Christian theological tradi­tion.

First, this new ruling is, of course, retroactive. Students who have taken a "first course" and one number 500 and above as a "second course" before this revision have fulfilled their requirements.

Perles: Michigan State ready for Notre Dame

Associated Press

*East Lansing, Mich. - Michigan State football Coach George Perles isn't letting Notre Dame's opening loss affect his attitude about playing the Fighting Irish this week, saying the Spartans' opponents "have a lot going for them."

"I don't know if it gives us an advantage. Notre Dame is a big challenge," Perles said yesterday at his weekly luncheon with sports broadcasters and writers. "They're the biggest team we'll play."

But Perles reminded everyone the same was true last year when the underdog Spartans went to South Bend, lost, and knocked of the top-ranked team.

"It proved to our players that even though they were 21 point underdogs, you still have the opportunity to beat them," the coach said. "It gives them confidence" that the smaller Spartans can handle the bigger opponents.

"If you use your leverage and technique, you can overcome that," Perles said. "The setting is right. We'll play at home."

Tom Allan, the Spartans' 6-foot-1, 245-pound defensive end who will be opposed by a Notre Dame offensive front that averages about 271 pounds, said the size difference will "pervade the game." And he agreed last year's upset is proof that quickness and technique can overcome that obstacle.

"But he noted that last year's matchup will weigh heavy in the minds of the Fighting Irish."

"For us, it's a definite advantage," Allan said. "They're going to have to try to go so we can't budge them here and get revenge."

"That's how it's going to be, the coaches are keying on me, to catch every pass thrown, and to run as hard as I can and hit every hole I'm supposed to hit. People will say, 'He's crazy, he'll never do it,' but how will you ever know unless you try" said Payton. "And even if you don't do it, you'll be a better person for having tried."

Payton, 30, is in his 10th year in the NFL. When he rushed for 1,379 yards and gained seven yards on two pass receptions Sunday in a 27-0 victory over Denver, he ran his combined-yardage total to 15,357 yards, breaking Brown's record of 15,459.

He also boosted his career rushing total to 11,865 yards, 44 1/2 short of Brown's record of 12,312.

He says he now seeks the 15,000-yard figure of 15,000 yards because "if you set your sights on small things, that's what happens. I'm setting my sights higher."

Payton, who has two more years on his current contract with the Bears which pays him about $240,000 per year for the next 43 years - has no doubt he will reach 15,000 yards, breaking Brown's record of 15,357 yards. and gaining seven yards on two pass receptions Sunday in a 27-0 victory over Denver, he ran his combined-yardage total to 15,357 yards, breaking Brown's record of 15,459.

Rozier leaves Maulers for Houston Oilers

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA - Mike Rozier will no longer play for the Pittsburgh Maulers of the United States Football League and has been offered an opportunity to buy out his contract, his agent said last night.

The running back hopes to sign with the Houston Oilers, who selected him in a supplemental National Football League draft, if not this season, then next, said Art Wilkinson.

"They want us to give them back the signing bonus of $13.1 million plus the $300,000 Mike received for playing last season, and they want it tomorrow," Wilkinson said of the Maulers.

The agent said Rozier, the 1983 Heisman Trophy winner at the University of Nebraska, was adamant about our playing for the Maulers, though two years remain on his three-year deal, which Wilkinson described as a personal service contract to Edward DeBar-tolo Sr., the club's owner.

Wilkinson conceded that DeBar­tolo could seek to have Rozier fulfill the contract. "I don't know if it gives us an advantage," he said. "They're the biggest team we'll play."

49ers escape comeback by wireless Redskins

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Quarterback Joe Montana saved the Washington Redskins’ defense by passing for two touchdowns and running for another as the revenge-hungry San Francisco 49ers scored a 37-31 triumph in last night’s National Football League game.

It was not an easy victory, however. After jumping to a 27-0 lead at halftime, the 49ers survived a second-half comeback by the Redskins, who got two touchdowns runs from John Riggins and cut the margin to six on a 12-yard touchdown pass by quarterback Joe Theismann with 3:44 left in the final period.

Running back Wendell Tyler tied one of his best games since joining the 49ers last year, scoring one touchdown on a pass, another on a run and helping Montana on his TD run with a superb block at the goal line.

San Francisco kicker Ray Wersching booted field goals from 19, 46 and 38 yards, running to 20 his string of successful field goals on at ments of college in last year’s NFC title game left San Francisco unbeaten in two games and Washington 0-2.

Montana, who had 381 yards passing, completely outplayed Theismann, a fellow Notre Dame alumnus who couldn’t get his team moving until the final minutes of the first half when the 49ers were already ahead 27-0.

Although only the second game of the season, this was one the 49ers really wanted. The Redskins went to the Super Bowl after beating the Los Angeles 24-21 in the NFC title game last year. Montana threw three TD passes in the fourth quarter of that game to take it, but two controversial penalties and a field goal in the last minute made the difference.

Montana picked up last night where he left off against the Redskins last January. After a poor punt by Washington, Montana hit back Roger Craig for passes of 12 and 7 yards to start a streak of eight successful passes at the start of the game.

Tyler, running out of the “T” formation behind Craig, then scanned 20 yards to Washington’s 18. Four plays later, Tyler plunged over the goal line from a half-yard out.

"Well, that cat's doing it again. Keeping that poor thing alive just to play with it ourselves."
By MICHAEL J. CMIEL
Sports Writer

Aiming to finally capture the NCAA national championship in what appears to be their final year in Division II, the members of the Notre Dame women's tennis team began the season by taking six of nine matches against a tough squad from Purdue at West Lafayette on Friday.

"The girls had come back with a great attitude and are playing much better tennis," commented Irish head coach Sharon Petro.

In this initial meeting, the Irish were without the services of their Irish back in the third match by downing Jennifer Allen 7-5, 6-1. The singles action was then concluded with three more Irish wins: sophomore Jonifie Bufe beats Debbie Mackin 7-5, 6-1; senior Cathy Schnell downed Debbie Prochaska 6-2, 7-6; and, senior Laura Lee trounced Karen Rew 6-1, 6-2.

In doubles action, the Irish took two of three after once again losing in the opening matchup.

To open the action, Lee and LaFratta met McGrath and Allen of the Boilers 4-6, 6-3, 6-2. However, the Irish were able to bring the Irish back with a 6-1, 6-3 downing of Purdue's Weiner and Prochaska team. Schnell and freshman Michelle Dusoo wound up the action by dispatching a team of Mackey and Laurie DeCamp 6-1, 6-1.

"We played well for the first time out," said Petro, "and I think Purdue had about a week on us in preparation.

On Sunday, the Irish had their meeting with North Star Conference rival Butler cancelled due to rain.

"I really wanted to play them (Butler)," said Petro. "We'll have to wait to see them in the conference tournament and we'll beat them there."

"I think we're going to be the strongest team in the conference and they're the next strongest."

Tomorrow, Notre Dame will travel to Champaign, Illinois, where they will face a team from the University of Illinois at 3:30 p.m. On Friday, they will journey to Champaign, Illinois, facing a tough Big Ten team in Illinois.

Unfortunately, inexperience worked against the Irish this weekend when they competed in the Illinois Tournament at the University of Illinois. Notre Dame rounded out the four team tournament finishing a disappointing fourth behind the University of Georgia, the University of Illinois and the University of Missouri.

"We haven't spent much time on offense," said Lambert. "We've got an inexperienced freshman setter who has a bright future, but it takes time... you can't play the heavies and expect to win right away."

In Friday's first round of competition, the Irish fell to the Illini, 15-4, 15-4, 15-3. However, the low scores are deceiving. The Irish were competitive with the Illini defensively, but couldn't muster the savvy to score. "We don't know how to win yet," explained Lambert. "You can have all the technical skill in the world and not win."

The Notre Dame women's field hockey team opened the 1984 season in disappointing fashion Sunday. Purdue, coming off a season in which they faced four teams at Penn State and Villanova, beat the inexperienced Irish, 2-1.

The young Notre Dame team, beginning its first season under head coach Jill Lindenfeld, played very well defensively. "We just didn't seem to get it cranked up offensively. The lone goal was by junior Melissa Sommer, who later was forced to leave the game with a thumb problem. The Irish team also lost starting right back Mary Rose Rodgers with a possible broken bone.

Despite the loss of two of their starters, the Irish played well. They had a goal nullified on a controversial call that would have put them up 2-1. Later in the second half, Purdue scored the go-ahead and eventual winning goal on a penalty stroke from six yards out. Notre Dame tried desperately to tie the game again, but they could never seem to sustain an attack on goal.

Even though the Irish lost, Coach Lindenfeld felt relatively positive about their effort. "I feel optimistic," she said. "It was a good opener despite the loss."

Lindenfeld cited junior Molly McCabe and the only starting freshman, Benet DeBerrry, as standouts of the game. "Molly McCabe centered the ball nicely and Benet DeBerrry played particularly well in the second half," the Irish coach said.

Lindenfeld thought junior goalie Patti Gallagher, who was injured and did not practice all week, played an excellent game. Other than mentioning Gallagher's fine play, the first year coach would not single out individuals on defense, believing the team as a whole deserved praise. "We played hard and didn't give up," Lindenfeld said.

However, with the loss comes the need for improvement. Coach Lindenfeld felt the team needed work on using the entire field consistently and particularly needed practice on their stickwork.

Lindenfeld summed up the Purdue game by saying, "I see it is to be beneficial because we now realize how far we have to go to stickwork-wise. It also gave us an indication of Division I talent. I now know what is to be expected and so do the players."

This weekend the Notre Dame women's field hockey team will play several games at Suk Valley College. The next home game is against Valparaiso on Friday, Sept. 21, at 6 p.m.
