he press as a source of political decision-making

Dan McCullough
News Editor

Inside Wednesday

Most every student, faculty and staff member at Notre Dame past the voting age of eighteen. The intellectual level of thought is spread over much more than one place in the country, so it follows that members of the Notre Dame community would not submit to such uninstructive political decision-making processes. But it isn't necessarily so.

Some people who claim to be the most ardent liberals are actually the most narrow-minded. And many conservatives wouldn't listen to a word Jesse Jackson or Tip O'Neill said if you paid them to. It is so important to listen to or at least hear what everybody has to say - from the left to the far right. The very nature of a person thinks as he or she believes, and this is partly the reason it is impossible for a person to fit him or her to listen to alternative positions. The liberal is open to any and all opinion. And the most worthy conservatives don't flaunt their hokiness. Rather, they hear everybody and digest everything in the formation of their own choice.

The main thing is to be a Republican or Democrat, but to be a listener and a chooser. And the place to get such input - the place where you will find both extremes, as well as the middle ground, presented in an intelligent context - is in the stories and opinions of the newspaper.

The newspaper is one of the few forums where such a exchange of thought can take place. But before a voter walks into the booth and shuts the door, he or she must consider what is happening within it. While some papers are better than others as providers of objective news section and a thoughtful opinion page, it is important for the American voter to utilize their local press, both on the front and inside pages, to guide or at least expand his or her political thought.

Unfortunately, this is not always the case. In fact, the majority of voters defer from incorporating the pre­ sentations of others in forming their own opinion. Many people use other input, such as voting for the man who agrees with them on one issue - or even which candidate is more charismatic. It is a pity that people can decide who will mold their future on the basis of who kisses babies better. But it is a fact of contemporary political life.

Club planning alcohol alternatives

By CAROL CAMP
Senior Staff Reporter

Ever since the new alcohol policy was enacted, you haven't had any fun, right? There's no social life on campus, you say. If the dreams of the newly created Social Alternatives Club have their way, students will soon have nothing but the North Dining Hall walls to complain about.

Last April, Lee Brovwaard, Vince Peyer, Kevin Miller, Phil Buckingham, Mike Muscara, and Cheryl Miller decided to form a group which would plan innovative non-alcoholic campus events. Miller admits the idea originally began as "a joke, but then we saw the potential for it and began coming up with ideas."

The group's objective, according to Buckingham, is "to work around the alcohol policy. We feel that people are creative enough to come up with new ideas, and we want to be able to try out the different ideas that people have."

Since this semester, the group has been planning a variety of campus events. So far, two dances are scheduled for Hedgey Hall (SMC, Sept. 29 and Dec. 1). Also, the classic cult flick, Rocky Horror Picture Show, will be shown at Stepan Center on Nov. 16 and 17.

Other tentative plans include: a campus-wide talent show, a Chicago Cubs trip, a T-shirt sale at the Miami game, an interhall "Wacky Olympics" competition, and a dance in the Student Union. The group will divide into three groups of eight, each featuring a different type of music.

In order to plan successful campus events, the officers of the Social Alternatives Club need student input. The club's first general meeting will be Tuesday, Sept. 18 at 7 p.m. in the Little Theatre in LaFortune. All interested students are encouraged to attend.

Jury investigates labor secretary

Associated Press

NEW YORK - A state grand jury is completing an investigation of allegations that U.S. labor Secretary Raymond Donovan's former construction company falsified records in a federally funded subway project, it was disclosed Monday.

A lawyer for Schiavone Construction Co. said Donovan has been invited to testify before the grand jury in the New York City borough of the Bronx. A prosecutor said the jury in the New York City borough is investigating with public records.

The investigation was disclosed in a suit filed by the Secaucus, N.J.-based firm, which is asking for a U.S. District Court order barring Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola from using evidence of any wrongdoing. Donovan was executive vice president of Schiavone before joining the Reagan administration. Two investigations by a special prosecutor, Leon Silverman, into allegations that people have."

Donovan, his assistant confirmed he met with the grand jury investigation, he said. The photos were taken with a Kodak disk camera, the manager said. The store, however, does not keep records of its customers' names.

The photo a person speaking by phone from the South Bend home of sobol's mother said last night that sobol was in town last weekend. Last May, Stange told The Observer in an unpublished comment that he had heard the bust would "resurface" after the Purdue game. Interviewed last night in a physics lab on the Fourth Floor of Niswland Science Hall, Wilkins said sobol "may have" stolen the bust. When asked why he had a stack of yesterday's Observers on the desk, Wilkins said he is keeping them for a "scrapbook" for the physics department.

One of the photos delivered Monday takes after the Purdue-Notre Dame football game Saturday in Indianapolis. The photo depicts the bust with an ax, and a sticker attached in the shape of a voice balloon which reads, "Where's Gerry?"

Donovan has ties to organized crime when he was at Schiavone found "insufficient credible evidence" of any wrongdoing.

Donovan's attorney, William Bitman confirmed he met with prosecutors. "The only thing I can say is that I have not been advised that Secretary Donovan is a target of the grand jury investigation," he said.

Mondale and Reagan trade tax attacks on campaign trail

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - President Reagan denounced Walter Mondale's tax reduction program yesterday as little more than a "tax increase plan," but Mondale renewed his challenge to the president to wait until his re-election campaign for his first session with a Senate senior official.

While Reagan and his Democratic challenger clashed over the budget and U.S. relations, their running mates talked of abortion.

"I will be judged by my maker," said Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro, a Catholic who personally opposes abortion but favors giving women the right to choose, and has drawn criticism from her archbishop over the issue.

Vice President George Bush, campaigning in Charleston, S.C., said he personally favors permitting rape victims to undergo abortions, despite Reagan's support for a constitutional amendment to ban all such operations. All four candidates campaigned, even though the president never left the White House as their aides arranged the second negotiating session in as many days on the subject of debates. Officials in both camps have said agreement seems near on a plan for perhaps two Reagan-Mondale debates, with one confrontation between Bush and Ferraro.

In a 12-minute appearance before reporters at the White House, Reagan dismissed Mondale's new budget plan, which would trim deficits from a projected $265 billion in 1988 to $86 billion.

"What specifically has he proposed other than some additional spending and his tax cuts, and backing away at the defense budget?" Reagan said. He apparently meant to say tax increases instead of tax cuts, since Mondale's plan calls for $88 billion in higher taxes, as well as $25 billion in cuts from Reagan's defense budget and other reductions. Most of the tax increases would be felt by upper-income wage earners and corporations.

"pretty pathetic" for the president to call up with a blueprint of his own to replace the red ink is estimated to reach $172 billion for the current fiscal year. The president said the deficits would be $40 billion to $50 billion lower if Congress has approved all the spending cuts he requested.

Reagan also announced he would meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko later this month, but Mondale countered that it was "pretty pathetic" for the president to call up with a blueprint of his own to replace the red ink is estimated to reach $172 billion for the current fiscal year. Do you know someone who is dying to be thin?

Nearly one-third of the world's population goes hungry because of poverty. And nearly 20% of the young female population in the United States also starves - but by choice. Because they're dying to be thin.

Anorexia Nervosa. Bulimia. Two serious eating disorders. Illnesses that can affect people of all ages... and are most common among young women.

And the effects can be life-long or even fatal.

Now there is HOPE - Healthy Options for Problem Eaters. A therapeutic program developed by Memorial Hospital of South Bend. HOPE is designed to help those with eating disorders return to a normal, healthy lifestyle, because Anorexia and Bulimia can be cured. But early detection is vital.

If you know someone who is a victim of an eating disorder, you can help. Register by September 14 for HOPE's next 10-week session which begins September 18. Call 284-7308 for further information. Because HOPE can help.

Soviet official replaced following heart attack

Associated Press

FRANKFURT, West Germany - A research institute said yesterday that Marshal Nikolai V. Ogarkov suffered a heart attack before being replaced as the Soviet Union's No. 2 defense official.

There has been no official Soviet explanation why the 66-year-old Soviet chief of the general staff and first deputy defense minister was relieved of his duties. He had been considered a possible successor to "5-year-old Soviet Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov.

The institute statement and spokesmen for the institute said they did not draw any connection between Ogarkov's reported illness and his replacement by Marshal Sergei N. Akhromeyev.

The official Soviet news agency Tass announced Sept. 6 that Ogarkov was relieved of his duties in connection with a new appointment. Tass did not specify Ogarkov's new duties nor say why he was replaced by Akhromeyev.

Spokesmen for the Soviet Foreign Ministry in Moscow could not be reached by telephone yesterday for comment on the institute report.

In cases when Soviet officials are replaced because they are ailing, an official announcement generally gives that as the reason for the change in leadership.

On Monday, in an interview with NBC, the 61-year-old Akhromeyev said Ogarkov would continue to "carry out responsible tasks in the military defense of the Soviet Union." He did not elaborate on Ogarkov's duties.

One institute spokesman, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said information about Ogarkov's reported heart attack was given to the institute's director, Nikolai Nor-Mesek, by a reliable source with access to such information.

Nor-Mesek was not available for comment. His staff initially said he was at lunch. Later, the institute telephone operator said he had left for the day.

The independent Frankfurt institute collects, translates and disseminates information about the Soviet Union under private contract from the West German government and others.

Pope calls Canadians away from modern 'spiritual desert'

Associated Press

MONTREAL - Pope John Paul II, parish priest for a day to this bustling northern metropolis, beckoned Canadians yesterday to leave the "spiritual desert" of the modern world and rediscover God.

"Nothing can fill the emptiness of his absence!" the pontiff, wagging a finger, preached to more than 300,000 people in central Jarry Park. It was the biggest crowd ever assembled in this French-Canadian city.

The pope, whose visit has stirred protests among feminists here, also took note of the expanding role of women in the liberal Canadian church.

But he said nothing to alter his staunch defense of traditional church positions against women priests, divorce, artificial contraception or abortion.

One Montreal group scheduled a march late yesterday to demonstrate opposition to the pope's conservative stands on such issues.

Materialism and women were central themes on the third day of John Paul's 12-day Canadian tour.

Enthusiasm for the papal visit masked serious problems within Quebec province's once-powerful church. Today two-thirds of Quebec's Catholics do not practice their religion, evidence of the growing secularism of recent decades.

On his first stop of the day, the pope told the Quebec clergy he was aware of their problems.

"You have been witnessing... a more materialistic, more selfish attitude to life," he said at a meeting with 3,000 priests and seminarians at St. Joseph's Oratory.

Downtown South Bend. What is it? How does one get there? Does it have chocolate chip cookies?

First things first. To get to downtown South Bend, actually getting there shouldn't be too much of a problem. Understandably enough, the bus student should take is not clearly marked "Downtown South Bend." Instead, it bears the words "Southside Mall." Throw all rational thought procedures out the window closest and board this bus. And if you can afford to, take a cab or take the bus. Confusingly enough, the bus this student has taken is definitely wrong and there is a passenger for assistance.

Assuming that you have made it to the downtown area and dream hawked, you will find yourself in an immense parking lot, filled with buses and various people waiting to get on them. Yes, this is downtown South Bend. Turn and look at the Courthouse. The street between you and Osco's is Michigan Street. Knowing these two streets, you're really in downtown South Bend.

When facing Osco's, north is to your left and south is to your right. Go one block north, Osco's is Michigan Street. You are now in Center City Plaza, one of South Bend's major attempts at urban renewal. On your right is Robertson's Robertson's is a jeweler's, a candy store, and the Dainty Maid Bake Shop. The Dainty Maid Bake Shop has enough pastries and cakes to tempt every body for life sometimes. You will have displays of cake decorating in the window, where you will see everything from "Happy Birthday." A Boy George motif across the way is a shop that sells futons. Futons are Japanese mattresses which look a little like bedrolls but are entirely unac com modating. I bought a futon last year and have slept on it every since. The only problem with them is that any pets in the household will also like the futon, which they perceive as a giant pillow laid flat on the floor entirely for their delight.

A block further south is the Courthouse's bakery, which currently has just added the reality of chicken and fish onto its menu. They carry Haagen Dazu ice cream and "natural" seeds pops bearing names like Gor's Ginseng Lime or Mandarin Lime Soda. Another block south is lowwood's in a giant gold mine of Ricky's. Enter at your own risk.

Return north, and one block past Osco's is Frankie May Candy and the French Market, which specializes in croissants. Another block takes you to the Morris Civic Auditorium and the fountain and statue. South Bend charter school is divided on the worth of this statue, which depicts either a woman or a musical instrument, depending on how you look at it. Turn left on LaSalle and you'll wonder past the Griffin Bookstore, which carries science fiction and fantasy, as well as an extensive line of wargames. Above the store is a set of rooms which are used for playing wargames on Thursday and Friday evenings and Saturday afternoons. In the basement are walls lined with used books in a number of categories. One block further east is Stoner's Confectionery, the display windows are riddled with racks and masks ranging from E.T. to Ronald Reagan. Besides the masks, costumes and stage make-up, Stoner's carries enough practical jokes to drive your roommate up the wall for the rest of the semester.

As you journey to the course of your excursion, you will have noticed an immense glass building, across from the French Market. This is the Marriott Hotel. Hotel downtown South Bend Center.

The Century Center is worth paying a visit. It holds the Studebaker Museum, which details a large portion of South Bend history. Take a walk along the St. Joseph River is wonderful, and from the pier, you can see the way to get across the river and to the East Race, which is equally worth of a visit.

Our town was just eight miles in from the Gator Bowl at the ACC, waiting for football tickets about seven of the time. And along comes the coaches in their cars, and finally along comes Gerry. Whole of after a few money on the building sayin' good morning to everyone because he is a great guy, and of course even greets him back even though we all wish we were back asleep in bed.

Well, then this one guy decides to ask out, "Is it worth it?" And everyone kinda laughs thinking 'ol Gerry hadn't heard until he sticks his head out the door, and says, "it's worth it this year." Naturally everyone is perfectly freaked out and myself am sitting there, thinking I've just panned in some very wild drug or something, and I think, maybe this season might be the last after all.

But I know what you've said: you're saying, hey, Marc, weren't you there? Did you see what happened in the Gator Bowl? Come on, last Saturday.

Well, then I'll say you're wrong. I was there. I was in the stadium, standing in the lower level, and I saw what happened, and I know the final score and all that.

But it doesn't matter, either way, if you're at the Gator Bowl this year, you're gonna have some pretty big dudes up front on the defense, but these gentlemen are downright huge. Some of them are so strong they have muscles on their earlobes. Take Larry Williams, for example. The last figures I heard on this guy were somewhere like 6-6 and 270, but I think that was referin' to city block and tons. No, really, I had a class with him once and he barely fit behind his desk.

Of course this massive front line start forgettin' how to bulldoze over people then it would be a very sad situation indeed, as you saw last Saturday. But then you got receivers like Alvin Miller and Matt Jackson and Joe Howard who remind me of Snop, Cackle and Pop because they're always runnin' around somewhere and one of 'em always seems to be open, but sometimes I think that once they get past maybe thirty yards from the line of scrimmage, they turn invisible and no one can see them anymore.

On defense there is a linebackin' crew who I have decided I will hire some to remove cars that take my parking space. I happen to resided a few doors down from Mike Gann, maybe thirty yards from the line of scrimmage, and I'm always runnin' around somewhere and one of 'em always seems to be open, but sometimes I think that once they get past maybe thirty yards from the line of scrimmage, they turn invisible and no one can see them anymore.

Second, we don't seem to have the offense of a driving force. Personally, I never enjoyed playin' catch-up anymore and I would be as unfair as I could be that if I had a head, I kept it to one but myself until the next full moon. Let's blow some teams away and not worry about what they think. 52 - 6 sounded nice to me.

Well, good at the Purdue game and his head was huggin' just like anyone else's when our final hope was snuffed out by a decent interception, and he says to me, "Marc, I can't help mistakes because I help those who help themselves, and as for that 'ol killer instinct, well, that's something you'll have to work out for yourselves as you know, the coach commander says thou shalt not have killer instinct, but it's 'ol Dame, then it's okay with me.

So good luck, and I wish you all the best, because as you know, the sixth grade or so.

Florida cited in NCAA recruiting investigation

Associated Press

GAINESVILLE, Fla. - The University of Florida received a "5-page official letter of inquiry from the NCAA Tuesday detailing 10 alleged infractions committed by the school's football program.

University President Marshall M. Criser said the university will prepare an official response to the allegations "as quickly as humanly possible."

Criser said he was releasing copies of the NCAA's letter as well as transcripts of interviews with witnesses to the probe that started in December 1982.

Among the charges leveled against Coach Charley Pell's program was that of illegal scouting of opponents' practices. The school president said he had directed officials to forward letters of apology to seven schools and added that he had volunteered to forfeit Florida victories over six of them.

Pell, saying that he assumed responsibility for "mistakes and errors," made in the program, resigned Aug. 26, but requested to remain with the squad until the end of the season.

Criser, who had left the door open to dismiss Pell at any time, said he would not comment on the coach's status yesterday. The university released approximately 1,700 pages of documents including transcripts of two taped interviews with Mike Brown, a former Florida graduate assistant who confessed to spying on opponents in 1980 and 1981, and Sonny McGraw, one-time Gator recruiting coordinator.

Both reportedly cooperated with the NCA, which will not announce sanctions against the Florida program until after it receives a response from the Southeastern Conference school.

"Let me strongly express our desire that the public understand that in many instances a witness only presents one version of an alleged happening and that the NCAA letter of inquiry are 'charges,' however serious they may be," Criser said.

"The university's position will be set out in its response to those charges, and I hope the public will await that response before reaching conclusions concerning the university, its athletic programs, or its staff."

Criser said the letters of apology were sent to the University of California at Berkeley, Mississippi, Mississippi State, Louisville, Florida State, and Auburn.

He said he offered to forfeit 1980 victories over California, Mississippi, Mississippi State, Louisville and Auburn, as well as a 1981 triumph over Florida State.

"Obviously this is a regrettable situation but I am convinced it is the only one permitted by the standards of fair play," Criser said.

"It is small consolation for our sister universities, but an honorable admission could do no less," he said.

The school president said the existence of illegal scouting had been previously denied by the Florida coaching staff to NCAA investigators and university attorneys. He said Brown's interview was the first information received substantiating the spying charges.

"This is a parallel process for us all. It is a test of our ability to weather a storm of intense emotion and grim reality," Criser added.

Pell took over the Florida program in 1979 and has led the Gators to four straight bowl appearances after a 0-10-1 finish his first season.

The coach's letter of resignation said, "The mistakes and errors I made did not make the difference in the football program. Those mistakes and errors disgust and embarrass me."

Nebraska replaces Miami in top spot

LINCOLN, Neb. - University of Ne­braska Coach Tom Osborne said yes­terday he fully expects his Cornhuskers, who moved to the top of the Associated Press college football ratings, to weather the storm of media attention that will follow.

Osborne and the Cornhuskers learned last year the unsettling ef­fect that media attention can have on a No. 1-ranked team. Nebraska carried the AP's No. 1 ranking throughout the season - until the Or­ange Bowl upset at the hands of No. 4 Miami in top spot

The Notre Dame soccer team upped its record to 4-0-4 with a 2-0 victory against Bethel College this week. The Irish performance against the Boilermakers was marred by mistakes on both sides, but the Notre Dame team continued to have problems. The team was forced to call its own play on the field. Senior captain Rich Herdegen got the ball from his second-string players. The patchwork Irish squad began to dominate play immediately in the second half of the game, eventually taking a 2-0 lead. The team was unable to hold onto this lead, however, and the final score was 2-0. The Irish did not score again until almost half of the second half had gone by. The team barely crossed the midfield stripe into Irish territory, but they did manage to take several shots on goal. One of these shots was blocked by the goalkeeper, and another was saved by the defense. The Irish were unable to capitalize on these opportunities for themselves.

The Notre Dame soccer team traveled across town yesterday afternoon to take on the Bethel College Pilots on their home field. The entire game belonged to the Irish, who came away with a 4-0 victory over their out-classed opponents.

Notre Dame head coach Dennis Grace used the game as an opportunity to give some players game experience who had not yet played this season. He started several players at positions other than the ones they normally play, and he started many of his second-string players. The patchwork Irish squad began to dominate play immediately in the game, but they could not finish off their offensive attacks with goals for most of the opening period. It was not until nearly 20 minutes had elapsed in the game that Notre Dame put some points on the scoreboard. Sophomore Tom Bowsher scored off a Mike Carney corner kick at 25:38 to put the Irish in the lead, 1-0. That score still remained at halftime. Notre Dame could not score again until almost half of the second half had gone by.

The ball rarely crossed the midfield stripe into Irish territory, but the Notre Dame team continued to have problems getting the ball up into the center of the field, bringing many too many defenders in front of the goal. Grace pointed this out to his players, they seem to have taken note of it, and Notre Dame could not score again until almost half of the second half had gone by. The team barely crossed the midfield stripe into Irish territory, but they did manage to take several shots on goal. One of these shots was blocked by the goalkeeper, and another was saved by the defense. The Irish were unable to capitalize on these opportunities for themselves.

Losing to Purdue: It's wrong
Chuck Freeby
Sports Writer

Hello again, everybody! It's wrong. It's wrong when a team as talented as Notre Dame is unable to win against teams such as Purdue. Allen Pinkett said it best after the game when he said the Irish beat themselves. Yes. Purdue looked good, but most of that is because the Irish were so bad. Steve Beserra's team is good, and afterward he still feels Notre Dame is a better football team than Purdue. But he's probably right. However, it's not a better team on Saturday and it's wrong. Something is definitely wrong.

It's wrong when your secondary is abused the way Jim Everett and his receivers did it on Saturday. Everett had a field day and he certainly can't be considered one of the game's premier signal callers, especially when you consider he almost didn't start on Saturday. Some people point to inexperience in the deep secondary, but each of the starters has at least one year of experience under their belt. So, there's really no excuse.

It's wrong when you think any team would have an easy time in those plagues the Irish week after week. A penalty for too many men on the field resulted in a Purdue touchdown on an Oakland kickoff. But it only matters if you're eligible receiver. penalty stalls the drive. And the Purdue three-yard line halted another chance. The frustrating part is this is the same thing that has troubled Notre Dame for the last few years. Good teams do not make those mistakes, and the Irish were not a good team on Saturday.

It's wrong when a critical moment results in confusion. On Steve Beserra's last interception, the sophomore quarterback was forced to call his own play from the huddle. Apparently, Faust was able to detect some patterns of the Purdue defense, so Beserra called a play to which those patterns did not correspond. But he is the first to admit that he was forced to call his own play in the huddle. Apparently Faust and offensive coordinator Ron Hudson did not give Beserra a play to call when Beserra wanted to. Beserra then had to read the Purdue defense and it was up to Beserra to make a decision. To borrow a line from Struther Martin in the movie "Cool Hand Luke": "What we have here is a failure to communicate."

It's wrong, however, to simply blame Beserra for the loss, or any other individual for that matter. Sure, certain plays stand out in the football game, and the last interception is one that everyone remembers. However, Notre Dame's last interception was one of 20 punts and over 200 yards. It would be unfair to make him wear the guru's honors for the whole game.

It's wrong because the most important factor to be considered, and one admitted by Faust himself, may be a lack of preparation by the Irish for what Purdue did on the field. The Irish weren't prepared for some of the motion in the Purdue defense, or the stunting on the Purdue defense. True, it's the first game of the season, which means it's tough to scout the opponents. But there had been nine months to get ready for Purdue. All good scouting reminds the motto, "Be prepared." The Irish were not prepared.

It's wrong to give up hope, but after talking to some people, Saturday's game ran their patience to the limit. True, there's 10 games left, which is why you can't blame them. After last week's game, you can't really blame them. Add to the poor Irish performance the dual strikes of Larry Williams (sprained ankle) and Mike Golic (shoulder injury), and it's no wonder Irish eyes aren't shining.

It's wrong when you think people have to consider Notre Dame an underdog, but many people put the Irish in that position this week. After last week's game, you can't really blame them. Add to the poor Irish performance the dual strikes of Larry Williams (sprained ankle) and Mike Golic (shoulder injury), and it's no wonder Irish eyes aren't shining.

It's wrong, and the sad part is, it's true.

Pick of the Week: It would be wrong not to mention that coach Joe Paterno and his Notre Dame cross-country team will begin the 1984 campaign this Friday when the Irish take on Ohio State and Northwestern in the Butler Memorial Invitational. It is a four-person meet.

This marks the 10th season as head coach of the Irish for the diminutive Italian cross-country mentor, and he is looking to co-captains Jim Tyler and Bill Courtney to set the pace. It should be an outstanding opener to the season for the Irish harriers, and you'll want to be there.
